successively came to pass, they must have altogether convinced Saul of his prophetic character, and, by consequence, that he himself was called of God. "The company of the prophets" is an expression of great moment; it shewed that the Lord had returned to his people, and that mercy was in store for them after the lengthened absence of all "open vision." The attention excited by Saul's appearance among the Prophets was such as to shew that in the esteem of the people he was a very unlikely man to be found in such society. Ver. 17-27. Samuel kept to his point, that the people, in demanding a king, had rejected God; still he was candid and conciliatory. The majestic appearance of Saul excited universal admiration, and called forth the shout which ever since has formed the stereotyped phrase in relation to royalty, "God save the King!" Saul began well in taking with him "a band of men, whose hearts God had touched." This

15 And Saul's uncle said, Tell me, I pray thee, what Samuel said unto you.

16 And Saul said unto his uncle, He told us plainly that the asses were found. But ^oof the matter of the kingdom, whereof Samuel spake, he told him not.

17 ¶ And Samuel called the people together ^aunto the LORD to Mizpeh;

18 And said unto the children of Israel, ¹Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, I brought up Israel out of Egypt, and delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians, and out of the hand of all kingdoms, and of them that oppressed you:

19 And ^kye have this day rejected your God, who himself saved you out of all your adversities and your tribulations; and ye have said unto him, Nay, but set a king over us. Now therefore present yourselves before the LORD ¹by your tribes, and by your thousands.

20 And when Samuel had ^mcaused all the tribes of Israel to come near, the tribe of Benjamin was taken.

21 When he had caused the tribe of Benjamin to come near by their families, the family of Matri was taken, and Saul the son of Kish was taken: and when they sought him, he could not be found.

22 Therefore they ⁿenquired of the LORD further, if the man should yet come thither. And the LORD answered, Behold, he hath ^ohid himself among the stuff.

23 And they ran and fetched him thence: and when he stood among the people, ^phe was higher than any of the people, from his shoulders and upward.

24 And Samuel said to all the people, ^qSee ye him whom the LORD hath chosen, that there is none like him among all the people? And all the people shouted, and said, ^oGod save the king.

25 Then Samuel told the people ^rthe manner of the kingdom, and wrote it in a book, and laid it up before the LORD. And Samuel sent all the people away, every man to his house.

26 ¶ And Saul also went home to Gibeah: and there went with him a band of men, ^swhose hearts God had touched.

27 But the children of Belial said, How shall this man save us? And they despised him, and brought him no presents: but ¹he held his peace.

CHAPTER XI.

1 Nahash offereth them of Jabesh-gilead a reproachful condition: 4 they send to Saul, and are delivered. 13 Saul confirmed king.

THEN ^aNahash the Ammonite came up, and encamped against ^bJabesh-gilead: and all the men of Jabesh said unto Nahash, ^cMake a covenant with us, and we will serve thee.

2 And Nahash the Ammonite answered them, ^dOn this condition will I make a covenant with you, that ^eI may thrust out all your right eyes, and lay it for ^fa reproach upon all Israel.

3 And the elders of Jabesh said unto him, ¹Give us seven days' respite, that we may send messengers unto all the coasts of Israel: and then, if there be no man to save us, we will come out to thee.

4 ¶ Then came the messengers to ^gGibeah of Saul, and told the tidings in the ears of the people: and all the people ^hlifted up their voices, and wept.

5 And, behold, Saul came ⁱafter the herd out of the field; and Saul said, ^kWhat aileth the people that they weep? And they told him the tidings of the men of Jabesh.

6 And the ¹Spirit of God came upon Saul when he heard those tidings, and ^mhis anger was kindled greatly.

7 And he took a yoke of oxen, and ⁿhewed them in pieces, and sent them throughout all the coasts of Israel by the hands of messengers, saying, ^oWhosoever cometh not forth after Saul and after Samuel, so shall it be done unto his oxen. And ^pthe fear of the LORD fell on the people, and they came out ²with one consent.

8 And when he numbered them in ^qBezek, ^rthe children of Israel were three hundred thousand, and the men of Judah thirty thousand.

9 And they said unto the messengers that came, Thus shall ye say unto the men of Jabesh-gilead, To-morrow, by that time the sun be hot, ye shall have ^shelp. And the messengers came and shewed it to the men of Jabesh; and they were glad.

10 Therefore the men of Jabesh said, ^tTo-morrow we will come out unto you, and ye shall do with us all that seemeth good unto you.

11 And it was so ^uon the morrow, that touch may have been gracious, or it may merely have consisted in the communication of a spirit of loyalty and love to the newly appointed sovereign. To be surrounded with such men was to Saul a matter of great importance, alike as to safety and to comfort. The children of Belial acted in character in despising the king, and the king shewed his wisdom in holding his peace. As the maxim is, he deemed it good to "bide his time;" and it soon came. It was customary in the East, in the case of an election to high office, to present what might be called addresses of congratulation, together with presents, expressive of esteem and good wishes. The history of Saul supplies a beacon on the subject of religious impressions. Early appearances were much in his favour, but the result completely disappointed expectation. He gave proofs the most incontestable that his heart was never changed; he remained to the last unhumbled and unre-newed. All emotions are vain which do not terminate in "repentance toward God, and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ."

Chap. XI. 1-15. This invasion of the Ammonites gave speedy occasion to Saul to exercise his authority, and he did it with great courage and promptitude. The descent of the Spirit of the Lord is a very noticeable circumstance. The unity of the people was a token for good, and, doubtless, the fruit of Divine influence. The assembling of 300,000 men of war was a great event, shewing the strength of the nation and the confidence which was reposed in Saul and Samuel. The havoc was terrible: the deliverance complete. The people stood amazed; and clearly saw the hand of the Lord in the events of the day. The contemptuous language of the men of Belial towards Saul now re-occurred to the people, and they Saul put the people "in three companies ; and they came into the midst of the host in the "morning-watch, and "slew the Ammonites until the heat of the day : and it came to pass, that they which remained were scattered, "so that two of them were not left together.

12 ¶ And the people said unto Samuel, "Who is he that said, Shall Saul reign over us? bring the men, that we may put them to death.

13 And Saul said, "There shall not a man be put to death this day : for to-day "the LORD hath wrought salvation in Israel.

14 ¶ Then said Samuel to the people, Come, and let us go to Gilgal, and "renew the kingdom there.

15 And all the people went to Gilgal ; and there they made Saul king before the LORD in Gilgal ; and there they sacrificed sacrifices of peace-offerings before the LORD ; and there Saul and all the men of Israel "rejoiced greatly.

CHAPTER XII.

1 Samuel testifieth his integrity. 6 He reproveth the people of ingratitude. 16 He terrifieth them with thunder in harvest-time ; 20 but comforteth them in God's mercy, if they will fear the Lord.

AND Samuel said unto all Israel, Behold, "I have hearkened unto your voice in all that ye said unto me, and "have made a king over you.

2 And now, behold, the king "walketh before you : and "I am old and gray-headed ; and, behold, my "sons are with you : and "I have walked before you from my childhood unto this day.

3 Behold, here I am : witness against me before the LORD, and before "his anointed ; "whose ox have I taken? or whose ass have I taken? or whom have I defrauded? whom have I oppressed? or of whose hand have I received any "bribe to "blind mine eyes therewith? and "I will restore it you.

4 And they said, "Thou hast not defrauded us, nor oppressed us, neither hast thou taken ought of any man's hand.

5 And he said unto them, "The LORD is witness against you, and "his anointed is witness this day, that "ye have not found ought "in my hand. And they answered, He is witness.

6 ¶ And Samuel said unto the people, "It is the LORD that "advanced Moses and Aaron, and that brought your fathers up out of the land of Egypt.

7 Now therefore stand still, that I may "reason with you before the LORD of all the "righteous acts of the LORD, which he did "to you and to your fathers.

8 When "Jacob was come into Egypt, determined to chastise the rebels ; but Saul prevented them ; his course in so doing was wise and dignified. He farther did well in ascribing "salvation to the Lord." The solemnities of Gilgal fairly established the throne of the king. The joy was great and mutual, shadowing forth the gladness which flows from a still higher species of deliverance. Saul was prosperous, and he had many friends ; but sad reverses awaited him.

and your fathers "cried unto the LORD, then the LORD sent Moses and Aaron, which "brought forth your fathers out of Egypt, and made them dwell in this place.

9 And when they "forgot the LORD their God, he sold them into the hand of Sisera, captain of the host of Hazor, and into the hand "of the Philistines, and into the hand of the king of Moab ; and they fought against them.

10 And "they cried unto the LORD, and said, We have sinned, because we have forsaken the LORD, and have served Baalim and Ashtaroth : but now "deliver us out of the hand of our enemies, and we will serve thee.

11 And the LORD sent Jerubbaal, and Bedan, and Jephthah, and Samuel, and delivered you out of the hand of your enemies on every side, and ye dwelled safe.

17 Is it not wheat-harvest to-day? "I will call unto the LORD, and he shall send thunder and rain ; that ye may perceive and see that your wickedness is great, which ye have done in the sight of the LORD, in asking you a king.

18 ¶ So Samuel called unto the LORD ; and the LORD "sent thunder and rain that day : and all the people greatly "feared the LORD and Samuel.

19 And all the people said unto Samuel, "Pray for thy servants unto the LORD thy God, that we die not : for we have added unto all our sins this evil, to ask us a king.

20 ¶ And Samuel said unto the people, Fear not : (ye have done all this wickedness : yet turn not aside from following

Chap. XII. 1-15. The appeal of Samuel was noble and affecting ; a grand moral spectacle which will retain its power to captivate the reader to the end of the world. It was a very striking display of true moral greatness. The only bitter ingredient in his cup was the character of his sons, whose bad eminence formed a sad contrast to the shining character of their venerable father. His counsels were worthy of a prophet to deliver, and a nation to hear. Ver. 16-25. His pathetic address was so the LORD, but serve the LORD with all your heart;

21 And turn ye not aside: for then should ye go after vain things, which ^kcannot profit nor deliver; for they are vain:)

22 For ^tthe LORD will not forsake his people ^mfor his great name's sake: because it ⁿhath pleased the LORD to make you his people.

23 Moreover, as for me, God forbid that I should sin against the LORD ^sin ceasing to pray for you: but ⁱI will teach you the good and the right way:

24 Only fear the LORD, and serve him ^pin truth with all your heart: for consider ^ohow great things he hath done for you.

25 But if ye shall still do wickedly, ye shall be consumed, both ye and your king.

3 And Jonathan smote ^dthe garrison of the Philistines that was in ^eGeba; and the Philistines heard of it. And Saul ^fblew the trumpet throughout all the land, saying, Let the Hebrews hear.

4 And all Israel heard say that Saul had smitten a garrison of the Philistines, and that Israel also ^gwas had in abomination with the Philistines. And the people were called together after Saul ^hto Gilgal.

far attended with proper effect that the people confessed their sin generally, and especially in clamouring for a king. Having seen this, the holy prophet sweetly changed his voice, and spoke to them words of encouragement. Never did intense and disinterested love utter more reasonable counsel. Samuel presents a striking example of the greatness of goodness. No dignity is comparable to that which is moral. The people felt as nothing in his presence, and even the king considered himself as a very secondary personage compared with the prophet.

Chap. XIII. 1-23. Saul, after his first great conflict, enjoyed a little breathing-time; but the hereditary enemies of his country, the Philistines, continued their hostility. Their numbers on the occasion are a circum-

9 And Saul said, Bring hither a burnt-offering to me, and peace-offerings. And ^hhe offered the burnt-offering.

10 And it came to pass, that, as soon as he had made an end of offering the burnt-offering, behold, Samuel came; and ⁱSaul went out to meet him, that he might ^jsalute him.

11 ¶ And Samuel said, ^kWhat hast thou done? And Saul said, Because I saw that the people were scattered from me, and that thou camest not within the days appointed, and that the Philistines gathered themselves together at ^lMichmash;

12 Therefore, ^msaid I, The Philistines will come down now upon me to Gilgal, and I have not ⁿmade supplication unto the LORD: ^oI forced myself therefore, and offered a burnt-offering.

13 And Samuel said to Saul, ^pThou hast done foolishly: ^qthou hast not kept the commandment of the LORD thy God, which he commanded thee; for now would the LORD have established thy kingdom upon Israel for ever.

14 But ^rnow thy kingdom shall not continue: ^sthe LORD hath sought him a man after his own heart, and the LORD hath commanded him to be ^tcaptain over his people, because thou hast not kept that which the LORD commanded thee.

15 And Samuel arose, and gat him up from Gilgal unto Gibeah of Benjamin: and Saul numbered the people that were ^upresent with him, ^vabout six hundred men.

16 And Saul, and Jonathan his son, and the people that were present with them, abode in ^wGibeah of Benjamin; but the Philistines encamped in Michmash.

17 ¶ And the spoilers came out of the camp of the Philistines ^xin three companies: one company turned unto the way that leadeth to ^yOphrah, unto the land of ^zShual:

18 And another company turned the way to ^aBeth-horon: and another company turned to the way of the border that looketh to the valley of ^bZeboim, toward the wilderness.

19 ¶ Now ^cthere was no smith found stance particularly worthy of notice. It has been supposed that there must have been some mistake as to the chariots; but criticism has done nothing to clear the matter up. The state of things was most critical for Saul, and the absence of Samuel made matters worse. The explanation which Saul gave to Samuel, although it bears a reasonable air, was by no means satisfactory. When the Philistines drew near, the fact that he had not made supplication to the Lord troubled him. Prayer is the best preparation for trial; and when trouble comes without it, the soul is soon made sensible of its error. Saul had taken upon himself the office of a prophet, or a priest, or both, and in so doing he had greatly sinned; and the punishment which followed corresponded with his transgression. The Philistines were wise in their generation, and took the surest means to prevent the throughout all the land of Israel; for the Philistines said, Lest the Hebrews make them swords or spears:

20 But all the Israelites went down to the Philistines, to sharpen every man his share, and his coultter, and his axe, and his mattock.

21 Yet they had ^aa file for the mattocks, and for the coulters, and for the forks, and for the axes, and to ¹sharpen the goads.

22 So it came to pass in the day of battle, that ¹there was neither sword nor spear found in the hand of any of the people that ^{were} with Saul and Jonathan: but with Saul, and with Jonathan his son, was there found.

23 And the ²garrison of the Philistines went out to the ²passage of Michmash.

CHAPTER XIV.

NOW ¹it came to pass upon a day, that ¹Jonathan the son of Saul said unto the young man that bare his armour, Come, and let us go over to the Philistines' garrison, that is on the other side. But ^bhe told not his father.

2 And Saul tarried ^cin the uttermost part of Gibeah, under a pomegranate-tree which is in Migron: and the people that ^{were} with him ^{were} about six hundred men;

3 And ⁴Ahiah, the son of Ahitub, ¹I-chabod's brother, the son of Phinehas, the son of Eli, the LORD's priest in Shiloh, ¹wearing an ephod. And the people knew not that Jonathan was gone.

4 [¶]And between ^athe passages, by which Jonathan sought to go over unto the Philistines' garrison, ¹there was a sharp rock on the one side, and a sharp rock on the other side: and the name of the one was Bozez, and the name of the other Seneh.

7 And his armour-bearer said unto him, ¹Do all that is in thine heart: turn thee; behold, I ^{am} with thee according to thy heart.

still in our place, and will not go up unto them.

10 But if they say thus, Come up unto us; then we will go up: for the LORD hath delivered them into our hand; and ^othis ^{shall} be a sign unto us.

11 And both of them discovered themselves unto the garrison of the Philistines: and the Philistines said, Behold, the Hebrews come forth ^pout of the holes where they had hid themselves.

12 And the men of the garrison answered Jonathan and his armour-bearer, and said, ^qCome up to us, and we will shew you a thing. And Jonathan said unto his armour-bearer, ^rCome up after me; for the LORD hath delivered them into the hand of Israel.

13 And Jonathan ^sclimbed up upon his hands and upon his feet, and his armour-bearer after him: and they ^tfell before Jonathan; and his armour-bearer slew after him.

14 And that first slaughter, which Jonathan and his armour-bearer made, was about twenty men, within as it were ^uan half-acre of land, ^{which} a yoke of oxen might plow.

15 [¶]And ^vthere was trembling in the host, in the field, and among all the people: the garrison, and ^wthe spoilers, they also trembled, and ^xthe earth quaked: so it was a very great trembling.

16 And the watchmen of Saul in Gibeah of Benjamin looked; and, behold, the multitude ^ymelted away, and they went on ^zbeating down one another.

17 [¶]Then said Saul unto the people that ^{were} with him, Number now, and see who is gone from us. And when they had numbered, behold, Jonathan and his armour-bearer ^{were} not there.

18 And Saul said unto Ahiah, ^bBring hither the ark of God: (for ^cthe ark of God was at that time with the children of Israel.)

19 [¶]And it came to pass, while Saul talked unto the priest, that the ^dnoise that ^{was} in the host of the Philistines went on and increased: and Saul said unto the priest, ^eWithdraw thine hand.

20 And Saul and all the people that ^{were} with him ^fassembled themselves, and they came to the battle: and, behold, ^gevery man's sword was against his fellow, and ^hthere was a very great discomfiture.

21 Moreover, ⁱthe Hebrews that were with the Philistines before that time, which went up with them into the camp from the country round about, even they manufacture of the weapons of war. They displayed a sense which the army of the living God, the Church of Christ, in our own times, has not always manifested. She has not seldom supplied to the Adversary the materials for carrying on the war against herself.

Chap XIV. 1-23. The language of Jonathan bespoke his true and ardent piety. How beautiful his avowal, "There is no restraint to the Lord to save by many or by few!" His faith was strong, and its reward was great. The hand of the Lord was speedily apparent: fear overtook the Philistines, and the quaking of the earth added to their consternation. As Jonathan had hoped, the Lord did work in an awful manner: the Philistines put forth all their strength in mutual destruction, in a way which could not be explained on ordinary principles. Ver. 24-35. Saul's interdict of food was the first of his great errors. The act was not only needless, but cruel, and most impolitic. The speech of Jonathan was characterised by excellent sense, while also turned to be with the Israelites that were with Saul and Jonathan.

22 Likewise all the men of Israel which had hid themselves in mount Ephraim, when they heard that the Philistines fled, even they also followed hard after them in the battle.

23 So the LORD saved Israel that day: and the battle passed over unto Beth-aven.

24 ¶ And the men of Israel were distressed that day: for Saul had adjured the people, saying, Cursed be the man that eateth any food until evening, that I may be avenged on mine enemies. So none of the people tasted any food.

25 And all they of the land came to a wood; and there was honey upon the ground.

26 And when the people were come into the wood, behold, the honey dropped; but no man put his hand to his mouth: for the people feared the oath.

27 But Jonathan heard not when his father charged the people with the oath: wherefore he put forth the end of the rod that was in his hand, and dipped it in an honeycomb, and put his hand to his mouth; and his eyes were enlightened.

28 Then answered one of the people, and said, Thy father straitly charged the people with an oath, saying, Cursed be the man that eateth any food this day. And the people were faint.

29 Then said Jonathan, My father hath troubled the land: see, I pray you, how mine eyes have been enlightened, because I tasted a little of this honey;

30 How much more, if haply the people had eaten freely to-day of the spoil of their enemies which they found? for had there not been now a much greater slaughter among the Philistines?

31 ¶ And they smote the Philistines that day from Michmash to Ajalon: and the people were very faint.

32 And the people flew upon the spoil, and took sheep, and oxen, and calves, and slew them on the ground: and the people did eat them with the blood.

33 ¶ Then they told Saul, saying, Behold, the people sin against the LORD, in that they eat with the blood. And he said, Ye have transgressed: roll a great stone unto me this day.

34 And Saul said, Disperse yourselves among the people, and say unto them, Bring me hither every man his ox, and every man his sheep, and slay them here, and eat; and sin not against the LORD in eating with the blood. And all the people brought every man his ox with him that night, and slew them there.

35 And Saul built an altar unto the LORD: the same was the first altar that he built unto the LORD.

36 ¶ And Saul said, Let us go down after the Philistines by night, and spoil them until the morning-light, and let us not leave a man of them. And they said, Do whatsoever seemeth good unto thee. Then said the priest, Let us draw near hither unto God.

37 ¶ And Saul asked counsel of God, Shall I go down after the Philistines? wilt thou deliver them into the hand of Israel? But he answered him not that day.

38 ¶ And Saul said, Draw ye near hither all the chief of the people; and know and see wherein this sin hath been this day:

39 For, as the LORD liveth, which saveth Israel, though it be in Jonathan my son, he shall surely die. But there was not a man among all the people that answered him.

40 Then said he unto all Israel, Be ye on one side, and I and Jonathan my son will be on the other side. And the people said unto Saul, Do what seemeth good unto thee.

41 Therefore Saul said unto the LORD God of Israel, Give a perfect lot. And Saul and Jonathan were taken: but the people escaped.

42 And Saul said, Cast lots between me and Jonathan my son. And Jonathan was taken.

43 Then Saul said to Jonathan, Tell me what thou hast done. And Jonathan told him, and said, I did but taste a little honey with the end of the rod that was in mine hand, and, lo, I must die.

44 And Saul answered, God do so and more also: for thou shalt surely die, Jonathan.

45 And the people said unto Saul, Shall Jonathan die, who hath wrought this great salvation in Israel? God forbid: as the LORD liveth, there shall not one hair of his head fall to the ground; for he hath wrought with God this day. So the people rescued Jonathan, that he died not.

46 Then Saul went up from following the Philistines: and the Philistines went to their own place.

47 ¶ So Saul took the kingdom over Israel, and fought against all his enemies on every side, against Moab, and against the children of Ammon, and against Edom, and against the kings of Zobah, and against the Philistines; and whithersoever he turned himself, he vexed them.

48 And he gathered an host, and smote the Amalekites, and delivered Israel out of the hands of them that spoiled them.

49 ¶ Now the sons of Saul were Jonathan, and Ishui, and Melchi-shua: and his father's conduct was attended with serious consequences as to the results of the battle, and the conduct of the people, whose ravenous appetite led them to eat flesh with the blood in it! Ver. 36-52. The language of Saul to his son was rash and most unparental; and the more so, as he himself had laid the snare into which his son unwittingly fell. To take a life, therefore, for the breach of a preposterous law, actually unknown to the alleged offender, had been murder under the most aggravated circumstances. The common sense of the 51 And Kish was the father of Saul; and Ner, the father of Abner, was the son of Abiel.

52 And there was sore war against the Philistines all the days of Saul: and when Saul saw any strong man, or any valiant man, he took him unto him.

CHAPTER XV.

1 Samuel sendeth Saul to destroy Amalek. 8 He spareth Agag and the best of the spoil. 32 Samuel killeth Agag.

SAMUEL also said unto Saul, "The LORD sent me to anoint thee to be king over his people, over Israel: now therefore ^bhearken thou unto the voice of the words of the LORD.

2 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, "I remember that which ^aAmalek did to Israel, how he laid wait for him in the way, when he came up from Egypt.

3 Now go and smite Amalek, and ^cutterly destroy all that they have, and spare them not; but ^dslay both man and woman, infant and suckling, ^eox and sheep, camel and ass.

4 And Saul gathered the people together, and numbered them in ^fTelaim, ^gtwo hundred thousand footmen, and ten thousand men of Judah.

5 And Saul came to a city of Amalek, and ^hlaid wait in the valley.

6 ¶ And Saul said unto ⁱthe Kenites, "Go, depart, get you down from among the Amalekites, lest I destroy you with them: for ^jye shewed kindness to all the children of Israel when they came up out of Egypt. So the Kenites departed from among the Amalekites.

8 And he took ⁿAgag the king of the Amalekites alive, and ^outterly destroyed all the people with the edge of the sword.

9 But Saul and the people spared Agag, and ^pthe best of the sheep, and of the oxen, and of ^qthe fatlings, and the lambs, and all that was good, and would not utterly destroy them: but every thing that was vile and refuse, that they destroyed utterly.

10 ¶ Then came the word of the LORD unto Samuel, saying,

11 It ^arepenteth me that I have set up Saul to be king: for he is ^bturned back from following me, and ^chath not performed my commandments. And ^dit grieved Samuel; and ^ehe cried unto the LORD all night.

12 ¶ And when Samuel rose early to meet Saul in the morning, it was told Samuel, saying, Saul came to ^fCarnel, and, behold, ^ghe set him up a place, and is gone about, and passed on, and gone down to Gilgal.

13 And Samuel came to Saul: and Saul said unto him, "Blessed be thou of the LORD; ^hI have performed the commandment of the LORD.

14 And Samuel said, "What meaneth then this bleating of the sheep in mine ears, and the lowing of the oxen which I hear?

15 And Saul said, They have brought them from the Amalekites: ⁱfor the people spared the best of the sheep and of the oxen, ^jto sacrifice unto the LORD thy God; and the rest we have utterly destroyed.

16 Then Samuel said unto Saul, ^kStay, and I will tell thee what the LORD hath said to me this night. And he said unto him, Say on.

17 And Samuel said, "When thou wast little in thine own sight, wast thou not ^lmade the head of the tribes of Israel, and ^mthe LORD anointed thee king over Israel?

18 And the LORD sent thee on a journey, and said, Go and utterly destroy ⁿthe sinners the Amalekites, and fight against them until ^othey be consumed.

19 Wherefore then didst thou not obey the voice of the LORD, but didst ^pfly upon the spoil, and ^qdidst evil in the sight of the LORD?

20 And Saul said unto Samuel, "Yea, I have obeyed the voice of the LORD, and have gone the way which the LORD sent me, and ^rhave brought Agag the king of Amalek, and have utterly destroyed the Amalekites.

21 But ^sthe people took of the spoil, sheep and oxen, the chief of the things which should have been utterly destroyed, people, however, prevented the perpetration of such an atrocity. Passion, not reason, was the power that ruled Saul. His whole career was reckless, heartless, and headlong. We find him professing to ask counsel of the Lord, and stopping the priest in the midst of the service, that he might hasten to the battle-field. The whole of his course rather shews what is to be avoided than what is to be imitated.

Chap. XV. 1-35. Saul enters very cordially into the charge to make war upon Amalek, and prosecuted it with great vigour and complete success. Yet even here his self-will is very strongly apparent. He must needs improve on the Divine command, by leaving undone much that had been enjoined him. His conduct in this matter was a cause of great grief to Samuel, who "cried unto the Lord all night," when he appears to have obtained an answer to his supplications, intimating the Divine purpose to reject the family of Saul; who, notwithstanding his neglect, takes credit to himself for having performed "the commandment of the Lord." He thought he had a good case in defence of himself and the people, but it would not abide examination. Samuel cut the matter short by giving him to understand that a great principle was involved: "obedience was better than sacrifice," and "to hearken than the fat of rams." The course of Saul was incipient rebellion, and the penalty the loss of the kingdom. This brought him to his senses, and a lame defence gave place to a humble confession; but it was too late. He "feared the people, and obeyed their voice," at the expense of neglecting the voice of the Lord. Truly, "the fear of man," both to great and to sacrifice unto the LORD thy God in Gilgal.

22 And Samuel said, ^aHath the LORD as great delight in burnt-offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of the LORD? Behold, to ^aobey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams.

23 For ^arebellion is as the sin of ^awitchcraft, and stubbornness is as iniquity and idolatry. Because ^athou hast rejected the word of the LORD, he hath also rejected thee from being king.

24 ¶ And Saul said unto Samuel, ^aI have sinned: for I have transgressed the commandment of the LORD, and thy words; because ^aI feared the people, and ^aobeyed their voice.

25 Now therefore, I pray thee, ^apardon my sin, and turn again with me, that I may worship the LORD.

26 And Samuel said unto Saul, ^bI will not return with thee: for ^athou hast rejected the word of the LORD, and the LORD hath rejected thee from being king over Israel.

27 And as Samuel turned about to go away, he laid hold upon the skirt of his mantle, and it rent.

28 And Samuel said unto him, ^aThe LORD hath rent the kingdom of Israel from thee this day, and ^ahath given it to ^aa neighbour of thine, ^athat is better than thou.

29 And also ^athe ^aStrength of Israel ^awill not lie nor repent: for he is not a man, that he should repent.

30 Then he said, I have sinned; yet ^ahonour me now, I pray thee, before the elders of my people, and before Israel, and turn again with me, ^athat I may worship the LORD thy God.

31 So Samuel turned again after Saul; and Saul worshipped the LORD.

32 ¶ Then said Samuel, Bring ye hither to me Agag the king of the Amalekites. And Agag came unto him delicately. And ^aAgag said, Surely the bitterness of death is past.

small, "bringeth a snare." There was no space given for repentance: the decree had gone forth, and could not be reversed. The king was importunate, and the prophet resolute; yet he so far commiserated the afflicted monarch, that he honoured him to the extent of returning again. Agag would appear to have counted upon death in the battle, and seemed surprised to find himself alive. He had, then, to all intents, tasted the bitter cup by anticipation, little thinking that the death was still to come. He knew not that he had been doomed to destruction, and that he had been spared only through the disobedience of the king: but he was soon undeceived. His crimes had been great, and justice must take its course. "Samuel came no more to see Saul till the day of his death." Sad words these for the king! The absence of the prophet indicated the absence of the Lord; yet "Samuel mourned for Saul." While we withdraw from the wicked, we may yet pity them, and pray for them.

Chap. XVI. 1-18. Mourning must not be allowed to stand in the way of duty. As Saul was cast off, it became necessary to provide a successor. Samuel's estimate of Saul's character is affectingly shewn in the words, "If Saul hear it, he will kill me;" kill his truest 34 ¶ Then Samuel went to Ramah; and Saul went up to his house to Gibeah of Saul.

35 And Samuel came no more to see Saul until the day of his death; nevertheless ^aSamuel mourned for Saul: and the LORD ^arepented that he had made Saul king over Israel.

CHAPTER XVI.

1 Samuel, sent by God under pretence of a sacrifice, cometh to Beth-lehem. 6 His human judgment is reproved. 11 He anoints David.

AND the LORD said unto Samuel, ^aHow long wilt thou mourn for Saul, ^aseeing I have rejected him from reigning over Israel? Fill thine ^ahorn with oil, and go, I will send thee to ^aJesse the Beth-lehemite: for I have provided me a king among his sons.

2 And Samuel said, ^aHow can I go? If Saul hear ^ait, he will kill me. And the LORD said, Take an heifer ^awith thee, and say, ^aI am come to sacrifice to the LORD.

3 And ^acall Jesse to the sacrifice, ^aand I will shew thee what thou shalt do; and thou shalt ^aanoint unto me ^ahim whom I name unto thee.

4 And Samuel did that which the LORD spake, and came to Beth-lehem: and the elders of the town ^atrembled at his ^acoming, and said, ^aComest thou peaceably?

5 And he said, Peaceably: I am come to sacrifice unto the LORD: ^asanctify yourselves, and come with me to the sacrifice. And he sanctified Jesse and his sons, and called them to the sacrifice.

6 ¶ And it came to pass, when they were come, that he looked on ^aEliab, and said, ^aSurely the LORD's anointed is before him.

7 But the LORD said unto Samuel, ^aLook not on his countenance, or on the height of his stature; because I have refused him: for the LORD ^aseeth not as friend; kill the man of God! It was time that such a sovereign should be uncrowned. "The Lord looketh at the heart," should be a motto with the people of God. Let them look as he looks, and see that the heart be always in a fit state to be looked at by him. The Divine choice of David strikingly illustrates the sovereignty of God in all that appertains to man. Any of the sons of Jesse might have been quite competent to sustain the office of king; but they had no right to that honour, and the Lord, in making choice of their brother David, while he glorified him, did them no wrong. When God calls men to a great work, he imparts the necessary qualifications. "The Spirit of the Lord came upon David from that day forward." As was his day, so was his strength. The work of Saul was now drawing to an end; the seal of his calling, and the source of his fitness, was withdrawn; "the Spirit of the Lord departed from him," and still worse, he was left to the government of an evil spirit. The character here given of David was very high, but not exaggerated; Saul little knew the destiny of this wonderful young man. Hindus still believe that there is a power in music to cast out evil spirits, and to benefit persons the subject of insanity, or melancholy, which they ascribe to spiritual agencies. The proposal of the man seeth; for man ¹looketh on the ²outward appearance, but the LORD looketh ³on the heart.

8 Then Jesse called ⁴Abinadab, and made him pass before Samuel. And he said, Neither hath the LORD chosen this.

9 Then Jesse made ⁵Shammah to pass by. And he said, Neither hath the LORD chosen this.

10 Again, Jesse made ⁶seven of his sons to pass before Samuel. And Samuel said unto Jesse, The LORD hath not chosen these.

11 ¶ And Samuel said unto Jesse, Are here all ⁷thy children? And he said, ⁸There remaineth yet the youngest, and, behold, he keepeth the sheep. And Samuel said unto Jesse, Send and fetch him: for we will not sit ⁹down till he come hither.

12 And he sent, and brought him in. Now he ¹⁰was ¹¹ruddy, and ¹²withal ¹³of a beautiful countenance, and goodly to look to. And the LORD said, Arise, ¹⁴anoint him: for this is he.

13 Then Samuel took the horn of oil, and ¹⁵anointed him in the midst of his brethren: and ¹⁶the Spirit of the LORD came upon David from that day forward. So Samuel rose up, and went to Ramah.

14 ¶ But ¹⁷the Spirit of the LORD departed from Saul, and ¹⁸an evil spirit from the LORD ¹⁹troubled him.

15 And Saul's servants said unto him, Behold now, an evil spirit from God troubleth thee:

16 Let our lord now command thy servants, ²⁰which are ²¹before thee, to seek out a man, ²²who is a cunning player on an harp: and it shall come to pass, when the evil spirit from God is upon thee, that he shall ²³play with his hand, and thou shalt be well.

17 And Saul said unto his servants, Provide me now a man that can play well, and bring ²⁴him to me.

18 Then answered one of the servants, and said, Behold, I have seen a son of Jesse the Beth-lehemite, ²⁵that is cunning in playing, and ²⁶a mighty valiant man, and a man of war, and prudent in ²⁷matters, and a comely person, and ²⁸the LORD is with him.

19 ¶ Wherefore Saul sent messengers unto Jesse, and said, Send me David thy son, which is ²⁹with the sheep.

servant to send for David took with Saul, and on his appearing, he found favour in the sight of the king. The hand of the Lord was clearly in the matter. Neither Saul nor David, probably, had any idea of the relation in which they were ultimately to stand to each other. The monarch little thought the brave, wise, and lovely youth, who stood before him, was to be his son-in-law, and his successor. David was now being prepared for the honour that awaited him, and gradually introduced to the knowledge of the people he was destined to govern. The Lord leads the blind by a way which they know not; his own purposes, like his own people, are ever safe in his own hands.

CHAPTER XVII.

1 The armies of the Israelites and Philistines being ready to battle, 4 Goliath cometh proudly forth to challenge a combat. 12 David accepteth the challenge, and slayeth the giant.

NOW the Philistines ¹gathered together their armies to battle, and were gathered together at ²Shochoh, which ³belongeth to Judah, and pitched between ⁴Shochoh and ⁵Azekah, in ⁶Ephes-dammim.

2 And Saul and the men of Israel were gathered together, and pitched by ⁷the valley of Elah, and ⁸set the battle in array against the Philistines.

3 And the Philistines stood on a mountain on the one side, and Israel stood on a mountain on the other side: and ⁹there was a valley between them.

4 ¶ And there went out a champion out of the camp of the Philistines, named ¹⁰Goliath, ¹¹of Gath, ¹²whose height was six cubits and a span.

5 And he ¹³had an helmet of brass upon his head; and he ¹⁴was ¹⁵armed with a coat of mail; and the weight of the coat was five thousand shekels of brass.

6 And he ¹⁶had greaves of brass upon his legs, and a ¹⁷target of brass between his shoulders.

7 And ¹⁸the staff of his spear was like a weaver's beam; and his spear's head weighed six hundred shekels of iron: and one bearing a shield went before him.

8 And he stood and cried unto the armies of Israel, and said unto them, Why are ye come out to set ¹⁹your battle in array? Am not I a Philistine, and ye ²⁰servants to Saul? choose you a man for you, and let him come down to me.

to annoy the Hebrews. The purposes of the Lord require time for development; these wars took place eight years after the anointing of David, from which it will be seen, that considerable space was given to Saul both to repent and to prepare for the catastrophe. This giant would appear to have been raised up for the purpose of David's exaltation. Hitherto nothing had been heard of him, although he must have been an object of pride and interest to his own countrymen. If the cubit be reckoned at 21 inches, his stature must have been 11 feet 4 inches, or, at the lowest calculation, 9 feet 9 inches; in either case, he was a terrific object to an ordinary man. Single combats were common in those days, and are even now practised among the Bedouins and others in the East. Goliath struck terror into the heart of the Hebrew soldiers; the only man that dared to look upon him was youthful David, and even he did not 9 If he be able to fight with me, and to kill me, then will we be your servants: but if I prevail against him, and kill him, then shall ye be our servants, and ¹serve us.

10 And the Philistine said, ¹I defy the armies of Israel this day; ²give me a man, that we may fight together.

11 When Saul and all Israel heard those words of the Philistine, they were ¹dismayed, and greatly afraid.

12 ¶ Now ¹David was the son of that ²Ephrathite of Beth-lehem-judah, whose name was Jesse; and he had ³eight sons: and the man went among men for an old man in the days of Saul.

13 And the three eldest sons of Jesse went and followed Saul to the battle: and ¹the names of his three sons that went to the battle were Eliab the first-born; and next unto him Abinadab; and the third ²Shammah.

14 And David was ¹the youngest: and the three eldest followed Saul.

15 But David went and ¹returned from Saul to feed his father's sheep at Beth-lehem.

16 And the Philistine drew near morning and evening, and presented himself ¹forty days.

17 And Jesse said unto David his son, ¹Take now for thy brethren an ephah of this ²parched corn, and these ten loaves, and run to the camp to thy brethren;

18 And ¹carry these ten ²cheeses unto the captain of ³their thousand, and ⁴look how thy brethren fare, and take their pledge.

19 Now Saul, and they, and all the men of Israel, were in the valley of Elah, fighting with the Philistines.

20 ¶ And David rose up early in the morning, and ¹left the sheep with a keeper, and took, and went, as Jesse had commanded him: and he came to the ²trench, as the host was going forth to the ³fight, and shouted for the battle.

21 For Israel and the Philistines had put the battle in array, army against army.

22 And David left ¹his carriage in the hand of the keeper of the carriage, and ran into the army, and came and ²saluted his brethren.

23 And as he talked with them, behold, there came up the champion (the Philistine of Gath, Goliath by name) out of the armies of the Philistines, and spake ¹according to the same words: and David heard them.

25 And the men of Israel said, Have ye seen this man that is come up? surely to defy Israel is he come up: and it shall be, ¹that the man who killeth him, ²the king will enrich him with great riches, and will give him his daughter, and make his father's house ³free in Israel.

26 And David spake to the men that stood by him, saying, What shall be done to the man that killeth this Philistine, and taketh away the ¹reproach from Israel? for who is this ²uncircumcised Philistine, that he should ³defy the armies of the living God?

27 And the people answered him after this manner, saying, ¹So shall it be done to the man that killeth him.

30 ¶ And he turned from him toward another, and spake after the same ¹manner: and the people answered him again after the former manner.

31 And when the words were heard which David spake, they rehearsed them before Saul; and he ¹sent for him.

32 ¶ And David said to Saul, ¹Let no man's heart fail because of him: ²thy servant will go and fight with this Philistine.

appear till at the distance of forty days of daring defiance of Israel. David, without desiring or knowing it, was led to the army, where he spoke and acted in a manner which gave umbrage to his brothers, who thought him animated by pride and haughtiness. The deportment of David was extraordinary for his years, and clearly indicated that he was acting under an influence higher than that of nature. His bravery was astonishing; though modest, he was dauntless. Of the science of war he knew nothing, but by the good hand of his God upon him, he had had somewhat to do with lions and bears, and the result inspired him with a hope that he might perchance humble the uncircumcised Philistine. His confidence, however, was not in himself, but in the Lord, who had delivered him out of the paws of the lion and the bear. There was about the young man, his manner, and his speech, something which excited the interest of the king, and led to the injunction, "Go, and the Lord be with thee!" The interview was characteristic of both: on the one side, we have curses and threatenings and rage; on the other, meekness, gentleness, and confidence in the Lord of hosts. Ver. 46 pre-

38 ¶ And Saul ^aarmed David with his armour, and he put an helmet of brass upon his head; also he armed him with a coat of mail.

39 And David girded his sword upon his armour, and he assayed to go; for he had not proved it. And David said unto Saul, I cannot go with these; for I have not proved them. And David ^bput them off him.

40 And he took his ^cstaff in his hand, and chose him five smooth stones out of the ^dbrook, and put them in a shepherd's ^ebag which he had, even in a scrip; and his sling was in his hand: and he drew near to the Philistine.

42 And when the Philistine looked about, and saw David, ^ehe disdained him; for he was but ^aa youth, and ruddy, and of a fair countenance.

43 And the Philistine said unto David, ^f*Am* I a dog, that thou comest to me with staves? And the Philistine ^gcursed David by his gods.

44 And the Philistine said to David, ^hCome to me, and I will give thy flesh unto the fowls of the air, and to the beasts of the field.

45 Then said David to the Philistine, ⁱThou comest to me with a sword, and with a spear, and with a shield; but I come to thee ^jin the name of the LORD of hosts, the God of the armies of Israel, whom thou hast ^kdefied.

58 And Saul said to him, Whose son art thou, thou young man? And David answered, ^l*I am* the son of thy servant Jesse the Beth-lehemite.

CHAPTER XVIII.

1 Jonathan loveth David. 5 Saul envieth his praise; 10 seeketh to kill him in his fury; 12 feareth him for his good success; 17 he offereth him his daughter for a mare.

AND it came to pass, when he had made an end of speaking unto Saul, that ^athe soul of Jonathan was knit with the sents a terrible address, which, had the giant believed, would have filled him with fear and horror. The piety of David forms a striking contrast to the idolatrous swearing of Goliath. The scene is wonderful even in description; but the thing itself, as beheld by the two armies, was invested with an interest to which history presents no parallel. The sight of David first severing the head of the monster, and then bearing it to Jerusalem, was one which the beholder could never forget. See him entering the palace of the king with the enormous head of the Philistine in his hand! The spiritual bearing of the passage is grand,—impressively shewing, that the race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong; neither are great victories over the powers of darkness to be achieved by might or by power, but by the Spirit of the living God.

Chap. XVIII. 1-16. Jonathan and David present

the most wonderful illustration in history of mutual love. This affection resulted from their kindred dispositions; they had so much in common, that they might be viewed as one soul acting in two bodies. The conduct of Jonathan was in the highest degree lovely. Uninfluenced by the pride of station, he laboured to identify the youthful shepherd with his father's house, and to raise him to a perfect equality with himself. David's conduct was marked by uniform wisdom, and his popularity was universal. God gave him favour with all classes of the people. Music and song were put in requisition to celebrate his excellences; but the conduct of the people in these respects was more generous than prudent. The king was mortified at the superiority ascribed to the youthful stranger, and he "eyed David from that day and forward." This is a most significant phrase—ennity ripened into malignity. Saul seemed to have somewhat of a presentiment of what soul of David, and Jonathan ^bloved him as his own soul.

2 And Saul ^ctook him that day, and would let him go no more home to his father's house.

3 Then Jonathan and David ^dmade a covenant, because he loved him as his own soul.

4 And Jonathan ^estripped himself of the robe that was upon him, and gave it to David, and his garments, even to his sword, and to his bow, and to his girdle.

5 ¶ And David went out whithersoever Saul sent him, and ^fbehaved himself ^gwisely: and Saul set him over ^hthe men of war; and he was accepted in the sight of all the people, and also in the sight of Saul's servants.

6 ¶ And it came to pass as they came, when David was returned from the slaughter of the ⁱPhilistine, that ^jthe women came out of all cities of Israel, singing and dancing, to meet king Saul, with tabrets, with joy, and with ^kinstruments of musick.

7 And the women ^lanswered one another as they played, and said, ^mSaul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands.

8 And Saul was very wroth, and ⁿthe saying ^odispleased him; and he said, They have ascribed unto David ten thousands, and to me they have ascribed but thousands: ^pand what can he have more but the kingdom?

9 And Saul ^qeyed David from that day and forward.

10 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, that ^rthe evil spirit from God came upon Saul, and he ^sprophesied in the midst of the house; and David ^tplayed with his hand, as at other times: and there was a javelin in Saul's hand.

11 And Saul ^ucast the javelin; for he said, I will smite David even to the wall with it. And David avoided out of his presence twice.

12 ¶ And Saul was ^vafraid of David, because ^wthe LORD was with him, and was ^xdeparted from Saul.

13 Therefore Saul ^yremoved him from him, and made him his captain over a thousand; and ^zhe went out and came in before the people.

14 And David ^{aa}behaved himself wisely in all his ways; and ^{ab}the LORD was with him.

15 Wherefore, when Saul saw that he behaved himself very ^bwisely, he was afraid of him.

16 But ^call Israel and Judah loved David, because he went out and came in before them.

17 ¶ And Saul said to David, Behold my elder daughter Merab, ^dher will I give thee to wife; only be thou ^evaliant for me, and fight ^fthe LORD's battles: for Saul said, ^gLet not mine hand be upon him, but let the hand of the Philistines be upon him.

18 And David said unto Saul, ^hWho am I? and what is my life, or my father's family in Israel, that I should be son-in-law to the king?

19 But it came to pass, at the time when Merab, Saul's daughter, should have been given to David, that she was given unto ⁱAdriel the Meholahite to wife.

20 ¶ And Michal, Saul's daughter, ^jloved David: and they told Saul, and the thing ^kpleased him.

21 And Saul said, I will give him her, that she may be ^la snare to him, and that the hand of the Philistines may be against him. Wherefore Saul said to David, Thou shalt this day be my son-in-law in the one of the twain.

22 ¶ And Saul ^mcommanded his ⁿservants, saying, Commune with David secretly, and say, Behold, the king hath delight in thee, and all his servants love thee: now therefore be the king's son-in-law.

23 And Saul's servants spake those words in the ears of David. And David said, Seemeth it to you a light thing to be a king's son-in-law, seeing that I am ^oa poor man, and lightly esteemed?

24 And the servants of Saul told him, saying, ^pOn this manner spake David.

25 And Saul said, Thus shall ye say to David, The king desireth not any ^qdowry, but an hundred ^rforeskins of the Philistines, to be avenged of the king's enemies. But Saul thought to make David fall by the hand of the Philistines.

26 And when his servants told David these words, it pleased David well to be the king's son-in-law: and the days were not ^sexpired.

27 Wherefore David arose and went, he and his men, and slew of the Philistines two hundred men; and David brought their foreskins, and they gave them in full tale to the king, that he might be the king's son-in-law. And Saul gave him Michal his daughter to wife.

awaited him, when he put the bitter question, "What can he have more but the kingdom?" The attempt to slay David was serious, and nothing but a Divine Hand preserved his life. Saul's conviction that the Lord was with David was a source alike of fear and foreboding. He found it no light matter to deal with a man who "behaved himself wisely in all his ways." Ver. 17-30. David had now laid hold on the heart of the country, and possessing the entire confidence of the people, it became necessary for Saul to treat him warily. Although intent, therefore, upon his destruction, he must go about it in such a manner as not to incur popular obloquy. He offered a bribe which might have tempted the highest ambition, had there been sincerity in it; but Saul was alike false and malicious. Events, however, turned out to thwart the king, and to further the interests of David. In giving him Michal, he only meant to promote his destruction. The king's counsel to his servants was alike base and cruel, derogatory of a king, and unworthy of a man. Thus he laboured to inflame the young man's ambition, that he might place himself in jeopardy and perish. But Saul was caught in his own snare. God was with David, who brought him, not the one hundred foreskins, which Saul had deemed 28 ¶ And Saul ^asaw and knew that the LORD was with David, and that Michal Saul's daughter loved him.

29 And Saul was yet the more afraid of David; and Saul became David's enemy continually.

30 Then the princes of the Philistines went forth: and it came to pass, after they went forth, that David behaved himself more wisely than all the servants of Saul; so that his name was much set by.

CHAPTER XIX.

1 Jonathan discovereth his father's purpose to kill David. 4 He persuadeth his father to reconciliation. 8 Saul's malicious rage breaketh out again. 12 Michal's stratagem to save David.

AND Saul spake to Jonathan his son, and to all his servants, that they should kill David.

2 But Jonathan, Saul's son, ^bdelighted much in David: and Jonathan told David, saying, Saul my father seeketh to kill thee. Now therefore, I pray thee, take heed to thyself until the morning, and abide in a secret place, and hide thyself;

3 And I will go out and stand beside my father in the field where thou art, and I will commune with my father of thee; and what I see, that I will tell thee.

4 ¶ And Jonathan ^cspake good of David unto Saul his father, and said unto him, Let not the king sin against his servant, against David; because he hath not sinned against thee, and because his works have been to thee-ward very good:

5 For he did ^dput his life in his hand, and slew the Philistine, and the LORD wrought a great salvation for all Israel: thou sawest it, and didst rejoice: wherefore then wilt thou sin against innocent blood, to slay David ^ewithout a cause?

6 And Saul hearkened unto the voice of Jonathan: and Saul ^fswore, As the LORD liveth, he shall not be slain.

7 And Jonathan called David, and Jonathan shewed him all those things: and Jonathan brought David to Saul, and he was in his presence, ^gas in times past.

8 ¶ And there was war again: and David went out and fought with the Philistines, and slew them with a great slaughter; and they fled from him.

9 And the evil spirit from the LORD was upon Saul, as he sat in his house with his javelin in his hand: and David played with his hand.

10 And Saul sought to smite David even to the wall with the javelin; but he slipped away out of Saul's presence, and he smote the javelin into the wall: and David fled, and escaped that night.

11 ¶ Saul also sent messengers unto David's house, to watch him, and to slay him in the morning: and Michal, David's wife, told him, saying, If thou save not thy life to-night, to-morrow thou shalt be slain.

12 ¶ So Michal let David down through a window; and he went, and fled, and escaped.

13 And Michal took an image, and laid it in the bed, and put a pillow of goats' hair for his bolster, and covered it with a cloth.

14 And when Saul sent messengers to take David, she said, He is sick.

15 And Saul sent the messengers again to see David, saying, Bring him up to me in the bed, that I may slay him.

16 And when the messengers were come in, behold, there was an image in the bed, with a pillow of goats' hair for his bolster.

17 And Saul said unto Michal, Why hast thou deceived me so, and sent away mine enemy, that he is escaped? And Michal answered Saul, He said unto me, Let me go; why should I kill thee?

18 ¶ So David fled, and escaped, and came to Samuel to Ramah, and told him all that Saul had done to him. And he and Samuel went and dwelt in Naioth.

19 And it was told Saul, saying, Behold, David is at Naioth in Ramah.

20 And Saul sent messengers to take David: and when they saw the company of the prophets prophesying, and Samuel standing as appointed over them, the Spirit of God was upon the messengers of Saul, and they also prophesied.

21 And when it was told Saul, he sent other messengers, and they prophesied likewise. And Saul sent messengers again the third time, and they prophesied also.

22 Then went he also to Ramah, and came to a great well that is in Sechu: and he asked and said, Where are Samuel and David? And one said, Behold, they be at Naioth in Ramah.

23 ¶ And he went thither to Naioth in Ramah: and the Spirit of God was upon him also, and he went on and prophesied, until he came to Naioth in Ramah.

24 And he stripped off his clothes also, and prophesied before Samuel in like manner, and lay down naked all that sufficient to secure his death, but two hundred. Thus the condition was twice fulfilled, and Saul, for very shame, could not withhold his daughter. Hate on the part of the king increased with success on the part of David, but, as God was with him, he was wise in all his words and deeds, and "his name was much set by," or precious with the multitude.

Chap. XIX. 1-24. The malice and hatred of Saul now burst all bounds; he deliberately proposed to Jonathan, and all his servants, to kill the son of Jesse! Cruel craft having failed, he now resorted to undisguised force. Jonathan, however, David's fast friend, stood him in stead in this moment of unparalleled danger, giving him timely warning of the perils to which he was exposed. Jonathan's intercession with his father was worthy of him. His remonstrances ought to have shamed the infuriated king: and for the moment such was the effect, prompting him to swear by the Lord, that "he should not be slain." Wars recurring afresh, David performed further services, but they only tended to exasperate his royal master, and persecuting father-in-law. Never was David in danger so great as when the messengers pursued him to his own house to kill day, and all that night. Wherefore they say, Is Saul also among the prophets?

CHAPTER XX.

1 David consulteth with Jonathan for his safety. 11 Their covenant renewed by oath. 24 Saul, missing David, seeketh to kill Jonathan.

AND David fled ^afrom Naioth in Ramah, and came and said before Jonathan, ^bWhat have I done? what is mine iniquity? and what is my sin before thy father, that he seeketh my life?

2 And he said unto him, ^cGod forbid; thou shalt not die: behold, my father will do nothing, either great or small, but that he will ^dshew it me; and why should my father hide this thing from me? it is not so.

3 And David ^eswore moreover, and said, Thy father certainly knoweth that I have found grace in thine eyes; and he saith, Let not Jonathan know this, lest he be grieved: but truly, ^fas the LORD liveth, and ^gas thy soul liveth, there is ^hbut a step between me and death.

4 Then said Jonathan unto David, ⁱWhatsoever thy soul ^jdesireth, I will even do it for thee.

5 And David said unto Jonathan, Behold, to-morrow is the ^knew-moon, and I should not fail to sit with the king at meat: but let me go, ^lthat I may hide myself in the field unto the third day at even.

6 If thy father at all miss me, then say, David earnestly asked leave of me that he might run to ^mBeth-lehem his city; for there is a yearly ⁿsacrifice there for all the family.

7 If he say thus, ^o*It is well*; thy servant shall have peace: but if he be ^pvery wroth, then be sure that ^qevil is determined by him.

8 Therefore thou shalt ^rdeal kindly with thy servant; for ^sthou hast brought thy servant into a covenant of the LORD with thee: notwithstanding, ^tif there be in me iniquity, slay me thyself; for ^uwhy shouldest thou bring me to thy father?

9 And Jonathan said, Far be it from thee: for if I knew certainly that evil were determined by my father to come upon thee, ^vthen would not I tell it thee?

10 Then said David to Jonathan, Who shall tell me? or what ^wif thy father ^xanswer thee roughly?

11 ¶ And Jonathan said unto David, Come, and let us go out into the field.

And they went out both of them into the field.

12 And Jonathan said unto David, ^aO LORD God of Israel, when I have ^bsounded my father about to-morrow any time, or the third day, and, behold, if there be good toward David, and I then send not unto thee, and ^cshew it thee;

13 ^dThe LORD do so and much more to Jonathan: but if it please my father to do thee evil, then I will shew it thee, and send thee away, that thou mayest go in peace; and ^ethe LORD be with thee, as ^fhe hath been with my father.

14 And thou shalt not only, while yet I live, shew me ^gthe kindness of the LORD, that I die not:

15 But ^halso ⁱthou shalt not cut off thy kindness from my house for ever: no, not when the LORD hath cut off the enemies of David every one from the face of the earth.

16 So Jonathan ^jmade a covenant with the house of David, ^ksaying, ^lLet the LORD even require it at the hand of David's enemies.

17 And Jonathan caused David to swear again, ^mbecause he loved him: ⁿfor he loved him as he loved his own soul.

18 ¶ Then Jonathan said to David, To-morrow is the ^onew-moon; and thou shalt be missed, because thy seat will be ^pempty.

19 And ^qwhen thou hast stayed three days, ^rthen thou shalt go down ^squickly, and come to the place where thou didst ^thide thyself ^uwhen the business was ^vin hand, and shalt remain by the stone ^wEzel.

20 And I will shoot three arrows on the side ^xthereof, as though I shot at a mark.

21 And, behold, I will send a lad, ^ysaying, Go, find out the arrows. If I expressly say unto the lad, Behold, the arrows are on this side of thee, take them; then come thou: for ^zthere is peace to thee, and ^ano hurt, as ^bthe LORD liveth.

22 But if I say thus unto the young man, Behold, the arrows are beyond thee; go thy way: for the LORD hath sent thee away.

23 And ^cas touching ^dthe matter which thou and I have spoken of, behold, ^ethe LORD be between thee and me for ever.

24 ¶ So David hid himself in the field: and when the new-moon was come, the ^fking sat him down to eat meat.

him. The conduct of Michal was wife-like, and worthy of her, however offensive it might prove to her father; she violated truth, however, to conceal her husband. Things had now reached a crisis, and there was no limit to the ferocity of the king. The prophesying of the messengers was a wonderful event, which ought to have impressed the mind of Saul, but he was no longer influenced by considerations referring to the Most High. Nothing but the Divine Hand could have preserved David amidst such perils. His case shews, that if God be for us, none can be against us. Although the roaring lion walks about seeking whom he may devour, he walks in chains, and without permission cannot hurt one hair of the head of the righteous.

Chap. XX. 1-34. The position of Jonathan was peculiar, unexampled, and full of difficulty. He loved his father, he loved David, and he saw the former intent on the destruction of the latter. He could hardly serve David without subjecting himself to an accusation of unfilial conduct. Jonathan clearly anticipated great things for David in the future, and the ruin of his father's house. What piety characterises his interview with David! "Jonathan loved David as he loved his own soul." What an example of genuine affection!

25 And the king sat upon his seat,¹ as at other times, even upon a seat by the wall: and Jonathan arose, and Abner sat by Saul's side, and David's place was empty.

26 Nevertheless Saul spake not anything that day: for he thought, Something hath befallen him,^m he is not clean; surely he is not clean.

27 And it came to pass on the morrow, which was the second day of the month, that David's place was empty: and Saul said unto Jonathan his son, "Wherefore cometh not 'the son of Jesse to meat, neither yesterday nor to-day?"

28 And Jonathan ^panswered Saul, David earnestly asked leave of me to go to Beth-lehem:

29 And he said, Let me go, I pray thee; for our family hath a sacrifice in the city; and ^qmy brother, he hath commanded me to be there: and now, if I have found favour in thine eyes, let me get away, I pray thee, and see my brethren: therefore he cometh not unto the king's table.

30 Then ^rSaul's anger was kindled against Jonathan, and he said unto him, ^sThou son of the perverse rebellious woman, do not I know that thou hast chosen the son of Jesse to thine own confusion, and unto the confusion of thy mother's nakedness?

31 For as long as the son of Jesse liveth upon the ground, thou shalt not be established, nor thy kingdom: wherefore now ^tsend and fetch him unto me; for he ^ushall surely die.

32 And Jonathan answered Saul his father, and said unto him, ^vWherefore shall he be slain? ^wwhat hath he done?

33 And Saul ^xcast a javelin at him to smite him: ^ywhereby Jonathan knew that it was determined of his father to slay David.

34 So Jonathan arose from the table ^zin fierce anger, and did eat no meat the second day of the month: for ^ahe was grieved for David, because his father had done him shame.

35 ¶ And it came to pass in the morning, that Jonathan went out into the field ^bat the time appointed with David, and a little lad with him.

36 And he said unto his lad, Run, find out now the arrows which I shoot. And as the lad ran, he shot an arrow ¹beyond him.

37 And when the lad was come to the place of the arrow which Jonathan had shot, Jonathan cried after the lad, and said, Is not the arrow beyond thee?

38 And Jonathan cried after the lad, ^cMake speed, haste, stay not. And Jonathan's lad gathered up the arrows, and came to his master.

39 But the lad knew not anything; only Jonathan and David knew the matter.

40 And Jonathan gave his ^dartillery unto ^ehis lad, and said unto him, Go, carry them to the city.

41 ¶ And as soon as the lad was gone, David arose out of a place toward the south, ^fand fell on his face to the ground, and bowed himself three times: ^gand they kissed one another, and wept one with another, until David exceeded.

42 And Jonathan said to David, ^hGo in peace, ⁱforasmuch as we have sworn both of us in the name of the LORD, saying, The LORD be between me and thee, and between my seed and thy seed for ever. And he arose and departed: and Jonathan went into the city.

CHAPTER XXI.

¹ David, at Nob, obtaineth of Ahimelech hallowed bread; ² he taketh Goliath's sword; ³ 10 and at Gath feigneth himself mad.

THEN came David to ^aNob to ^bAhimelech the priest: and Ahimelech was ^cafraid at the meeting of David, and said unto him, Why art thou alone, and no man with thee?

2 And David said unto Ahimelech the priest, ^dThe king hath commanded me a business, and hath said unto me, Let no man know anything of the business whereabout I send thee, and what I have commanded thee: and I have appointed my servants to such and such a place.

3 Now therefore what is ^eunder thine hand? give me five loaves of bread in mine hand, or what there is ^fpresent.

4 And the priest answered David, and said, There is no common bread under mine hand; but there is ^ghallowed bread, ^hif the young men have kept themselves at least from women.

5 And David answered the priest, and said unto him, Of a truth women have been kept from us about these three days, since

What a world would this be, if all men so loved one another! The conduct of Saul in ver. 30 is strikingly indicative of insanity; reason was thrown away upon him. It was no slight matter that kindled "fierce anger" in the bosom of the amiable and gentle Jonathan; but it was difficult to preserve equanimity under the circumstances. On the side of David, all was innocence and merit; on the side of Saul, all was injustice and cruelty. Ver. 35-42. They "kissed each other, and wept." How intense was their affection! The condition of Jonathan, however, if less perilous, was far more distressing than that of David. If the character of the evil spirit that ruled Saul was to be estimated from his own spirit, it was evil indeed. What a spectacle would be presented by a kingdom of such men! What then must be the society of the place where all are wicked, and where evil spirits are more numerous than evil men!

Chap. XXI. 1-15. There are in this chapter matters which do not quite accord with the noble character of David. Under the influence of fear and distress, he violated truth. This was not like the Sweet Singer of Israel; and we doubt not it was a source of sorrow to him in after times. Allowing to the uttermost for the pressing nature of his circumstances, still the Lord his God reigned; and had there been less fear of man, and more faith in God, it had gone much better with him and his friends. His excellences, however, were so many and so great, and his infirmities, upon the whole, so few and so small, that it is painful to animadvert upon them. It is to be regretted that he did not shew

I came out, and ^bthe vessels of the young men are holy, and the bread is ¹in a manner common, ²yea, though it were sanctified this day in the vessel.

6 So the priest ^kgave him hallowed bread: for there was no bread there but the shew-bread, that was taken from before the LORD; to put ¹hot bread in the day when it was taken away.

7 Now a certain man of the servants of Saul was there that day, ^mdetained before the LORD; and his name was Doeg, an Edomite, the chiefest of ⁿthe herdmen that belonged to Saul.

8 ¶ And David said unto Ahimelech, And is there not here under thine hand spear or sword? for I have neither brought my sword nor my weapons with me, because the king's business required haste.

9 And the priest said, The sword of Goliath the Philistine, whom thou slewest in the valley of Elah, behold, it is here, wrapped in a cloth ^obehind the ephod: if thou wilt take that, take it; for there is no other save that here. And David said, There is none like that; give it me.

10 ¶ And David arose, and ^pfled that day for fear of Saul, and went to ^qAchish the king of Gath.

11 And the servants of Achish said unto him, Is not this David ^rthe king of the land? did they not sing one to another of him in dances, saying, Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands?

12 And David laid up these words in his heart, and was ^ssore afraid of Achish the king of Gath.

13 And he ^tchanged his behaviour before them, and feigned himself mad in their hands, and ^uscrabbled on the doors of the gate, and let his spittle fall down upon his beard.

14 Then said Achish unto his servants, Lo, ye see the man ^vis mad: wherefore then have ye brought him to me?

15 Have I need of madmen, that ye have brought this fellow to play the madman in my presence? shall this fellow come into my house?

CHAPTER XXII.

1 Men resort to David at Adullam. 9 Doeg accuseth Ahimelech. 11 Saul commandeth to kill the priests. 20 Abiathar escapeth to David.

more faith when he so much required it, and cast himself upon that God who had from his youth up done so much for him. There was no need to appear in a feigned character in the court of Achish. Falsehood is necessary under no circumstances whatever. God is the God of truth, and by him actions are weighed, and hearts searched. Truth, truth only, truth always, truth in everything, and truth under all circumstances, is to be the motto of the faithful in Christ Jesus.

Chap. XXII. 1-17. It was much to the honour of David's brethren and to all his father's house, that they went down to him to the cave of Adullam. They knew both

2 And every one that was ^cin distress, and every one that was ¹in debt, and every one that was ²discontented, gathered themselves unto him; and he became ^da captain over them: and there were with him about four hundred men.

3 ¶ And David went thence to ^eMizpeh of Moab: and he said unto ^fthe king of Moab, ^gLet my father and my mother, I pray thee, come forth, and be with you, ^htill I know what God will do for me.

4 And he brought them before the king of Moab; and they dwelt with him all the while that David was ⁱin the hold.

5 ¶ And the prophet ^kGad said unto David, Abide not in the hold; ^ldepart, and get thee into the land of Judah. Then David departed, and came into the forest of Hareth.

6 ¶ When Saul heard that David was discovered, and the men that were with him, (now Saul abode in Gibeah under a ^mtree in Ramah, having his ⁿspear in his hand, and all his servants were standing about him;)

7 Then Saul said unto his servants that stood about him, Hear now, ye Benjamites; will ^othe son of Jesse ^pgive every one of you fields and vineyards, and make you all ^qcaptains of thousands, and captains of hundreds;

8 That all of you have conspired against me, and there is none that ^rsheweth me ^sthat my son hath made a league with the son of Jesse; and there is none of you that is sorry for me, or sheweth unto me that my son hath stirred up my servant against me, to lie in wait, as at this day?

9 ¶ Then answered ^tDoeg the Edomite, which was set over the servants of Saul, and said, I saw the son of Jesse coming to Nob, to Ahimelech the son of Ahitub.

10 And ^uhe enquired of the LORD for him, and ^vgave him victuals, and gave him the sword of Goliath the Philistine.

11 ¶ Then the king ^wsent to call Ahimelech the priest, the son of Ahitub, and all his father's house, the priests that were in Nob: and they came all of them to the king.

12 And Saul said, Hear now, ^xthou son of Ahitub. And he answered, ^yHere I am, my lord.

13 And Saul said unto him, ^zWhy have ye conspired against me, thou and the son of Jesse, in that thou hast given him bread, and a sword, and hast enquired of his excellence and his innocence, and they laudably determined to stand by him, sharing his fate, whatever that might be. The portraiture of David's attendants, as set forth, is not a little remarkable. They were people who had nothing to lose, and hence there was nothing in them to prevent the free exercise of judgment concerning Saul's treatment of David. This class of men, in every country, have generally been the first to lift up their voices in favour of Political Reform, and that very fact has not seldom tended to throw discredit on movements otherwise highly praiseworthy and necessary for the public good. The conduct of the king of Moab was magnanimous and kind. Time was required

God for him, that he should rise against me, to lie in wait, as at this day?

14 Then Ahimelech answered the king, and said, And ^awho is so faithful among all thy servants as David, which is ^athe king's son-in-law, and ^agoeth at thy bidding, and is honourable in thine house?

15 Did I then begin to enquire of God for him? be it far from me. Let not the king impute ^aany thing unto his servant, ^anor to all the house of my father: ^afor thy servant knew nothing of all this, ^aless or more.

16 And the king said, ^aThou shalt surely die, Ahimelech, ^athou, and all thy father's house.

17 ¶ And the king said unto the ^afootmen that stood about him, Turn, and ^aslay the priests of the LORD; because their hand also is with David, and because they knew when he fled, and did not shew it to me. But the servants of the king ^awould not put forth their hand to fall upon the priests of the LORD.

18 And the king said to Doeg, Turn thou, and fall upon the priests. And ^aDoeg the Edomite turned, and ^ahe fell upon the priests, and slew on that day ^afourscore and five persons that did wear ^aa linen ephod.

19 And ^aNob, the city of the priests, smote he with the edge of the sword, both ^amen and women, children and sucklings, and oxen, and asses, and sheep, with the edge of the sword.

20 ¶ And ^aone of the sons of Ahimelech the son of Ahitub, named Abiathar, ^aescaped, and fled after David.

21 And Abiathar shewed David that Saul had slain the LORD's priests.

22 And David said unto Abiathar, I knew it that day, when Doeg the Edomite was there, that he would surely tell Saul: ^aI have occasioned ^athe death of all the persons of thy father's house.

23 Abide thou with me, fear not: for ^ahe that seeketh my life seeketh thy life: ^abut with me thou shalt be in safeguard.

2 Therefore David ^aenquired of the LORD, saying, Shall I go and smite these Philistines? And the LORD said unto David, Go and smite the Philistines, and save Keilah.

3 And David's men said unto him, ^aBehold, we be afraid here in Judah: how much more then if we come to Keilah against the armies of the Philistines?

4 Then David enquired of the LORD ^ayet again. And the LORD answered him, and said, Arise, go down to Keilah; ^afor I will deliver the Philistines into thine hand.

5 So David and his men went to Keilah, and fought with the Philistines, and brought away their cattle, and smote them with a great slaughter. So David saved the inhabitants of Keilah.

6 And it came to pass, ^awhen Abiathar, the son of Ahimelech, fled to David to Keilah, ^athat he came down ^awith ^aan ephod in his hand.

7 ¶ And it was told Saul that David was come to Keilah. And Saul said, ^aGod hath delivered him into mine hand; ^afor ^ahe is shut in, by entering into a town that hath gates and bars.

8 And Saul called all the people together to war, to go down to Keilah, to besiege David and his men.

9 ¶ And David ^aknew that Saul secretly practised mischief against him; and he said to Abiathar the priest, ^aBring hither the ephod.

10 Then said David, O LORD God of Israel, thy servant hath certainly heard that Saul seeketh to come to Keilah, to ^adestroy the city for my sake.

11 Will the men of Keilah deliver me up into his hand? will Saul come down, as thy servant hath heard? O LORD God of Israel, I beseech thee, tell thy servant. ^aAnd the LORD said, He will come down.

12 Then said David, Will the men of Keilah ^adeliver me and my men into the hand of Saul? And the LORD said, ^aThey will deliver thee up.

13 ¶ Then David and his men, ^awhich were about ^asix hundred, arose and departed out of Keilah, and went whithersoever they could go. And it was told Saul that David was escaped from Keilah; and he forbore to go forth.

14 And David abode in the wilderness to reveal what God would do with David, and only till then did he ask that care might be taken of his aged parents. The appeal of Saul was bitter, malignant, and irritating. His spirit towards Jonathan was particularly hostile; he viewed him as an adversary, and a conspirator, rather than as a son, loving, loyal, and deeply alive to his father's honour. Doeg, the enemy of all good, was forward to exasperate the king, who lent but too willing an ear to his false and sinister suggestions. The conduct of Ahimelech was manly and upright; his speech, which exposed injustice, and silenced the king, was rewarded by the dreadful declaration, that he and all his father's house must die! That was the most horrible day of the mad monarch's reign. The servants of the king—to their honour it is recorded—would not imbrue their hands in innocent blood; but Doeg, the ready-made murderer, supplied their lack of service, and with his own hand slew fourscore and five innocent persons! The butchery extended to Nob, where everything that breathed was destroyed! The cup of Saul was now fast filling, and the day of vengeance was drawing nigh. There was, doubtless, reason for suffering Saul to proceed to such an unparalleled length, for, while wreaking his vengeance upon the innocent, his wrath was made to praise the Lord, and to further the very ends it was sought to obstruct.

Chap. XXIII. 1-29. In the matter of war, David made nothing of numbers; his sole and only concern was to ascertain the will of the Lord. He was careful to make sure of this; and that point once settled, he went on in the strength of God, assured of victory. David's very success was not, as it ought to have been with Saul, a ground of praise, but of accusation. It was a crime in in strong holds, and remained in ^aa mountain in the ^awilderness of Ziph: and ^aSaul sought him every day; ^abut God delivered him not into his hand.

15 And David saw that Saul was come out to seek his life: and David was in the wilderness of Ziph in a wood.

16 And Jonathan, Saul's son, arose, and went to David into the wood, and ^astrengthened his hand in God.

17 And he said unto him, ^aFear not; for the hand of Saul my father ^ashall not find thee; and ^athou shalt be king over Israel, and ^bI shall be next unto thee; and ^athat also Saul my father knoweth.

18 And ^athey two made a covenant before the LORD. And David abode in the wood, and Jonathan went to his house.

19 ¶ Then came up ^athe Ziphites to Saul to Gibeath, saying, Doth not David hide himself with us in strong holds in the wood, in the hill of Hachilah, which ^ais ²on the south of ^aJeshimon?

20 Now therefore, O king, come down, according to ^aall the desire of thy soul to come down; and ^aour part shall be to deliver him into the king's hand.

21 And Saul said, ^aBlessed be ye of the LORD; for ye have compassion on me.

22 Go, I pray you, prepare yet, and know and see his place where his ^ahaunt is, and who hath seen him there: for it is told me that he dealeth very subtilly.

23 See therefore, and ^atake knowledge of all the lurking-places where he hideth himself, and come ye again to me with the certainty, and I will go with you: and it shall come to pass, if he be in the land, that ^aI will search him out throughout all the thousands of Judah.

24 And they arose, and went to Ziph before Saul: but David and his men were in the wilderness of Maon, in the plain on the south of Jeshimon.

25 Saul also and his men went to seek him. And they told David: wherefore he came down ^ainto a rock, and abode in the wilderness of Maon; and when Saul heard that, he pursued after David in the wilderness of Maon.

26 And Saul went on this side of the mountain, and David and his men on that side of the mountain: and David made haste to get ^aaway for fear of Saul; for Saul and his men compassed David and his men round about to take them.

27 ¶ But ^athere came a messenger unto Saul, saying, Haste thee, and come; for the Philistines have ^ainvaded the land.

28 Wherefore Saul returned from pursuing after David, and went against the Philistines: therefore they called that place ^aSela-hammah-lekoth.

29 ¶ And David went up from thence, and dwelt in strong holds at En-gedi.

CHAPTER XXIV.

1 David, in a cave at En-gedi, spareth Saul's life. 8 He pleadeth his innocence. 16 Saul acknowledgeth his fault.

AND it came to pass, ^awhen Saul was returned from ^afollowing the Philistines, that ^ait was told him, saying, Behold, David ^ais in ^athe wilderness of En-gedi.

2 Then Saul took ^athree thousand chosen men out of all Israel, and ^awent to seek David and his men upon ^athe rocks of the wild goats.

3 And he came to the sheep-cotes by the way, where was a cave; and Saul went in ^ato cover his feet: and ^aDavid and his men remained in the sides of the cave.

4 And ^athe men of David said unto him, Behold the day of which the LORD said unto thee, Behold, ^aI will deliver thine enemy into thine hand, that thou mayest do to him as it shall seem good unto thee. Then David arose, and cut off the skirt of ^aSaul's robe privily.

5 And it came to pass afterward, that ^aDavid's heart smote him, because he had cut off Saul's skirt.

6 And he said unto his men, ^aThe LORD forbid that I should do this thing unto my master, the LORD's anointed, to stretch forth mine hand against him, seeing he ^ais the anointed of the LORD.

7 So David ^astayed his servants with these words, and suffered them not to rise against Saul. But Saul rose up out of the cave, and went on his way.

8 ¶ David also arose afterward, and went out of the cave, and cried after Saul, him to be patriotic, and an unpardonable offence, on a great scale, to serve his country! In all the troubles of David, his comfort was in Divine Providence. Man might plot against him, but he rejoiced to know, that everything was naked and open to the eyes of the Lord. Although David had saved the inhabitants of Keilah, they were to a man, in spirit, ready to surrender him to the bloody hands of Saul! This was not known to David till revealed to him by the Searcher of hearts, by which he was enabled to make his escape. Faithful Jonathan! He was observant of all that was passing in the court, honestly putting his infatuated father in mind of the claims of his beloved David, braving all consequences, after which he went into the wood, "and strengthened his hand in God." Jonathan had no doubt of David's ultimate elevation to the throne, and through him it came out that even Saul himself had the same conviction. Although the natural heir, Jonathan was not envious. All he expected or desired, was to be next unto David. Saul could bless the Ziphites, who basely offered him their services against David. The reported approach of the Philistines, however, drew Saul off from the scent, and thus David escaped the impending danger. David sought the Lord in everything—saw the Lord in everything—and to the Lord he commended all his ways, his trust was implicit, and he was never disappointed. God was not only better to him than his fears,—he was better than his hopes,—“a very present help in trouble.”

Chap. XXIV. 1-22. The fury of the king against David kept him in perpetual motion. In the present case, he so far overshot the mark, that in searching for the life of David, he exposed his own. This was an hour of strong temptation; David's men naturally saw the providence of God, in the opportunity furnished of putting an end to the life of this cruel oppressor; but David himself thought otherwise. One word was only wanted from him to his servants, and Saul was a dead man. With his characteristic generosity and piety, he lost sight of the man in the king. He could not touch the Lord's anointed. The appeal of David to the heartless tyrant was irresistible and overwhelming. That appeal was the more awful, since it looked to God to saying, My lord the king. And when Saul looked behind him, ^aDavid stooped with his face to the earth, and bowed himself.

9 And David said to Saul, ^oWherefore hearest thou men's words, saying, Behold, David seeketh thy hurt?

10 Behold, this day thine eyes have seen how that the LORD had delivered thee to-day into mine hand in the cave: and some bade me kill thee; but mine eye spared thee: and I said, I will not put forth mine hand against my lord; for he is ^othe LORD's anointed.

11 Moreover, my father, see; yea, see the skirt of thy robe in my hand: ^afor in that I cut off the skirt of thy robe, and killed thee not, know thou and see that there is ^oneither evil nor transgression in mine hand, and I have not sinned against thee; yet ^athou huntest my soul to take it.

12 The LORD judge between me and thee, and the LORD avenge me of thee; but mine hand shall not be upon thee.

13 As saith the proverb of the ancients, ^aWickedness proceedeth from the wicked; but mine hand shall not be upon thee.

14 After whom is ^athe king of Israel come out? after whom dost thou pursue? ^aafter a dead dog, ^aafter a flea?

15 The LORD therefore ^abe judge, and judge between me and thee, and see, and ^aplead my cause, and deliver me out of thine hand.

16 ¶ And it came to pass, when David had made an end of speaking these words unto Saul, that Saul said, ^b/s this thy voice, my son David? And Saul lifted up his voice, and wept.

17 And he said to David, ^cThou art more righteous than I; for ^athou hast rewarded me good, whereas I have rewarded thee evil.

18 And thou hast shewed this day how that thou hast dealt well with me: forasmuch as, when the LORD had ^adelivered me into thine hand, thou killedst me not.

19 For if a man find his enemy, will he let him go well away? Wherefore ^athe LORD reward thee good for that thou hast done unto me this day.

20 And now, behold, ^aI know well that thou shalt surely be king, and that the kingdom of Israel shall be established in thine hand:

21 ^aSwear now therefore unto me by the LORD, that thou wilt not cut off my seed after me, and that thou wilt not destroy my name out of my father's house.

judge between them. The consciously guilty king felt the language in all its force, and feared for the consequences. Never were coals of fire more abundantly heaped on the head of an offender. He wept, he confessed, he supplicated. His requests were reasonable, and the response of David was prompt and magnanimous. There is a comfort in innocence, and a corresponding strength not to be expressed; whereas to be wrong is to be miserable as well as to be weak. Saul felt this, and now saw that nothing he could do would prevent the elevation of David to the throne of Israel.

CHAPTER XXV.

1 Samuel dieth. 10 David provoked to destroy Nabal. 14 Abigail, by her wisdom, preventeth him. 36 Nabal dieth. 39 David taketh Abigail and Ahinoam to be his wives.

AND Samuel died; and all the Israelites were gathered together, and ^alamented him, and buried him ^bin his house at Ramah. And David arose, and went down to ^cthe wilderness of Paran.

2 And there was a man in Maon, whose ^dpossessions were in Carmel; and the ^eman was very great, and he had ^fthree thousand sheep, and a thousand goats: and he was ^gshearing his sheep in Carmel.

3 Now the name of the man was Nabal, and the name of his wife Abigail; and she was a woman of ^hgood understanding, and of a beautiful countenance: but the man was churlish, and evil in his doings; and he was of the house of Caleb.

4 ¶ And David heard in the wilderness that Nabal did shear his sheep.

5 And David sent out ten young men; and David said unto the young men, Get you up to Carmel, and go to Nabal, and ⁱgreet him in my name:

6 And thus shall ye say to him that liveth in prosperity, ^jPeace be both to thee, and peace be to thine house, and peace be unto all that thou hast.

7 And now I have heard that thou hast shearers: now, thy shepherds which were with us, we ^khurt them not, neither was there ought missing unto them all the while they were in Carmel.

8 Ask thy young men, and they will shew thee: wherefore let the young men find favour in thine eyes; (for we come in ^la good day;) give, I pray thee, whatsoever cometh to thine hand unto thy servants, and to thy son David.

9 And when David's young men came, they spake to Nabal according to all those words in the name of David, and ^mceased.

10 ¶ And Nabal answered David's servants, and said, ⁿWho is David? and who is the son of Jesse? There be many servants now a days that break away every man from his master.

11 ^oShall I then take my bread, and my water, and my ^pflesh that I have killed for my shearers, and give ^qit unto men ^rwhom I know not whence they be?

12 So David's young men turned their and striving against David, he saw that he was striving against God. In all this he was correct, and it was well for the moment; but, unhappily, it had no abiding reality.

Chap. XXV. 1-31. Samuel, who had now for a long time retired from public life, was quietly gathered to his fathers. His day was passed, and his work was done, so that while he was lamented, his loss could hardly be said to be felt. Nothing could exceed in politeness the message of David to Nabal. The facts stated even shew, that David had claims on his hospita-way, and went again, and ^acame and told him all those sayings.

13 And David said unto his men, ^cGird ye on every man his sword. And they girded on every man his sword; and David also girded on his sword: and there went up after David about four hundred men; and two hundred abode by the stuff.

14 ¶ But one of the young men told Abigail, Nabal's wife, saying, Behold, David sent messengers out of the wilderness to salute our master; and he ^crailed on them:

15 But the men ^{were} ^pvery good unto us, and we were not ^thurt, neither missed we any thing, as long as we were conversant with them, when we were in the fields.

16 They were ^aa wall unto us, both by night and day, all the while we were with them keeping the sheep.

17 Now therefore know and consider what thou wilt do; for ^revil is determined against our master, and against all his household: for he ^{is} ^{such} a son of Belial, that ^aman cannot speak to him.

18 ¶ Then Abigail made haste, and ^ttook two hundred loaves, and two bottles of wine, and five sheep ready dressed, and five measures of parched corn, and an hundred ^sclusters of raisins, and two hundred cakes of figs, and laid ^{them} on asses.

19 And she said unto her servants, Go on before me; behold, I come after you. ^tBut she told not her husband Nabal.

20 And it was ^{so}, as she rode on the ass, that she came down by the covert of the hill, and, behold, David and his men came down against her; and she met them.

21 (Now David had said, ^uSurely in vain have I kept all that this ^{fellow} hath in the wilderness, so that nothing was missed of all that ^{pertained} unto him; and ^hhe hath required me evil for good.

22 ^uSo and more also do God unto the enemies of David, if I leave of all that ^{pertain} to him, by the morning light, ^aany that pisseth against the wall.)

23 And when Abigail saw David, she hastened, and ^lighted off the ass, and fell before David on her face, and bowed herself to the ground, 24 And ^bfell at his feet, and said, ^cUpon me, my lord, ^{upon} me let this iniquity be; and ^let thine handmaid, I pray thee, speak in thine ^aaudience, and hear the words of thine handmaid.

25 Let not my lord, I pray thee, ^regard this ^cman of Belial, ^{even} Nabal: for as his name ^{is}, so ^{is} he; ^uNabal ^{is} his name, and folly ^{is} with him: but I, thine handmaid, saw not the young men of my lord, whom thou didst send.

26 Now therefore, my lord, ^{as} the LORD liveth, and ^{as} thy soul liveth, seeing the LORD hath withholden thee from coming to ^{shed} blood, and ^{from} ^aavenging thyself with thine own hand, now ^let thine enemies, and they that seek evil to my lord, be as Nabal.

27 And now this ^b blessing, which thine handmaid hath brought unto my lord, let it even be given unto the young men that ^{follow} my lord.

28 I pray thee, forgive the trespass of thine handmaid: for ^tthe LORD will certainly make my lord a sure house; because my lord fighteth the battles of the LORD, and ^{evil} hath not been found in thee ^{all} thy days.

29 Yet a man is risen to pursue thee, and to seek thy soul: but the soul of my lord shall be ^{bound} in the bundle of life ^{with} the LORD thy God; and the souls of thine enemies, them shall he sling out, ^{as out} of the middle of a sling.

30 And it shall come to pass, when the LORD shall have done to my lord ^{according} to all the good that he hath spoken concerning thee, and shall have appointed thee ruler over Israel, 31 That this shall be no ^rgrief unto thee, nor offence of heart unto my lord, either that thou hast shed blood causeless, or that my lord hath ^{avenged} himself: but when the LORD shall have dealt well with my lord, then ^remember thine handmaid.

32 ¶ And David said to Abigail, ^{Blessed} be the LORD God of Israel, which sent thee this day to meet me:

33 And ^{blessed} be thy advice, and blessed ^{be} thou, which hast kept me this day from coming to ^{shed} blood, and from ^{avenging} myself with mine own hand.

34 For in very deed, ^{as} the LORD God of Israel liveth, which hath kept me back from hurting thee, except thou hadst hastened and come to meet me, surely there had not been left unto Nabal, by the morning light, any that pisseth against the wall.

35 So David received of her hand ^{that} which she had brought him, and said unto her, ^{Go} up in peace to thine house: see, I have hearkened to thy voice, and have ^{accepted} thy person.

36 ¶ And Abigail came to Nabal: and, behold, he held ^a feast in his house, like the feast of a king; and Nabal's heart ^{was} ^rmerry within him, for he ^{was} very drunken: wherefore ^{she} told him nothing, less or more, until the morning light.

lity. The reply of Nabal, however, was as harsh as it was impolitic, and, but for the admirable management of his judicious wife, it would have cost him very dear. The excellent speech of the servant was a word fitly spoken, and very good. The soft answer of Abigail could not fail to turn away the fiercest wrath. Her speech was wise and noble, and thoroughly pertinent. She displayed a correct knowledge both of the character and the circumstances of David. Even she clearly foresaw that he was destined to be the king of Israel; and in the confident anticipation of his coming glory, she desired to be remembered. Ver. 32-44. Such advice could not be resisted. Rejoicing in her complete success, she returned to her besotted husband. Not-

37 But it came to pass in the morning, when the wine was gone out of Nabal, and his wife ^ahad told him these things, that ^bhis heart died within him, and he became as a stone.

38 And it came to pass about ten days after, that ^cthe LORD smote Nabal, that he died.

39 ¶ And when David heard that Nabal was dead, he said, ^dBlessed be the LORD, that hath ^epleaded the cause of my reproach from the hand of Nabal, and hath ^fkept his servant from evil: for the LORD ^ghath returned the wickedness of Nabal upon his own head. And David sent and communed with Abigail, ^hto take her to him to wife.

40 And when the servants of David were come to Abigail to Carmel, they spake unto her, saying, 'David sent us unto thee, to take thee to him to wife.

41 And she arose, and bowed herself on her face to the earth, and said, Behold, let ⁱthine handmaid be a servant ^jto wash the feet of the servants of my lord.

42 And ^kAbigail hasted, and arose, and rode upon an ass, with five damsels of her's that ^lwent after her: and she went after the messengers of David, and became his wife.

43 David also took Ahinoam of ^mJezreel; and they were also ⁿboth of them ^ohis wives.

44 ¶ But Saul had given ^pMichal his daughter, David's wife, to ^qPhalti the son of Laish, which was of ^rGallim.

CHAPTER XXVI.

1 Saul cometh to Hachilah against David. 5 David in the trench slayeth Abishai from killing Saul, but taketh his spear and cruse.

AND the ^sZiphites came unto Saul to Gibeah, saying, ^tDoth not David hide himself in the hill of Hachilah, which is before Jeshimon?

2 Then ^uSaul arose, and went down to the wilderness of Ziph, having ^vthree thousand chosen men of Israel with him, to seek David in the wilderness of Ziph.

3 And Saul pitched in the hill of ^wHachilah, which is before Jeshimon, by the way: but David abode in the wilderness; and he saw that Saul came after him into the wilderness.

4 David therefore ^xsent out spies, and understood that Saul was come in very deed.

5 ¶ And David arose, and came to the place where Saul had pitched; and David beheld the place where Saul lay, and ^yAbner the son of Ner, the captain of his host: and Saul lay in the ^ztrench, and the people pitched round about him.

6 Then answered David, and said to Ahimelech the ^{aa}Hittite, and to ^{ab}Abishai the son of ^{ac}Zeruiah, brother to Joab, saying, ^{ad}Who will go down with me to Saul to the camp? And Abishai said, I will go down with thee.

7 So David and Abishai came to the people by night; and, behold, Saul lay ^{ae}sleeping within the trench, and his spear stuck in the ground at his bolster: but Abner and the people lay round about him.

8 Then said Abishai to David, ^{af}God hath ^{ag}delivered thine enemy into thine hand this day: now therefore let me smite him, I pray thee, with the spear even to the earth at once, and I will not ^{ah}smite him ^{ai}the second time.

9 And David said to Abishai, Destroy him not: for ^{aj}who can stretch forth his hand against the LORD's anointed, and be guiltless?

10 David said furthermore, As ^{ak}the LORD liveth, the LORD shall smite him; or ^{al}his day shall come to die; or ^{am}he shall descend into battle, and perish.

11 The LORD forbid ^{an}that I should stretch forth mine hand against the LORD's anointed: but, I pray thee, take thou now the spear that is at his bolster, and the cruse of water, and let us go.

12 So David took ^{ao}the spear and the cruse of water from Saul's bolster; and they gat them away, and no man saw it, nor knew it, neither awaked; for they were all asleep: because ^{ap}a deep sleep from the LORD was fallen upon them.

13 ¶ Then David went over to the other side, and stood on ^{aq}the top of an hill afar off, a great space being between them:

14 And David cried to the people, and to Abner the son of Ner, saying, Answerest thou not, Abner? Then Abner answered and said, Who art thou that criest to the king?

15 And David said to Abner, Art not thou a ^{ar}valiant man? and who is like to thee in Israel? wherefore then hast thou not kept thy lord the king? for ^{as}there came one of the people in to destroy the king thy lord.

16 This thing is not good that thou hast done. As the LORD liveth, ye are ^{at}worthy to die, because ye have not kept your master, the ^{au}LORD's anointed. And now see where the king's spear is, and the cruse of water that was at his bolster.

17 And Saul knew David's voice, and said, ^{av}Is this thy voice, my son David?

withstanding his hard-handed and insulting treatment of David, his prodigality knew no bounds in his own revels. He escaped the sword of David, but the arrow of the Almighty, in a brief space, sped its flight and laid him low. The worth and wisdom of Abigail had so commended her to the understanding and the heart of David, that he offered her his hand, which she accepted, doubtless filled with wonder at the working of Divine Providence. Saul committed a great fault in giving the wife of David to another, and it was not to her credit that she submitted to the iniquitous arrangement.

Chap. XXVI. 1-25. Saul, forgetful of all the past, returned to his old courses, intent on taking the life of David. This was the second time the infatuated king, in pursuit of this unhallowed object, exposed himself to destruction. Abishai panted to put an end to his cruel career, and to deliver the land from its tormentor. But nothing could move David, who determined to leave him

And David said, It is my voice, my lord, O king.

18 And he said, ^cWherefore doth my lord thus pursue after his servant? for ^dwhat have I done? or what evil is in mine hand?

19 Now therefore, I pray thee, ^elet my lord the king hear the words of his servant. If the LORD have ^fstirred thee up against me, let him ^gaccept an offering: but if ^hthey be the children of men, ⁱcursed be they before the LORD; for ^jthey have driven me out this day from ^kabiding in ^lthe inheritance of the LORD, saying, Go, serve other gods.

20 Now therefore, let not my blood fall to the earth before the face of the LORD; for ^mthe king of Israel is come out to seek a flea, as when one doth hunt a partridge in the mountains.

21 ¶ Then said Saul, ⁿI have sinned: return, my son David; for I will no more do thee harm, because my soul was precious in thine eyes this day: behold, I have played the fool, and have erred exceedingly.

22 And David answered and said, Behold the king's spear! and let one of the young men come over and fetch it.

23 The LORD ^orender to every man his righteousness and his faithfulness: for the LORD delivered thee into my hand to-day; but I would not stretch forth mine hand against the LORD's anointed.

24 And, behold, ^pas thy life was much set by this day in mine eyes, so let my life be much set by in the eyes of the LORD, and ^qlet him deliver me out of all tribulation.

25 Then Saul said to David, Blessed be thou, my son David: thou shalt both do great things, and also shalt still ^rprevail. So David went on his way, and Saul returned to his place.

CHAPTER XXVII.

1 Saul, hearing David to be in Gath, seeketh no more for him. 5 David begetteth Ziklag of Achish.

AND David ^ssaid in his heart, I shall now ^tperish one day by the hand of Saul: ^uthere is nothing better for me than that I should speedily escape ^vinto the land of the Philistines; and Saul shall despair of me, to seek me any more in any spirit, that I may go to her, and enquire of her. And his servants said to him, Behold, there is a woman that hath a familiar spirit at En-dor.

8 And Saul ^s"disguised himself, and put on other raiment, and he went, and two men with him, and they came to the woman by night; and he said, ^t"I pray thee, divine unto me by the familiar spirit, and ^u"bring me him up whom I shall name unto thee.

tinguished him in after life. He was then too much addicted to warlike pursuits for the successful cultivation of that heavenly-mindedness by which in later age he was so eminently distinguished. On the bright roll of ancient Worthies none owed half so much to manifold, multiplied, and continued afflictions.

Chap. XXVIII. 1-6. The time was now come, in the course of Providence, for the removal of Saul, and the instruments were immediately forthcoming. The Philistines, through all their borders, were moved to marshal their hosts for the battle. Two men above all others were now necessary to him—Samuel and David; but the one was in the grave, and the other a fugitive in a foreign land. Under these circumstances, Saul's "heart was greatly troubled;" and well it might. He would now have given half his kingdom for David's prowess, and for Samuel's prayers; but neither were available. The Most High had left him to himself, and to those counsels which led him to destruction. He had cruelly slain the priests of the Lord, whose blood cried from the ground for vengeance; and, in harmony with this horrid massacre, he was now constrained to seek counsel of an evil spirit, through a "witch." Ver. 7-25. Few passages of Scripture have given rise to a greater variety of opinion, and a larger amount of useless discussion. The question, however, is very mainly one of language. The point is, What do these words, taken literally, mean? That point ascertained, are they to be taken in a natural or a metaphorical sense? Nothing is easier than to ridicule the reality of the appearance; but ridicule is by no means the test of truth. With sober-minded men, the principal difficulty arises from the fact, that a "witch"—and, by consequence, an evil spirit—had to do with the business. Holy men have recoiled from the thought, that the soul of a prophet should be brought back from the World of Spirits by the power of the Wicked One! It is, however, a mere assumption that such was the fact, and altogether unnecessary. They would seem to have forgotten that the Most High occasionally, to accomplish his pleasure, steps beyond the line which marks the established course of his proceedings. Were not the Apostles, his associates, followed for many days by a damsel possessed of a spirit of divination, testifying to them as "servants of the most High God, that shewed unto men the way of salvation?" Will it be denied that such testimony was important to the character of the Apostles, and that it materially contributed to facilitate their labours by fixing upon them public attention, and commanding for them the respect of the populace? Is it, therefore, in the nature of things impossible that, in connexion with the necromantic operations of the woman before us, it should have pleased God, to her confusion, to connect with her proceedings the appearances recorded in the text? Nothing can be more clear than that the woman got into a new position, and that her arts were attended with consequences for which she was quite unprepared. In the nature of things, it will surely not be contended, that the return of a spirit from the invisible world was impossible. Did not Moses and Elias make a journey to the Mount of Transfiguration, holding converse there with the Lord Jesus? Having regard to the past relation of Samuel to Saul, to his character and career, and to the circumstances in which he was at that moment placed, is it wholly incredible that Samuel should have been commissioned to return to hold this recorded interview with the king? Supposing it to have been a reality, is it not one of the most sublime and extraordinary things in the Sacred Writ? Has it not a direct and most important bearing on the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, and the existence of a separate state? Viewed in this light—could the agency of the witch or a familiar spirit be set aside—few reflecting men, we believe, would be inclined to dispute the matter. But is the principle to which we referred, in the case of the Magicians and Moses, wholly inapplicable here? We have not yet been able to see anything confirmatory of a contrary view of the subject. With the examples of German Infidelity before us, we should be careful how we tamper with the express declarations of Scripture. Nothing can be more clear than the words as here presented, and there is nothing in them, or in the context, or elsewhere in the Inspired Volume, which requires, or which even authorises, us to mantle. And Saul perceived that it was Samuel, and he stooped with his face to the ground, and bowed himself.

15 ¶ And Samuel said to Saul, "Why hast thou disquieted me, to bring me up?" And Saul answered, "I am sore distressed; for the Philistines make war against me, and God is departed from me, and answereth me no more, neither by prophets, nor by dreams: therefore I have called thee, that thou mayest make known unto me what I shall do."

16 Then said Samuel, "Wherefore then dost thou ask of me, seeing the LORD is departed from thee, and is become thine enemy?"

17 And the LORD hath done to him as he spake by me: for the LORD hath rent the kingdom out of thine hand, and given it to thy neighbour, even to David:

18 Because thou obeyedst not the voice of the LORD, nor executedst his fierce wrath upon Amalek, therefore hath the LORD done this thing unto thee this day.

19 Moreover, the LORD will also deliver Israel with thee into the hand of the Philistines; and to-morrow shalt thou and thy sons be with me: the LORD also shall deliver the host of Israel into the hand of the Philistines.

20 Then Saul fell straightway all along on the earth, and was sore afraid, because of the words of Samuel; and there was no strength in him; for he had eaten no bread all the day, nor all the night.

21 ¶ And the woman came unto Saul, and saw that he was sore troubled, and said unto him, Behold, thine handmaid hath obeyed thy voice, and I have put my life in my hand, and have hearkened unto thy words which thou spakest unto me:

22 Now therefore, I pray thee, hearken thou also unto the voice of thine handmaid, and let me set a morsel of bread before thee; and eat, that thou mayest have strength when thou goest on thy way.

CHAPTER XXIX.

1 David, marching with the Philistines, is disallowed by their princes. 6 Achish dismisseth him.

NOW the Philistines gathered together all their armies to Aphek: and the Israelites pitched by a fountain which is in Jezreel.

2 And the lords of the Philistines passed on by hundreds and by thousands; but David and his men passed on in the revere-ward with Achish.

3 Then said the princes of the Philistines, What do these Hebrews here? And Achish said unto the princes of the Philistines, Is not this David, the servant of Saul the king of Israel, which hath been with me these days, or these years, and I have found no fault in him since he fell unto me unto this day?

4 And the princes of the Philistines were wroth with him; and the princes of the Philistines said unto him, Make this fellow return, that he may go again to his place which thou hast appointed him, and let him not go down with us to battle, lest in the battle he be an adversary to us: for wherewith should he reconcile himself unto his master? should it not be with the heads of these men?

5 Is not this David, of whom they sang one to another in dances, saying, Saul slew his thousands, and David his ten thousands?

6 ¶ Then Achish called David, and said unto him, Surely, as the LORD liveth, thou hast been upright, and thy deal with them as a mere figure. The very idea seems preposterous. We see no middle way between receiving it in its literal acceptation, or utterly rejecting it as a thing in which there is no truth. But are Christian men prepared to treat a portion of the Word of God as so much fiction or falsehood? Authorities, we are aware, in such a matter, go for very little; but it may not be unimportant to state, that a body of the most learned, and every way most eminent men our country has produced, have declared for the literal acceptation, believing that Samuel actually appeared to Saul, and that he was sent by the special mercy of God to warn him. Amongst these are Bishops Watson, Horne, and Wilson, Thomas Scott, Greenfield, Williams, Sutcliffe, Adam Clarke, and Sir J. Marsham. Among the distinguished foreigners who have taken this view are Saurin, the renowned preacher, and the immortal Calvin himself. The woman seemed to realise the presence of a Power higher than that she had been accustomed to exercise. Again, as to the interview between the King and the Prophet, who does not see in that the Spirit of Inspiration? Are we to view this as fiction? No, truly; the finger of God is there! But what of the opponents? They supply no such array of names, renowned for worth and wisdom, as those we have just cited. Their argumentation, moreover, will not bear examination. They tell us, it is "all inference that Samuel appeared." What! is it not positively declared? Again, they insist that the departed soul of a good man could not be disquieted. Was it, then, disquieting to come to earth to perform a great mission? Were Moses and Elias, in visiting Palestine, and conversing with the Lord Jesus, disquieted? Were they not honoured above all honour known in the invisible world? But we are told that the transaction took place at night, and that the woman was evidently an impostor. Such arguments can have no weight with men of sense. As Bishop Patrick has very properly remarked, "the woman, whatever her profession might be, was divinely inspired for the moment, just as Balaam was," to subvert the purposes of Heaven.

Chap. XXIX. 1-11. The lords of the Philistines exercised a sound discretion in the objection they took to David. How, under the circumstances, he would have acted, it is impossible to tell; but through the providence of God, by means of this opposition he was delivered from the trial. Never before, we may well suppose, was going out and thy coming in with me in the host ^{is} good in my sight: for I have not found evil in thee since the day of thy coming unto me unto this day: nevertheless ¹the lords favour thee not.

7 Wherefore now return, and go in peace, that thou ²displease not the lords of the Philistines.

8 And David said unto Achish, "But what have I done? and what hast thou found in thy servant, so long as I have been ³with thee unto this day, ⁴that I may not go fight against the enemies of my lord the king?"

9 And Achish answered and said to David, I know that thou art good in my sight, ⁵as an angel of God: notwithstanding, the princes of the Philistines have said, He shall not go up with us to the battle.

10 Wherefore ⁶now rise up early in the morning with thy master's servants that are come with thee; and as soon as ye be up early in the morning, and have light, depart.

11 So David and his men rose up early to depart in the morning, to return into the land of the Philistines; ⁷and the Philistines went up to Jezreel.

CHAPTER XXX.

1 The Amalekites spoil Ziklag. 7 David, encouraged by God, pursued them: 11 and, overtaking them, recovered all the spoil.

AND it came to pass, when David and his men ⁸were come to Ziklag on the third day, that ⁹the Amalekites had invaded the south, and Ziklag, and smitten Ziklag, and burnt it with fire;

2 And had taken the women captives that were therein: they ¹⁰slew not any, either great or small, but carried them away, and went on their way.

4 Then David and the people that were with him ¹²lifted up their voice and wept, until they had no more power to weep.

5 And David's ¹³two wives were taken captives, Ahinoam the Jezreelitess, and Abigail the wife of Nabal the Carmelite.

6 And David ¹⁴was greatly distressed: for ¹⁵the people spake of stoning him; because the soul of all the people was ¹⁶grieved, every man for his sons and for his daughters: but ¹David encouraged himself in the LORD his God.

7 And David said to ²Abiathar the priest, Ahimelech's son, I pray thee, bring me hither the ephod. And Abiathar brought thither the ephod to David.

8 And David ³enquired at the LORD, saying, Shall I pursue after this troop? Shall I overtake them? And ⁴he answered him, Pursue; for thou shalt surely overtake them, and without fail recover all.

9 ¶ So David went, he and the six hundred men that were with him, and came to the brook-Besor, where those that were left behind stayed.

10 But David pursued, he and four hundred men: (for two hundred abode behind, which were ⁵so faint that they could not go over the brook Besor.)

11 And they found an Egyptian in the field, and brought him to David, and ⁶gave him bread, and he did eat; and they made him drink water;

12 And they gave him a piece of a cake of figs, and two clusters of raisins: and, when he had eaten, ⁷his spirit came again to him; for he had eaten no bread, nor drunk any water, ⁸three days and three nights.

13 And David said unto him, To whom belongest thou? and whence art thou? And he said, I am a young man of Egypt, servant to an Amalekite; and ⁹my master left me, because three days ago I fell sick.

14 We made an invasion upon the south of ¹⁰the Cherethites, and upon the coast which belongeth to Judah, and upon the south of ¹¹Caleb; and we burned Ziklag with fire.

15 And David said to him, ¹²Canst thou bring me down to this company? And he said, ¹³Swear unto me by God, that thou wilt neither kill me, ¹⁴nor deliver me into the hands of my master, and I will bring thee down to this company.

16 And ¹⁵when he had brought him down, behold, they were spread abroad upon all the earth, ¹⁶eating and drinking, and dancing, ¹⁷because of all the great spoil that they had taken out of the land of the Philistines, and out of the land of Judah.

17 And David smote them from the twilight even unto the evening of ¹⁸the next day: ¹⁹and there escaped not a man of them, save four hundred young men, which rode upon camels, and fled.

he placed in circumstances of such perplexity; but his extremity furnished an opportunity for a display of the Divine wisdom. It is encouraging to the people of God to mark such events, seeing that the principle is every whit as much in operation in the present hour as it was in the days of David. Truly, "the steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord, and he delighteth in his way."

Chap. XXX. 1-20. David speedily found work in another direction for himself and his men in chastising wickedness. By the conduct of the Amalekites, he was plunged into the deepest affliction; "they wept until they had no more power to weep." What anguish! David, however, had perhaps the deepest stake in the calamity; both his wives were taken captive, and his own life was in jeopardy from the insurgent spirit of the people. Extremes try man. "David encouraged himself in the Lord his God." He sought direction, and, in obtaining it, he acted upon it with all his might. It was enough that by the ephod the Lord answered—"Pursue!" The disparity of numbers—for David's men were but a handful compared with those of the enemy—gave him no concern. It was enough for him that the "Lord was with him." The Egyptian was a guide

18 And David recovered all that the Amalekites had carried away; and David rescued his two wives.

19 And ^athere was nothing lacking to them, neither small nor great, neither sons nor daughters, neither spoil, nor any thing that they had taken to them: David recovered all.

20 And David took all the flocks and the herds, ^bwhich they drave before those other cattle, and said, ^c'This is David's spoil.

21 ¶ And David came to the ^d'two hundred men, which were so faint that they could not follow David, whom they had made also to abide at the brook Besor; and they went forth to meet David, and to meet the people that ^ewere with him: and when David ^f'came near to the people, he ^g'saluted them.

22 Then answered all the ^h'wicked men, and ⁱmen of Belial, of ^j'those that went with David, and said, ^k'Because they went not with us, we will not give them ^lought of the spoil that we have recovered, save to every man his wife and his children, that they may lead ^mthem away, and depart.

23 Then said David, Ye shall not do so, ⁿ'my brethren, with that ^o'which the LORD hath given us, ^p'who hath preserved us, and delivered the company that came against us into our hand.

24 For who will hearken unto you in this matter? ^q'but as his part is that goeth down to the battle, so ^rshall his part be that ^s'tarrieth by the stuff: they shall part ^t'alike.

25 And it was so from that day ^u'forward, that he made it a statute and an ordinance for Israel unto this day.

CHAPTER XXXI.

1 Saul, having lost his army and his sons, killeth himself.
8 The Philistines triumph over their dead bodies. 11 The men of Jabesh-gilead recover the bodies by night.

NOW ^athe Philistines fought against Israel; and the men of Israel fled from before the Philistines, and ^b'fell down ^c'slain in mount ^d'Gilboa.

2 And the Philistines ^e'followed hard upon Saul and upon his sons; and the Philistines slew ^f'Jonathan, and Abinadab, and Melchi-shua, ^g'Saul's sons.

3 And the battle ^h'went sore against Saul, and the ⁱ'archers hit him; and he was sore wounded of the archers.

4 Then said Saul unto his armour-bearer, ^j'Draw thy sword, and thrust me through therewith; lest these ^k'uncircumcised come and thrust me through, and ^l'abuse me. But his armour-bearer would not; for ^m'he was sore afraid: therefore ⁿ'Saul took a sword, and fell upon it.

5 And when ^o'his armour-bearer saw that Saul was dead, he fell likewise upon his sword, and died with him.

6 So ^p'Saul died, and his three sons, and his armour-bearer, and all his men, that same day together.

7 ¶ And when the men of Israel that were on the other side of the valley, and they that were on the other side Jordan, saw that the men of Israel fled, and that Saul and his sons were dead, ^q'they forsook the cities, and fled; and the Philistines came and dwelt in them.

8 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, when the Philistines came ^r'to strip the slain, that they found Saul and his three sons fallen in mount Gilboa.

9 And they ^s'cut off his head, and stripped off his armour, and sent into the land of the Philistines round about, ^t'to publish it in the house of their idols, and among the people.

10 And they put his armour in the house of ^u'Ashtaroth; and they fastened his body to the wall of ^v'Beth-shan.

11 And when the inhabitants of ready prepared by Providence to conduct him forward to the host, whom he found "spread abroad upon all the earth, eating, and drinking, and dancing, because of all the great spoil they had taken." Nothing could be more complete than the overthrow of the invaders. All the prisoners, moreover, and all the property were recovered, and much spoil besides, which was very properly termed David's. David's conduct towards "the men of Belial" was like him, and worthy of him. Always just, for the most part he was generous and noble. The Philistines, however little their princes deserved it, received ample compensation for the shelter that Achish had given to him in this successful resistance to the Amalekites. All parties must have seen that there was a remarkable Providence in the whole affair. None are ever losers by the exercise of hospitality to the afflicted people of God.

Chap. XXXI. 1-13. We now return to Saul and the Philistines. Israel was speedily worsted, and the days of Saul, as well as of his sons, were numbered. He appears to have been mortally wounded, although the wound was not immediately fatal. In his anguish and terror, he enjoined his servant to perpetrate upon him a homicide; and that failing, he committed suicide. Such was the end of this most infatuated of mankind. The carnage of Israel was complete. The king, his sons, his armour-bearer, and all his men, perished together. His head was soon severed from his body, and his armour stripped from off him, and the triumph proclaimed in the house of the Idols of Philistia, while his body was ignominiously fastened to the wall of Beth-shan. Such is the end of Saul's career! His character presents a variety of aspects, all unlovely, but all supplying admoni-

THE SECOND BOOK OF THE KINGS.

CHAPTER I.

1 An Amalekite bringeth tidings of the overthrow, and accusing himself of Saul's death, is slain. 17 David's lamentation over Saul and Jonathan.

NOW it came to pass after the death of Saul, when David was returned from the slaughter of the Amalekites, and David had abode two days in Ziklag;

2 It came even to pass on the third day, that, behold, a man came out of the camp from Saul, with his clothes rent, and earth upon his head: and so it was, when he came to David, that he fell to the earth, and did obeisance.

3 And David said unto him, From whence comest thou? And he said unto him, Out of the camp of Israel am I escaped.

4 And David said unto him, How went the matter? I pray thee, tell me. And he answered, That the people are fled from the battle, and many of the people also are fallen and dead; and Saul and Jonathan his son are dead also.

5 And David said unto the young man that told him, How knowest thou that Saul and Jonathan his son be dead?

6 And the young man that told him said, As I happened by chance upon mount Gilboa, behold, Saul leaned upon his spear; and, lo, the chariots and horsemen followed hard after him.

7 And when he looked behind him, he saw me, and called unto me: and I answered, Here am I.

8 And he said unto me, Who art thou? And I answered him, I am an Amalekite.

9 He said unto me again, Stand, I pray thee, upon me, and slay me; for anguish is come upon me, because my life is yet whole in me.

10 So I stood upon him, and slew him, because I was sure that he could not live after that he was fallen: and I took the crown that was upon his head, and the bracelet that was on his arm, and have brought them hither unto my lord.

11 ¶ Then David took hold on his clothes, and rent them; and likewise all the men that were with him.

12 And they mourned and wept, and fasted until even, for Saul, and for Jonathan his son, and for the people of the LORD, and for the house of Israel; because they were fallen by the sword.

13 ¶ And David said unto the young man that told him, Whence art thou? And he answered, I am the son of a stranger, an Amalekite.

14 And David said unto him, How wast thou not afraid to stretch forth thine hand to destroy the LORD's anointed?

15 And David called one of the young men, and said, Go near, and fall upon him. And he smote him that he died.

16 And David said unto him, Thy blood be upon thy head: for thy mouth hath testified against thee, saying, I have slain the LORD's anointed.

17 ¶ And David lamented with this lamentation over Saul, and over Jonathan his son:

18 (Also he bade them teach the children of Judah the use of the bow: behold, it is written in the book of Jasher:)

19 The beauty of Israel is slain upon thy high places: how are the mighty fallen!

20 Tell it not in Gath, publish it not in the streets of Askelon; lest the daughters of the Philistines rejoice, lest the daughters of the uncircumcised triumph.

21 Ye mountains of Gilboa, let there be no dew, neither let there be rain upon you, nor fields of offerings: for there the shield of the mighty is vilely cast away, the shield of Saul, as though he had not been anointed with oil.

22 From the blood of the slain, from tion. Without God, the strongest king is but a broken reed—the highest courage but infatuation—the profoundest sagacity but folly. The whole serves most impressively to shew the fearful condition of a man without God, and having no hope in the world."

Chap. I. 1-27. David had no sooner returned from his victory over the Amalekites than he was apprised of the defeat of Israel, and the death of Saul and his sons. The individual who brought the intelligence reported correctly as to the main facts, although falsely as to the part which he himself had taken. He presented the Royal Fillet, or Diadem, worn by Saul, in confirmation of the statement that he, with his own hand, had slain the king—an act for which he took to himself great credit, expecting from David thanks and reward. But the intelligence which he supposed would have filled David's heart with gladness, was only productive of unutterable anguish; and he received the due reward of his alleged, although false deeds, in the loss of his own life. Nothing can more impressively demonstrate the sincerity of David's past professions of regard to Saul than the depth of his sorrow on the present occasion. The death of Jonathan was the heaviest blow David had yet rethe fat of the mighty, ¹the bow of Jonathan turned not back, and the sword of Saul returned not empty.

23 Saul and Jonathan were lovely and ²pleasant in their lives, and in their death they were not divided: they were ³swifter than eagles, they were stronger than lions.

24 Ye ⁴daughters of Israel, weep over Saul, who clothed you in scarlet, with other delights; who put on ornaments of gold upon your apparel.

25 How are the mighty fallen in the midst of the battle! O Jonathan, thou wast slain in thine high places.

26 I am distressed for thee, my brother Jonathan: very pleasant hast thou been unto me: ⁵thy love to me was wonderful, passing the love of women.

27 How are the mighty fallen, and the weapons of war perished!

CHAPTER II.

1 David, by God's direction, goeth up to Hebron, and is there made king of Judah. 8 Abner maketh Ish-bosheth king of Israel. 18 Asahel slain.

AND it came to pass after this, that David ¹enquired of the LORD, saying, Shall I go up into any of the cities of Judah? And the LORD said unto him, Go up. And David said, Whither shall I go up? And he said, Unto ²Hebron.

2 So David went up thither, and ³his two wives also, Ahinoam the Jezreelitess, and Abigail, Nabal's wife, the Carmelite.

3 And ⁴his men that were with him did David bring up, every man with his household: and they dwelt in ⁵the cities of Hebron.

4 And ⁶the men of Judah came, and there they ⁷anointed David king over the house of Judah. And they told David, saying, That ⁸the men of Jabesh-gilead were they that buried Saul.

5 ¶ And David sent messengers unto the men of Jabesh-gilead, and said unto them, ⁹Blessed be ye of the LORD, that ye have shewed this kindness unto your lord, even unto Saul, and have buried him.

6 And now ¹⁰the LORD shew kindness and truth unto you: and ¹¹I also will requite you this kindness, because ye have done this thing.

7 Therefore now ¹²let your hands be strengthened, and be ye ¹³valiant; for your master Saul is dead, and also the house of Judah have anointed me king over them.

ceived. No two hearts were ever more closely united. The affection which obtained between them might be viewed as a foreshadowing of the unity of the spirits of just men made perfect. But the Gospel is capable of producing among all men an affection even purer and stronger than that which knit together the hearts of Jonathan and David. The whole human race, once baptized with the spirit of the Lord, will exhibit such a unity.

Chap. II. 1-32. David was careful to acknowledge the Lord in all his ways, and his steps never failed to be directed. Instructed to go to Hebron, thither he went, making it the seat of his government, and remaining there till the happy day which made him king over all Israel. Here again, in dealing with the men of Jabesh,

8 ¶ But ¹Abner the son of Ner, captain of ²Saul's host, took ³Ish-bosheth the son of Saul, and brought him over to ⁴Mahanaim;

9 And made him king over ⁵Gilead, and over the ⁶Ashurites, and over Jezreel, and over Ephraim, and over Benjamin, and over all Israel.

10 Ish-bosheth, Saul's son, was forty years old when he began to reign over Israel, and reigned two years: but the house of Judah followed David.

11 (And ⁷the ⁸time that David was king in Hebron over the house of Judah was seven years and six months.)

12 ¶ And Abner the son of Ner, and the servants of Ish-bosheth the son of Saul, went out from Mahanaim to ⁹Gibeon.

13 And ¹⁰Joab the son of Zeruiah, and the servants of David, went out, and ¹¹met together by the ¹²pool of Gibeon: and they sat down, the one on the one side of the pool, and the other on the other side of the pool.

14 And Abner said to Joab, Let the young men now arise and ¹³play before us. And Joab said, Let them arise.

15 Then there arose, and went over by number, twelve of Benjamin, which ¹⁴per-tained to Ish-bosheth the son of Saul, and twelve of the servants of David.

16 And they caught every one his fellow by the head, and ¹⁵thrust his sword in his fellow's side; so they fell down together: wherefore that place was called ¹⁶Helkath-hazzurim, which is in Gibeon.

17 And there was a very sore battle that day: and Abner was beaten, and the men of Israel, before the servants of David.

18 ¶ And there were ¹⁷three sons of Zeruiah there, Joab, and Abishai, and Asahel: and Asahel ¹⁸was as light of ¹⁹foot as ²⁰a wild roe.

19 And Asahel pursued after Abner; and in going he ²¹turned not to the right hand nor to the left from ²²following Abner.

20 Then Abner looked behind him, and said, ²³Art thou Asahel? And he answered, I am.

21 And Abner said to him, Turn thee aside to thy right hand or to thy left, and lay thee hold on one of the young men, and take thee his ²⁴armour. But Asahel would not turn aside from following of him.

the true spirit of David manifests itself. The fact of their having shewn regard to the dust of the departed king strongly recommended them to his favour. The right is always the profitable course. The facts set forth in ver. 16 are painfully illustrative of the spirit which prevailed in ancient wars. The conduct of Abner to Asahel was kind and forbearing; he slew him not till the alternative was to kill or be killed. Particular gifts are sometimes pernicious, and even perilous to their possessors; but for the swiftness of Asahel he had not perished on the present occasion, and the crime of the murder of Abner, subsequently, by Joab, had not taken place. In ver. 26 Abner acted a noble part in the humane appeal which he made to Joab touching the folly of war, and the misery which must follow it: "Shall the sword devour for ever? Knowest thou not,

22 And Abner said again to Asahel, Turn thee aside from following me: ^awherefore should I smite thee to the ground? ^bhow then should I hold up my face to Joab thy brother?

23 Howbeit he refused to turn aside: wherefore Abner, with the hinder end of the spear, smote him under ^cthe fifth rib, that the spear came out behind him; and he fell down there, and died in the same place: and it came to pass, ^dthat as many as came to the place where Asahel fell down and died ^estood still.

24 Joab also and Abishai pursued after Abner: and the sun went down when they were come to the hill of Ammah, that ^flieth before Giah, by the way of the wilderness of Gibeon.

25 ¶ And the children of Benjamin gathered themselves together after Abner, and became one troop, and stood on the top of an hill.

26 Then Abner called to Joab, and said, ^gShall the ^hsword devour for ever? knowest thou not that it will be bitterness in the latter end? ⁱhow long shall it be then ere thou bid the people return from following their brethren?

27 And Joab said, ^jAs ^kGod liveth, ^lunless thou hadst spoken, surely then ^min the morning the people had ⁿgone up every one from following his brother.

28 So Joab blew a trumpet, and all the people stood still, and pursued after Israel no more, neither fought they any more.

29 And Abner and his men walked all that night through the plain, and passed over Jordan, and went through all ^oBithron, and they came to Mahanaim.

30 ¶ And Joab returned from following Abner: and when he had gathered all the people together, there lacked of David's servants nineteen men and Asahel.

31 But the servants of David had smitten of Benjamin, and of Abner's men, ^pso that ^qthree hundred and threescore men died.

32 ¶ And they took up Asahel, and ^rburied him in the sepulchre of his father, which ^swas in Beth-lehem: and Joab and his men ^twent all night, and they came to Hebron at break of day.

stronger, and the house of Saul waxed weaker and weaker.

2 ¶ And unto David were ^asons born in Hebron: and his first-born was ^bAmnon, of ^cAhinoam the Jezreelitess;

3 And his second, ^dChileab, ^eof Abigail the wife of Nabal the Carmelite; and the third, ^fAbsalom, the son of Maacah, the daughter of ^gTalmai, king of ^hGeshur;

4 And the fourth, ⁱAdonijah, the son of Haggith; and the fifth, Shephatiah, the son of Abital;

5 And the sixth, Ithream, by Eglah, David's wife. These were born to David in Hebron.

6 ¶ And it came to pass, while there was war between the house of Saul and the house of David, that ^jAbner made himself strong for the house of Saul.

7 And Saul had a concubine, whose name ^kwas ^lRizpah, the daughter of Aiah: and ^mIsh-bosheth said to Abner, Wherefore hast thou ⁿgone in unto my father's concubine?

8 Then was Abner ^overy wroth for the words of Ish-bosheth, and said, ^pAm ^qI a dog's head, which against Judah ^rdo shew kindness this day unto the house of Saul thy father, to his brethren, and to his friends, and have not delivered thee into the hand of David, that thou chargest me to-day with a fault concerning this woman?

9 ^sSo do God to Abner, and more also, except, ^tas the LORD hath sworn to David, even so I do to him;

10 To translate the kingdom from the house of Saul, and to set up the throne of David over Israel, and over Judah, ^ufrom Dan even to Beer-sheba.

11 And he could not answer Abner a word again, ^vbecause he feared him.

12 ¶ And Abner sent messengers to David on his behalf, saying, ^wWhose is the land? saying ^xalso, ^yMake thy league with me, and behold, ^zmy hand shall be with thee, to bring about all Israel unto thee.

13 ¶ And he said, Well; I will make a league with thee: but one thing I require of thee, ^athat is, ^bThou shalt not see my face, except thou first bring ^cMichal, Saul's daughter, when thou comest to see my face.

14 And David sent messengers to Ish-bosheth, Saul's son, saying, Deliver me my wife Michal, which I espoused to me for an hundred forekins of the Philistines.

it will be bitterness in the latter end!" Momentous questions these! May they be deeply engraved on the hearts of the rulers of mankind! Next to preventing war, the most honourable office is to make peace. On all occasions, whether private or public, nothing is fraught with so much felicity to its author as peace-making. "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God."

Chap. III. 1-39. The promises which had been made to David now became rapidly fulfilled. One event succeeded to another, till at last he was exalted to the position to which he had been destined in the counsels of Divine wisdom. When God has something great to accomplish, he frequently employs the passions which rule the leaders of mankind to realise his object. The matter which here arose between Abner and Ish-bosheth was attended with serious results, all bearing in one direction—the uniting of Israel under the sceptre of David. Thus Abner's power ministered to the fulfilment of the Divine purpose; and his work done, he fell by the hand of an assassin. The conduct of David con-from her husband, even from ^oPhaltiel the son of Laish.

16 And her husband went with her along ²weeping behind her to ¹Bahurim. Then said Abner unto him, Go, return. And he returned.

17 ¶ And Abner had communication with the elders of Israel, saying, Ye sought for David ³in times past to be king over you.

18 Now then do it: ⁴for the LORD hath spoken of David, saying, ⁵By the hand of my servant David I will save my people Israel out of the hand of the Philistines, and out of the hand of all their enemies.

19 And Abner also spake in the ears of ¹Benjamin: and Abner went also to speak in the ears of David in Hebron all that seemed good to Israel, and that seemed good to the whole house of Benjamin.

20 So Abner came to David to Hebron, and twenty men with him: and ¹David made Abner, and the men that were with him, a feast.

21 And Abner said unto David, I will arise and go, and ¹will gather all Israel unto my lord the king, that they may make a league with thee, and that thou mayest ²reign over all that thine heart desireth. And David sent Abner away; and he went in peace.

22 ¶ And, behold, the servants of David and Joab came from pursuing a troop, and brought in a great spoil with them: but Abner was not with David in Hebron; for he had sent him away, and he was gone in peace.

23 When Joab and all the host that was with him were come, they told Joab, saying, Abner the son of Ner came to the king, and he hath sent him away, and he is gone in peace.

24 Then Joab came to the king, and said, ²What hast thou done? behold, Abner came unto thee; why is it that thou hast sent him away, and he is quite gone?

25 Thou knowest Abner the son of Ner, ^othat he came to deceive thee, ²and to know thy going out, and thy coming in, and to know all that thou doest.

26 And when Joab was come out from David, ⁴he sent messengers after Abner, which brought him again from the well of Sirah: but David knew it not.

27 And when Abner was returned to Hebron, Joab took him aside in the gate, to speak with him ⁴quietly, and smote him there ¹under the fifth rib, that he died, ²for the blood of Asahel his brother.

28 ¶ And afterward when David heard it, he said, I and my kingdom are ¹guiltless before the LORD for ever from the ²blood of Abner the son of Ner:

29 Let it ¹rest on the head of Joab, and on all his father's house; and ²let there not ⁶fail from the house of Joab one that hath ¹an issue, or that is a ²leper, or that leaneth on a staff, or that falleth on the sword, or that lacketh bread.

30 So Joab and Abishai his brother ¹slew Abner, ²because he had slain their brother Asahel at Gibeon in the battle.

31 ¶ And David said to Joab, and to all the people that were with him, ¹Reud your clothes, and gird you with sackcloth, and mourn before Abner. And king David himself followed the ¹bier.

32 And they buried Abner in Hebron: and the king ¹lifted up his voice, and wept at the grave of Abner; and all the people wept.

33 And the king lamented over Abner, and said, Died Abner ¹as a fool dieth?

34 Thy ¹hands were not bound, nor thy feet put into fetters: as a man falleth before ²wicked men, so fellest thou. And all the people wept again over him.

35 And when all the people came to ¹cause David to eat meat while it was yet day, David sware, saying, So do God to me, and more also, if I taste bread, or ought else, till the sun be down.

36 And all the people took notice of it, and it ¹pleased them: ²as whatsoever the king did pleased all the people.

37 For all the people, and all Israel, understood that day, that it was not of the king to slay Abner the son of Ner.

38 And the king said unto his servants, Know ye not that there is ¹a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel?

39 And ¹I am this day ¹weak, though anointed king; and these men the sons of Zeruiah be too hard for me: ¹the LORD shall reward the doer of evil according to his wickedness.

CHAPTER IV.

¹ The Israelites troubled at the death of Abner. ² Baanah and Rechab slay Ish-boaheth, and bring his head to David. ³ David causeth them to be slain, and Ish-boaheth's head to be buried.

AND when Saul's son heard that Abner was dead in Hebron, ¹his hands were feeble, ²and all the Israelites were troubled.

2 ¶ And Saul's son had two men that were ¹captains of bands; the name of the one was Baanah, and the name of the ¹other Rechab, the sons of Rimmon a sequent upon his death was highly honourable to him—demonstrative of his integrity, gratitude, and confidence, and such as contributed much to the establishment of himself in the heart of the nation. No grief could be more real, or more deep and pungent than that felt by David at the treachery of Joab. The imprecation on his father's house in ver. 29 is terrible. The interment supplied an occasion for an emphatic display of the king's integrity in this matter; and it had, unquestionably, the strongest influence on the union which was about to be cemented. This melancholy event contributed to throw a hallowed solemnity over the whole, which was eminently calculated to call forth the better feelings of the nation. Ver. 36 is emphatic on this point: "All the people took notice of it, and it pleased them: as whatsoever the king did pleased all the people." In this matter David supplied a beautiful type of his Son, and Lord, concerning whom the people testified, "He hath done all things well."

Chap. IV. 1-12. The spirit of David admits of being tested in all possible ways, and examined from all points.

Beerothite, of the children of Benjamin; (for ⁴Beeroth also was reckoned to Benjamin:

3 And the Beerothites ⁴fled to Gittaim, and were sojourners there until this day.)

4 And ¹Jonathan, Saul's son, had a son that was lame of his feet. He was five years old when ⁵the tidings came of Saul and Jonathan out of Jezreel, and his nurse took him up, and fled: and it came to pass, as she made haste to flee, that he fell, and became lame; and his name was ⁶Mephibosheth.

5 And the sons of Rimmon the Beerothite, Rechab and Baanah, ¹went, and came about the heat of the day to the house of Ish-bosheth, who ²lay on a bed at noon.

6 And they came thither into the midst of the house, as though they would have fetched wheat; and they smote him ¹under the fifth rib: and Rechab and Baanah his brother escaped.

7 For when they came into the house, he lay on his bed in his bed-chamber, and they smote him, and slew him, and beheaded him, and ³took his head, and gat them away through the plain all night.

8 And they brought the head of Ish-bosheth unto David to Hebron, and said to the king, Behold the head of Ish-bosheth the son of Saul thine enemy, ⁴which sought thy life; and ⁵the LORD hath avenged my lord the king this day of Saul, and of his seed.

9 ¶ And David answered Rechab and Baanah his brother, the sons of Rimmon the Beerothite, and said unto them, As the LORD liveth, ⁶who hath redeemed my soul out of all adversity,

10 When one told me, saying, Behold, Saul is dead, (²thinking to have brought good tidings,) I took hold of him, and slew him in Ziklag, ³who thought that I would have given him a reward for his tidings:

11 How much more, ⁴when wicked men have slain a righteous person in his own house upon his bed? shall I not therefore now ⁵require his blood of your hand, and take you away ⁶from the earth?

12 And David commanded his young men, and they ¹slew them, and cut off their hands and their feet, and ²hanged them up over the pool in Hebron: but they took the head of Ish-bosheth, and buried it in the sepulchre of Abner in Hebron.

CHAPTER V.

1 David anointed king over all Israel. 6 He takes Zion, and calls it the city of David. 11 Hiram sends him timber and workmen to build him a house. 17 He gains two victories over the Philistines.

THEN ¹came all the tribes of Israel to David unto Hebron, and spake, saying, Behold, ²we are thy bone and thy flesh.

2 Also in time past, when Saul was king over us, thou wast he that ³leddest out and broughtest in Israel: and the LORD said to thee, ⁴Thou shalt feed my people Israel, and thou shalt be ⁵a captain over Israel.

3 So ¹all the elders of Israel came to the king to Hebron; and king David ²made a league with them in Hebron ³before the LORD: and they anointed David king over Israel.

4 ¶ David was thirty years old when he began to reign; and he reigned ¹forty years.

5 In Hebron he reigned over Judah seven years and six months; and in Jerusalem he reigned thirty and three years over all Israel and Judah.

6 ¶ And the king and his men went to ¹Jerusalem unto ²the Jebusites, the inhabitants of the land; which spake unto David, saying, Except thou take away the blind and the lame, thou shalt not come in hither: ³thinking, David cannot come in hither.

7 Nevertheless David took the strong hold of ¹Zion: the same is the city of David.

8 And David said on that day, Whosoever getteth up to the gutter, and smiteth the Jebusites, and the lame and the blind, that are hated of David's soul, he shall be ¹chief and captain. ²Wherefore they said, The blind and the lame shall not come into the house.

9 So David dwelt in the fort, and called it, The city of David: and David built round about, from ¹Millo and inward.

10 And David ¹went on, and grew great; and ²the LORD God of hosts was with him.

Although his beloved Jonathan was dead, he was not forgotten, and there was still a possibility of honouring the father in his children. The case of Mephibosheth supplied a beautiful example, of which we have more in the next chapter. The murderers of Ish-bosheth mistook David, when they looked to him for a reward of their foul deed. David had no faith in such auxiliaries; he recoiled from the co-operation of all such men. The punishment of the evil-doers, in the present case, was summary and terrible, constituting a beacon to warn all the sons of Belial, in future, against such methods of ingratiating themselves with the king. True religion abhors the service of iniquity. If "the wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God," how much less the perpetration of crimes at which humanity shudders! Popery, that worst perversion of Christianity, has, to a frightful extent, had recourse to murder, in furtherance of what it deemed the interests of the Church. Such conduct is in harmony with the principles and proceedings of the Man of Sin, and with the "Mystery of Iniquity;" but it is unknown to the holy Apostles of Jesus Christ. The Son of God came not to destroy men's lives, but to save them; and truth, not the sword, is the instrument whereby he accomplishes his glorious mission.

Chap. V. 1-16. The application of the Tribes to effect the union, shewed that the public mind had been fully prepared by previous events. Seven years and six months having passed away, David had become established in the heart of Judah, and he was surrounded by servants on whom he could rely. The Jebusites, by resisting, were overthrown. Their arrogant language was resented and punished. No weapon formed against David, the type of the King of Glory, could prosper. He had a race to run, and till it was accomplished nothing could withstand him. In ver. 10 we are told, "He grew great, and the Lord God of hosts was with him." This simple fact suffices to explain all his powers, victory, 11 ¶ And Hiram king of Tyre sent messengers to David, and cedar-trees, and carpenters, and masons: and they built David an house.

12 And David perceived that the LORD had established him king over Israel, and that he had exalted his kingdom for his people Israel's sake.

13 ¶ And David took him more concubines and wives out of Jerusalem, after he was come from Hebron: and there were yet sons and daughters born to David.

14 And these be the names of those that were born unto him in Jerusalem; Sham-muah, and Shobab, and Nathan, and Solomon,

15 Ibhaz also, and Elishua, and Nepheg, and Japhia,

16 And Elishama, and Eliada, and Eliphalet.

17 ¶ But when the Philistines heard that they had anointed David king over Israel, all the Philistines came up to seek David; and David heard of it, and went down to the hold.

18 The Philistines also came and spread themselves in the valley of Rephaim.

19 And David enquired of the LORD, saying, Shall I go up to the Philistines? wilt thou deliver them into mine hand? And the LORD said unto David, Go up; for I will doubtless deliver the Philistines into thine hand.

20 And David came to Baal-perazim, and David smote them there, and said, The LORD hath broken forth upon mine enemies before me, as the breach of waters. Therefore he called the name of that place Baal-perazim.

22 ¶ And the Philistines came up yet again, and spread themselves in the valley of Rephaim.

23 And when David enquired of the LORD, he said, Thou shalt not go up; but fetch a compass behind them, and come upon them over against the mulberry-trees.

24 And let it be, when thou hearest the sound of a going in the tops of the mulberry-trees, that then thou shalt bestir thyself: for then shall the LORD go out before thee, to smite the host of the Philistines.

CHAPTER VI.

AGAIN, David gathered together all the chosen men of Israel, thirty thousand.

2 And David arose, and went with all the people that were with him from Baale of Judah, to bring up from thence the ark of God, whose name is called by the name of the LORD of hosts, that dwelleth between the cherubims.

3 And they set the ark of God upon a new cart, and brought it out of the house of Abinadab that was in Gibeah: and Uzzah and Ahio, the sons of Abinadab, drove the new cart.

4 And they brought it out of the house of Abinadab which was at Gibeah, accompanying the ark of God; and Ahio went before the ark.

5 And David, and all the house of Israel, played before the LORD on all manner of instruments made of fir-wood, even on harps, and on psalteries, and on timbrels, and on cornets, and on cymbals.

6 ¶ And when they came to Nachon's thrashing-floor, Uzzah put forth his hand to the ark of God, and took hold of it; for the oxen shook it.

7 And the anger of the LORD was kindled against Uzzah; and God smote him there for his error; and there he died by the ark of God.

8 And David was displeased, because the LORD had made a breach upon Uzzah; and he called the name of the place Perez-uzzah to this day.

9 And David was afraid of the LORD that day, and said, How shall the ark of the LORD come to me?

10 So David would not remove the ark of the LORD unto him into the city of David; but David carried it aside into the house of Obed-edom the Gittite.

11 And the ark of the LORD continued in the house of Obed-edom the Gittite three months: and the LORD blessed Obed-edom, and all his household.

12 ¶ And it was told king David, saying, The LORD hath blessed the house of Obedprosperity, and glory. Success in David's case, however, failed to produce self-confidence. He remained, as aforetime, habitually distrustful of himself, and confiding only in the Lord. He would do nothing without the Divine direction; but so soon as the Lord said, "Go up," he was in motion with his armies, and went forth conquering and to conquer. Ver. 20 shews the spirit in which he surveyed his prostrate opponents,—"The Lord hath broken forth upon mine enemies before me, as the breach of waters." The Church is thus early designated Zion, the City of the living God, inhabited by people made alive through his grace and Spirit. The whole of David's course here, and in many parts of his subsequent history, shadows forth the spiritual conflict which is now going on throughout the earth, in which men are being led captive by the Gospel, and brought to submit, in grateful, loving confidence, to the sceptre of the Lord Jesus.

Chap. VI. 1-23. The removal of the Ark was a serious affair, and to be gone about with fear and trembling. In placing it upon a cart they erred; it ought to have been carried upon the shoulders of the Kohathites. It might seem at first sight that the act of Uzzah was not only innocent, but praiseworthy; the feeling with which the deed was done, however, was not compatible with due respect to the Divine Majesty; and in consequence he was struck down in a moment. An event so awful naturally inspired dread in David, and all around. They were therefore anxious to get away from it as quickly as possible. Its tardiance with Obed-edom was a happy occasion to him, and to his house a source edom, and all that pertaineth unto him, because of the ark of God. ¹So David went and brought up the ark of God from the house of Obed-edom into the city of David with gladness.

13 And it was so, that, when they that bare the ark of the LORD had gone six paces, he sacrificed oxen and fatlings.

14 And David ¹danced before the LORD with all his might; and David was girded with a linen ephod.

15 So David and all the house of Israel brought up the ark of the LORD with shouting, and with the sound of the trumpet.

16 And as the ark of the LORD came into the city of David, Michal, Saul's daughter, looked through a window, and saw king David leaping and dancing before the LORD; and she ²despised him in her heart.

17 ¶ And ³they brought in the ark of the LORD, and set it in his place, in the midst of the tabernacle that David had pitched for it; and David ⁴offered burnt-offerings and peace-offerings before the LORD.

18 And as soon ⁵as David had made an end of offering burnt-offerings and peace-offerings, ⁶he blessed the people in the name of the LORD of hosts.

19 And ⁷he dealt among all the people, even among the whole multitude of Israel, as well to the women as men, to every one a cake of bread, and a good piece of flesh, and a flagon of wine. ⁸So all the people departed every one to his house.

20 ¶ Then David returned to ⁹bless his household. And ¹⁰Michal, the daughter of Saul, came out to meet David, and said, How ¹¹glorious was the king of Israel to-day, who ¹²uncovered himself to-day in the eyes of the handmaids of his servants, as one of the vain fellows ¹³shamelessly uncovereth himself!

21 And David said unto Michal, It was ¹⁴before the LORD, which ¹⁵chose me before thy father, and before all his house, to appoint me ruler over the people of the LORD, over Israel: therefore will I play before the LORD.

22 And I will yet be ¹⁶more vile than thus, and will be base ¹⁷in mine own sight: and of the maid-servants ¹⁸which

CHAPTER VII.

¹ David purposes to build a temple, and Nathan encourages him. ⁴ God, by Nathan, forbids it, but with promises of special blessings to Israel, to David, and to his seed. ¹⁸ David's prayer and thanksgiving.

AND it came to pass, ²when the king sat in his house, and ³the LORD had given him rest round about from all his enemies, ⁴ That the king said unto ⁵Nathan the prophet, See now, ⁶I dwell in an house of cedar, but ⁷the ark of God dwelleth within ⁸curtains.

⁹ 3 And Nathan said to the king, ¹⁰Go, do ¹¹all that is in thine heart; ¹²for the LORD is with thee.

¹³ 4 ¶ And it came to pass ¹⁴that night, that the word of the LORD came unto Nathan, saying, ¹⁵ 5 Go and tell ¹⁶my servant David, Thus saith the LORD, ¹⁷Shalt thou build me an house for me to dwell in?

¹⁸ 6 Whereas ¹⁹I have not dwelt in any house since the time that I brought up the children of Israel out of Egypt, even to this day, but have ²⁰walked in ²¹a tent and in a tabernacle.

²⁵ 8 Now therefore so shalt thou say unto my servant David, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, ²⁶I took thee from the sheep-cote, from ²⁷following the sheep, to be ²⁸ruler over my people, over Israel:

³⁵ 10 Moreover, I will appoint a place for my people Israel, and will plant them, that they may dwell in a place of their own, and move no more; ³⁶neither shall the children of wickedness afflict them any more, as beforetime, of blessing. Fear was thus abated, and David was encouraged once more to proceed to bring it up into the city, which he did with all gladness. This appears to have been the happiest period that had yet occurred in his history. His joy was unbounded, and its manifestation intense and natural. It was too much, however, for the pride and delicacy of his royal wife, Michal, who "despised him in her heart." Of his other wives, and their feelings on the occasion, no mention is made. It does not appear that the recall of Michal, after she had been unjustly given to another, contributed to David's comfort. In choosing the rest, each felt that she was elevated, whereas Michal considered herself his equal, if not his superior, by having contributed to his exaltation. Her language in ver. 20 is arrogant and offensive; none but the daughter of a king would have dared to talk to David after this fashion. The king felt it, and replied in a manner worthy of his character and position, avowing his determination to be "yet more vile," and

"base in his own sight;" and as to the light in which the maid-servants would look upon him, David knew that "he would be had in honour by them." The example of David here deserves imitation. The proper use of persecution for righteousness' sake, is to render it tributary to an improvement in piety, so that we may become "still more vile" in the eyes of the ungodly.

Chap. VII. 1-17. It is affecting to behold the bias of David's heart amidst all his troubles and conflicts. The glory of God was always uppermost; to the furtherance of this, the whole of his labours tended. No sooner, therefore, were things somewhat tranquillised than he bethought himself of building a house for the Ark, which continued to dwell within curtains. The thought was doubtless from the Lord, since it was the germ of the mighty enterprise of Solomon during the next reign. Nathan, guided by his own judgment, apparently more than by inspiration, approved the project; but on the 11 And as ^asince the time that I commanded judges to be over my people Israel, and have caused thee to rest from all thine enemies. Also the LORD telleth thee, that ^bhe will make thee an house.

12 ¶ And when thy days be fulfilled, and thou shalt ^csleep with thy fathers, ^dI will set up thy seed after thee, which shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish his kingdom.

13 ^eHe shall build an house for my name; and I ^fwill stablish the throne of his kingdom for ever.

14 I will be his father, and he shall be my son. ^gIf he commit iniquity, ^hI will chasten him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men:

15 But ⁱmy mercy shall not depart away from him, as I took ^jit from Saul, whom I put away before thee.

16 And ^kthine house and thy kingdom shall be established for ever before thee: thy throne shall be established for ever.

17 According to all these words, and according to all this vision, ^lso did Nathan speak unto David.

18 ¶ Then went king David in, and sat before the LORD, and he said, Who am I, O Lord God? and what is my house, that thou hast brought me hitherto?

19 And this was yet a small thing in thy sight, O Lord God; but ^mthou hast spoken also of thy servant's house for a great while to come: ⁿand is this the ^omanner of man, O Lord God?

20 And what can David say more unto thee? for thou, Lord God, ^pknowest thy servant.

21 For thy word's sake, and ^qaccording to thine own heart, hast thou done all these great things, to make thy servant know them.

22 Wherefore thou art great, O LORD God: ^rfor there is none like thee, neither is there any God besides thee, according to all that we have heard with our ears.

23 And what one nation in the earth is like thy people, ^seven like Israel, whom God ^twent to redeem for a people to himself, and to make him a name, and to do for you great things, and terrible, for thy land, before thy people, which thou redeemedst to thee from Egypt, ^ufrom the nations and their gods?

24 For thou hast ^vconfirmed to thyself thy people Israel to be a people unto thee for ever; and thou, LORD, ^wart become their God.

25 And now, O LORD God, the word

CHAPTER VIII.

1 David subdueth the Philistines and the Moabites. 2 He smiteth Hadadezer and the Syrians. 16 His officers.

AND ^aafter this it came to pass, that David smote the Philistines, and subdued them: and David took ^bMethegammah out of the hand of the Philistines.

2 And ^che smote Moab, and ^dmeasured them with a line, casting them down to the ground; even with two lines measured he to put to death, and with one full line to keep alive: ^eand so the Moabites became David's servants, and ^fbrought gifts.

3 ¶ David smote also ^gHadadezer, the son of Rehob, king of ^hZobah, as he went to recover his border ⁱat the river Euphrates.

4 And David took ^jfrom him a thousand ^kchariots, and seven hundred horsemen, and twenty thousand footmen: and ^lDavid houghed all the chariot-horses, but ^mreserved of them for an hundred chariots.

5 And ⁿwhen the Syrians of Damascus ^ocame to succour Hadadezer king of Zobah, David slew of the Syrians two and twenty thousand men.

6 Then David put ^pgarrisons in Syria of Damascus; and the Syrians became servants to David, and brought gifts. And ^qthe LORD preserved David whithersoever he went.

7 And David took ^rthe shields of gold that were on the servants of Hadadezer, and brought them to Jerusalem.

8 And from ^sBethah, and from Berothai, cities of Hadadezer, king David took ^texceeding much brass.

9 ¶ When ^uToi king of ^vHamath heard following night he was corrected, and instructed to make a communication to David of a peculiarly encouraging and cheering character, although interdicting to him the honour of the undertaking. Ver. 18-29. This gracious intimation produced its legitimate effect on the mind of the king, whose response to the prophet is full of humility, love, and gratitude. "Every man in his own order," David to do the work of War, and Solomon to consolidate the blessings of Peace. It is enough that each man perform the task assigned him in such a manner as to receive at last from the lips of the Divine Master, "Well done!"

Chap. VIII. 1-9. The war with the Philistines might be said to constitute the chief business of Israel. Although from time to time overthrown, and occasionally almost annihilated, they soon revived; and having gathered strength, as if by instinct, they returned to the invasion of Judea. This most strikingly illustrates the course of the world in its unwearied assaults upon the Church of God. The wars of David, which, through a long series of years, knew little cessation, were largely wars of defence against surrounding nations, who formed league after league for the express purpose of annihilating Israel. Although, as a rule, the result was their own that David had smitten all the host of Hadadezer,

10 Then Toi sent ^aJoram his son unto king David, to ^bsalute him, and ^cto bless him, because he had fought against Hadadezer, and smitten him: for Hadadezer ^dhad wars with Toi: and ^eJoram ^fbrought with him vessels of silver, and vessels of gold, and vessels of brass:

11 Which ^galso king David did dedicate unto the LORD, with the silver and gold that he had dedicated of all nations which he subdued;

12 Of ^hSyria, and of Moab, and of the children of Ammon, and of the Philistines, and of Amalek, and of the spoil of Hadadezer, son of Rehob, king of Zobah.

13 And David ⁱgat him a name when he returned from ^jsmiting of the Syrians in the valley of Salt, being eighteen thousand men.

14 ¶ And he put garrisons in Edom; throughout all Edom put he garrisons: and ^kall they of Edom became David's servants. And the LORD preserved David whithersoever he went.

15 ¶ And David reigned over all Israel; and ^lDavid executed judgment and justice unto all his people.

16 And ^mJoab, the son of Zeruiah, was over the host; and Jehoshaphat, the son of Ahilud, was ⁿrecorder;

17 And Zadok, the son of Ahitub, and Ahimelech, the son of Abiathar, were the priests; ^oand Seraiah was the ^pscribe;

18 And Benaiah, the son of Jehoiada, was over both ^qthe Cherethites and the Pelethites; and David's sons were ^rchief rulers.

Ziba said unto the king, Jonathan hath ^xyet a son, which is lame on his feet.

4 And the king said unto him, Where ^yis he? And Ziba said unto the king, Behold, he is in the house of ^zMachir, the son of Ammiel, in Lo-debar.

5 ¶ Then king David sent, and fetched him out of the house of Machir, the son of Ammiel, from Lo-debar.

6 Now when ^aMephibosheth, the son of Jonathan, the son of Saul, was come unto David, ^bhe fell on his face, and did reverence. And David said, Mephibosheth! And he answered, Behold thy servant!

7 ¶ And David said unto him, ^cFear not: ^dfor I will surely shew thee kindness for Jonathan thy father's sake, and will restore thee all the land of Saul thy father; and thou shalt ^eeat bread at my table continually.

8 And he bowed himself, and said, What ^fis thy servant, that thou shouldest look upon such a dead dog as I am?

9 ¶ Then the king called to Ziba, Saul's servant, and said unto him, ^gI have given unto thy master's son all that pertained to Saul, and to all his house.

10 Thou therefore, and thy sons, and thy servants, shall till the land for him, and thou shalt bring in ^hthe fruits, that thy master's son may have food to eat: but Mephibosheth thy master's son ⁱshall eat bread alway at my table. Now Ziba had fifteen sons and twenty servants.

11 Then said Ziba unto the king, According to all that my lord the king hath commanded his servant, so shall thy servant do. As for Mephibosheth, ^jsaid the king, he shall eat at my table, as one of the king's sons.

12 And Mephibosheth had a young ^kson, whose name was Micha: and all that dwelt in the house of Ziba were servants unto Mephibosheth.

13 So Mephibosheth dwelt in Jerusalem, for he did eat continually at the king's table; and was lame on both his feet.

CHAPTER X.

1 David's messengers, sent to comfort Hanun, are villainously entreated. 6 The Ammonites and Syrians are overcome.

AND it came to pass after this, that the ^lking of the children of Ammon destruction, often, as in the present chapter, in immense and all but incredible numbers, nothing could subdue them. Their enmity to Israel seemed to be unquenchable and immortal. Although David was not permitted to build the House to the Lord himself, he thus early began to make preparation for it. We have seen, from ver. 10 and 11, that the vessels of silver and of gold which he had taken he presented to the Lord, with the silver and gold that he had dedicated, from all nations which he had subdued. David might be said to carry on war for God against Idolatry. He never forgot, amid his external conflicts, the necessity of his kingdom. No nation was ever previously so well governed; no monarch ever so beloved of his subjects. "He executed judgment and justice unto all his people." David was pre-eminently a patriot-king. Neither in Jerusalem, nor out of it, had he ever an equal as a ruler, or as a man.

David, true to its first love, returned to the House of Saul, and finding one of his old servants, David obtained from him the knowledge he desired concerning the descendants of Jonathan, which resulted in the removal of his son to the Palace, where he was treated as an intimate relation, and surrounded with every comfort all the days of his life. David here again appears in his true character—tender in heart, and grateful for benefits received in the days of his poverty and difficulty. He thus teaches men who have been raised from a lower grade to wealth and station not to be ashamed of old friends, children of the Most High, although still poor, but to seek occasions to do them kindnesses. These are indications of true greatness,—a quality in which David excelled all who had lived before him. There is here a moral beauty in his deportment which cannot fail to touch the heart of every reflecting reader.

died, and Hanun his son reigned in his stead.

2 Then said David, I will ^bshew kindness unto Hanun the son of Nahash, ^cas his father shewed kindness unto me. And David sent to comfort him by the hand of his servants for his father. And David's servants came into the land of the children of Ammon.

3 And the princes of the children of Ammon said unto Hanun their lord, ¹Thinkest thou that David doth honour thy father, that he hath sent comforters unto thee? ²hath not David rather sent his servants unto thee, to search the city, and to spy it out, and to overthrow it?

4 Wherefore Hanun took David's servants, ^aand shaved off the one half of their beards, and ^ccut off their garments in the middle, even to their buttocks, and sent them away.

5 When they told ^{it} unto David, he sent to meet them, because the men were greatly ashamed: and the king said, ¹arry at ²Jericho until your beards be grown, and then return.

6 ¹And when the children of Ammon saw that they ^bstank before David, the children of Ammon sent and hired ¹the Syrians of Beth-rehob, and the Syrians of Zoba, twenty thousand footmen, and of king ²Maacah a thousand men, and of ³Ish-tob twelve thousand men.

7 And when David heard of ^{it}, he sent Joab, and ¹all the host of the mighty men.

8 And the children of Ammon came out, and put the battle in array at the entering in of the gate: and the Syrians of Zoba, and of ²Rehob, and Ish-tob, and Maacah, were by themselves in the field.

9 When Joab saw that ¹the front of the battle was against him before and behind, he chose of all the choice men of Israel, and put them in array against the Syrians:

10 And the rest of the people he delivered into the hand of Abishai his brother, that he might put them in array against the children of Ammon.

11 And he said, ¹O if the Syrians be too strong for me, then thou shalt help me; but if the children of Ammon be too strong for thee, then I will come and help thee.

12 Be ²of good courage, and let us

31. 30.

¹play the men for our people, and for the cities of our God: and ²the LORD do that which seemeth him good.

13 And Joab drew nigh, and the people that were with him, unto the battle against the Syrians: and ¹they fled before him.

14 And when the children of Ammon saw that the Syrians were fled, then fled they also before Abishai, and entered into the city. So Joab returned from the children of Ammon, and came to Jerusalem.

15 ¹And when the Syrians saw that they were smitten before Israel, they ¹gathered themselves together.

16 And ¹Hadarezer sent, and brought out the Syrians that were beyond ²the river; and they came to Helam: and ¹Shobach, the captain of the host of Hadarezer, went before them.

17 And when it was told David, ¹he gathered all Israel together, and passed over Jordan, and came to Helam: and the Syrians set themselves in array against David, and fought with him.

18 And the Syrians ¹fled before Israel; and David slew the men of seven hundred chariots of the Syrians, and forty thousand ²horsemen, and smote ³Shobach, the captain of their host, who died there.

19 And when all the kings that were ^bservants to Hadarezer saw that they were smitten before Israel, they made peace with Israel, and served them. So the Syrians ¹feared to help the children of Ammon any more.

CHAPTER XI.

1 Joab besiegeth Rabbah. 2 David committeth adultery with Bath-sheba. 6 Uriah is slain. 26 David taketh Bath-sheba to wife.

AND it came to pass, ¹after the year ^awas expired, at the time when kings go forth to battle, that ^bDavid sent Joab, and his servants with him, and all Israel; and they destroyed the children of Ammon, and besieged ^cRabbah: but David tarried still at Jerusalem.

2 ¹And it came to pass in an evening-tide, that David ^darose from off his bed, and walked upon ^ethe roof of the king's house: and from the roof ^fhe saw a woman washing herself; and the woman was ^gvery beautiful to look upon.

3 And David ^hsent and enquired after the woman. And one said, ⁱIs not this giving David credit for virtues which they knew themselves not to possess, and hence the pernicious counsel offered to Hanun, and the outrageous conduct to which it prompted him. One injury leads to another, the latter bringing along with it consequences which constitute the penalty of both. In the present war the Ammonites were the aggressors. The Syrians had no just quarrel against David. Their hostility was causeless, and the results of the war such as might be expected. The counsel of Joab in ver. 12 is excellent, forming an appropriate motto for the Church of God in all its struggles with surrounding darkness: "Be of good courage, and let us play the men for our people, and for the cities of our God; and the Lord do that which seemeth him good." There is a great principle contained in these words; it is for the faithful to use the right means in the right spirit and in the proper measure, and to leave the event to the Lord. For the former, they are responsible; for the latter, they are not. The highest form of Christianity is that which combines the largest measure of human means with complete dependance on the spirit of God. It is for each individual and all organisations to do their best, and leave the consequences to the Master. On the present occasion the results were tremendous—the slaughter of the men of 700 chariots and 40,000 horsemen, together with the commander-in-chief of the host! The political issues of this mighty battle were most important to Israel; all kings concerned in the matter made peace with them, and served them.

Chap. XI. 1-27. For the first time, the admirers of David have cause to hang their heads with shame, and to breathe a sigh of the deepest sorrow. It is not for edification to dwell on the steps of this mournful history; the lessons, however, are obvious, spoken in tones

4 And David ² sent messengers, and took her: and she came in unto him, and ¹ he lay with her: (for ⁴ she was ³ purified from her uncleanness;) and she returned unto her house.

5 ¶ And the woman conceived, and sent and told David, and said, ² "I am with child."

6 And David sent to Joab, saying, "Send me Uriah the Hittite. And Joab sent Uriah to David."

7 And when Uriah was come unto him, David demanded of him ² how Joab did, and how the people did, and how the war prospered.

8 And David said to Uriah, ² "Go down to thy house, and ³ wash thy feet. And Uriah departed out of the king's house, and ¹ there ⁶ followed him ⁵ a mess of meat from the king."

9 But ¹ Uriah slept at the door of the king's house with all the servants of his lord, and went not down to his house.

10 And when they had told David, saying, Uriah went not down unto his house, David said unto Uriah, Camest thou not from ³ thy journey? why ² then didst thou not go down unto thine house?

11 And Uriah said unto David, "The ark, and Israel, and Judah, abide in tents; and ² my lord Joab, and the servants of my lord, are encamped in the open fields: shall I then go into mine house, to eat and to drink, and to lie with my wife? ³ As thou livest, and as thy soul liveth, I will not do this thing."

12 And David said to Uriah, "Tarry here to-day also, and to-morrow I will let thee depart. So Uriah abode in Jerusalem that day and the morrow."

13 And when David had called him, he did eat and drink before him; and he ² made him drunk: and at even he went out to lie on his bed with the servants of his lord, but went not down to his house.

14 ¶ And it came to pass in the morning, that David ² wrote a letter to Joab, and sent it by the hand of Uriah.

15 And he wrote in the letter, saying, "Set ye Uriah in the fore-front of the ² hottest battle, and retire ye ³ from him, that he may be smitten, and die."

16 And it came to pass, when Joab observed the city, that he ² assigned Uriah unto a place where he knew that valiant men were.

17 And the men of the city went out and fought with Joab: and there fell some of the people of the servants of David; and Uriah the Hittite died also.

18 ¶ Then Joab sent and told David all the things concerning the war;

19 And charged the messenger, saying, When thou hast made an end of telling the matters of the war unto the king,

20 And if so be that the king's wrath arise, and he say unto thee, Wherefore approached ye so nigh unto the city when ye did fight? knew ye not that they would shoot from the wall?

21 Who smote Abimelech the son of 'Jerubbesheth? did not a woman cast a piece of a millstone upon him from the wall, that he died in Thebez? why went ye nigh the wall? then say thou, "Thy servant Uriah the Hittite is dead also."

22 ¶ So the messenger went, and came and shewed David all that Joab had sent him for.

23 And the messenger said unto David, Surely the men prevailed against us, and came out unto us into the field, and we were upon them even unto the entering of the gate.

24 And the shooters shot from off the wall upon thy servants; and some of the king's servants be dead, and thy servant Uriah the Hittite is dead also.

25 Then David said unto the messenger, Thus shalt thou say unto Joab, Let not this thing ² displease thee; ³ for the sword devoureth ¹ one as well as another: make thy battle more strong against the city, and overthrow it; and encourage thou him.

26 ¶ And when the wife of Uriah heard that Uriah her husband was dead, ² she mourned for her husband.

27 And when the mourning was past, David sent and fetched her to his house, and she became his wife, and bare him a son. ² But the thing that David had done ³ displeased the LORD.

CHAPTER XII.

1 Nathan's parable. 7 David confesseth his sin, and is pardoned. 24 Solomon is born. 26 Rabbah is taken.

AND ² the LORD sent Nathan ¹ unto David: and ³ he came unto him, and said unto him, ⁴ "There were two men in one city; the one rich, and the other poor."

2 The rich man had ² exceeding many flocks and herds;

3 But the poor man had nothing, save ¹ one little ewe-lamb, which he had bought, and nourished up; and it grew up together with him, and with his children: it did eat of his ¹ own meat, and drank of his own cup, and ² lay in his bosom, and was unto him as a daughter.

4 And there came ² a traveller unto the rich man; and he spared to take of his own flock, and of his own herd, to dress of thunder to all that know the Lord—"Let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall." No man is beyond the reach of temptation; and tempted, no man is safe without the supporting grace of the Spirit of God. In Old Testament times, David supplies the most impressive illustration; and in the New, the Apostle Peter. Of his sincerity it is impossible to doubt; but neither Peter nor his companions knew what was in his heart. It required the sifting of Satan to bring forth the denial of his Master with "oaths and curses." "Lord, what is man!" Let it be the prayer of every reader, "Hold thou me up, and I shall be safe."

Chap. XII. 1-14. The parable of Nathan is the per-for the way-faring man that was come unto him; but ¹took the poor man's lamb, and dressed it for the man that was come to him.

5 And ¹David's anger was greatly kindled against the man; and he said to Nathan, ¹As the LORD liveth, the man that hath done this thing ²shall surely die:

6 And he shall ^mrestore the lamb four-fold, because he did this thing, and ⁿbecause he had no pity.

7 ¶ And Nathan said to David, ^oThou art the man. Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, ^pI anointed thee king over Israel, and ^qI delivered thee out of the hand of Saul;

8 And I gave thee thy master's house, and thy ^rmaster's wives into thy bosom, and ^sgave thee the house of Israel and of Judah; and if that had been too little, ^tI would moreover have given unto thee such and such things.

9 Wherefore hast thou ^udespised the commandment of the LORD, ^vto do evil in his sight? ^wThou hast killed Uriah the Hittite with the sword, and hast taken his wife ^xto be thy wife, and hast slain him with the sword of the children of Ammon.

10 Now therefore ^ythe sword shall never depart from thine house; ^zbecause thou hast despised me, and ^{aa}hast taken the wife of Uriah the Hittite to be thy wife.

11 Thus saith the LORD, Behold, ^{ab}I will raise up evil against thee out of thine own house, and ^{ac}I will take thy wives before thine eyes, and give them unto thy neighbour, and he shall lie with thy wives in the sight of this sun.

12 For thou didst ^{ad}it ^{ae}secretly; but I will do this thing before all Israel, and before the sun.

13 And ^{af}David said unto Nathan, ^{ag}I have sinned against the LORD. And Nathan said unto David, ^{ah}The LORD also hath put away thy sin; ^{ai}thou shalt not die.

14 Howbeit, because ^{aj}by this deed thou hast given great occasion to the enemies of the LORD to blaspheme, ^{ak}the child also that is born unto thee shall surely die.

15 ¶ And Nathan departed unto his house: and the LORD ^{al}struck the child that Uriah's wife bare unto David, and it was very sick.

16 David therefore ^{am}besought God for the child; and David ^{an}fasted, and went in ^{ao}and ^{ap}lay all night upon the earth.

17 And ^{aq}the elders of his house arose, and went to him, to raise him up from the earth: but he would not, neither did he eat bread with them.

18 And it came to pass on the seventh day, that the child died. And the servants of David feared to tell him that the child was dead: for they said, Behold, while the child was yet alive, we spake unto him, and he would not hearken unto our voice; how will he then ^{av}vex himself, if we tell him that the child is dead?

19 But when David saw that his servants whispered, David perceived that the child was dead: therefore David said unto his servants, Is the child dead? And they said, He is dead.

20 Then David ^{aw}arose from the earth, and washed, and ^{ax}anointed himself, and changed his apparel, and came into ^{ay}the house of the LORD, and worshipped: then he came to his own house; and when he required, they set bread before him, and he did eat.

21 Then said his servants unto him, ^{az}What thing is this that thou hast done? Thou didst fast and weep for the child, while it was alive; but when the child was dead, thou didst rise and eat bread.

22 And he said, While the child was yet alive, ^{ba}I fasted and wept: for I said, Who can tell whether God will be gracious to me, that the child may live?

23 But now he is dead, wherefore should I fast? can I bring him back again? ^{bb}I shall go to him, but ^{bc}he shall not return to me.

24 ¶ And David comforted Bath-sheba his wife, and went in unto her, and lay with her; and ^{bd}she bare a son, and he called his name Solomon: and the LORD loved him.

25 And he sent by the hand of ^{be}Nathan the prophet; and he called his name ^{bf}Jedidiah, because of the LORD.

26 ¶ And ^{bg}Joab fought against Rabbah of the children of Ammon, and took the royal city.

27 And Joab sent messengers to David, and said, I have fought against ^{bh}Rabbah, and have taken the city of waters.

28 Now therefore gather the rest of the people together, and encamp against the city, and take it; lest I take the city, and ^{bi}it be ^{bj}called after my name.

29 And David gathered all the people together, and went to Rabbah, and fought against it, and took it.

30 And he ^{bk}took their king's crown from off his head, (the weight whereof was a talent of gold with the precious stones,) and it was ^{bl}set on David's head: and he brought forth the spoil of the city ^{bm}in great abundance.

fection of beauty. It has been the admiration of expositors in every age. In the first instance it appealed to David's judgment; and that point settled, the prophet immediately addressed it to his heart. This was a most solemn hour for the erring king, the most painful and humbling in his history. It was, nevertheless, a great redeeming feature—there was no denial of guilt, no attempt to defend his sin. He at once fell beneath the prophet's rebuke; and in so doing he took "hold on the strength" of God. The prophet instantly soothed his broken heart with the cheering words, "The Lord hath put away thy sin, therefore thou shalt not die." From ver. 14 it is clear that the conduct of David is severely canvassed by his enemies. They took occasion from his lamentable folly to pronounce his religion a deception, and his profession a falsehood! To a heart such as 31 And he brought forth the people that were therein, and put them under saws, and under harrows of iron, and under axes of iron, and made them pass through the brick-kiln: and thus did he unto all the cities of the children of Ammon. So David and all the people returned unto Jerusalem.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Amnon loving Tamar, ravisheth her. 15 He hateth her, and turneth her away. 23 Absalom killeth Amnon; 27 and feasteth.

AND it came to pass after this, that ^a Absalom the son of David had ^b a fair sister, whose name was Tamar; and Amnon the son of David loved her.

2 And Amnon was so vexed, that he fell sick for his sister Tamar; for she was a virgin; and Amnon thought it hard for him to do any thing to her.

3 But Amnon had a friend, whose name was Jonadab, the son of Shimeah, David's brother: and Jonadab was a very subtle man,

4 And he said unto him, Why art thou, being the king's son, lean from day to day? wilt thou not tell me? And Amnon said unto him, I love Tamar, my brother Absalom's sister.

5 And Jonadab said unto him, Lay thee down on thy bed, and make thyself sick; and when thy father cometh to see thee, say unto him, I pray thee, let my sister Tamar come and give me meat, and dress the meat in my sight, that I may see it, and eat it at her hand.

6 ¶ So Amnon lay down, and made himself sick: and when the king was come to see him, Amnon said unto the king, I pray thee, let Tamar my sister come and make me a couple of cakes in my sight, that I may eat at her hand.

7 Then David sent home to Tamar, saying, Go now to thy brother Amnon's house, and dress him meat.

8 So Tamar went to her brother Amnon's house; and he was laid down. And she took flour, and kneaded it, and made cakes in his sight, and did bake the cakes.

9 And she took a pan, and poured them out before him: but he refused to eat. And Amnon said, Have out all men from me. And they went out every man from him.

10 And Amnon said unto Tamar, Bring the meat into the chamber, that I may eat of thine hand. And Tamar took the cakes which she had made, and brought them into the chamber to Amnon her brother.

11 And when she had brought them unto him to eat, he took hold of her, and said unto her, Come lie with me, my sister.

12 And she answered him, Nay, my brother, do not force me; for no such thing ought to be done in Israel: do not thou this folly.

13 And I, whither shall I cause my shame to go? and as for thee, thou shalt be as one of the fools in Israel. Now therefore, I pray thee, speak unto the king; for he will not withhold me from thee.

14 Howbeit he would not hearken unto her voice; but, being stronger than she, forced her, and lay with her.

15 ¶ Then Amnon hated her exceedingly; so that the hatred wherewith he hated her was greater than the love wherewith he had loved her: and Amnon said unto her, Arise, be gone.

16 And she said unto him, There is no cause: this evil in sending me away is greater than the other that thou didst unto me. But he would not hearken unto her.

17 Then he called his servant that ministered unto him, and said, Put now this woman out from me, and bolt the door after her.

18 And she had a garment of divers colours upon her: for with such robes were the king's daughters that were virgins apparelled. Then his servant brought her out, and bolted the door after her.

19 ¶ And Tamar put ashes on her head, and rent her garment of divers colours that was on her, and laid her hand on her head, and went on crying.

20 And Absalom her brother said unto her, Hath Amnon thy brother been with thee? But hold now thy peace, my sister: he is thy brother; regard not this thing. So Tamar remained desolate in her brother Absalom's house.

21 ¶ But when king David heard of all these things, he was very wroth.

22 And Absalom spake unto his brother Amnon neither good nor bad: for Absalom hated Amnon, because he had forced his sister Tamar.

23 ¶ And it came to pass after two full years, that Absalom had sheep-shearers in Baal-hazor, which is beside Ephraim: and Absalom invited all the king's sons.

David's, this was a matter of the deepest sorrow; no personal affliction could so have grieved him as the dishonour of his Lord.

Chap. XIII. 1-39. While on all sides the arms of David had been triumphant, his throne completely established, and the heart of the nation filled with the spirit of affectionate loyalty, a new class of troubles hitherto unknown broke in upon him. His own awful transgression in the matter of Uriah, was speedily followed by events in his own house of the most heart-rending character. It is difficult to conceive of any occurrence by which the heart of the king could have been more afflicted, or his royal house more disgraced. One offence led to another. A crime of the deepest dye on the part of Amnon, was followed by a murder of the most revolting kind. As this matter comes down to us in the subdued accents of history, it may now be quickly read, and passed over; but at the time it must have agitated the mind of the whole nation, and not only so, but have become the talk of surrounding nations. To conceive aright of it, we have only to suppose a similar occurrence taking place in the Royal Family of England. In that event, the empire would stand aghast, and all Europe look on with amazement. In David's own house we have the most impressive illustrations of human de-

24 And Absalom came to the king, and said, Behold now, thy servant hath sheep-shearers; let the king, I beseech thee, and his servants, go with thy servant.

25 And the king said to Absalom, Nay, my son, let us not all now go, lest we be chargeable unto thee. And he pressed him: howbeit he would not go, but blessed him.

26 Then said Absalom, If not, I pray thee, let my brother Amnon go with us. And the king said unto him, Why should he go with thee?

27 But Absalom pressed him, that he let Amnon and all the king's sons go with him.

28 ¶ Now Absalom had commanded his servants, saying, Mark ye now when Amnon's heart is merry with wine, and when I say unto you, Smite Amnon; then kill him, fear not: have not I commanded you? be courageous, and be valiant.

29 And the servants of Absalom did unto Amnon as Absalom had commanded: then all the king's sons arose, and every man gat him up upon his mule, and fled.

30 ¶ And it came to pass, while they were in the way, that tidings came to David, saying, Absalom hath slain all the king's sons, and there is not one of them left.

31 Then the king arose, and tare his garments, and lay on the earth; and all his servants stood by with their clothes rent.

32 And Jonadab, the son of Shimeah, David's brother, answered and said, Let not my lord suppose that they have slain all the young men the king's sons; for Amnon only is dead: for by the appointment of Absalom this hath been determined from the day that he forced his sister Tamar.

33 Now therefore let not my lord the king take the thing to his heart, to think that all the king's sons are dead: for Amnon only is dead.

34 But Absalom fled. And the young man that kept the watch lifted up his eyes and looked, and, behold, there came much people by the way of the hill-side behind him.

35 And Jonadab said unto the king, Behold, the king's sons come: as thy servant said, so it is.

36 And it came to pass, as soon as he had made an end of speaking, that, behold, the king's sons came, and lifted up their voice and wept; and the king also and all his servants wept very sore.

37 ¶ But Absalom fled, and went to Talmai, the son of Ammihud, king of Geshur: and David mourned for his son every day.

38 So Absalom fled, and went to Geshur, and was there three years.

39 And the soul of king David longed to go forth unto Absalom: for he was comforted concerning Amnon, seeing he was dead.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 Joab suborning a widow of Tekoah to incline the king's heart to fetch home Absalom; 21 bringeth him to Jerusalem.

NOW Joab the son of Zeruiah perceived that the king's heart was toward Absalom.

2 And Joab sent to Tekoah, and fetched thence a wise woman, and said unto her, I pray thee, feign thyself to be a mourner, and put on now mourning apparel, and anoint not thyself with oil, but be as a woman that had a long time mourned for the dead;

3 And come to the king, and speak on this manner unto him. So Joab put the words in her mouth.

4 ¶ And when the woman of Tekoah spake to the king, she fell on her face to the ground, and did obeisance, and said, Help, O king!

5 And the king said unto her, What aileth thee? And she answered, I am indeed a widow woman, and mine husband is dead.

6 And thy handmaid had two sons, and they two strove together in the field, and there was none to part them, but the one smote the other, and slew him.

7 And, behold, the whole family is risen against thine handmaid, and they said, Deliver him that smote his brother, that we may kill him, for the life of his brother whom he slew; and we will destroy the heir also: and so they shall quench my coal which is left, and shall not leave to my husband neither name nor remainder upon the earth.

8 And the king said unto the woman, Go to thine house, and I will give charge concerning thee.

9 And the woman of Tekoah said unto the king, My lord, O king, the iniquity be on me, and on my father's house; and the king and his throne be guiltless.

pravity, sadly proving the truth of Scripture, that "neither circumcision availeth anything, nor uncircumcision, but a new creature!" Revenge is a fearful passion—a flame which nothing can quench but the blood of its victim! If Amnon was wicked, his brother Absalom was not more holy, as his own conduct, on a subsequent occasion, shewed. Companions, in the nature of things, are either a curse or a blessing. When a relationship intervenes, as in the case of Jonadab, who was cousin to Amnon, the power for mischief is increased. That wicked man, instead of remonstrating with Amnon, fanned the flame of his evil passion, and suggested the means of accomplishing his fell purpose. It is no marvel if Solomon, in his incomparable Book of Proverbs, dwelt so much on the subject of companionship. He spake from experience, as well as from observation.

Chap. XIV. 1-33. Joab, while the first of David's generals, was one of the most sagacious of men. Deeply conversant with the human heart, he penetrated that of his Royal Master, which he perceived was towards Absalom. He verified the adage, "Where there is a will, there is a way." Judging the softer sex the fittest for 19 And the king said, Is not the hand of Joab with thee in all this? And the woman answered and said, As thy soul liveth, my lord the king, none can ¹turn to the right hand or to the left from ought that my lord the king hath spoken: for thy servant Joab, he bade me, and ²he put all these words in the mouth of thine handmaid:

hath thy servant Joab done this thing: and my lord is wise, ¹according to the wisdom of an angel of God, ²to know all things that are in the earth.

21 ¶ And the king said unto Joab, Behold now, I have done this thing: go therefore, bring the young man Absalom again.

22 And Joab fell to the ground on his face, and bowed himself, and ¹thanked the king: and Joab said, To-day thy servant knoweth that ²I have found grace in thy sight, my lord, O king, in that the king hath fulfilled the request of ³his servant.

23 So Joab arose, and went to Geshur, and brought Absalom to Jerusalem.

24 And the king said, Let him turn to his own house, and ¹let him not see my face. So Absalom returned to his own house, and saw not the king's face.

25 ¶ ¹But in all Israel there was none to be so much praised as Absalom for his beauty: ²from the sole of his foot even to the crown of his head there was no blemish in him.

26 And ¹when he polled his head, (for it was at every year's end that he polled it: because the hair was heavy on him, therefore he polled it:) he weighed the hair of his head at ²two hundred shekels after the king's weight.

27 ¶ And unto Absalom there were ¹born three sons, and one daughter, whose name was Tamar: she was a woman of a fair countenance.

28 ¶ So Absalom dwelt two full years in Jerusalem, and saw not the king's face.

29 Therefore Absalom sent for Joab, to have sent him to the king; ¹but he would not come to him: and when he sent again the second time, he would not come.

30 Therefore he said unto his servants, See, Joab's field is near ²mine, and he hath barley there; go and set it on fire. ¶ And Absalom's servants set the field on fire.

31 Then Joab arose, and came to Absalom unto his house, and said unto him, Wherefore have thy servants set my field on fire?

32 And Absalom answered Joab, Behold, I sent unto thee, saying, Come hither, that I may send thee to the king, to say, Wherefore am I come from Geshur? ¹it had been good for me to have been there still: now therefore let me see the king's face; and ²if there be any iniquity in me, let him kill me.

the delicate enterprise he was about to engage in, he called for a "wise woman," and having duly prepared her, sent her to the king. She proved her wisdom by her admirable tact and discretion, and succeeded to the full extent of Joab's wishes. The effect was speedy and complete, and the conduct of Joab on the occasion was graceful as well as loyal. Little thought David, at this moment of parental commiseration, of the evils that were in store for him at the hand of Absalom! He nevertheless acted with discretion, not deeming it expedient that he should at once be restored to former confidence, and permitted to sojourn in the palace. The multitude are less alive to virtue than to beauty; and great talents are too frequently taken as a set off against great vices. As a model of physical excellence, Absalom was the idol of the nation. Ambitious and impatient, an exclusion of two years from the society of the king was intolerable, and he therefore resolved on the adoption of means to bring about an interview. The artifice was well devised, and proved successful. All the feelings of the father returned on the entrance of the evil-doer, and "the king kissed Absalom." We hear nothing of Absalom's repentance for the murder of Amnon; and as future events shew, he remained a hardened transgressor against God, without a spark of reverential affection for his afflicted father, who, in re-33 So Joab came to the king, and told him: and when he had called for Absalom, he came to the king, and bowed himself on his face to the ground before the king: and the king ¹kissed Absalom.

CHAPTER XV.

¹ Absalom stealeth the hearts of Israel. ¹⁰ He maketh a conspiracy. ¹³ David fleeth from Jerusalem.

AND it came to pass after this, that ¹Absalom prepared him chariots and horses, and fifty men to run before him.

2 And Absalom ^brose up early, and stood beside the way of the gate: and it was so, that when any man that had a controversy ¹came to the king for judgment, then Absalom called unto him, and said, Of what city art thou? And he said, Thy servant is of one of the tribes of Israel.

3 And Absalom said unto him, See, ^cthy matters are good and right; but ²there is no man deputed of the king to hear thee.

4 Absalom said moreover, ^dOh that I were made judge in the land, that every man which hath any suit or cause might come unto me, and ^eI would do him justice!

5 And it was so, that when any man came nigh to him to do him obeisance, he put forth his hand, and ^ftook him, and ^gkissed him.

6 And on this manner did Absalom to all Israel that came to the king for judgment. So Absalom ^hstole the hearts of the men of Israel.

7 ¶ And it came to pass after ⁱforty years, that Absalom said unto the king, I pray thee, ^jlet me go and ^kpay my vow, which I have vowed unto the LORD, in Hebron.

8 For ^lthy servant vowed a vow while I abode at ^mGeshur in Syria, saying, If the LORD shall bring me again indeed to Jerusalem, then ⁿI will serve the LORD.

9 And the king said unto him, Go in peace. So he arose, and went to Hebron.

10 ¶ But Absalom sent ^ospies throughout all the tribes of Israel, saying, As soon as ye hear the sound of the trumpet, then ye shall say, Absalom ^preigneth in ^qHebron.

11 And with Absalom went two hundred men out of Jerusalem, that were ^rcalled; and they went in ^stheir simplicity, and they knew not any thing.

the Gilonite, ^aDavid's counsellor, from his city, even from ^bGiloh, ^cwhile he offered sacrifices: and the conspiracy was strong; for ^dthe people increased continually with Absalom.

13 ¶ And there came a messenger to David, saying, ^eThe hearts of the men of Israel are after Absalom.

14 And David said unto all his servants that were with him at Jerusalem, ^fArise, and let us flee; for we shall not else escape from Absalom: make speed to depart, lest he overtake us suddenly, and ^gbring evil upon us, ^hand smite the city with the edge of the sword.

15 And the king's servants said unto the king, ⁱBehold, thy servants are ready to do whatsoever my lord the king shall ^jappoint.

16 And the king went forth, and all his household ^kafter him. And the king left ^lten women, which were concubines, to keep the house.

17 And the king ^mwent forth, and all the people after him, and tarried in a place that was far off.

18 And all his servants passed on beside him; and all the ⁿCherethites, and all the Pelethites, and all the ^oGittites, six hundred men which came after him from Gath, passed on before the king.

19 ¶ Then said the king to ^pIttai the Gittite, Wherefore goest thou also with us? return to thy place, and abide with the king; for thou art a stranger, and also an exile.

20 Whereas thou camest but yesterday, should I this day make thee ^qgo up and down with us? ^rseeing I go whither I may, return thou, and take back thy brethren: ^smercy and truth be with thee.

21 And Ittai answered the king, and said, ^tAs the LORD liveth, and as my lord the king liveth, ^usurely in what place my lord the king shall be, whether in death or life, even there also will thy servant be.

22 And David said to Ittai, Go and pass over. And Ittai the Gittite passed over, and all his men, and all the little ones that were with him.

23 And all the country wept with a loud voice, and all the people passed over: the king also himself passed over the brook ^vKidron, and all the people passed over, toward the way of the ^wwilderness.

24 ¶ And lo ^xZadok also, and all the ceiving his son, received a serpent which would forthwith prepare to sting him.

Chap. XV. 1-37. Absalom had now gained what he deemed the ^vantage ground, and he lost no time in occupying it for the impious purpose on which his heart was set. The whole of his deportment presents a finished specimen of an unprincipled traitor. Having had large experience of human nature, he knew the short way to the innermost recesses of the soul. He deals primarily with men whose affections he might seize through the medium of their temporal interests. Professing to identify himself with them in a manner the most generous and cordial, he first endeavours to excite dissatisfaction against the government and the established tribunals of justice, and then to insinuate that there was no hope for the land until he should be made Judge! His very heart seemed to burst with benevolence—"Oh that I were made judge in the land, that every man which had any suit or cause might come unto me, and I would do him justice!" No words were more calculated to inflame the public mind, and to create a general and intense feeling in his own favour. He became all things to all men, placing himself on a level with the lowest coming near to do him obeisance, and putting forth his hand, taking him, and kissing him. Thus did this deliberate deceiver to "all Israel that came for judgment," and "so he stole the hearts of the men of Israel." Such was the gratitude he shewed for his restoration to his native country, and to the favour of his father! The venerable Levites were with him, ^abearing the ark of the covenant of God: and they set down the ark of God; and Abiathar went up, until all the people had done passing out of the city.

25 And the king said unto Zadok, ^aCarry back the ark of God into the city: if I shall find favour in the eyes of the LORD, ^ahe will bring me again, and shew me both it and his habitation.

26 But if he thus say, I ^ahave no delight in thee; behold, here am I, ^alet him do to me as seemeth good unto him.

27 The king said also unto Zadok the priest, Art not thou ^aa seer? return into the city in peace, and your two sons with you, Ahimaaz thy son, and Jonathan the son of Abiathar.

28 See, I will tarry in the plain of the wilderness, until there come word from you to certify me.

29 Zadok therefore and Abiathar carried the ark of God again to Jerusalem; and they tarried there.

30 ¶ And David went up by ^athe ascent of mount Olivet, ^aand wept as he went up, and had his head covered; and he went barefoot: and all the people that was with him covered every man his head, and they went up, ^aweeping as they went up.

31 ¶ And one told David, saying, ^aAhithophel is among the conspirators with Absalom. And David said, ^aO LORD, I pray thee, ^aturn the counsel of Ahithophel into foolishness.

32 ¶ And it came to pass, that when David was come to ^athe top of the mount, where ^ahe worshipped God, behold, Hushai the ^aArchite came to meet him with his coat rent, and earth upon his head;

33 Unto whom David said, If thou passest on with me, then thou shalt be a burden unto me:

34 But if thou return to the city, and say unto Absalom, I will be thy servant, O king; as I have been thy father's servant hitherto, so will I now also be thy servant: then mayest thou for me defeat the counsel of Ahithophel.

35 And hast thou not there with thee Zadok and Abiathar the priests? therefore it shall be, that what thing soever thou shalt hear out of the king's house, ^athou shalt tell it to Zadok and Abiathar the priests.

36 Behold, they have there with them ^atheir two sons, Ahimaaz, Zadok's son, and Jonathan, Abiathar's son; and by them ye shall send unto me every thing that ye can hear.

37 So Hushai, David's ^afriend, came into the city, and Absalom came into Jerusalem.

CHAPTER XVI.

1 Ziba, by false suggestions, obtaineth his master's inheritance. 5 Shimei curseth David. 9 David abstaineth and restraineth others from revenge. 20 Ahithophel's counsel.

AND when David was a little past the top of the hill, behold, Ziba, the servant of Mephibosheth, met him, ^awith a couple of asses saddled, and upon them two hundred loaves of bread, and an hundred bunches of raisins, and an hundred of summer-fruits, and ^aa bottle of wine.

2 And the king said unto Ziba, ^aWhat meanest thou by these? And Ziba said, ^aThe asses be for the king's household to ride on; and the bread and summer-fruit ^afor the young men to eat; and the wine, ^athat such as be faint in the wilderness may drink.

3 And the king said, And where is thy master's son? And Ziba said unto the king, Behold, he abideth at Jerusalem: for he said, ^aTo-day shall the house of Israel restore me the kingdom of my father.

4 Then said the king to Ziba, Behold, thine are all that pertained unto Mephibosheth. And Ziba said, ^aI humbly beseech thee that I may find grace in thy sight, my lord, O king.

5 ¶ And when king David came to Bahurim, behold, thence came out a man of the family of the house of Saul, ^awhose name was Shimei, the son of Gera: ^ahe came forth, and ^acursed still as he came.

6 And he cast stones at David, and at all the servants of king David: and all the people and all the mighty men were on his right hand and on his left.

7 And thus said Shimei, when he cursed, Come out, come out, thou ^abloody man, and thou ^aman of Belial:

king knew not what was passing, but there was an Bar from which no sounds could be concealed, that was privy to the whole, and that overruled all for the chastisement of the transgressor. It was in harmony with these evil doings, that he, with lying lips, asked leave of absence, pretending that he went to perform a vow to his God in the event of his being restored to Jerusalem. The unsuspecting father, as if rejoicing in his piety, bade him "go in peace." He went, raised the standard of rebellion, and proclaimed himself king! A bad eminence is commanded by Ahithophel, who performed a most treacherous part. Amongst the wicked of mankind there are few characters whose chief acts, in point of enormity, may be compared with those of Ahithophel. The whole narrative ought to inspire us with self-loathing, seeing we are all by nature partakers of the common depravity whence such deeds spring.

Chap. XVI. 1-14. The position of the king, now about sixty years of age, was one of the deepest humiliation and the most pungent affliction. Of all the woes that pierced him, few perhaps gave more pain than the bitter words of Shimei, a descendant from the house of Saul, who "came forth and cursed" David, casting stones at him and at his servants. Assuredly, if the house of Saul had a friend on earth, that friend was David. Such displays of ingratitude in a small way are still occurring to benevolent men on a change of fortune. A cloud often reveals adversaries where none are seen in the midst of sunshine. David put a right construction on the matter, viewing it as a chastisement for his transgressions. David, as usual, looked up in the confidence that his heavenly Father would consider his affliction, and requite him good for the cursing of that day. David acted by Shimei as he had done by Saul, leaving him to be dealt with directly by God himself. Ver. 15-23. Hushai is the apparent, not the real type of a large class of men, hangers-on upon the great. Bent on saving his friend and sovereign, he affected to be one of that selfish class. He cared not for persons; his concern was with the king: whether David or David's son, his friend or his enemy, wore the crown, he would bow

8 The LORD hath ¹returned upon thee all the blood of the house of Saul, in whose stead thou hast reigned; and the LORD hath delivered the kingdom into the hand of Absalom thy son: and, ⁴behold, thou art taken in thy mischief, because thou art a bloody man.

9 ¶ Then said ^mAbishai, the son of Zeruiah, unto the king, Why should this dead dog ⁿcurse my lord the king? let me go over, I pray thee, and take off his head.

10 And the king said, ^oWhat have I to do with you, ye sons of Zeruiah? so let him curse, because ^pthe LORD hath said unto him, Curse David. ^qWho shall then say, Wherefore hast thou done so?

11 And David said to Abishai, and to all his servants, Behold, my son, which came forth of my bowels, seeketh my life: how much more now may this Benjamite do it? Let him alone, and let him curse; ^rfor the LORD hath bidden him.

12 It may be that ^sthe LORD will look on mine ^taffliction, and that the LORD will ^urequite me good for his cursing this day.

13 And as David and his men went by the way, Shimei went along on the hill's side over against him, and cursed as he went, and threw stones at him, and ^vcast dust.

14 And the king, and all the people that were with him, came weary, and refreshed themselves there.

15 ¶ And Absalom, and all the people, the men of Israel, came to Jerusalem, and Ahithophel with him.

16 And it came to pass, when Hushai the Archite, David's friend, was come unto Absalom, that Hushai said unto Absalom, ^wGod save the king, God save the king.

17 And Absalom said to Hushai, ^xIs this thy kindness to thy friend? ^ywhy wentest thou not with thy friend?

18 And Hushai said unto Absalom, Nay; but whom the LORD, and this people, and all the men of Israel, choose, his will I be, and with him will I abide.

19 And again, whom should I serve? ^zshould I not serve in the presence of his son? As I have served in thy father's presence, so will I be in thy presence.

20 ¶ Then said Absalom to Ahithophel, ^aGive counsel among you what we shall do.

21 And Ahithophel said unto Absalom, Go in ^bunto thy father's concubines, which he hath left to keep the house; and all Israel shall hear that thou art abhorred of thy father: then shall ^bthe hands of all that are with thee be strong.

22 So they spread Absalom a tent upon the top of the house; and Absalom went in unto his father's concubines in the sight of all Israel.

23 And the counsel of Ahithophel, which he counselled in those days, was ^cas if a man had enquired at the ^doracle of God: so was ^eall the counsel of Ahithophel, both with David and with Absalom.

CHAPTER XVII.

1 Ahithophel's counsel is overthrown by Hushai's, according to God's appointment. 15 Secret intelligence is sent to David. 23 Ahithophel hangeth himself.

MOREOVER, Ahithophel said unto Absalom, Let me now choose out twelve thousand men, and ^fI will arise and pursue after David ^gthis night:

2 And I will come upon him while he is ^hweary and weak-handed, and will make him afraid: and all the people that are with him shall flee; and ⁱI will smite the king only:

3 And ^jI will bring back all the people unto thee; the man whom thou seekest is as if all returned: so all the people ^kshall be in peace.

4 And ^lthe saying ^mpleased Absalom well, and all the elders of Israel.

5 Then said Absalom, Call now ⁿHushai the Archite also, and let us hear likewise what ^ohe saith.

6 And when Hushai was come to Absalom, Absalom spake unto him, saying, Ahithophel hath spoken after this manner: shall we do ^pafter his ^qsaying? if not, speak thou.

7 And Hushai said unto Absalom, The counsel that Ahithophel hath ^rgiven is ^s'not good at this time.

8 For, said Hushai, thou knowest thy father and his men, that they be ^t'mighty men, and they be ^u'chafed in their minds, as a bear robbed of her whelps in the field: and ^vthy father is a man of war, and will not lodge with the people.

the knee to the wearer, and turn his position to the best account. He says, "Whosoever is king, his will I be, and with him will I abide." Such is human nature! But Hushai was a man of another spirit, and only acted a part. The worst fears of David concerning Ahithophel were realised. The atrocious counsel he gave to Absalom was intended to confirm his throne, but it only secured his destruction. This most wicked man, whose mischievous sagacity had commanded for him the honourable designation, "the oracle of God," thought he had carried the point, and made a king; but he seems to have forgotten that he had the prayers of David to contend with. David knew the man, with his cunning and capacity for mischief, and hence he opposed to him the memorable supplication, "O Lord, I pray thee, turn the counsel of Ahithophel into foolishness." The prayer was heard, and, as we shall see in the next chapter, the infamous conspirator fell by his own hand.

Chap. XVII. 1-14. The time was now come to fulfil the prayer of David, and to turn into foolishness the counsel of Ahithophel. That counsel would have been most destructive to David and his people had it been carried out. Hushai, however, came to the rescue. The advice of the accomplished politician ran directly counter to the course recommended by Ahithophel. It was certainly not remarkable for its wisdom or feasibility. Some parts of it are ridiculous. In ver. 13, he proposes, on the supposition of David's getting into any particular city, that "all Israel shall bring ropes to that city, that they might draw it into the river, until there should not be one small stone found there." Hushai further glorified the personal prowess and the military genius of David, shewing that everything was to be feared from him, and that therefore there should be a levy of the whole nation till an army was raised "as the sand that is by the sea for multitude," while Absalom himself should go 9 Behold, ¹he is hid now in some pit, or in some other place: and it will come to pass, when ²some of them be ³overthrown at the first, that whosoever hear-eth it will say, There is a slaughter among the people that follow Absalom.

10 And he also that is valiant, whose ¹heart is as the heart of a lion, shall ²utterly melt: for all Israel knoweth that thy father is a mighty man, and they which be with him are valiant men.

11 Therefore I counsel, that ¹all Israel be generally gathered unto thee, from Dan even to Beer-sheba, ²as the sand that is by the sea for multitude; and that ³thou go to battle ⁴in thine own person.

12 So shall we come upon him ¹in some place where he shall be found, and ²we will light upon him as the dew falleth on the ground: and of him, and of all the men that are with him, there shall not be left so much as one.

13 Moreover, if he be gotten into a city, then shall all Israel bring ropes to that city, and we will draw it into the river, until there be not ¹one small stone found there.

14 And Absalom and all the men of Israel said, The counsel of Hushai the Archite is better than the counsel of Ahithophel: for ¹the LORD had ²appointed ³to defeat the ⁴good counsel of Ahithophel, to the intent that the LORD might bring evil upon Absalom.

15 ¶ Then said Hushai unto Zadok and to Abiathar the priests, Thus and thus did Ahithophel counsel Absalom and the elders of Israel; and thus and thus have I counselled.

16 Now therefore send quickly, and tell David, saying, Lodge now this night in the plains of the wilderness, ¹but speedily pass over; lest the king ²be swallowed up, and all the people that are with him.

17 Now Jonathan and Ahimaaz stayed by ¹En-rogel; (for they might not be seen to come into the city;) and a wench went and told them; and they went and told king David.

18 Nevertheless a lad saw them, and told Absalom: but they went both of them away quickly, and came to a man's house in Bahurim, which had a well in his court; whither they went down.

19 And the woman took and ¹spread a covering over the well's mouth, and spread ground corn thereon; and the thing was not known.

20 And when Absalom's servants came to the woman to the house, they said, Where is Ahimaaz and Jonathan? And the woman said unto them, ¹They be gone over the brook of water. And ²when they had sought and could not find them, they returned to Jerusalem.

21 And it came to pass, after they were departed, that they came up out of the well, and went and told king David, and said unto David, Arise, and pass quickly over the water: for ¹thus hath Ahithophel counselled against you.

22 Then David arose, and all the people that were with him, and they passed over Jordan: by the morning light ¹there lacked not one of them that was not gone over Jordan.

23 ¶ And when Ahithophel ¹saw that his counsel was not ²followed, he saddled his ass, and arose, and gat him home to his house, to ³his city, and ⁴put his household in order, and hanged himself, and died, and was buried in the sepulchre of his father.

24 Then David came to ¹Mahanaim: and Absalom passed over Jordan, he and all the men of Israel with him.

25 ¶ And Absalom made Amasa captain of the host instead of Joab: which Amasa was a man's son whose name was ¹Ithra, an Israelite, that went in to ²Abigail the daughter of ³Nahash, sister to Zeruiah, Joab's mother.

26 So Israel and Absalom pitched in the ¹land of Gilead.

27 ¶ And it came to pass, when David was come to Mahanaim, that Shobi, ¹the son of Nahash of Rabbah of the children of Ammon, and Machir, the son of Ammiel of Lo-debar, and ²Barzillai the Gileadite of Rogelim,

28 Brought beds, and ¹basons, and earthen vessels, and wheat, and barley, and flour, and parched corn, and beans, and lentiles, and parched pulse,

29 And honey, and butter, and sheep, and cheese of kine, ¹for David, and for the people that were with him, to eat: for they said, ²The people is hungry, and weary, and thirsty, in the wilderness.

CHAPTER XVIII.

1 David, viewing the armies, giveth them charge of Absalom. 9 Absalom is slain by Joab. 33 David lamenteth for him.

AND David ¹numbered the people that were with him, and set ²captains of thousands and captains of hundreds over them.

to battle in his own person. This counsel, however preposterous, commanded the entire concurrence of Absalom, and all the men of Israel. The mystery is explained by the fact, that "the Lord had appointed to defeat the good counsel of Ahithophel, to the intent that he might bring evil upon Absalom." Thus for once the "Oracle" was despised, and the dexterity of Hushai succeeded. Ver. 15-29. Hushai having carried his point, lost no time in apprising his friend David of what had occurred, and of the course which was proper to be pursued. Poor Ahithophel could not survive the disgrace of having his own judicious counsel rejected for the romantic suggestions of his rival Hushai, and accordingly, returning home, he put his house in order, and hanged himself. This fact shews, that the greatest men, without the grace of God, are but little. So much was he dependent on popular incense, that on its being withdrawn existence became intolerable! Death was preferable to life! It is probable, however, that guilt oppressed him quite as much as the mortification of his vanity. He was laden with iniquity. A rebel, a traitor, a promoter of incest, and of parricide, he was no longer fit to live, and as a monster of iniquity he passed sentence on himself, and became his own executioner.

Chap. XVIII. 1-17. Amidst the general rebellion, a

2 And David sent forth ^aa third part of the people under ^dthe hand of Joab, and a third part under the hand of Abishai, the son of Zeruiah, Joab's brother, and a third part under the hand of ^eIttai the Gittite. And the king said unto the people, ^f'I will surely go forth with you myself also.

3 But the people answered, ^g'Thou shalt not go forth: for ^hif we flee away, they will not ⁱcare for us; neither if half of us die, will they care for us: but now ^jthou art ^kworth ten thousand of us: therefore now ^lit is better that thou ^msuccour us out of the city.

4 And the king said unto them, What seemeth you best I will do. And the king stood ⁿby the gate-side, and all the people came out ^oby hundreds, and by thousands.

5 And the king commanded Joab, and Abishai, and Ittai, saying, ^p'Deal gently for my sake with the young man, ^qeven with Absalom. And ^rall the people heard when the king gave all the captains charge concerning Absalom.

6 ^s'So the people went out into the field against Israel: and the battle was in the ^twood of Ephraim;

7 Where ^uthe people of Israel were slain before the servants of David: and there was there ^va great slaughter that day of ^wtwenty thousand men.

8 For the battle was there scattered over the face of all the country: and ^xthe wood ^ydevoured more people that day than the sword devoured.

9 ^z'And Absalom met the servants of David. And Absalom rode upon a mule, and the mule went under the thick boughs of a great oak, and ^{aa}his head caught hold of the oak, and he was ^{ab}taken up between the heaven and the earth; and the mule that was under him went away.

10 And a certain man saw ^{ac}it, and told Joab, and said, Behold, I saw Absalom hanged in an oak.

11 And Joab said unto the man that told him, And, behold, thou sawest ^{ad}him, and why didst thou not smite him there to the ground? and I would have given thee ten ^{ae}shekels of silver, and a girdle.

12 And the man said unto Joab, Though I should ^{af}receive a thousand ^{ag}shekels of silver in mine hand, yet would I not put forth mine hand against the king's son: for ^{ah}'in our hearing the king charged thee, and Abishai, and Ittai, saying, ^{ai}'Beware that none ^{aj}touch the young man Absalom.

13 Otherwise I should have ^{ax}wrought falsehood against mine own life: for there is no matter hid from the king; and thou thyself wouldest have set thyself against me.

14 Then said Joab, I may not tarry thus ^{ay}with thee. And he took three darts in his hand, and ^{az}thrust them through the heart of Absalom, while he ^{ba}was yet alive in the ^{bb}midst of the oak.

15 And ten young men that bare Joab's armour compassed about and smote Absalom, and slew him.

16 And Joab blew the trumpet, and the people returned from pursuing after Israel: for Joab held back the people.

17 And they took Absalom, and cast him into a great pit in the wood, and laid a very great heap of stones upon him: and all Israel fled every one to his tent.

18 ^{bc}'Now Absalom in his life-time had taken and ^{bd}reared up for himself a pillar, which is in ^{be}the king's dale: for he said, ^{bf}I have no son to keep my name in remembrance; and ^{bg}he called the pillar after his own name: and it is called unto this day, Absalom's Place.

19 ^{bh}'Then said Ahimaaz the son of Zadok, Let me now run and bear the king tidings, how that the LORD hath ^{bi}avenged him of his enemies.

20 And Joab said unto him, Thou shalt not ^{bj}bear tidings this day, but thou shalt bear tidings another day; but this day thou shalt bear no tidings, because the king's son is dead.

21 Then said Joab to Cushie, Go tell the king what thou hast seen. And Cushie bowed himself unto Joab, and ran.

22 Then said Ahimaaz, the son of Zadok, yet again to Joab, But ^{bk}howsoever, let me, I pray thee, also run after Cushie. And Joab said, Wherefore wilt thou run, my son, seeing that thou hast no tidings ^{bl}ready?

23 But howsoever, said he, let me run. And he said unto him, Run. Then Ahimaaz ran by the way of the plain, and over-ran Cushie.

24 And David sat between the two gates: and ^{bm}the watchman went up to the roof over the gate unto the wall, and lifted up his eyes, and looked, and behold a man running alone.

25 And the watchman cried, and told the king. And the king said, If he be alone, ^{bn}there is tidings in his mouth. And he came apace, and drew near.

26 And the watchman saw another man multitude still adhered to David, and among them Joab and Abishai, each a host in himself, during so terrible an emergency. The bravery of David would have led him at once to the battle-field, but the officers and army nobly insisted on his keeping apart, from the great importance they attached to his life. Here again, in ver. 5, the king is lost in the father; he actually besought his commanders to "deal gently with Absalom"—to spare the traitor and the parricide! The rebels paid dearly for their unfaithfulness. The penalty was 20,000 dead men, to whom was added their rebellious master, whom it was the lot of Joab to slay as he hung in the oak. There the traitorous and rebellious son is pierced through the heart with three darts,—an awful close of an infamous career. Ver. 18-33. The death of Absalom was the end of the war. His sins had found him out, and all his abettors were covered with confusion. This was a trying moment for David. The intelligence of Absalom's death must be carried to him; but how was he to receive it? David was the subject of bewildering infatuation with respect to that unhappy man. This was evidenced by his first question, which regarded not the events of the day, the loss or the gain of the battle to himself and his people, but the fate of his rebel son. "Is running: and the watchman called unto the porter, and said, Behold another man running alone. And the king said, He also bringeth tidings.

27 And the watchman said, 'Me thinketh the running of the foremost is like the running of Ahimaaz, the son of Zadok. And the king said, 'He is a good man, and cometh with good tidings.

28 And Ahimaaz called, and said unto the king, 'All is well. And he fell down to the earth upon his face before the king, and said, 'Blessed be the LORD thy God, which hath delivered up the men that lifted up their hand against my lord the king.

29 And the king said, 'Is the young man Absalom safe? And Ahimaaz answered, When Joab sent the king's servant, and me thy servant, I saw a great tumult, but I knew not what it was.

30 And the king said unto him, Turn aside, and stand here. And he turned aside, and stood still.

31 And, behold, Cushai came; and Cushai said, 'Tidings, my lord the king: for the LORD hath avenged thee this day of all them that rose up against thee.

32 And the king said unto Cushai, 'Is the young man Absalom safe? And Cushai answered, 'The enemies of my lord the king, and all that rise against thee to do thee hurt, be as that young man is.

33 ¶ And the king was much moved, and went up to the chamber over the gate, and wept; and as he went, thus he said, O my son Absalom! my son, my son Absalom! Would God I had died for thee, O Absalom, my son, my son!

son Absalom! O Absalom, my son, my son!

5 And Joab came into the house to the king, and said, Thou hast shamed this day the faces of all thy servants, which this day have saved thy life, and the lives of thy sons and of thy daughters, and the lives of thy wives, and the lives of thy concubines;

6 ¶ In that thou lovest thine enemies, and hatest thy friends: for thou hast declared this day, that thou regardest neither princes nor servants; for this day I perceive, that if Absalom had lived, and all we had died this day, then it had pleased thee well.

7 Now therefore arise, go forth, and speak comfortably unto thy servants: for I swear by the LORD, if thou go not forth, there will not tarry one with thee this night; and that will be worse unto thee than all the evil that befell thee from thy youth until now.

8 Then the king arose, and sat in the gate. And they told unto all the people, saying, Behold, the king doth sit in the gate. And all the people came before the king; for Israel had fled, every man to his tent.

9 ¶ And all the people were at strife throughout all the tribes of Israel, saying, The king saved us out of the hand of our enemies, and he delivered us out of the hand of the Philistines; and now he is fled out of the land for Absalom.

10 And Absalom, whom we anointed over us, is dead in battle: now therefore why speak ye not a word of bringing the king back?

11 ¶ And king David sent to Zadok and to Abiathar the priests, saying, Speak unto the elders of Judah, saying, Why are ye the last to bring the king back to his house? seeing the speech of all Israel is come to the king, even to his house.

12 Ye are my brethren, ye are my bones and my flesh: wherefore then are ye the last to bring back the king?

13 And say ye to Amasa, Art thou not of my bone, and of my flesh? God do so to me, and more also, if thou be not captain of the host before me continually in the room of Joab.

14 And he bowed the heart of all the

the young man Absalom safe?" On the arrival of the second messenger, still the same question was put to him; and through him David received the truth, which overwhelmed him with unutterable affliction, drawing from the depth of his heart the memorable exclamation, "O my son Absalom! my son, my son Absalom! would God I had died for thee, O Absalom, my son, my son!" What lamentation this over the first of traitors, and the worst of sons!

Chap. XIX. 1-28. The conduct of David on the present occasion, however natural to the father, was not politic in the king. It amounted almost to a reproach of those who had saved both David's life and David's kingdom, at the hazard to themselves of life and all that was dear. His faithful general, Joab, spoke his mind freely, though somewhat uncourtously, and in doing so gave expression to the public feeling. The deportment of David was that doubtless of a man "who loved his enemies, and hated his friends." According to appearances, as Joab told him, "If Absalom had lived, and all they had died, then it would have pleased him well." The tendency of such conduct was to exasperate the public feeling, and even to generate fresh insurrections. David, who was ever prepared to receive judicious correction, at once acted upon the suggestion of Joab, and made his appearance in the gate. The completeness of the overthrow of the rebels, with the great carnage attending it, and the death of Absalom, operated beneficially on the minds of those who had disloyally sympathised with them, and hence they were prepared to entertain the question of submission. Here again his wicked tormentor Shimei turned up, hastening with the men of Judah to meet David. Shimei seeing how the men of Judah, ^aeven as the heart of one man; so that they sent this word unto the king, Return thou, and all thy servants.

15 So the king returned, and came to Jordan. And Judah came to ^bGilgal, to go to meet the king, to conduct the king over Jordan.

16 ¶ And ^cShimei, the son of Gera, a Benjaminite, which was of Bahurim, ^dhasted, and came down with the men of Judah to meet king David.

17 And there were a thousand men of Benjamin with him, and ^eZiba, the servant of the house of Saul, and his fifteen sons and his twenty servants with him; and they went over Jordan before the king.

18 And there went over a ferry-boat to carry over the king's household, and to do ^fwhat he thought good. And Shimei the son of Gera ^g'fell down before the king, as he was come over Jordan;

19 And ^hsaid unto the king, ⁱLet not my lord impute iniquity unto me, neither do thou ^j'remember that which thy servant ^k'did perversely the day that my lord the king went out of Jerusalem, that the king should ^l'take it to his heart.

20 For thy servant doth know that I have sinned; therefore, behold, ^mI am come the first this day of all the house of ⁿJoseph to go down to meet my lord the king.

21 But Abishai the son of Zeruiah answered and said, ^oShall not Shimei be put to death for this, because he ^p'cursed the LORD's anointed?

22 And David said, ^qWhat have I to do with you, ye sons of Zeruiah, that ye should this day be adversaries unto me? ^rShall there any man be put to death this day in Israel? for do not I know that I am this day king over Israel?

23 Therefore the king said unto Shimei, ^sThou shalt not die: and the king ^t'swore unto him.

24 ¶ And ^uMephibosheth the son of Saul came down to meet the king, and had neither ^v'dressed his feet, nor trimmed his beard, nor washed his clothes, from the day the king departed until the day he came again in peace.

25 And it came to pass, when he was come to Jerusalem to meet the king, that the king said unto him, ^wWherefore wearest not thou with me, Mephibosheth?

26 And he answered, My lord, O king, my servant deceived me: for thy servant said, ^xI will saddle me an ass, that I may ride thereon, and go to the king; because ^y'thy servant is lame.

31 ¶ And ^kBarzillai the Gileadite came down from Rogelim, and went over Jordan with the king, to conduct him over Jordan.

33 And the king said unto Barzillai, ^o'Come thou over with me, and I will feed thee with me in Jerusalem.

34 And Barzillai said unto the king, ^p'How long have I to live, that I should go up with the king unto Jerusalem?

35 I am this day fourscore years old; and ^q'can I discern between good and evil? can thy servant ^r'taste what I eat or what I drink? can I hear any more the voice of singing-men and singing-women? wherefore then should thy servant be yet a burden unto my lord the king?

36 Thy servant will go a little way over Jordan with the king: and why should the king recompense it me with such a reward?

37 Let thy servant, I pray thee, turn back again, that I may die in mine own city, and be buried ^s'by the grave of my father and of my mother: but behold thy servant ^t'Chimham; let him go over with my lord the king; and do to him what shall seem good unto thee.

38 And the king answered, Chimham shall go over with me, and I will do to him that which shall seem good unto thee: and whatsoever thou shalt ^u'require of me, that will I do for thee.

39 And all the people went over Jordan. And when the king was come over, the king kissed Barzillai, and ^v'blessed him; and he returned unto his own place.

tide ran, changed his course, and became a suppliant for his life, remembering the conduct of which he had been guilty. There is something in this man's deportment, after all, that is commendable. He confesses his sin, and was "the first that day of all the house of David to go down to meet his lord the king." Abishai would have put Shimei to death, but for David, who would not suffer blood to blend with their rejoicing. David, however, could not be said to have pardoned the criminal; he only granted him a respite, leaving it in charge to Solomon, in due season to inflict the sentence due to his transgressions. Ver. 24-43. Among the faithful an important place is due to Mephibosheth, who intensely sympathised with his sovereign in his unparalleled afflictions. Barzillai, too, performed a lovely part, greatly adding to the interest of the occasion. These events were a touchstone to the character of the nation. It reflects but little credit on the country that such multitudes could have been found to place themselves under the standard of a rebellion led by the king's son; and a son so notorious for his depravity. It is extremes that try both men and nations. There are few indivi-

40 Then the king went on to Gilgal, and ¹Chimham went on with him: and all ²the people of Judah conducted the king, and also half the people of Israel.

41 ¶ And, behold, all the men of Israel came to the king, and said unto the king, ³Why have our brethren the men of Judah stolen thee away, and have brought the king and his household, and all David's men with him, over Jordan?

42 And all the men of Judah answered the men of Israel, ⁴Because the king is near of kin to us: wherefore then be ye angry for this matter? have we eaten at all of the king's cost? or hath he given us any gift?

43 And the men of Israel answered the men of Judah, and said, We have ⁵ten parts in the king, and we have also more ⁶right in David than ye: why then did ye ⁷despise us, that ⁸our advice should not be first had in bringing back our king? And the words of the men of Judah were fiercer than the words of the men of Israel.

² So ³every man of Israel went up from after David, and followed Sheba the son of Bichri: but ⁴the men of Judah clave unto their king, from Jordan even to Jerusalem.

⁴ ¶ Then said the king to Amasa, ⁹Assemble me the men of Judah within three days, and be thou here present.

⁵ So Amasa went to assemble the men of Judah: but he tarried longer than the set time which he had appointed him.

doals, how much soever they may seem to be loved, admired, and honoured in their own circles, who, on a change of circumstances, might not make discoveries which would startle them. It may be doubted if, at this moment, there be a sovereign in the world whose kingdom, with proper leaders and adequate occasion, would not supply an army to subvert his throne. The hollowness, the selfishness, and the depravity of man receive a very striking exemplification from such narratives as that before us, with which there is much in profane history that strikingly corresponds.

Chap. XX. 1-15. It is part of one of David's affecting prayers, that the "Lord would remember him in all his afflictions." The expression is illustrative of his chequered history. He was no sooner out of one trouble than he was overtaken by another. This "man of Belial," Sheba, hastens to foment a fresh rebellion, from a conviction that he had material to work upon. The false step in the appointment of Amasa excited the jealousy of Joab, which led to his cruel assassination. Ver. 18-26. "Wise women" performed a considerable part in Old Testament history. In the present instance 19 I am one of them that are peaceable and faithful in Israel: thou seekest to destroy a city and a mother in Israel; why wilt thou swallow up the inheritance of the LORD?

20 And Joab answered and said, Far be it, far be it from me, that I should swallow up or destroy.

21 The matter is not so: but a man of mount Ephraim, (Sheba the son of Bichri ¹ by name,) hath lifted up his hand against the king, even against David: deliver him only, and I will depart from the city. And the woman said unto Joab, Behold, his head shall be thrown to thee over the wall.

22 Then the woman went unto all the people ² in her wisdom: and they cut off the head of Sheba the son of Bichri, and cast it out to Joab: and he blew a trumpet, and they ² retired from the city, every man to his tent. ² And Joab returned to Jerusalem unto the king.

23 ¶ Now Joab was over all the host of Israel: and Benaiah the son of Jehoiada was over the Cherethites, and over the Pelethites;

24 And ² Adoram was over the tribute; and Jehoshaphat the son of Ahilud was ² recorder;

3 Wherefore David said unto the Gibeonites, What shall I do for you? and ² wherewith shall I make the atonement, that ye may bless the inheritance of the LORD?

4 And the Gibeonites said unto him, ² We will have no silver nor gold of Saul, nor of his house; neither for us shalt thou kill any man in Israel. And he said, What ye shall say, that will I do for you.

5 And they answered the king, ² The man that consumed us, and that ² devised against us, that we should be destroyed from remaining in any of the coasts of Israel,

6 Let seven men of his sons be delivered unto us, and we will ² hang them up unto the LORD ¹ in Gibeah of Saul, ⁴ whom the LORD did choose. And the king said, I will give them.

7 But the king spared Mephibosheth, the son of Jonathan, the son of Saul, ² because of the LORD's oath that was between them, between David and Jonathan the son of Saul.

8 But the king took the two sons of Rizpah the daughter of Aiah, whom she bare unto Saul, Armoni and Mephibosheth; and the five sons of ² Michal the daughter of Saul, whom she ² brought up for Adriel the son of Barzillai the Meholathite:

9 And he delivered them into the hands of the Gibeonites, and they hanged them in the hill ¹ before the LORD; and they fell all seven together, and were put to death in the days of harvest, in the first days, ² in the beginning of barley-harvest.

10 ¶ And Rizpah the daughter of Aiah ² took sackcloth, and spread it for her upon the rock, from the beginning of harvest ² until water dropped upon them out of heaven, and suffered neither the birds of the air to rest on them by day, nor the beasts of the field by night.

11 And it was ² told David what Rizpah the daughter of Aiah, the concubine of Saul, had done.

12 ¶ And David went and took the bones of Saul, and the bones of Jonathan his son, from the men of Jabesh-gilead, which had stolen them from the street of ² Beth-shan, where the Philistines had hanged them, when the Philistines had slain Saul in Gilboa:

13 And he brought up from thence the bones of Saul, and the bones of Jonathan his son; and they gathered the bones of them that were hanged.

an extraordinary example is supplied. This woman, by her dexterity, and her reasonable appeal to Joab, prevented the further effusion of human blood, at the same time putting an end to the course of the rebel Sheba. Blessed as are they who prevent strifes between individuals or nations; more blessed still are those who ally them when they have unhappily broken out. Had this man been allowed to proceed, the result would probably once more have been a Civil War. Sheba was permitted, doubtless for the purpose of instructing David as to the precariousness of the tenure of his throne, and his constant dependence on the arm of the Most High, to act as he did; and when his mission was accomplished, he was cut off.

well as all blessing, with the hand of God, inquired into the cause of the famine, and on ascertaining it, he adopted the necessary means for its removal. We have here a striking instance of remembrance of transgression, long after its commission. Sin must either be pardoned or punished; but where there is no repentance there can be no pardon, and by consequence the penalty must be paid. The case of Saul's sons is very mournful, shewing how the iniquity of fathers may descend to their children, bringing upon them the chastisement which was due to the original transgressor. Ver. 15-22. Nothing could keep the Philistines quiet. David, with his characteristic valour, unwisely exposed himself, and owed his life to the fidelity of Abishai. The result was, a decision to prevent his going any more in person to war. The spirit was still willing, but the flesh was 14 And the bones of Saul and Jonathan his son buried they in the country of Benjamin in ¹Zelah, in the sepulchre of Kish his father: and they performed all that the king commanded: and after that ²God was entreated for the land.

15 ³Moreover, the Philistines had yet war again with Israel; and David went down, and his servants with him, and fought against the Philistines: and David waxed faint.

16 And Ishbi-benob, which was ⁴of the sons of ⁵the giant, (the weight of ⁶whose spear weighed three hundred shekels of brass in weight,) he, being girded with a new sword, ⁷thought to have slain David.

17 But ⁸Abishai the son of Zeruiah succoured him, and smote the Philistine, and killed him. Then the men of David swore unto him, saying, Thou shalt go no more out with us to battle, that thou ⁹quench not the ¹⁰light of Israel.

18 And it came to pass after this, that there was again a battle with the Philistines at Gob: then ¹¹Sibbechai the Hushathite slew ¹²Saph, which was of the sons of ¹³the giant.

19 And there was again a battle in Gob with the Philistines, where ¹⁴Elhanan the son of ¹⁵Jaare-oregim, a Beth-lehemite, slew the brother of ¹⁶Goliath the Gittite, the staff of whose spear was like a weaver's beam.

20 And there was ¹⁷yet a battle in Gath, where was a man of great stature, that had on every hand six fingers, and on every foot six toes, four and twenty in number; and he also was born to ¹⁸the giant.

21 And when he ¹⁹defied Israel, ²⁰Jonathan the son of ²¹Shimeah, the brother of David, slew him.

22 These four were born to the giant in Gath, and fell by the hand of David, and by the hand of his servants.

CHAPTER XXII.

A psalm of thanksgiving for God's powerful deliverance, and manifold blessings.

AND David spake unto the LORD the words of this song in the day that the LORD had delivered him out of the hand of all his enemies, and out of the hand of Saul:

to be praised: so shall I be saved from mine enemies.

5 When the ¹waves of death compassed me, the floods of ²ungodly men made me afraid;

6 The ³sorrows of hell compassed me about; the snares of death prevented me.

7 In ⁴my distress I called upon the LORD, and cried to my God; and he did hear my voice out of his temple, and ⁵my cry did enter into his ears.

8 Then ⁶the earth shook and trembled; the foundations of heaven moved and shook, because he was wroth.

9 There ⁷went up a smoke ⁸out of his nostrils, and fire out of his mouth devoured: coals were kindled by it.

10 He bowed the heavens also, and came down; and ⁹darkness was under his feet.

11 And he rode upon ¹⁰a cherub, and did fly; and he was seen upon the wings of the wind.

12 And he made darkness pavilions round about him, ¹¹dark waters, and thick clouds of the skies.

13 Through the brightness before him were coals of fire kindled.

14 The LORD ¹²thundered from heaven, and the most High uttered his voice.

15 And he sent out arrows, and scattered them; lightning, and discomfited them.

16 And the channels of the sea appeared, the foundations of the world were discovered, at the ¹³rebuking of the LORD, at the blast of the breath of his ¹⁴nostrils.

17 He sent from above, he took me; ¹⁵he drew me out of ¹⁶many waters:

18 He delivered me from my strong enemy, and from them that hated me: for they were too strong for me.

19 They prevented me in the day of my calamity; but the LORD was my stay.

20 He ¹⁷brought me forth also into a large place; he delivered me, because he ¹⁸delighted in me.

21 The LORD ¹⁹rewarded me according to my righteousness; according to the cleanness of my hands hath he recompensed me.

22 For I have kept ²⁰the ways of the LORD, and have not wickedly departed from my God.

23 For ²¹all his judgments were before me; and as for his statutes, I did not depart from them.

24 I was also ²²upright ²³before him, and have kept myself from mine iniquity.

25 Therefore the LORD hath recompensed me according to my righteousness; according to my cleanness ²⁴in his eyesight.

weak. David was now approaching threescore years and ten, and his bodily strength had become much abated. In this, as in all things, his person and history supply instruction. The youthful should remember that they will one day be old; the strong, that they will be weak; and both, that it behoves them to lay themselves out, with all their might, for the advancement of the glory of God, that they may accomplish the object for which they have been sent into the world.

Chap. XXII. 1-51. This beautiful Psalm meetly celebrates the goodness of the Lord to his people, by delivering them from danger, and surrounding them with comfort and blessings. Hard times had been passing over Israel; the conjunction of rebellion, with three years of famine, and the wars of the Philistines, was sufficient to shake the kingdom to its centre. God, however, was faithful to his promises to David, preserving himself, and subduing his enemies, both at home and

CHAPTER XXIII.

1 David professeth his faith in God's promises. 8 A catalogue of his mighty men.

NOW these be "the last words of David.

David the son of Jesse said, and the man who was raised up on high, "the anointed of the God of Jacob, and the "sweet psalmist of Israel, said,

2 The "Spirit of the LORD spake by me, and his word was in my tongue.

3 The God of Israel said, "the Rock of Israel spake to me, "He that ruleth over men "must be just, "ruling in the fear of God.

4 And he shall be "as the light of the morning when the sun riseth, even a morning without clouds; as "the tender grass springing out of the earth by clear shining after rain.

5 Although my house be not so with God; yet "he hath made with me an everlasting covenant, ordered in all things, and all sure: for this is "all my salvation, and all my desire, although he make "it not to "grow.

6 But the sons of Belial shall be all of them as thorns thrust away, because they cannot be taken with hands:

7 But the man that shall touch them must be "fenced with iron, and the staff of a spear; and they shall be utterly burned with fire in the same place.

8 ¶ These be the names of the mighty men whom David had: "The Tachmonite that sat in the seat, chief among the cap-abroad. It has been supposed that David wrote this psalm originally, at an early period of his life, on one of the occasions of his deliverance from the hand of Saul; and that he now reproduces it to celebrate his more recent mercies. These circumstances may serve, in some degree, to account for the difference between the parallel passages in this chapter, and the 18th Psalm. David's mind was filled with an exalted sense of the Lord's goodness to his people; he is a "rock," a "fortress," a "deliverer," a "refuge," a "saviour." Language seems to fail in enabling him adequately to express his emotions of gratitude and love. But if David thus spoke, what ought to be the language of Christians for whom God manifest in the flesh has laid down his life, to open up a new and a living way for mankind to return to their Father in heaven!

Chap. XXIII. 1-39. Of the multitude of things which dropped occasionally from the lips of David, by far the most remarkable are his "last words," in which he so nobly expresses his confidence in the Divine Promise concerning the coming glory of Israel. He deliberately asserts his own inspiration,—an expression extending to all his Psalms, and every thing recorded of him in the sacred page. How beautiful his notion of a king! "He that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God." Under the oppressive conviction that his house was not as it ought to be with God, he was comforted by the remembrance, that "an everlasting covenant had been made with him, ordered in all things, and sure." That was all his consolation, and all his desire. David, on this occasion, clearly looked forward to the coming of the Messiah; and the thought appears to have tains; the same was Adino the Eznite: he lift up his spear against eight hundred, whom he slew at one time.

9 And after him was Eleazar the son of Dodo the Ahohite, one of the three mighty men with David, when they defied the Philistines that were there gathered together to battle, and the men of Israel were gone away:

10 He arose, and smote the Philistines, until his hand was weary, and his hand clave unto the sword: and the LORD wrought a great victory that day; and the people returned after him only to spoil.

11 And after him was Shammah the son of Agee the Hararite: and the Philistines were gathered together into a troop, where was a piece of ground full of lentiles; and the people fled from the Philistines.

12 But he stood in the midst of the ground, and defended it, and slew the Philistines: and the LORD wrought a great victory.

13 And three of the thirty chief went down, and came to David in the harvest-time unto the cave of Adullam: and the troop of the Philistines pitched in the valley of Rephaim.

14 And David was then in an hold, and the garrison of the Philistines was then in Beth-lehem.

15 And David longed, and said, Oh that one would give me drink of the water of the well of Beth-lehem, which is by the gate!

16 And the three mighty men brake through the host of the Philistines, and drew water out of the well of Beth-lehem, that was by the gate, and took it, and brought it to David: nevertheless he would not drink thereof, but poured it out unto the LORD;

17 And he said, Be it far from me, O LORD, that I should do this: is not this the blood of the men that went in jeopardy of their lives? therefore he would not drink it. These things did these three mighty men.

18 And Abishai the brother of Joab, the son of Zeruiah, was chief among three: and he lifted up his spear against three hundred, and slew them, and had the name among three.

19 Was he not most honourable of three? therefore he was their captain: howbeit he attained not unto the first three.

20 And Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, the son of a valiant man, of Kabzeel, who had done many acts, he slew two 22 These things did Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, and had the name among three mighty men.

CHAPTER XXIV.

1 David numbereth the people. 10 He, having three plagues propounded by God, repenteth, and chooseth three days' pestilence. 17 His intercession to God.

AND again the anger of the LORD was kindled against Israel, and he moved David against them to say, Go, number Israel and Judah.

2 For the king said to Joab the captain of the host, which was with him, Go now through all the tribes of Israel, from gladdened his spirit, and renewed his age. But if it was a privilege for him merely to look forward to the great work which was to be performed, how much greater is our privilege of looking back to what has been done! David himself was the most heroic of men; and it was his lot, beyond any of his successors, to be served by men of a kindred spirit. But what was David's heroism compared with that of David's Lord! What the heroism of David's Captains compared with that of Christ's Apostles!

Chap. XXIV. 1-14. It is a very remarkable circumstance that David should have issued orders to number Israel at this period of his life. The deed might have been gone about for mere statistical purposes, innocently; but it might also be done on the principle of confidence in mere numbers, setting aside the interposition of the living God. If the latter were the motive from which David acted, it harmonised but ill with his own boundless experience of God's goodness in giving him the victory, whether with many Dan even to Beer-sheba, and number ye the people, that I may know the number of the people.

3 And Joab said unto the king, "Now the LORD thy God add unto the people, how many soever they be, an hundred-fold, and that the eyes of my lord the king may see it: but why doth my lord the king delight in this thing?"

4 Notwithstanding ^hthe king's word prevailed against Joab, and against the captains of the host: and Joab and the captains of the host went out from the presence of the king to number the people of Israel.

5 ¶ And they passed over Jordan, and pitched in ^kAroer, on the right side of the city that lieth in the midst of the ^rriver of Gad, and toward ^lJazer.

6 Then they came to ^mGilead, and to the ^lland of Tahtim-hodshi; and they came to ⁿDan-jaan, and about to ^oZidon,

7 And came to the strong hold of ^pTyre, and to all the cities of the Hivites, and of the Canaanites: and they went out to the south of Judah, even ^qto Beer-sheba.

8 So when they had gone through all the land, they came to Jerusalem at the end of nine months and twenty days.

9 And Joab gave up the sum of the number of the people unto the king: and there were in Israel eight hundred thousand valiant men that drew the sword; and the men of Judah were five hundred thousand men.

10 ¶ And ^rDavid's heart smote him after that he had numbered the people. And David said unto the LORD, "I have sinned greatly in that I have done: and now, I beseech thee, O LORD, take away the iniquity of thy servant; for I have done very ^sfoolishly.

11 For when David was up in the morning, the word of the LORD came unto the prophet ^tGad, David's ^useer, saying, 12 Go and say unto David, Thus saith the LORD, "I offer thee three things; choose thee one of them, ^vthat I may do ^wit unto thee.

13 So Gad came to David, and told him, and said unto him, Shall ^xseven years of famine come unto thee in thy land? or wilt thou ^yflee three months before thine enemies, while they pursue thee? or that there be ^zthree days' pestilence in thy land? Now advise, and see what answer I shall return to him that sent me.

14 And David said unto Gad, "I am in a great strait; let us fall now into the hand of the LORD, (^{aa}for his mercies are 15 ¶ So ^{cf}the LORD sent a pestilence upon Israel, from the morning even to the time appointed: and there died of the people, from Dan even to Beer-sheba, ^{cg}seventy thousand men.

16 And when ^{ch}the angel stretched out his hand upon Jerusalem to destroy it, the LORD ^{ci}repented him of the evil, and said to the angel that destroyed the people, It is enough; stay now thine hand. And the angel of the LORD was by the thrashing-place of Araunah the Jebusite.

17 And David ^{cj}spake unto the LORD, when he saw the angel that smote the people, and said, "Lo, I have sinned, and I have done wickedly: but ^{ck}these sheep, what have they done? ^{cl}Let thine hand, I pray thee, be against me, and against my father's house.

19 And David, according to the saying of Gad, went up, ^{cn}as the LORD commanded.

24 And the king said unto Araunah, "Nay; but I will surely buy ^{cs}it of thee at a price: neither will I offer burnt-offerings unto the LORD my God of that which doth cost me nothing. So David bought the thrashing-floor and the oxen for fifty shekels of silver.

Still he could confess, and say, "I have sinned greatly in that I have done: and now, I beseech thee, O Lord, take away the iniquity of thy servant; for I have done very foolishly." David's choice was wise, and worthy of him. He possessed abundant experience of the living God, and he felt himself safe in humbly reposing on his mercy. Ver. 15-25. The death of 70,000 men revealed his guilt, and sufficed to express the Divine displeasure. Amidst the dying and the dead, David had recourse to his never-failing source of consolation—prayer; and the Lord heard him. Sacrifice was offered, sin confessed, mercy supplicated, and the plague stayed.

THE FIRST BOOK OF THE KINGS,

COMMONLY CALLED,

THE THIRD BOOK OF THE KINGS.

This Book comprises the history of 126 years from the period of Solomon's ascension to the throne.

CHAPTER I.

¹ Abishag cherished David in his extreme age. ⁵ Adonijah usurped the kingdom. ³² Solomon is anointed king. ⁶⁰ Adonijah, fleeing to the horns of the altar, is dismissed by Solomon.

NOW king David was ^aold ^band ¹stricken in years; and they covered him with clothes, but he gat no heat.

² Wherefore his servants said unto him, ²Let there be sought for my lord the king ^aa young virgin; and let her ^cstand before the king, and let her ^dcherish him, and let her ^elie in thy bosom, that my lord the king may ^fget heat.

³ So ^gthey sought for ^aa fair damsel throughout all the coasts of Israel, and found Abishag a ^hShunammite, and brought her to the king.

⁴ And the damsel was very fair, and cherished the king, and ministered to him: but the king knew her not.

⁵ ¶ Then Adonijah the son of Haggith ⁱexalted himself, saying, I will ^jbe king: and ^khe prepared him chariots and horsemen, and fifty men to run before him.

⁷ And ^phe conferred with ¹Joab the son of Zeruiah, and with Abiathar the priest: and they, ^qfollowing Adonijah, helped ^rhim.

⁹ And Adonijah slew sheep, and oxen, and fat cattle, by the stone of Zoheleth, which ^vis by ^wEn-rogel, and ^xcalled all his brethren the king's sons, and all the men of Judah the king's servants.

¹⁰ But Nathan the prophet, and Benaiah, and the mighty men, and Solomon his brother, he called not.

¹¹ ¶ Wherefore ^yNathan spake unto Bath-sheba the mother of Solomon, saying, Hast thou not heard that Adonijah the son of Haggith doth reign, and David our lord knoweth it not?

¹² Now therefore come, ¹let me, I pray thee, give thee counsel, that thou mayest save thine own life, and ²the life of thy son Solomon.

¹⁴ Behold, while thou yet talkest there with the king, ⁴I also will come in after thee, and ⁵confirm thy words.

¹⁶ And Bath-sheba ⁶bowed, and did obeisance unto the king. ⁷And the king said, ⁸What wouldest thou?

¹⁸ And now, behold, Adonijah reigneth; and now, my lord the king, thou knowest it not:

²¹ Otherwise it shall come to pass, when my lord the king shall ¹³sleep with his fathers, that I and my son Solomon shall be counted ¹⁴offenders.

²² ¶ And, lo, ¹⁵while she yet talked with the king, Nathan the prophet also came in.

²³ And they told the king, saying, Behold Nathan the prophet. And when he

Chap. I. 1-31. It might have been supposed, that after a life so full of trouble, the sun of David would have been permitted to go down without a cloud; but it was not so. While trembling under the weight of years, and standing on the brink of eternity, his son Adonijah sounded the trumpet of rebellion, aspiring to the throne of his father. It is worthy of note, that he was a brother of Absalom by the same mother. The most remarkable thing in the present case is, that Joab and Abiathar the priest, both ever faithful to David, should have joined the standard of the rebellious usurper. In his case, as in that of Absalom, personal appearance went a great way with the multitude: he, too, was over indulged by his father, who had "not displeased him at any time, saying, Why hast thou done so?" Adonijah, nevertheless, was in a minority of the priests and mighty men, who faithfully stood by their aged sovereign. Nathan conducted the matter with extreme propriety, and, consequently, with success. David displayed nothing of the weakness of age, but acted with the decision required by the emergency. Ver. 32-53. The proclamation of Solomon brought matters at once to an issue, and the deed was attended with manifestations which settled the popularity of the movement. "All the people was come in before the king, ^dhe bowed himself before the king with his face to the ground.

24 And Nathan said, My lord, O king, hast thou said, Adonijah shall reign after me, and he shall sit upon my throne?

25 For he is gone down this day, and hath ^eslain oxen, and fat cattle, and sheep in abundance, and hath called all the king's sons, and the captains of the host, and Abiathar the priest; and, behold, they eat and drink before him, and say, ^fGod save king Adonijah.

26 But me, ^{even} ^{me} thy servant, and Zadok the priest, and Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, and thy servant Solomon, hath he not called.

27 Is this thing done by my lord the king, and thou hast not shewed ^{it} unto thy servant, who should sit on the throne of my lord the king after him?

28 ¶ Then king David answered and said, Call me Bath-sheba: and she came ^ginto the king's presence, and stood before the king.

29 And the king sware, and said, ^hAs the LORD liveth, that ^hhath redeemed my soul out of all distress, 30 Even as I sware unto thee by the LORD God of Israel, saying, Assuredly Solomon thy son shall reign after me, and he shall sit upon my throne in my stead; even so will I certainly do this day.

31 Then Bath-sheba bowed with ^{her} face to the earth, and ⁱdid reverence to the king, and said, ^kLet my lord king David live for ever.

32 ¶ And king David said, Call me Zadok the priest, and Nathan the prophet, and Benaiah the son of Jehoiada. And they came before the king.

33 The king also said unto them, Take with you the servants of your lord, and cause Solomon my son ^lto ride ^gupon mine own ^mmule, and bring him down to Gihon:

34 And let ⁿZadok the priest, and Nathan the prophet, anoint him there king over Israel: and ^oblow ye with the trumpet, and say, God save king Solomon.

35 Then ye shall come up after him, that he may come and sit upon my throne; for he shall be king in my stead: and ^pI have appointed him to be ruler over Israel and over Judah.

36 And Benaiah the son of Jehoiada answered the king, and said, ^qAmen: the LORD God of my lord the king say so too.

37 As ^rthe LORD hath been with my lord the king, even so be he with Solomon, ^sand make his throne greater than the throne of my lord king David.

38 ¶ So Zadok the priest, and Nathan the prophet, and Benaiah the son of 41 ¶ And Adonijah, and all the guests that ^zwere with him, heard ^zit ^aas they had made an end of eating. And when Joab heard the sound of the trumpet, he said, ^bWherefore ^{is} ^{this} noise of ^cthe city being in an uproar?

42 And while he yet spake, behold, ^dJonathan the son of Abiathar the priest came: and Adonijah said unto him, Come in; for thou ^{art} ^avaliant man, and bringest good tidings.

43 And Jonathan answered and said to Adonijah, Verily our lord king David hath made Solomon king.

44 And the king hath sent with him Zadok the priest, and Nathan the prophet, and Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, and the Cherethites, and the Pelethites, and they have caused him to ride upon the king's mule:

45 And Zadok the priest, and Nathan the prophet, have anointed him king in Gihon; and they are come up from thence rejoicing, so that ^fthe city rang again. This is the noise that ye have heard.

46 And also Solomon ^gsitteth on the throne of the kingdom.

47 And moreover, the king's servants came to bless our lord king David, saying, God make the name of Solomon better than thy name, and make his throne greater than thy throne: and the king bowed himself upon the bed.

48 And also thus said the king, ^hBlessed be the LORD God of Israel, ⁱwhich hath given ^{one} to sit on my throne this day, mine eyes even seeing ^{it}.

49 And ^jall the guests that ^zwere with Adonijah were afraid, and rose up, and went every man his way.

50 ¶ And Adonijah feared because of Solomon, and arose, and went, and ^kcaught hold on the horns of the altar.

51 And it was told Solomon, saying, Behold, Adonijah feareth king Solomon: for, lo, he hath caught hold on the horns of the altar, saying, Let king Solomon swear unto me to-day that he will not slay his servant with the sword.

52 And Solomon said, If he will shew himself a worthy man, ^lthere shall not an hair of him fall to the earth: but if rejoiced with great joy, so that the earth rent with the sound of them." This demonstration awoke Adonijah from his dream, and revealed to him and his misguided associates their real condition. Solomon acted towards him with mingled dignity and compassion—his hour was not yet come. The purposes of God could not be overruled by the breathings of sedition; as the glorious type of the Messiah, and as the subject of the Divine Promise, David and Solomon must needs reign, and all opponents be trampled under foot. But if this hold true wickedness shall be found in him, he shall die.

53 So king Solomon sent, and they brought him down from the altar. And he came and bowed himself to king Solomon: and Solomon said unto him, "Go to thine house.

5 Moreover, thou knowest also what ^bJoab the son of Zeruiah did to me, and what he did to the two captains of the hosts of Israel, unto ^aAbner the son of Ner, and unto ^aAmasa the son of ^aJether, whom he slew, and ^ashed the blood of war in peace, and ^aput the blood of war upon his girdle that ^awas about his loins, and in his shoes that ^awere on his feet.

10 ¶ So ^aDavid slept with his fathers, and was buried in ^bthe city of David.

11 And the days that David ^areigned over Israel were forty years: seven years reigned he in Hebron, and thirty and three years reigned he in Jerusalem.

12 ¶ Then ^msat Solomon upon the throne of David his father; and ^ahis kingdom was established greatly.

13 ¶ And ^aAdonijah the son of Haggith came to Bath-sheba the mother of Solomon. And she said, ^bComest thou peaceably? And he said, Peaceably.

14 He said moreover, ^aI have somewhat to say unto thee. And she said, Say on.

15 And he said, ^aThou knowest that the kingdom was mine, and ^athat all Israel set their faces on me, that I should reign: howbeit the kingdom is turned about, and is become my brother's: for ^ait was his from the LORD.

16 And now I ask one petition of thee, ^adeny me not. And she said unto him, Say on.

18 And Bath-sheba said, ^aWell: I will speak for thee unto the king.

19 ¶ Bath-sheba therefore went unto king Solomon, to speak unto him for Adonijah. And the king ^arose up to meet her, and bowed himself unto her, and sat down on his throne, and caused a seat to be set for the king's mother; and ^ashe sat on his right hand.

20 Then she said, ^aI desire one small petition of thee: ^aI pray thee, say me not nay. And the king said unto her, ^aAsk on, my mother; for I will not say thee nay.

of the mortal type, how much more of the Divine anti-type! All opposition to Christ will be futile, and end in the destruction of those who offer it.

Chap. II. 1-11. The charge of David to his son is worthy of his great character and inspired lips. It strongly resembles in spirit and expression the language of Moses to Joshua, connecting success with obedience, and setting forth the unspeakable importance of conscientious adherence to the law of Moses. Joab, although a brave, was not a well-principled man; and his recent conduct in aiding the rebellion of Adonijah, forfeited all consideration on the part of his Royal Master, and exposed him to the consequences of his treason. This appears to have awakened in the breast of David the remembrance of his former transgression, and to have called forth the awful malediction contained in the sixth verse. There can be no doubt that he was animated mainly by carnal policy, and pursued the course which he deemed most calculated to promote his own honour; but, like all crafty men, he overshot the mark, and, desirous of more than belonged to him, he lost all. Shimei, too, was remembered in this serious hour, and although David listened to his prayer for life, yet his guilt had been so great, that his case was remitted to Solomon to deal with it according to law and justice. Ver. 12-27. Adonijah, animated by the same spirit of folly which led him to raise the standard of rebellion, aspired to a matrimonial connexion of the most objectionable character,—a step which cost him that same day his life. Abiathar, too, found that he had greatly miscalculated in uniting with Joab to uphold Adonijah, but he escaped jah? ask for him ^dthe kingdom also; (for he is mine elder brother;) even for him, and for Abiathar the priest, and for Joab the son of Zeruijah.

23 Then king Solomon swore by the LORD, saying, ^eGod do so to me, and more also, if Adonijah have not ^fspoken this word against his own life.

24 Now therefore, ^gas the LORD liveth, which hath established me, and ^hset me on the throne of David my father, and who hath ⁱmade me an house, ^jas he promised, Adonijah shall be ^kput to death this day.

25 And king Solomon sent by the hand of Benaiah the son of Jehoiada; and ^mhe fell upon him that he died.

26 ¶ And unto ⁿAbiathar the priest said the king, Get thee to ^oAnathoth, unto thine own fields; for thou art ^pworthy of death: but I will not at this time put thee to death, ^qbecause thou barest the ark of the Lord God before David my father, and ^rbecause thou hast been afflicted in all wherein my father was afflicted.

27 So Solomon thrust out Abiathar from being priest unto the LORD; ^sthat he might fulfil the word of the LORD, which he spake concerning the house of Eli in ^tShiloh.

28 ¶ Then tidings came to Joab; (for ^uJoab had turned after Adonijah, though he turned not after Absalom;) and Joab fled unto the tabernacle of the LORD, and ^vcaught hold on the horns of the altar.

29 And it was told king Solomon that Joab was fled unto the tabernacle of the LORD; and, behold, ^whe is by the altar: then Solomon sent Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, saying, ^xGo, fall upon him.

30 And Benaiah came to the tabernacle of the LORD, and said unto him, Thus saith the king, Come forth. And he said, Nay; but I will die here. And Benaiah brought the king word again, saying, Thus said Joab, and thus he answered me.

31 And the king said unto him, ^yDo as he hath said, and fall upon him, and bury him; that thou ^zmayest take away the innocent blood, which Joab shed, from me, and ^{aa}from the house of my father.

32 And the LORD shall ^{ab}return his blood upon his own head, who fell upon ^{ac}two men ^{ad}more righteous and better than he, and slew them with the sword, ^{ae}my father David not knowing ^{af}thereof, to wit, Abner the son of Ner, captain of the host of Israel, and Amasa the son of ^{ag}Jether, captain of the host of Judah.

33 Their blood shall therefore return ^{ah}upon the head of Joab, and upon the head of his seed for ever: but ^{ai}upon

David, and upon his seed, and ^{aj}upon his house, and upon his throne, shall there be peace for ever from the LORD.

34 So ^{ak}Benaiah the son of Jehoiada went up, and fell upon him, and slew him; ^{al}and he was buried in his own house ^{am}in the wilderness.

35 ¶ And the king put Benaiah the son of Jehoiada in his room over the host; and ^{an}Zadok the priest did the king put in the room of Abiathar.

36 ¶ And the king sent and called for ^{ao}Shimei, and said unto him, ^{ap}Build thee an house in Jerusalem, and dwell there, and go not forth thence any whither.

37 For it shall be, ^{aq}that on the day thou goest out, and passest ^{ar}over the brook Kidron, thou shalt know for certain that thou shalt surely die: thy blood shall be upon thine own head.

38 And Shimei said unto the king, ^{as}The saying is good: as my lord the king hath said, so will thy servant do. And Shimei dwelt in Jerusalem many days.

39 And it came to pass, at the end of three years, that two of the servants of Shimei ran away unto ^{at}Achish son of Maachah king of Gath: and they told Shimei, saying, Behold, thy servants be in Gath.

40 And Shimei ^{au}arose, and saddled his ass, and went to Gath to Achish to seek his servants: and Shimei went, and brought his servants from Gath.

41 And it was told Solomon that Shimei had gone from Jerusalem to Gath, and was come again.

42 And the king sent and called for Shimei, and said unto him, ^{av}Did I not make thee to swear by the LORD, and protested unto thee, saying, Know for a certain, on the day thou goest out, and walkest abroad any whither, that thou shalt surely die? and thou saidst unto me, The word ^{aw}that I have heard is good.

43 Why ^{ax}then hast thou not kept the oath of the LORD, and ^{ay}the commandment that I have charged thee with?

44 The king said moreover to Shimei, ^{az}Thou knowest all the wickedness which thine heart is privy to, that thou didst to David my father; therefore the LORD shall return thy wickedness upon thine own head:

45 And king Solomon ^{ba}shall be ^{bb}blessed, and the throne of David shall be established before the LORD for ever.

46 So the king commanded Benaiah the son of Jehoiada; which went out, and fell upon him, that he died: and ^{bc}the kingdom was established in the hand of Solomon.

with his life in consideration of bygone services. Ver. 28-46. Joab was called to pay the penalty of his treason. It is mournful to find a man who had been so long faithful, and who had occupied a place of such distinction in conducting the wars of David, exposing himself to the sword of the executioner! This stroke, however, fell upon him, less on the ground of his treason than of his murder of Abner, whose blood he shed in the time of peace from a motive of vengeance. Thus terminated the career of the greatest warrior of Israel! It only now remained to deal with Shimei, who deliberately transgressed the law which had been set him, and thus exposed himself to the sword of Solomon, which fell upon him without mercy; and thus, although justice long

CHAPTER III.

1 Solomon married Pharaoh's daughter. 5 His choice of wisdom. 16 His judgment between the two harlots.

AND Solomon made affinity with Pharaoh king of Egypt, and took Pharaoh's daughter, and brought her into the city of David, until he had made an end of building his own house, and the house of the LORD, and the wall of Jerusalem round about.

2 Only the people sacrificed in high places, because there was no house built unto the name of the LORD, until those days.

3 And Solomon loved the LORD, walking in the statutes of David his father: only he sacrificed and burnt incense in high places.

4 And the king went to Gibeon to sacrifice there; for that was the great high place: a thousand burnt-offerings did Solomon offer upon that altar.

5 In Gibeon the LORD appeared to Solomon in a dream by night: and God said, Ask what I shall give thee.

6 And Solomon said, Thou hast shewed unto thy servant David my father great mercy, according as he walked before thee in truth, and in righteousness, and in uprightness of heart with thee; and thou hast kept for him this great kindness, that thou hast given him a son to sit on his throne, as it is this day.

7 And now, O LORD my God, thou hast made thy servant king instead of David my father; and I am but a little child: I know not how to go out or come in.

8 And thy servant is in the midst of thy people which thou hast chosen, a great people, that cannot be numbered nor counted for multitude.

9 Give therefore thy servant an understanding heart to judge thy people, that I may discern between good and bad: for who is able to judge this thy so great a people?

10 And the speech pleased the LORD, that Solomon had asked this thing.

11 And God said unto him, Because thou hast asked this thing, and hast not asked for thyself long life; neither hast asked riches for thyself, nor hast asked the life of thine enemies; but hast asked for thyself understanding to discern judgment;

12 Behold, I have done according to thy words: lo, I have given thee a wise and an understanding heart; so that there was none like thee before thee, neither after thee shall any arise like unto thee.

13 And I have also given thee that which thou hast not asked, both riches and honour: so that there shall not be any among the kings like unto thee all thy days.

14 And if thou wilt walk in my ways, to keep my statutes and my commandments, as thy father David did walk, then I will lengthen thy days.

15 And Solomon awoke; and, behold, it was a dream: and he came to Jerusalem, and stood before the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and offered up burnt-offerings, and offered peace-offerings, and made a feast to all his servants.

16 Then came there two women that were harlots unto the king, and stood before him.

17 And the one woman said, O my lord, I and this woman dwell in one house; and I was delivered of a child with her in the house.

18 And it came to pass, the third day after that I was delivered, that this woman was delivered also: and we were together; there was no stranger with us in the house, save we two in the house.

19 And this woman's child died in the night; because she overlaid it.

20 And she arose at midnight, and took my son from beside me, while thine handmaid slept, and laid it in her bosom, and laid her dead child in my bosom.

21 And when I rose in the morning to give my child suck, behold, it was dead; but when I had considered it in the morning, behold, it was not my son which I did bear.

22 And the other woman said, Nay; but the living is my son, and the dead is thy son. And this said, No; but the dead is thy son, and the living is my son. Thus they spake before the king.

23 Then said the king, The one saith, This is my son that liveth, and thy son is the dead: and the other saith, Nay; but thy son is the dead, and my son is the living.

24 And the king said, Bring me a sword. And they brought a sword before the king.

25 And the king said, Divide the living child in two, and give half to the one, and half to the other.

26 Then spake the woman whose the living child was unto the king, (for her bowels yearned upon her son,) and she said, O my lord, give her the living child, and in no wise slay it: but the other

Chap. III. 1-15. Solomon egregiously erred at the very outset of his reign, by his marriage affinity with the daughter of Pharaoh, king of Egypt; no good could possibly come out of such a union; and as one false step only leads to another, instead of repairing his error, he repeated it. Otherwise, he began well, loving the Lord, and walking in the statutes of his father; but he sacrificed and burnt incense in high places. The Dream of Solomon was an affair of great moment, and, had he continued to be awake, what he was while asleep, to the close of his royal career he would have been the happiest of mankind. Ver. 16-23. The decision given by Solomon displayed great knowledge of human nature, and produced the best effect on the mind of the people. It were well if all young men taking up house, or entering on important avocations, were, like Solomon, to ask of God wisdom to guide their affairs with discretion, and so to live as to glorify his great name. Were the world to 21 And ^vSolomon reigned over all kingdoms, from the river unto the land of the Philistines, and unto the border of Egypt: they ^vbrought presents, and served Solomon all the days of his life.

22 [¶]And Solomon's ²provision for one day ^{was} thirty ³measures of fine flour, and threescore measures of meal, 23 [¶]Ten fat oxen, and twenty oxen out of the pastures, and an hundred sheep, beside harts, and roe-bucks, and fallow-deer, and fatted fowl.

24 For he had dominion over all ^{the}region on this side the river, from Tiphshah even to ⁴Azzah, over ^{all}the kings on this side the river: and he ^{had} peace on all sides round about him.

25 And Judah and Israel dwelt ⁴safely, ^devery man under his vine and under his fig-tree, ^efrom Dan even to Beer-sheba, all the days of Solomon.

26 [¶]And Solomon had ^{forty}thousand stalls of horses for his chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen.

29 [¶]And ^bGod gave Solomon wisdom and understanding exceeding much, and ^{largeness}of heart, even as the sand that ^{is} on the sea-shore.

30 And Solomon's wisdom excelled the wisdom of all the children of the east country, and all ^{the}wisdom of Egypt.

31 For he was wiser than all men; than ¹Ethan the Ezrahite, and ²Heman, and Chalcol, and Darda, the sons of Mahol:

the multitude of his people, Solomon was indeed glorious, seeing that Israel "was as the sand by the sea in multitude." Great misery, however, consists with great numbers; but it was not so in the case of Israel. With them life was a feast, and time one long holiday. Their great business consisted in "eating and drinking and making merry." They were a happy people, "whose God was the Lord." The subserviency of all the kingdoms round about to Solomon, beautifully shadows forth the ultimate triumph of the Messiah. This supremacy continued all the days of his life; he had peace on all and ¹his fame was in all nations round about.

32 And ^ohe spake three thousand proverbs: and his ^psongs were a thousand and five.

33 And he spake of trees, from ^qthe cedar-tree that is in Lebanon even unto ^rthe hyssop that springeth out of the wall: he spake also ^sof beasts, and of fowl, and of creeping things, and of fishes.

34 And ^tthere came of all people to hear the wisdom of Solomon, from all kings of the earth, which had heard of his wisdom.

I have ^cconsidered the things which thou sentest to me for: and I will do all thy desire concerning timber of cedar, and concerning ^dtimber of fir.

9 My servants shall bring ^ethem down from ^fLebanon unto the sea; and ^gI will convey them by sea in floats unto the place that thou shalt ^happoint me, and will cause them to be discharged there, and thou shalt receive ⁱthem: and thou shalt accomplish my desire, in ^jgiving food for my household.

10 ¶ So Hiram gave Solomon cedar-trees and fir-trees, according to all his desire.

11 And Solomon gave Hiram twenty thousand ^kmeasures of wheat for food to his household, and twenty measures of pure oil: thus gave Solomon to Hiram year by year.

12 And the LORD gave Solomon wisdom, ^las he promised him: and there was peace between Hiram and Solomon; and ^mthey two made a league together.

13 ¶ And king Solomon raised a ⁿlevy out of all Israel; and ^othe levy was thirty thousand men.

14 And he sent them to Lebanon, ten thousand ^pa month by courses; a month they were in Lebanon, and two months at home: and ^qAdoniram was over the levy.

15 And Solomon had ^rthreescore and ten thousand that bare burdens, and four-score thousand hewers in the mountains;

16 Besides the chief of Solomon's officers which ^swere over the work, ^tthree thousand and three hundred, which ruled over the people that wrought in the work.

17 And the king commanded, and they brought great stones, ^ucostly stones, and hewed stones, to lay the foundation of the house.

18 And Solomon's builders and Hiram's builders did hew ^vthem, and ^wthe stone-squarers: so they prepared timber and stones to build the house.

CHAPTER VI.

¹ The building of Solomon's temple. ¹¹ God's promise unto it. ³⁷ The time of building it.

AND ^ait came to pass, in the four hundred and eightieth year after the children of Israel were come out of the sides round about him, and as the happy consequence, Judah and Israel dwelt safely, every man under his vine and under his fig-tree, from Dan even to Beer-sheba, all the days of Solomon. This feature of society is beautifully typical of the time when "all nations shall be blessed in the Lord, and all nations shall call him blessed." Ver. 29 is particularly noticeable as bearing on the magnanimity of Solomon, who, in addition to his matchless wisdom, possessed "largeness of heart, even as the sand that is on the sea-shore." Again, the reception which the kings of the earth are ultimately to give the Gospel is indicated by ver. 34, wherein we are told, that "there came of all people to hear the wisdom of Solomon, from all kings of the earth, which had heard his wisdom." Nowhere is he more remarkably set forth as the splendid type of the Son of God than in this chapter. In the Lord Jesus are hid all "the treasures of wisdom and knowledge," and hid for the welfare of mankind, while, as compared with his "largeness of heart," that of Solomon is not worthy to be mentioned; it is only as a point to immensity. His love is comprehensive of all his people, scattered throughout all nations, and kindreds, and peoples, and tongues.

Chap. V. 1-18. Solomon lost no time in proceeding with the great business of his life—the building of a House to the name of the Lord his God. In this wonderful undertaking he received immense assistance from the king of Tyre, who manifested a spirit of intense cordiality. The intercourse between the kings was conducted on the principles of barter, each giving what the other desired, and in return obtaining the supply of his own necessities. Nothing can be more beautiful than the respect, good-will, and confidence which existed between them. Solomon brought the whole strength of his empire to bear on the undertaking; never before was so much wealth and power put forth in any kindred enterprise. Here we have a happy shadowing forth of the unanimity which is ultimately to obtain amongst the heads of nations, when all shall constitute one family, living in peace, and walking in harmony.

land of Egypt, in the fourth year of Solomon's reign over Israel, ¹in the month Zif, which is the second month, that he ¹began to ¹build the house of the LORD.

2 And the house which king Solomon built for the LORD, the length thereof was ⁴threescore cubits, and the breadth thereof twenty cubits, and the height thereof thirty cubits.

3 And the ⁶porch before the temple of the house, twenty cubits was the length thereof, according to the breadth of the house; and ten cubits was the breadth thereof before the house.

4 And for the house he made ²windows of narrow lights.

5 ¶ And ²against the wall of the house he ¹built ⁴chambers round about, against the walls of the house round about, both of the temple and of the ⁶oracle: and he made ⁶chambers round about.

6 The nethermost chamber was five cubits broad, and the middle was six cubits broad, and the third was seven cubits broad: for without in the wall of the house he made ⁶narrowed rests round about, that the beams should not be fastened in the walls of the house.

7 And the house, when it was in building, was ¹built of stone made ready before it was brought thither: so that there was neither hammer, nor axe, nor any tool of iron, heard in the house while it was in building.

8 The door for the middle chamber was in the right ¹side of the house: and they went up with winding stairs into the middle chamber, and out of the middle into the third.

9 So he built the house, and finished it; and covered the house with ⁸beams and boards of cedar.

10 And then he built chambers against all the house five cubits high; and they rested on the house with timber of cedar.

11 ¶ And the word of the LORD came to Solomon, saying,

12 Concerning this house which thou art in building, ¹if thou wilt walk in my statutes, and execute my judgments, and keep all my commandments to walk in them; ¹then will I perform my word with thee, which I spake unto David thy father:

13 And ¹I will dwell among the children of Israel, and ¹will not forsake my people Israel.

14 So Solomon built the house, and finished it.

15 And he built the walls of the house within with boards of cedar, ⁹both the floor of the house, and the walls of the ceiling: and he covered them on the inside with wood, and covered the floor of the house with planks of fir.

16 And he built twenty cubits on the sides of the house, both the floor and the walls with boards of cedar: he even ¹built them for it within, even for the oracle, even for the most holy place.

17 And the house, that is, the temple before it, was forty cubits long.

18 And the cedar of the house within was carved with ¹knops and ²open flowers; all was cedar; there was no stone seen.

19 And the oracle he prepared in the house within, ⁶to set there the ark of the covenant of the LORD.

20 And the oracle in the fore-part was twenty cubits in length, and twenty cubits in breadth, and twenty cubits in the height thereof: and he overlaid it with ³pure gold; and so covered ¹the altar which was of cedar.

21 So Solomon ⁴overlaid the house within with pure gold: and he made a partition ¹by the chains of gold before the oracle, and he overlaid it with gold.

22 And the whole house he overlaid with gold, until he had finished all the house: also the whole altar, that was by the oracle, he overlaid with gold.

23 ¶ And within the oracle he made ²two cherubims of ⁴olive-tree, each ten cubits high.

24 And five cubits was the one wing of the cherub, and five cubits the other wing of the cherub: from the uttermost part of the one wing unto the uttermost part of the other were ten cubits.

25 And the other cherub was ten cubits: both the cherubims were of one measure and one size.

26 The height of the one cherub was ten cubits, and so was it of the other cherub.

27 And he set the cherubims within the inner house: ¹and they ⁶stretched forth the wings of the cherubims, so that the wing of the one touched the one wall, and the wing of the other cherub touched the other wall; and their wings touched one another in the midst of the house.

28 And he overlaid the cherubims with gold.

Chap. VI. 1-22. The Temple in length was about 109 feet; its breadth about 36 feet; and its height about 60 feet. The Divine appearance made to Solomon was greatly calculated to confirm his faith, and keep his heart right with God. The greatest blessing conceivable, that of the Lord's dwelling amongst them himself, and not forsaking them, was placed within his reach. Ver. 23-38. Considering the magnitude of the work to be done, the period of seven years employed in the erection was short. The temple was the most wonderful structure that the world had seen, and it was intended to shew forth the most marvellous event in the universe.

Christ himself is the true temple, whose body was prepared for him by the Eternal Spirit. There dwelt the fulness of the Godhead bodily, as the Shekina in the temple of Solomon. Every child of God is, moreover, in his inclosure, a temple of the Holy Ghost; while the Church of Christ, in a manner still more emphatic, is enriched with the gifts and graces of the Spirit, subserving the manifold purposes of Heaven. In the erection of the Tabernacle the Jews alone participated; but it was the privilege both of the Jews and the Gentiles to unite in building the Temple. The fact finely harmonises with the circumstance, that the 30 And ²the floor of the house he overlaid with gold within and without.

31 ¶ And for the entering of the oracle he made ⁷doors of olive-tree: the lintel and side-posts were ¹a fifth part of the wall.

32 The ⁸two doors also were of olive-tree; and he carved upon them carvings of cherubims, and palm-trees, and ⁹open flowers, and overlaid them with gold, and spread gold upon the cherubims, and upon the palm-trees.

33 So also made he for the door of the temple posts of olive-tree, ¹a fourth part of the wall.

34 And the two doors were of fir-tree: the two leaves of the one door were folding, and the two leaves of the other door were folding.

35 And he carved thereon cherubims, and palm-trees, and open flowers; and covered them with gold fitted upon the carved work.

36 ¶ And he built ²the inner court with three rows of hewed stone, and a row of cedar-beams.

37 ¶ In the fourth year was the foundation of the house of the LORD laid, in the month Zif:

38 And in the eleventh year, in the month Bul, (which is the eighth month,) was the house ⁴finished throughout all the parts thereof, and ²according to all the fashion of it. So was he ⁷seven years in building it.

pillars and the thick beam were ⁶before them.

7 ¶ Then he made ⁴a porch ⁶for the throne where he might judge, even the porch ¹of judgment: and it was covered with cedar ⁶from one side of the floor to the other.

8 And his house where he dwelt had ⁶another court within the porch, which was of the like work. Solomon made also ²an house for Pharaoh's daughter, whom he had taken to wife, like unto this porch.

9 All these were of ¹costly stones, according to the measures of hewed stones, sawed with saws, within and without, even from the foundation unto the coping, and so on the outside toward the great court.

10 And ²the foundation was of costly stones, even great stones, stones of ten cubits, and stones of eight cubits.

11 And ¹above were costly stones, (after the measures of hewed stones,) and cedars.

12 And the great court round about was with ²three rows of hewed stones, and a row of cedar-beams, both for the inner court of the house of the LORD, and for ²the porch of the house.

13 ¶ And king Solomon sent and fetched ⁶Hiram out of Tyre.

14 He was ⁷a widow's son of the tribe of ²Naphtali, and his father was a man of Tyre, a worker in brass: and ⁹he was filled with wisdom, and understanding, and cunning to work all works in brass. And he came to king Solomon, and wrought all his work.

15 For he ⁸cast ⁷two pillars of brass, of eighteen cubits high apiece; and a line of twelve cubits did compass either of them about.

16 And he made ²two chapters of molten brass, to set upon the tops of the pillars: the height of the one chapter was five cubits, and the height of the other chapter was five cubits:

17 And nets of checker-work, and ²wreaths of chain-work, for the chapters which were upon the top of the pillars: seven for the one chapter, and seven for the other chapter.

18 And he made the pillars, and two rows round about upon the one net-work, to cover the chapters that were upon the top with pomegranates: and so did he for the other chapter.

19 And the chapters that were upon the top of the pillars were of ²lily-work in the porch, four cubits.

20 And the chapters upon the two spiritual stones by which the Temple of God—his Church—is erected, are gathered out of all nations, kindreds, and tongues, by the instrumentality of both Jews and Gentiles.

Chap. VII. 1-51. Solomon's solicitude to promote the comfort of Pharaoh's daughter would seem to indicate some uneasiness. It has been thought, and, perhaps, not without reason, that in her deportment there were things not in harmony with the spirit of the true religion.

which rendered it expedient that she should reside at some distance from the temple. Although it is impossible to spiritualise the innumerable facts and objects here set forth, the whole may be viewed as bearing on the Kingdom of Christ. But if that material edifice was so glorious as to be the wonder of the world, what must be the spiritual temple of the living God, composed of the spirits of the just made perfect! We are further taught here, that no cost or labour should be deemed too great in furtherance of the kingdom of Christ; and that, pillars had pomegranates also above, over against the belly which was by the net-work; and the pomegranates were two hundred, in rows round about upon the other chapter.

21 And ¹he set up the pillars in ²the porch of the temple: and he set up the right pillar, and called the name thereof ³Jachin; and he set up the left pillar, and called the name thereof ⁴Boaz.

22 And upon the top of the pillars was lily-work: so was the work of the pillars finished.

23 ¶ And ¹he made ²a molten sea, ten cubits from ³the one brim to the other: it was round all about, and his height was five cubits; and a line of thirty cubits did compass it round about.

24 And under the brim of it round about there were ¹knops compassing it, ten in a cubit, compassing the sea round about: the knops were cast in two rows when it was cast.

25 It stood upon ¹twelve oxen, three looking toward the north, and three looking toward the west, and three looking toward the south, and three looking toward the east: and the sea was set above upon them, and all their hinder parts were inward.

26 And it was an hand-breadth thick, and the brim thereof was wrought like the brim of a cup, ¹with flowers of lilies: it contained two thousand baths.

27 ¶ And he made ten ¹bases of brass; four cubits was the length of one base, and four cubits the breadth thereof, and three cubits the height of it.

28 And the work of the bases was on this manner: they had borders, and the borders were between the ledges:

29 And on the borders that were between the ledges were ¹lions, oxen, and cherubims: and upon the ledges there was a base above: and beneath the lions and oxen were certain additions made of thin work.

30 And every base had four brasen ¹wheels, and plates of brass; and the four corners thereof had undersetters: under the laver were undersetters molten, at the side of every addition.

31 And the mouth of it, within the chapter and above, was a cubit: but the mouth thereof was round, after the work of the base, a cubit and an half; and also upon the mouth of it were gravings with their borders, four-square, not round.

32 And under the borders were four wheels; and the axle-trees of the wheels were ¹joined to the base; and the height of a wheel was a cubit and half a cubit.

33 And ¹the work of the wheels was like the work of a chariot-wheel; their axle-trees, and their naves, and their feloes, and their spokes, were all molten.

34 And there were four undersetters to the four corners of one base: and the undersetters were of the very base itself.

35 And in the top of the base was there a round compass of half a cubit high: and on the top of the base, the ledges thereof, and the borders thereof, were of the same.

36 For on the plates of the ledges thereof, and on the borders thereof, he ¹graved cherubims, lions, and palm-trees, according to the ²proportion of every one, and additions round about.

37 After this manner he made the ten bases; all of them had one casting, one measure, and one size.

38 ¶ Then made he ¹ten lavers of brass: one laver contained forty baths; and every laver was four cubits: and upon every one of the ten bases one laver.

39 And he put five bases on the right ¹side of the house, and five on the left side of the house; and he set the sea on the right side of the house eastward, over against the south.

40 ¶ And ¹Hiram made ²the lavers, and the shovels, and ³the basons: ⁴so Hiram made an end of doing all the work that he made king Solomon for the house of the LORD;

41 The ¹two pillars, and the ²two bowls of the chapters that were on the top of the two pillars; and the two net-works, to cover the two bowls of the chapters which were upon the top of the pillars;

42 And four hundred pomegranates for the two net-works, even two rows of pomegranates for one net-work, to cover the two bowls of the chapters that were upon ¹the pillars;

43 And the ten bases, and ten lavers on the bases;

44 And one sea, and twelve oxen under the sea;

45 And ¹the pots, and the shovels, and the basons: and all these vessels, which Hiram made to king Solomon for the house of the LORD, were of ²bright brass.

46 In the plain of Jordan did the king cast them, in ¹the clay-ground between ²Succoth and ³Zarthan.

47 And Solomon left all the vessels unweighed, ¹because they were exceeding many: neither was the weight of the brass ²found out.

48 And Solomon made all the vessels that pertained unto the house of the LORD: ¹the altar of gold, and ²the table of gold, whereupon the shew-bread was,

49 And ¹the candlesticks of pure gold, five on the right side, and five on the left, before the oracle, with the flowers, and the lamps, and ²the tongs, of gold;

50 And the bowls, and the snuffers, and the basons, and the ¹spoons, and the ²censers, of pure gold; and the hinges of gold, both for the doors of the inner-house, the most holy place, and for the doors of the house, to wit, of the temple.

as the great business of Solomon was the erection of this structure, so should the great object of each man's existence be, to "build up himself on his most holy faith, and, praying in the Holy Ghost, to keep himself in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life."

51 So ^awas ended all the work that king Solomon made for the house of the LORD. And Solomon brought in ⁴the things ^bwhich David his father had dedicated; even the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, did he put among the treasures of the house of the LORD.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 The dedication of the temple. 12 Solomon's blessing; 22 his prayer; 62 his sacrifices of peace-offerings, and observance of the feast fourteen days.

THEN ^aSolomon ^bassembled the elders of Israel, and all the heads of the tribes, the ¹chief of the fathers of the children of Israel, unto king Solomon in Jerusalem, ^cthat they might bring up the ark of the covenant of the LORD ^dout of the city of David, which is Zion.

2 And all the men of Israel assembled themselves unto king Solomon ^aat the feast in the month Ethanim, which is the seventh month.

3 And all the elders of Israel came, and ^athe priests took up the ark.

4 And they brought up the ark of the LORD, ^aand the ^btabernacle of the congregation, and all the holy vessels that were in the tabernacle, even those did the priests and the Levites bring up.

5 And king Solomon, and all the congregation of Israel, that were assembled unto him, were with him before the ark, ^asacrificing sheep and oxen, that could not be told nor numbered for multitude.

6 And ^athe priests brought in the ark of the covenant of the LORD unto ¹his place, into the oracle of the house, to the most holy place, even ^munder the wings of the cherubims.

7 For the cherubims spread forth their two wings over the place of the ark, and the cherubims covered the ark and the staves thereof above.

8 And they ^adrew out the staves, that the ²ends of the staves were seen out in ^athe ^bholy place before the oracle, and they were not seen without: and there they are ^ounto this day.

9 There was ^bnothing ^qin the ark save the two tables of stone, which Moses ^rput there at Horeb, ^awhen the LORD made a covenant with the children of Israel, when they came out of the land of Egypt.

10 ¶ And it came to pass, when the priests were come out of the holy place, that ^athe cloud filled the house of the LORD.

11 So that the priests could not stand to minister because of the cloud: ^afor the glory of the LORD had filled the house of the LORD.

12 ¶ Then spake Solomon, The LORD said that he would dwell in ^athe thick darkness.

13 I have surely built thee an house to

14 And the king turned his face about, and ^ablessed all the congregation of Israel; (and all the congregation of Israel stood:)

15 And he said, ^aBlessed be the LORD God of Israel, ^awhich spake with his mouth unto David my father, and ^bhath with his hand fulfilled it, saying,

16 Since the day that I brought forth my people Israel out of Egypt, ^aI chose no city out of all the tribes of Israel to build an house, that my name might be therein; but ^aI chose David to be over my people Israel.

17 And ^ait was in the heart of David my father to build an house for the name of the LORD God of Israel.

18 And the LORD said unto David my father, Whereas it was in thine heart to build an house unto my name, thou didst well that it was in thine heart:

19 Nevertheless ^athou shalt not build the house; but thy son, that shall come forth out of thy loins, he shall build the house unto my name.

20 And the LORD hath performed his word that he spake; and I am risen up in the room of David my father, and sit on the throne of Israel, as the LORD promised, and have built an house for the name of the LORD God of Israel.

21 And I have set there a place for the ark, wherein is ^athe covenant of the LORD, which he made with our fathers, when he brought them out of the land of Egypt.

22 ¶ And Solomon ^bstood before the altar of the LORD, in the presence of all the congregation of Israel, and spread forth his hands toward heaven:

23 And he said, ^aLORD God of Israel, there is ^kno God like thee, in heaven above, or on earth beneath, ¹who keepest covenant and mercy with thy servants that walk before thee with all their heart;

24 Who hast kept with thy servant David my father that thou promisedst him: thou spakest also with thy mouth, and hast fulfilled it with thine hand, as it is this day.

25 Therefore now, LORD God of Israel, keep with thy servant David my father that thou promisedst him, saying, ^aThere shall not fail thee a man in my sight to sit on the throne of Israel; ^aso that thy children take heed to their way, that they walk before me as thou hast walked before me.

26 And now, ^mO God of Israel, ^alet thy word, I pray thee, be verified, which thou spakest unto thy servant David my father.

Chap. VIII. 1-66. All things being now ready, the happy day arrived for the Feast of the Dedication of the Temple. The Most High, in token of his approval of the work, appeared, filling the House with his glory, which so awed the priests that they could not stand before it. The deportment of Solomon on the occasion was sublimely appropriate to the unparalleled event; he entered completely into the spirit of his mission, and shewed a heart fully prepared by the Spirit of God for the discharge of the high and holy duties which devolved

28 Yet ^ahave thou respect unto the prayer of thy servant, and to his supplication, O LORD my God, to hearken unto the cry and to the prayer which thy servant prayeth before thee to-day;

29 That ^athine eyes may be open toward this house night and day, even toward the place of which thou hast said, "My name shall be there; that thou mayest hearken unto the prayer which thy servant shall make ^atoward this place.

30 And hearken thou to the supplication of thy servant, and of thy people Israel, ^awhen they shall pray ^atoward this place: ^aand hear thou in heaven thy dwelling-place; and when thou hearest, ^aforgive.

31 ¶ If any man trespass against his neighbour, and ^aan oath be laid upon him to cause him to swear, and ^athe oath come before thine altar in this house:

32 Then hear thou in heaven, and do, and judge thy servants, ^acondemning the wicked, to bring his way upon his head; and ^ajustifying the righteous, to give him according to his righteousness.

33 ¶ When thy people Israel be ^asmitten down before the enemy, because they have sinned against thee, and shall turn again to thee, and confess thy name, and ^apray, and make supplication unto thee ^ain this house:

34 Then hear thou in heaven, and forgive the sin of thy people Israel, and bring them again unto the land which thou gavest unto their fathers.

41 ¶ Moreover, concerning ^aa stranger, that is not of thy people Israel, but ^acometh out of a far country for thy name's sake;

42 (For ^athey shall hear of thy ^agreat name, and of thy strong hand, and of thy stretched-out arm;) ^awhen he shall come and pray toward this house:

43 Hear thou in heaven thy dwelling-place, and do according to all that the stranger calleth to thee for; that all people of the earth may know thy name, to fear thee, as do thy people Israel; and that they may know that ^athis house, which I have builded, is called by thy name.

44 ¶ If thy people ^ago out to battle against their enemy, whithersoever thou shalt send them, and ^ashall pray unto the LORD ^atoward the city which thou hast chosen, and toward the house that I have built for thy name:

45 Then hear thou in heaven their prayer and their supplication, and maintain their ^acause.

46 If they sin against thee, (for ^athere is no man that sinneth not,) and thou be angry with them, and deliver them to the enemy, so that they carry them away captives ^aunto the land of the enemy, far or near;

47 Yet ^aif they shall ^abethink themselves in the land whither they were carried captives, and repent, and make supplication unto thee in the land of them that carried them captives, saying, We have sinned, and have ^adone perversely, we have committed wickedness;

48 And so ^areturn unto thee with all ^atheir heart, and with all their soul, in the land of their enemies which led them away captive, and ^apray unto thee toward their land which thou gavest unto their fathers, the city which thou hast chosen, and the house which I have built for thy name:

49 Then hear thou their prayer and their supplication in heaven thy dwelling-place, and maintain their ^acause,

50 And forgive thy people that have sinned against thee, and all their transgressions wherein they have transgressed against thee, and ^agive them compassion before them who carried them captive, that they may have compassion on them:

51 For they be ^athy people, and thine inheritance, which thou broughtest forth out of Egypt, from the midst of ^athe furnace of iron:

on him. He is careful to recognise the covenant relation between himself and David. The Dedication Prayer was worthy of the occasion; its typical character was beautifully sustained, and its thoroughly evangelical import is clear. It deserves notice that Solomon offered this divine prayer on his knees, before the Altar of the Lord, with his hands outspread to heaven, and that he concluded, standing up, with a blessing, which comprised a gracious and most comprehensive prayer for the people. To this succeeded the sacrifice, which was such as the sun had never before looked down upon, finely typifying the "feast of fat things," prepared for all people. No

52 That thine eyes may be open unto the supplication of thy servant, and unto the supplication of thy people Israel, to hearken unto them ⁱⁿ all that they call for unto thee.

53 For thou didst ^bseparate them from among all the people of the earth, to be ^athine inheritance, ^{as} thou spakest by the hand of Moses thy servant, when thou broughtest our fathers out of Egypt, O Lord God.

54 ¶ And it was so, that when Solomon had made an end of praying all this prayer and supplication unto the LORD, he arose from before the altar of the LORD, from ^{kneeling} on his knees with his hands spread up to heaven.

55 And he stood, and blessed all the congregation of Israel with a loud voice, saying, 56 Blessed be the LORD, that ^{hath} given rest unto his people Israel, according to all that he promised: ^{there} hath not ^{failed} one word of all his good promise, which he promised by the hand of Moses his servant.

57 The LORD our God be with us, as he was with our fathers: let him not leave us, nor forsake us;

58 That he may ^{incline} our hearts unto him, to walk in all his ways, and to keep ^{his} commandments, and his statutes, and his judgments, which he commanded our fathers.

59 And let these my words, wherewith I have made supplication before the LORD, be ^{nigh} unto the LORD our God day and night, that he maintain the cause of his servant, and the cause of his people Israel ^{at} all times, ^{as} the matter shall require:

60 That all the people of the earth may know that ^{the} LORD is God, and that there is none else.

61 Let your heart therefore be ^{perfect} with the LORD our God, to walk in his statutes, and to keep his commandments, as at this day.

62 ¶ And the king, and all Israel with him, offered sacrifice before the LORD.

63 And Solomon offered ^asacrifice of peace-offerings, which he offered unto the LORD, two and twenty thousand oxen, and an hundred and twenty thousand sheep: so the king and all the children of Israel ^{dedicated} the house of the LORD.

64 The same day did the king ^{hallow} the middle of the court that ^{was} before the house of the LORD: for there he offered burnt-offerings, and meat-offerings, and the fat of the peace-offerings; because the brasen altar that ^{was} before the LORD ^{was} too little to receive the burnt-offerings,

CHAPTER IX.

1 God's covenant in a vision with Solomon. 10 The mutual presents of Solomon and Hiram. 25 Solomon's yearly sacrifices.

AND ^ait came to pass, when Solomon had finished the building of ^bthe house of the LORD, and the king's house, and ^call Solomon's desire which he was pleased to do,

2 That the LORD appeared to Solomon the second time, ^{as} he had appeared unto him at Gibeon.

3 And the LORD said unto him, ^II have heard thy prayer and thy supplication that thou hast made before me: ^II have hallowed this house which thou hast built, ^{to} put my name there for ever; and ^{mine} eyes and mine heart shall be there perpetually.

4 And ^{if} thou wilt walk before me, as David thy father walked, in integrity of heart, and in uprightness, to do according to all that I have commanded thee, and wilt keep my statutes and my judgments;

5 Then ^II will establish the throne of thy kingdom upon Israel for ever, as I promised to David thy father, saying, There shall not fail thee a man upon the throne of Israel.

6 But ^{if} ye shall at all turn from following me, ye or your children, and will not keep my commandments, and my statutes, which I have set before you, but ^{go} and serve other gods, and worship them;

7 Then ^{will} I cut off Israel out of the land which I have given them: and ^{this} house, which I have hallowed for my name, will I cast out of my sight; and ^{Israel} shall be a proverb and a by-word among all people:

8 And at ^{this} house, which is high, every one that passeth by it shall be astonished, and shall hiss; and they shall say, ^{Why} hath the LORD done thus unto this land, and to this house?

9 And they shall answer, ^{Because} they forsook the LORD their God, who brought character of the Old Testament so strikingly exhibits the glorious type of the Son of God, in his capacity of prophet, priest, and king, as did Solomon on this occasion.

Chap. IX. 1-28. The Divine appearance mentioned in this chapter, was another important event in the history of Solomon, who, after so much success and glory, was in danger lest his heart should be lifted up within him. He is again reminded, that the future of his life, and reign would depend upon his conduct. If he should walk in the integrity of his heart, and according to the Divine law, his reign would be established in perpetuity; but if, on the contrary, he should turn aside, neglect the commandments, and, above all, ^{serve} other gods and forth their fathers out of the land of Egypt, and have taken hold upon other gods, and have worshipped them, and served them; therefore hath the LORD brought upon them all this evil.

10 ¶ And it came to pass 'at the end of twenty years, when Solomon had built the two houses, the house of the LORD, and the king's house, 11 (Now ¹Hiram the king of Tyre had furnished Solomon with cedar-trees, and fir-trees, and with gold, according to all his desire,) that then ²king Solomon gave Hiram twenty cities in the land ³of Galilee.

12 And Hiram came out from Tyre to see the cities which Solomon had given him; and they ¹pleased him not.

13 And he said, What cities are these which thou hast given me, ²my brother? And he called them the land of ³Cabul unto this day.

14 And Hiram sent to the king sixscore talents of gold.

15 ¶ And this is the reason of the levy which king Solomon raised; for ¹to build the house of the LORD, and his own house, and ²Millo, and the wall of Jerusalem, and ³Hazor, and Megiddo, and Gezer.

16 For Pharaoh king of Egypt had gone up and taken Gezer, and burnt it with fire, and slain the Canaanites that dwelt in the city, and given it for a present unto his daughter, Solomon's wife.

17 And Solomon built Gezer, and ⁴Beth-horon the nether,

18 And ⁵Baalath, and Tadmor in the wilderness, in the land,

19 And all ¹the cities of store that Solomon had, and cities for his chariots, and cities for his horsemen, and ²that which Solomon desired to build in Jerusalem, and in Lebanon, and in all the land of his dominion.

20 ¶ And all the people that were left of the ³Amorites, Hittites, Perizzites, Hivites, and Jebusites, which were not of the children of Israel, 21 Their children ⁴that were left after them in the land, whom the children of Israel also were not able utterly to destroy, upon those did Solomon ¹levy a tribute ²of bond-service unto this day.

22 But of the children of Israel did Solomon make no bond-men: ¹but they were men of war, and his servants, and his princes, and his captains, and rulers of his chariots, and his horsemen.

23 These were the ¹chief of the officers that were over Solomon's work, five hundred and fifty, which bare rule over the people that wrought in the work.

24 ¶ But ²Pharaoh's daughter came up out of the city of David unto her house which Solomon had built for her: then did he build ³Millo.

25 ¶ And ⁴three times in a year did Solomon offer burnt-offerings and peace-offerings upon the altar which he built unto the LORD, and ⁵he burnt incense ⁶upon the altar that was before the LORD: so he finished the house.

26 ¶ And king Solomon ⁷made a navy of ships in ⁸Ezion-geber, which is beside Eloth, on the ⁹shore of the Red sea, in the land of Edom.

27 And Hiram sent in the navy ¹his servants, shipmen that had knowledge of the sea, with the servants of Solomon.

28 And they came to ²Ophir, and fetched from thence gold, four hundred and twenty talents, and brought it to king Solomon.

CHAPTER X.

1 The queen of Sheba admireth the wisdom of Solomon. 14 His riches; 24 his presents; 26 his chariots and horses; 28 his tribute.

AND ¹when the queen of ²Sheba ³heard of the fame of Solomon, ⁴concerning the name of the LORD, she came ⁵to prove him with hard questions.

2 And she came to Jerusalem with a very great train, with camels that bare ⁶spices, and very much gold, and precious stones: and when she was come to Solomon, she communed with him of all that was in her heart.

3 And Solomon ⁷told her all her ¹questions: there was not ²any thing hid from the king, which he told her not.

4 And when the queen of Sheba had seen all ³Solomon's wisdom, and the house that he had built,

5 And the meat of his table, and the sitting of his servants, and the ⁴attendance of his ministers, and their apparel, and his ⁵cup-bearers, and his ascent by which he went up unto the house of the LORD; ⁶there was no more spirit in her.

6 And she said to the king, It was a worship them," then the Lord would cut off Israel out of the land, and even this glorious temple would be despised and destroyed, while the people became a proverb and a by-word among all nations. Nothing can be more explicit than this communication—nothing more calculated to keep alive a spirit of holy vigilance and entire consecration. For a time, doubtless, the effect was salutary; but, as the history shews, these impressions at length faded away, and Solomon did the very things he was warned not to do! Of all the kings of Israel, Solomon was incomparably the greatest builder; while the temple was his principal work, his secondary operations were of a character the most splendid. Not satisfied with achievements on land, he also built a navy of ships; thus securing the command of an element not regarded by the Jewish kings, but which beautifully harmonises with the universal empire of the Saviour, whose type he was.

Allowing for difference of circumstances, there is a principle contained in the address given to Solomon, which applies to every man. The conditions of prosperity in the best sense, is living to the Lord, and uniformly walking in his holy ways.

Chap. X. 1-29. There is some difficulty in determining the territory of the Queen of Sheba. The most probable opinion, however, is, that she ruled in the southern part of Arabia Felix, which is situated on the borders of the Red Sea. The Saviour speaks of her as the Queen of the South, stating that she came from the ends of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon. That locality may be deemed the ends of the earth, inasmuch as there is no land beyond, the country being bounded by the Indian Ocean, the Persian Gulf, and the Red Sea. It has been suggested that the Ethiopians, at that time, true ⁴report that I heard in mine own land of thy ⁶acts, and of thy wisdom.

7 Howbeit ¹I believed not the words, until I came, and mine eyes had seen it; and, behold, the half was not told me: ⁶thy wisdom and prosperity exceedeth the fame which I heard.

8 Happy are thy men, ¹happy are these thy servants, which stand continually before thee, and that hear thy wisdom.

9 Blessed be the LORD thy God, which ¹delighted in thee, to set thee on the throne of Israel: because the LORD loved Israel for ever, therefore made he thee king, ²to do judgment and justice.

10 And she gave the king an hundred and twenty talents of gold, and of spices very great store, ⁶and precious stones: there came no more such abundance of spices as these which the queen of Sheba gave to king Solomon.

11 And the navy also of Hiram, that brought gold from Ophir, brought in from Ophir great plenty of ²almug-trees, and precious stones.

12 And the king made of the almug-trees ¹pillars for the house of the LORD, and for the king's house, harps also and psalteries for singers: there came no such almug-trees, nor were seen unto this day.

13 And king Solomon gave unto the queen of Sheba ⁴all her desire, whatsoever she asked, besides that ⁸which Solomon gave her of his royal bounty: so she turned, and went to her own country, she and her servants.

14 ¶ Now the weight of gold that came to Solomon in one year was six hundred threescore and six talents of gold, 15 Besides that he had of the merchant-men, and of the traffick of the spice-merchants, and of ¹all the kings of Arabia, and of the ⁹governors of the country.

16 ¶ And king Solomon made two hundred targets of beaten gold: six hundred shekels of gold went to one target.

17 And he made three hundred shields of beaten gold; three pound of gold went to one shield: and the king put them in the house of the forest of Lebanon.

18 ¶ Moreover, the king made ¹a great throne of ivory, and overlaid it with the best gold.

19 The throne had six steps, and the top of the throne was round ¹behind: and there were ²stays on either side on the place of the seat, and two lions stood beside the stays.

ruled in Arabia also, so that she might have come from Arabia, and have been Queen of Ethiopia; and, in that case, she would only have had to cross the Red Sea. Be this as it may, it is only the wise that love wisdom; and this queen reflected great credit on her sex and station, by the anxiety she manifested to hear the wisest of men, and by the expression of the feeling which arose in her bosom as she listened to his conversation. She confessed, that much as she had heard, the half had not been told her. This queen spoke as a person who knew the truth, inasmuch as she blessed God, who delighted in Solomon to set him on the throne of Israel. She herself was not 22 For the king had at sea a navy of Tharshish with the navy of Hiram: once in three years came the navy of Tharshish, bringing gold, and silver, ⁶ivory, and apes, and peacocks.

23 So king Solomon ²exceeded all the kings of the earth for riches and for wisdom.

24 ¶ And all the earth sought ⁶to Solomon, to hear his wisdom, which God had put in his heart.

CHAPTER XI.

¹ Solomon's wives and concubines in his old age draw him to idolatry: ⁹ God threateneth him: ¹⁴ his adversaries, ⁴¹ and death: ⁴⁸ Rehoboam succeedeth him.

BUT king Solomon ¹loved many strange women, (¹together with the daughter of Pharaoh,) women of the Moabites, Ammonites, Edomites, Zidonians, and Hittites;

Solomon received the Royal Stranger in a spirit, and treated her in a manner, worthy of his own peerless position. The queen had no reason to regret the visit she made; none will ever have reason to repent coming to Him, who is a greater than Solomon.

Chap. XI. 1-25. In the history of Solomon, as in that of his father, we reach the crisis when the horizon becomes first spotted with clouds, and then dark. The daughter of Pharaoh led the way in the path of mischief.

turn away your heart after their gods.
 4 Solomon clave unto these in love.

3 And he had seven hundred wives, princesses, and three hundred concubines: and his wives turned away his heart.

4 For it came to pass, when Solomon was old, that his wives turned away his heart after other gods: and his heart was not perfect with the LORD his God, as was the heart of David his father.

5 For Solomon went after Ashtoreth the goddess of the Zidonians, and after Milcom the abomination of the Ammonites.

6 And Solomon did evil in the sight of the LORD, and went not fully after the LORD, as did David his father.

7 Then did Solomon build an high place for Chemosh, the abomination of Moab, in the hill that is before Jerusalem, and for Molech, the abomination of the children of Ammon.

8 And likewise did he for all his strange wives, which burnt incense, and sacrificed unto their gods.

9 ¶ And the LORD was angry with Solomon, because his heart was turned from the LORD God of Israel, which had appeared unto him twice,

10 And had commanded him concerning this thing, that he should not go after other gods: but he kept not that which the LORD commanded.

11 Wherefore the LORD said unto Solomon, Forasmuch as this is done of thee, and thou hast not kept my covenant, and my statutes, which I have commanded thee, I will surely rend the kingdom from thee, and will give it to thy servant.

12 Notwithstanding in thy days I will not do it for David thy father's sake: but I will rend it out of the hand of thy son.

13 Howbeit I will not rend away all the kingdom; but will give one tribe to thy son for David my servant's sake, and for Jerusalem's sake, which I have chosen.

14 ¶ And the LORD stirred up an adversary unto Solomon, Hadad the Edomite: he was of the king's seed in Edom.

15 For it came to pass, when David was in Edom, and Joab the captain of the host was gone up to bury the slain, after he had smitten every male in Edom,

16 (For six months did Joab remain there with all Israel, until he had cut off every male in Edom.)

17 That Hadad fled, he, and certain Edomites of his father's servants with him, to go into Egypt; Hadad being yet a little child.

18 And they arose out of Midian, and came to Paran: and they took men with them out of Paran, and they came to Egypt, unto Pharaoh king of Egypt; which gave him an house, and appointed him victuals, and gave him land.

19 And Hadad found great favour in the sight of Pharaoh, so that he gave him to wife the sister of his own wife, the sister of Tahpenes the queen.

20 And the sister of Tahpenes bare him Genubath his son, whom Tahpenes weaned in Pharaoh's house: and Genubath was in Pharaoh's household among the sons of Pharaoh.

21 And when Hadad heard in Egypt that David slept with his fathers, and that Joab the captain of the host was dead, Hadad said to Pharaoh, Let me depart, that I may go to mine own country.

22 Then Pharaoh said unto him, But what hast thou lacked with me, that, behold, thou seekest to go to thine own country? And he answered, Nothing: howbeit let me go in any wise.

23 ¶ And God stirred him up another adversary, Rezon the son of Eliadah, which fled from his lord Hadadezer king of Zobah.

24 And he gathered men unto him, and became captain over a band, when David slew them of Zobah: and they went to Damascus, and dwelt therein, and reigned in Damascus.

25 And he was an adversary to Israel all the days of Solomon, besides the mischief that Hadad did: and he abhorred Israel, and reigned over Syria.

26 ¶ And Jeroboam the son of Nebat, an Ephrathite of Zereda, Solomon's servant, (whose mother's name was Zeruah, a widow woman,) even he lifted up his hand against the king.

27 And this was the cause that he lifted up his hand against the king: Solomon built Millo, and repaired the breaches of the city of David his father.

To her was added associates from Moab, Ammon, Edom, Zidon, and the land of the Hittites, nations concerning whom the command was express and absolute, that Israel should have no intercourse with them, on the ground that they would turn away the heart of the people after their gods. Solomon disobeyed, and fell into the snare. The mind is shocked in the contemplation of his follies; it seems almost incredible, that a man so blessed and honoured, and withal so wise, and at the outset so good, should have erred so grievously. But as he sowed he reaped; the Lord was displeased, and, in consequence, determined to rend the kingdom from him, and give it to one of his servants. Still mercy prevailed over judgment, and the unworthy son received indulgence, not for his own sake, but for that of his worthy father. The springs of evil were now broken up, and, in furtherance of the Divine purposes, an enemy arose in the person of Hadad the Edomite. To him was added Rezon, who proved a source of sore affliction to Solomon all the days of his life. Ver. 26-43. Jeroboam followed, bringing with him a mighty train of disaster. The promises made to him are full of peace and kindness; and had he only proved obedient, he might have been one of the greatest of Israel's kings. Solomon, instead of repenting, sought to kill him, although Jeroboam had done him no wrong. The purpose illustrates the spirit of Solomon at the time, shewing that the judgment denounced against him on account of his iniquities had tended to harden rather than to melt him. The history of the erring monarch is here cut short. His work is done; his time is come; and he sleeps with his fathers, leaving behind him an awful lesson to mankind. No king ever attained to such height of exaltation; none ever descended into such depths of degradation.

28 And the man Jeroboam was a mighty man of valour : and Solomon seeing the young man that he ¹was industrious, ²he made him ruler over all the ³charge of ⁴the house of Joseph.

29 And it came to pass at that time, when Jeroboam went out of Jerusalem, that the prophet ¹Ahijah the ²Shilonite found him in the way ; and he had clad himself with a new garment : ³and they two were alone in the field :

30 And Ahijah caught the new garment that was on him, and ¹rent it in twelve pieces.

31 And he said to Jeroboam, Take thee ten pieces ; for thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, Behold, I will rend the kingdom out of the hand of Solomon, and will give ten tribes to thee :

32 (But he shall have one tribe for my servant David's sake, and for Jerusalem's sake, the city which I have chosen out of all the tribes of Israel :)

33 Because that ¹they have forsaken me, and have worshipped Ashtoreth the goddess of the Zidonians, Chemosh the god of the Moabites, and Milcom the god of the children of Ammon, and have not walked in my ways, to do that which is right in mine eyes, and to keep my statutes and my judgments, as did David his father.

34 Howbeit I will not take the whole kingdom out of his hand : but I will make him prince all the days of his life for David my servant's sake, whom I chose, because he kept my commandments and my statutes ;

35 But I will take the kingdom out of his son's hand, and ¹will give it unto thee, even ten tribes.

36 And unto his son will I give one tribe, that ¹David my servant may have ²a light always before me in Jerusalem, the city which I have chosen me to put my name there.

37 And I will take thee, and thou shalt reign ¹according to all that thy soul desireth, and shalt be king over Israel.

38 And it shall be, ¹if thou wilt hearken unto all that I command thee, and wilt walk in my ways, and do that is right in my sight, to keep my statutes and my commandments, as David my servant did, ²that I will be with thee, and ³build thee

40 Solomon ¹sought therefore to kill Jeroboam : and Jeroboam arose, and fled into Egypt, unto ²Shishak king of Egypt, and was in Egypt until the death of Solomon.

CHAPTER XII.

1 Rehoboam refusing the old men's counsel, 16 ten tribes revolt. 26 Jeroboam's idolatry.

AND ¹Rehoboam went to ²Shechem : ³A for all Israel were come to Shechem to make him king.

2 And it came to pass, when ¹Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who was yet in Egypt, heard of it, (for he was fled from the presence of king Solomon, and Jeroboam dwelt in Egypt,)

3 That they sent and called him : and Jeroboam and all the congregation of Israel came, and spake unto Rehoboam, saying,

4 Thy father made ¹our yoke grievous : now therefore make thou the grievous service of thy father, and his heavy yoke which he put upon us, lighter, and we will serve thee.

5 And he said unto them, Depart yet for three days, then come again to me. And the people departed.

6 ¶ And king Rehoboam ¹consulted with the old men, that stood before Solomon his father while he yet lived, and said, How do ye advise that I may answer this people?

7 And they spake unto him, saying, If thou wilt be a servant unto this people this day, and wilt serve them, and answer them, and ¹speak good words to them, then they will be thy servants for ever.

8 But ¹he forsook the counsel of the old men, which they had given him, and con-tion. Truly, he that standeth does well to take heed lest he fall! As the promise had been fulfilled to the letter, so was the threatening. The chastisement was severe, but not unto death. The language of the Lord, in 2 Samuel vii. 14, 15, authorises the full belief that Solomon, in being gathered to his fathers, returned to the bosom of his God—"If he commit iniquity, I will chasten him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men; but my mercy shall not depart from him as I took it from Saul." These words are explicit. There can, therefore, be no doubt that this once glorious king is now in heaven, rejoicing in the sovereign mercy of the Lord God of his father David.

Chap. XII. 1-24. The death of Solomon was the signal for great events, affecting the future history of Israel. A change on the throne is always a proper time for performing works of an ameliorating character. It is a fit period to redress grievances, to make concessions, and to bestow favours. It here comes out, that Solomon, notwithstanding his wisdom and greatness, had oppressed his people to an extent which had been all but intolerable. Rehoboam acted as a wise man in taking time to consider before he gave an answer, and in calling to his aid the counsels of others, both old and young. The old men gave sound advice, on which they were unanimous; the young men, however, were not less unanimous in advising an opposite course. It was a great error for the old and the young to deliberate apart. Had they been together, the coolness of age might have tempered the fervour of youth. Society is composed of both young and old; and the mind by which it is ruled is one,—youth impelling age, and age regulating youth. Had the king's sulted with the young men that were grown up with him, and which stood before him :

9 And he said unto them, 'What counsel give ye that we may answer this people, who have spoken to me, saying, Make the yoke which thy father did put upon us lighter ?

10 And the young men that were grown up with him spake unto him, saying, ^aThus shalt thou speak unto this people that spake unto thee, saying, Thy father made our yoke heavy, but make thou it lighter unto us ; thus shalt thou say unto them, 'My little finger shall be thicker than my father's loins.

11 And now whereas my father did lade you with a heavy yoke, ^mI will add to your yoke : my father hath chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with ⁿscorpions.

12 ¶ So Jeroboam and all the people came to Rehoboam the third day, as the king had appointed, saying, ^oCome to me again the third day.

13 And the king ^panswered the people ^rroughly, and forsook the old men's counsel that they gave him ;

14 And spake to them after ^qthe counsel of the young men, saying, 'My father made your yoke heavy, and I will add to your yoke : my father also chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions.

15 Wherefore the king hearkened not unto the people ; for ^sthe cause was from the LORD, ^tthat he might perform his saying, which the LORD spake by Ahijah the Shilonite unto Jeroboam the son of Nebat.

16 ¶ So when all Israel saw that the king hearkened not unto them, the people answered the king, saying, 'What portion have we in David ? neither have we inheritance in the son of Jesse : ^uto your tents, O Israel : ^vnow see to thine own house, David. So ^wIsrael departed unto their tents.

17 But as for ^xthe children of Israel which dwelt in the cities of Judah, Rehoboam reigned over them.

18 Then king Rehoboam sent ^yAdoram, who was over the tribute ; and ^zall Israel stoned him with stones, that he died : therefore king Rehoboam ^{aa}made speed to get him up to his chariot, to ^{ab}flee to Jerusalem.

19 So ^{ac}Israel ^{ad}rebelled against the house of David ^{ae}unto this day.

20 ¶ And it came to pass, when all Israel heard that Jeroboam was come again, that they sent and called him unto the congregation, ^aand made him king over all Israel : there was ^bnone that followed the house of David but the tribe of Judah only.

21 ¶ And ^cwhen Rehoboam was come to Jerusalem, he assembled all the house of Judah, with the tribe of Benjamin, ^dan hundred and fourscore thousand chosen men, which were warriors, to fight against the house of Israel, to bring the kingdom again to Rehoboam the son of Solomon.

22 ^eBut the word of God came unto Shemaiah ^fthe man of God, saying,

23 Speak unto Rehoboam, the son of Solomon, king of Judah, and unto all the house of Judah and Benjamin, and to the remnant of the people, saying,

24 Thus saith the LORD, ^gYe shall not go up, nor fight against your brethren the children of Israel : return every man to his house ; for this thing is from me. ^hThey hearkened therefore to the word of the LORD, and returned to depart, according to the word of the LORD.

25 ¶ Then Jeroboam ⁱbuilt Shechem in mount Ephraim, and dwelt therein ; and went out from thence, and built ^jPenuel.

26 ¶ And Jeroboam ^ksaid in his heart, 'Now shall the kingdom return to the house of David :

27 If this people ^lgo up to do sacrifice in the house of the LORD at Jerusalem, then shall the heart of this people turn again unto their lord, even unto Rehoboam king of Judah, ^mand they shall kill me, and go again to Rehoboam king of Judah.

28 Whereupon the king took counsel, and made ⁿtwo calves of gold, and said unto them, 'It is too much for you to go up to Jerusalem : ^obehold thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.

29 And he set the one in Beth-el, and the other put he in Dan.

30 And this thing ^pbecame a sin : for the people went to worship before the one, even unto Dan.

31 And he made an house of high places, and made ^qpriests of the lowest of the people, which were not of the sons of Levi.

32 And Jeroboam ordained a feast in the eighth month, on the fifteenth day of the month, ^rlike unto the feast that is in Judah ; and he ^soffered upon the altar, (so worst enemies been called to advise, and been intent on giving the counsel most likely to effect his overthrow, they could not have been more successful. The answer, as dictated by the young men, is the perfection of impropriety, insult, and outrage. "I will add to your yoke ; my father hath chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions." Thus an important prediction was fulfilled through the folly of a few individuals—the kingdom was rent in twain ; or rather, ten tribes—that is, the mass of the nation—in one day withdrew their allegiance from the son of Solomon. His sovereignty was thus reduced to a narrow range ; and yet so infatuated was he, that, with one tribe, he resolved by force of arms to subdue the revolted millions. Ver. 25-33. Jeroboam saw deeply into the springs of human nature. He knew the force of habit, and the influence of associates, and with a view to apply a corrective, and so to preserve his own supremacy, he systematically perpetrated a deed of the highest enormity, by setting up a regular establishment of idolatry. Instead of the Temple of Solomon, he made "a house of high places, and made priests of the lowest of the people, which were not of the sons of Levi." Rehoboam forgot his father's maxim—"He that walketh with wise men shall be wise.

did he in Beth-el, ⁵sacrificing unto the calves that he had made: and he placed in Beth-el the priests of the high places which he had made.

33 So he ⁶offered upon the altar which he had made in Beth-el the fifteenth day of the eighth month, even ⁷in the month which he had devised of his own heart; and ordained a feast unto the children of Israel: and he offered upon the altar, and ⁸burnt incense.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Jeroboam's hand withereth; 6 and at the prayer of the prophet is restored. 23 The disobedient prophet is slain by a lion. 33 Jeroboam's obstinacy.

AND, behold, there came ^aa man of God out of Judah ^bby the word of the LORD unto Beth-el: and ^cJeroboam stood by the altar to ^dburn incense.

2 And he cried against the altar in the word of the LORD, and said, ^eO altar, altar! thus saith the LORD, Behold, a child shall be born unto the house of David, ^fJosiah by name; and upon thee shall he offer the priests of the high places that burn incense upon thee, and men's bones shall be burnt upon thee.

3 And ^ghe gave a sign the same day, saying, This is the sign which the LORD hath spoken; Behold, the altar shall be rent, and the ashes that are upon it shall be poured out.

4 ^hAnd it came to pass, when king Jeroboam heard the saying of the man of God, which had cried against the altar in Beth-el, that he put forth his hand from the altar, saying, ⁱLay hold on him. And ^jhis hand, which he put forth against him, dried up, so that he could not pull it in again to him.

5 The altar also was rent, and the ashes poured out from the altar, ^kaccording to the sign which the man of God had given by the word of the LORD.

6 And the king answered and said unto the man of God, ^lEntreat now the face of the LORD thy God, and pray for me, that my hand may be restored me again. ^mAnd the man of God besought the ⁿLORD, and the king's hand was restored him again, and became as it was before.

house, ¹I will not go in with thee, neither will I eat bread nor drink water in this place:

9 For ²so was it charged me by the word of the LORD, saying, ³Eat no bread, nor drink water, nor turn again by the same way that thou camest.

10 So he went another way, and returned not by the way that he came to Beth-el.

11 ⁴Now there dwelt ⁵an old prophet in Beth-el; and his ⁶sons ⁷came and told him all the works that the man of God had done that day in Beth-el: the words which he had spoken unto the king, them they told also to their father.

12 And their father said unto them, What way went he? For his sons had seen what way the man of God went which came from Judah.

13 And he said unto his sons, ⁸Saddle me the ass. So they saddled him the ass: and he rode thereon, 14 And went after the man of God, and found him ⁹sitting under an oak: and he said unto him, ¹⁰Art thou the man of God that camest from Judah? And he said, I am.

15 Then he said unto him, Come home with me, and eat bread.

16 And he said, ¹¹I may not return with thee, nor go in with thee: neither will I eat bread nor drink water with thee in this place:

17 For ¹²it was said to me ¹³by the word of the LORD, Thou shalt eat no bread nor drink water there, nor turn again to go by the way that thou camest.

18 He said unto him, I am a prophet also as thou art; and ¹⁴an angel spake unto me by the word of the LORD, saying, Bring him back with thee into thine house, that he may eat bread and drink water. ¹⁵But he lied unto him.

19 So ¹⁶he went back with him, and did eat bread in his house, and drank water.

20 ¹⁷And it came to pass, as they sat at the table, that ¹⁸the word of the LORD came unto the prophet that brought him back:

21 And he cried unto the man of God that came from Judah, saying, ¹⁹Thus saith the LORD, Forasmuch as ²⁰thou hast disobeyed the mouth of the LORD, and hast not kept the commandment which the LORD thy God commanded thee,

22 But camest back, and hast eaten

but the companion of fools shall be destroyed." To gratify pride, he lost a kingdom.

Chap. XIII. 1-10. We have here, in ver. 2, a prophecy of a most distinct and remarkable character. The name, family, and office of an individual are described 975 years before the coming of Christ; and about 350 years after the prediction was given, it was accomplished in all its parts: 2 Kings xxiii. 15-20. Jeroboam, at the outset, received a solemn admonition in the temporary judgment that was inflicted upon him. This event alone ought to have awakened him from his stupor; but nothing short of Divine grace can rouse men from the sleep of death. The prophet acted with great dignity towards the king, setting light by his hospitality, and also by his proffered reward for effecting a restoration of his arm by means of prayer. Ver. 11-32. The character of this old prophet is attended with difficulty. Some have thought him a false prophet and a bad man, on the ground that he told a deliberate lie, impiously charging it upon God. Others have held that he was a true prophet, and that the lie was merely officious, proceeding, not from malice, but humanity, to save the man of God from the perils of hunger and fatigue. The whole of his conduct was strange and unsatisfactory. After he had seen the fruit of his lie in the destruction of his guest, he seems to have had some relintings. In burying the dead, he mourned over him, saying, "Alas, my brother!" He might have said, "my victim." The wish to be buried in the same grave, can only be explained by the supposition of his repentance, and his attachment to the man he had so grievously wronged. The act was a species of confession, bread and drunk water in the place of the which the LORD did say to thee, Eat no bread, and drink no water; ¹thy carcase shall not come unto the sepulchre of thy fathers.

23 ¶ And it came to pass, after he had eaten bread, and after he had drunk, that he saddled for him the ass, to wit, for the prophet whom he had brought back.

24 And when he was gone, ¹a lion met him by the way, and slew him: and his carcase was cast in the way, and the ass stood by it, the lion also stood by the carcase.

25 And, behold, men passed by, and saw the carcase cast in the way, and the lion standing by the carcase: and they came and told ^{it} in the city where the old prophet dwelt.

26 ¶ And when the prophet that brought him back from the way heard thereof, he said, It is ¹the man of God, who was disobedient unto the word of the LORD; therefore the LORD hath delivered him unto the lion, which hath ⁶torn him, and slain him, according to the word of the LORD which he spake unto him.

27 And he spake to his sons, saying, Saddle me the ass. And they saddled him.

28 And he went, and found his carcase cast in the way, and the ass and the lion standing by the carcase: ¹the lion had not eaten the carcase, nor ⁶torn the ass.

29 And the prophet took up the carcase of the man of God, and laid it upon the ass, and brought it back: and the old prophet came to the city, to mourn, and to bury him.

30 And he laid his carcase in his own grave: and they ^mmourned over him, saying, Alas, my brother!

31 And it came to pass, after he had buried him, that he spake to his sons, saying, When I am dead, then bury me in the sepulchre wherein the man of God is buried; ¹lay my bones beside his bones:

32 For ^othe saying which he cried by the word of the LORD against the altar in Beth-el, and against all ^pthe houses of the high places which are ^qin the cities of Samaria, shall surely come to pass.

33 ¶ After this thing ^rJeroboam returned not from his evil way, but ^rmade

CHAPTER XIV.

1 Abijah being sick, Jeroboam sendeth his wife, disguised, with presents to the prophet Ahijah at Shiloh. 5 Abijah, forewarned, denounceth God's judgment.

AT ¹that time Abijah ²the son of Jeroboam fell sick.

2 And Jeroboam said to his wife, Arise, I pray thee, and ¹disguise thyself, that thou be not known to be the wife of Jeroboam, and get thee to Shiloh; behold, there is ⁴Ahijah the prophet, which told me that ^I should be king over this people.

3 And ¹take ¹with thee ten loaves, and ²cracknels, and a ³cruse of honey, and go to him: ¹he shall tell thee what shall become of the child.

4 And Jeroboam's wife did so, and arose, and went to ²Shiloh, and came to the house of Ahijah: but Ahijah could not see; ²for his eyes ⁴were set by reason of his age.

5 ¶ And ¹the LORD said unto Ahijah, Behold, the wife of Jeroboam cometh to ask a thing of thee for her son; for he ^{is} sick: thus and thus shalt thou say unto her; for it shall be, when she cometh in, that she shall feign herself ^{to be} another woman.

6 And it was so, when Ahijah heard the sound of her feet, as she came in at the door, that he said, Come in, ¹thou wife of Jeroboam; ¹why feignest thou thyself ^{to be} another? ¹for I am sent to thee ^{with} ¹heavy tidings.

7 Go, tell Jeroboam, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel; ¹Forasmuch as I exalted thee from among the people, and made thee prince over my people Israel,

8 And ¹rent the kingdom away from the house of David, and gave it thee; and yet thou hast not been as ¹my servant David, who kept my commandments, and who followed me with all his heart, to do that only which was right in mine eyes;

9 But ¹hast done evil above all that were before thee: for ¹thou hast gone and, to some extent, of reparation. Ver. 33, 34. Nothing can move Jeroboam from his evil way. His character was reflected through the priesthood he created, for he went on to make "the lowest of the people priests of the high places: whosoever would he consecrated him, and he became one of the priests of the high places." Thus the priests were worthy of the king that created them; and, on the principle, "Like priest, like people," they might be taken as fair representatives of the idolatrous multitudes, the subjects of Jeroboam. Such a priesthood was well fitted to perfect the moral and the spiritual desolation which Jeroboam had so resolutely begun.

Chap. XIV. 1-20. When affliction overtook Jeroboam, he sought not to his own idolatrous priesthood, but to the prophet of the Lord, and in doing this, he resorted to craft, foolishly shutting his eyes to the absurdity of his project of concealment. The present was a very small one, such as was thought to comport with the character of a woman in humble circumstances. This system of presents obtains to the present hour. A traveller states, that having waited on an Arab Emir, his mother and sister sent him early on the morning after his arrival a present of pastry, honey, and fresh butter, with a basin of sweetmeats,—a present much the same as that provided by the wife of Jeroboam. The surprise and confusion of the king's wife may be readily conceived, when the blind prophet, on hearing her footsteps, said—"Come in, thou wife of Jeroboam; why feignest thou thyself to be another?" "Heavy tidings" were a meet reward for such an attempt at deception. The death of the child at the moment foretold, was another proof of the unerring information of the aged prophet, that was eminently calculated to produce reflection in the mind of the idolatrous king, and to bring him back to the love and service of the true God, who had so and made thee other gods, and molten images, "to provoke me to anger, and hast 'cast me behind thy back;

10 Therefore, behold, "I will bring evil upon the house of Jeroboam, and will cut off from Jeroboam "him that pisseth against the wall, and 'him that is shut up and left in Israel, and will take away the remnant of the house of Jeroboam, "as a man taketh away dung, till it be all gone.

11 Him "that dieth of Jeroboam in the city shall the dogs eat; and him that dieth in the field shall the fowls of the air eat: for the LORD hath spoken it.

12 Arise thou therefore, get thee to thine own house; and 'when thy feet enter into the city, the child shall die.

13 And all Israel "shall mourn for him, and bury him; for he only of Jeroboam shall come to the grave, because in him "there is found some good thing toward the LORD God of Israel in the house of Jeroboam.

14 Moreover, "the LORD shall raise him up a king over Israel, who shall cut off the house of Jeroboam that day; 'but what? even now.

15 ¶ For "the LORD shall smite Israel, "as a reed is shaken in the water, and he shall 'root up Israel out of "this good land, which he gave to their fathers, and 'shall scatter them beyond the river, "because they have made their groves, provoking the LORD to anger.

16 And "he shall give Israel up because of the sins of Jeroboam, "who did sin, and who made Israel to sin.

17 ¶ And Jeroboam's wife arose, and departed, and came to "Tirzah: and when she came to the threshold of the door, the child died;

18 And they buried him; and all Israel mourned for him, according to the word of the LORD, which he spake by the hand of his servant Ahijah the prophet.

19 ¶ And the rest of the acts of Jeroboam, "how he warred, and how he reigned, behold, they are written "in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel.

20 And the days which Jeroboam reigned were two and twenty years: and he "slept with his fathers; and "Nadab his son reigned in his stead.

reigned in Judah. "Rehoboam was forty and one years old when he began to reign; and he reigned seventeen years in Jerusalem, the city which the LORD did choose out of all the tribes of Israel, "to put his name there: and his mother's name was "Naamah, an Ammonitess.

22 And "Judah did evil in the sight of the LORD, and they provoked him to jealousy with their sins which they had committed, "above all that their fathers had done.

23 For they also "built them high places, and 'images, and 'groves, on every high hill, and under every green tree.

24 And "there were also sodomites in the land: and they did according to all the abominations of the nations which the LORD cast out before the children of Israel.

25 ¶ And it came to pass in the fifth year of king Rehoboam, that Shishak king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem:

26 And he took away the treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king's house; he even took away all: and he took away all "the shields of gold which Solomon had made.

27 And king Rehoboam "made in their stead brassen shields, and committed them unto the hands of the chief of the "guard, which kept the door of the king's house.

28 And it was so, when the king went into the house of the LORD, that the guard bare them, and brought them back into the guard-chamber.

29 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Rehoboam, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

30 And "there was war between Rehoboam and Jeroboam all their days.

31 And Rehoboam slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David: and his mother's name was Naamah, an Ammonitess; and "Abijah his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XV.

1 Abijah's wicked reign; 8 Asa succeedeth him; 24 Asa dying, Jehoshaphat succeedeth. 33 Baasha's wicked reign.

NOW, "in the eighteenth year of king Jeroboam the son of Nebat reigned Abijah over Judah.

exalted him. Ver. 21-23. Although Rehoboam consulted the young men, the men of his own age, he was after all far from juvenile when he began his reign, being then in his forty-first year. Having thus reached the prime of life, he ought to have manifested more discretion. Beginning ill, he ended worse, learning nothing from either time or chastisement. Israel was never in so bad a state as at the time of his decease, after an unworthy reign of seventeen years. Idolatry in Judah had then approached its meridian, since they "built high places and images, and groves on every high hill, and under every green tree," while the sodomites of the land provoked the wrath of Heaven. The life of man, whether of kings or subjects, must come to an end; and it is only then that their whole character can be estimated. It has often happened that the end has been better than the beginning; and the latter life has been a laborious effort to repair the errors of earlier years. Both Jeroboam and Rehoboam, however, waxed worse and worse; their career to life's last hour was a downward, headlong course.

Chap. XV. 1-15. Abijah did not profit by the history of his father, but he, too, had patience extended towards him for David's sake. His race was soon run, and at the close he left nothing for the historian to record to his honour. It is mercy to a nation when the course of a bad king is cut short. Three years sufficed for him, while to his son Asa was accorded a reign of no less than forty-one. It is refreshing, in the midst of so much that is offensive to the moral and spiritual sense, to reach such a record as that of Asa. No sooner was he elevated

3 And he walked in ^eall the sins of his father, which he had done before him : ^fand his heart was not perfect with the LORD his God, as the heart of David his father.

4 Nevertheless, ^gfor David's sake, did the LORD his God ^hgive him a ⁱlamp in Jerusalem, to set up his son after him, ^jand to establish Jerusalem ;

15 And ^{ad}he brought in the ^{ae}things which his father had dedicated, and the things which himself had dedicated, into the house of the LORD, silver, and gold, and vessels.

16 ¶ And ^{af}there was war between Asa and Baasha king of Israel all their days.

17 And ^{ag}Baasha king of Israel went up against Judah, and built ^{ah}Ramah, that ^{ai}he might not suffer any to go out or come in to Asa king of Judah.

18 Then ^{aj}Asa took all the silver and the gold that were left in the treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king's house, and delivered them into the hand of his servants ; and king Asa sent them to ¹Ben-hadad, the son of Tabrimon, the son of Hezion, king of Syria, that dwelt at ²Damascus, saying, 19 There is a ³league between me and thee, and between my father and thy father : behold, I have sent unto thee a present of silver and gold ; come and ⁴break thy league with Baasha king of Israel, that he may ⁵depart from me.

20 So Ben-hadad hearkened unto king Asa, and sent the captains of the hosts which he had against the cities of Israel, and smote ⁶Ijon, and ⁷Dan, and ⁸Abel-beth-maachah, and all ⁹Cineroth, with all the land of Naphtali.

21 And it came to pass, ¹⁰when Baasha heard thereof, that he left off building of Ramah, and dwelt in ¹¹Tirzah.

22 Then king Asa ¹²made a proclamation throughout all Judah ; (none was ¹³exempted) ; and they took away the stones of Ramah, and the timber thereof, wherewith Baasha had builded ; and king Asa built with them Geba of Benjamin, and ¹⁴Mizpah.

23 ¶ The ¹⁵rest of all the acts of Asa, and all his might, and all that he did, and the cities which he built, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah? Nevertheless ¹⁶in the time of his old age he was diseased in his feet.

24 And Asa slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David his father : and ¹⁷Jehoshaphat his son reigned in his stead.

25 ¶ And ¹⁸Nadab the son of Jeroboam ¹⁹began to reign over Israel in the second year of Asa king of Judah, and reigned over Israel two years.

26 And ²⁰he did evil in the sight of the LORD, and ²¹walked in the way of his father, and ²²in his sin wherewith he made Israel to sin.

27 ¶ And ²³Baasha the son of Ahijah, of the house of Issachar, ²⁴conspired against him : and Baasha smote him at ²⁵Gibbethon, which belonged to the Philistines ; (for Nadab and all Israel laid siege to Gibbethon ;)

28 Even ²⁶in the third year of Asa king of Judah did Baasha slay him, and reigned in his stead.

29 And it came to pass, when he reigned, that he smote all the house of Jeroboam ; ²⁷he left not to Jeroboam any that breathed, until he had destroyed him, according unto the saying of the LORD, which he spake by his servant Ahijah the Shilonite :

30 Because of ²⁸the sins of Jeroboam which he sinned, and which he made Israel sin, by his provocation wherewith to power than he began to exert it for the glory of God and the good of the country. No false tenderness to either his father's memory or his mother's feelings led him to compromise the glory of God. Having removed the Sodomites, he destroyed the idols that his father had made, and removed his mother from the throne on account of her idolatry, at the same time destroying her idols. These decisive and praiseworthy movements are traced to the state of the royal mind. Asa's heart was "perfect with the Lord all his days." This noble testimony supplies the key to his conduct, which was worthy of the man, the saint, and the king. Ver. 16-34. In he provoked the LORD God of Israel to anger.

31 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Nadab, and all that he did, are ¹they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

32 And there was war between Asa and Baasha king of Israel all their days.

33 In the third year of Asa king of Judah began Baasha the son of Ahijah to reign over all Israel in Tirzah, ²twenty and four years.

34 And he did evil in the sight of the LORD, and ³walked in the way of Jeroboam, and in his sin wherewith he made Israel to sin.

CHAPTER XVI.

1 Jehu's prophecy against Baasha. 8 Zimri's conspiracy. 29 Ahab's wicked reign. 34 Joshua's curse fulfilled upon Hiel the builder of Jericho.

THEN the word of the LORD came to ¹Jehu the son of ²Hanani against Baasha, saying,

2 Forasmuch as ³I exalted thee out of the dust, and made thee prince over my people Israel, and ⁴thou hast walked in the way of Jeroboam, and ⁵hast made my people Israel to sin, to provoke me to anger with their sins;

3 Behold, I will take away the posterity of Baasha, and the posterity of his house; and ⁶will make thy house like the house of Jeroboam the son of Nebat.

4 Him that dieth of Baasha in the city ⁷shall the dogs eat; and him that dieth of his in the field shall the fowls of the air eat.

5 ¶ Now ⁸the rest of the acts of Baasha, and what he did, and his might, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

6 So ⁹Baasha slept with his fathers, and was buried in Tirzah: and ¹⁰Elah his son reigned in his stead.

7 And also by ¹¹the hand of the prophet Jehu the son of Hanani came the word of the LORD against Baasha, and against his house, even for all the evil that he did in the sight of the LORD, in provoking him to anger ¹²with the work of his hands, in being like the house of Jeroboam; and ¹³because he killed him.

8 ¶ In the twenty and sixth year of Asa king of Judah began Elah the son of Baasha to reign over Israel in Tirzah, two years.

9 And his servant Zimri (captain of ¹⁴half his chariots) ¹⁵conspired against him, as he was in Tirzah, ¹⁶drinking himself drunk in the house of Arza, ¹⁷steward of his house in Tirzah.

10 And ¹⁸Zimri went in and smote him, and killed him, in the twenty and seventh year of Asa king of Judah, and ¹⁹reigned in his stead.

11 ¶ And it came to pass, when he began to reign, as soon as he sat on his throne, that ²⁰he slew all the house of Baasha: ²¹he left him not one that pisseth against a wall, ²²neither of his kinsfolks nor of his friends.

12 Thus did Zimri destroy all the house of Baasha, ²³according to the word of the LORD, which he spake against Baasha ²⁴by Jehu the prophet;

13 For all the sins of Baasha, and the sins of Elah his son, by which they sinned, and by which they made Israel to sin, in provoking the LORD God of Israel to anger with their ²⁵vanities.

14 Now the rest of the acts of Elah, and all that he did, are ²⁶they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

15 ¶ In the twenty and seventh year of Asa king of Judah did Zimri reign ²⁷seven days in Tirzah: and the people were ²⁸encamped against Gibbethon, which belonged to the Philistines.

16 And the people that were encamped heard say, Zimri hath conspired, and hath also slain the king: wherefore all Israel made ²⁹Omri, the captain of the host, king over Israel that day in the camp.

17 And Omri went up from Gibbethon, and all Israel with him, and they ³⁰besieged Tirzah.

18 And it came to pass, when Zimri saw that the city was taken, that he went into the palace of the king's house, and ³¹burnt the king's house over him with fire, and died, 19 For his sins which he sinned ³²in doing evil in the sight of the LORD, in walking in the way of Jeroboam, and ³³in his sin which he did, to make Israel to sin.

20 Now ³⁴the rest of the acts of Zimri, and his treason that he wrought, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

21 ¶ Then were the people of Israel divided into two parts: half of the people followed Tibni the son of Ginath, to make him king; and half followed Omri.

22 But the people that followed Omri prevailed against the people that followed due season, through a complicated course of public affairs, the instrumentality was produced by which vengeance was to be taken on Jeroboam. The desolation of his house was complete; "there was not left to him any that breathed." His line was extinguished "because of the sins which he sinned, and which he made Israel to sin." Sin and punishment cannot be separated. Through the tender mercy of God they may be far apart, but every hour will bring them nearer, till at last the bolt descends on the evil-doer. The Judge of all the earth fails not to do right.

Chap. XVI. 1-18. Baasha's doom, and the ruin of his family, succeeded as the punishment of iniquity. He was a man of great energy, and capable of the most daring exploits,—a man every way likely to build up a house; but he departed from the living God, and gave his heart to idols, which brought upon him desolation. Ver. 15-28. In the contentions of ambitious men, such as Zimri and Omri, nations are afflicted and sins are punished; the contending parties are made the instruments of each other's chastisements. The ascension of Ahab was an evil day for Israel. He commenced his career with a character which boded nothing but mischief. A man "who did evil in the sight of the Lord above all that were before him, in proportion to his power, would be a Tibni the son of Ginath: so Tibni died, and Omri reigned.

23 ¶ In the thirty and first year ^b of Asa king of Judah began Omri to reign over Israel, ^ctwelve years: six years reigned he in Tirzah.

24 And he bought the hill Samaria of Shemer for two talents of silver, and built on the hill, and called ^kthe name of the city which he built, after the name of Shemer, owner of the hill, ^dSamaria.

25 ¶ But Omri wrought evil in the eyes of the LORD, and ^ddid worse than all that ^{were} before him.

26 For ^mhe walked in all the way of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, and in his sin wherewith he made Israel to sin, to provoke the LORD God of Israel to anger with ⁿtheir vanities.

27 Now ^othe rest of the acts of Omri which he did, and his might that he shewed, ^{are} they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

28 So Omri ^pslept with his fathers, and was buried in Samaria: and Ahab his son reigned in his stead.

29 ¶ And in the thirty and eighth year of Asa king of Judah began Ahab the son of Omri to reign over Israel: and Ahab the son of Omri reigned over Israel ^qin Samaria twenty and two years.

30 And Ahab the son of Omri did evil in the sight of the LORD ^rabove all that ^{were} before him.

31 And it came to pass, ^sas if it had been ^aa light thing for him to walk in the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, that he ^ttook to wife ^uJezebel, the daughter of Ethbaal, king of ^vthe Zidonians, ^wand went and ^xserved Baal, and worshipped him.

32 And he reared up an altar for Baal in ^ythe house of Baal, which he had built in Samaria.

33 And Ahab ^bmade a grove; and Ahab ^cdid more to provoke the LORD God of Israel to anger than all the kings of Israel that were before him.

34 ¶ In his days did Hiel the Beth-elite build Jericho: he laid the foundation thereof in Abiram his first-born, and set up the gates thereof in his youngest son Segub, according to the word of the LORD, which he spake by Joshua the son of Nun.

curse to his own and to surrounding nations. The evil attributes which composed his character were compacted and strengthened by his union with Jezebel, the daughter of an idolatrous king. This woman was destined to perform a noted part in his wicked career. Great was the evil she did directly herself, as well as the evil to which she prompted her husband. Ver. 34. This is a verse of very great importance, as supplying the fulfilment of the remarkable prediction, uttered several hundred years before, in Joshua vi. 26. The eldest son of Hiel died when the foundation was laid, and his youngest son when the wall of the city was finished. Such fulfilments were eminently calculated to fix public attention on the character and lessons of the prophets of the Lord, and to rebuke the infatuation of idolaters.

CHAPTER XVII.

1 Elijah, prophesying against Ahab, is sent to Cherith, where the ravens feed him. 8 He is sent to the widow of Zarephath. 17 He raiseth the widow's son.

AND ¹Elijah the Tishbite, who was of the inhabitants of Gilead, said unto Ahab, ²As the LORD God of Israel liveth, ³before whom I stand, there shall not be ⁴dew nor rain these years, but according to my word.

2 And ⁵the word of the LORD came unto him, saying,

3 Get thee hence, and turn thee eastward, and ⁶hide thyself by the brook Cherith, that ⁷is before Jordan.

4 And it shall be, ⁸that thou shalt drink of the brook; and ⁹I have commanded the ravens to feed thee there.

5 So he went, and ¹⁰did according unto the word of the LORD: for he went and dwelt by the brook Cherith, that ¹¹is before Jordan.

6 And ¹²the ravens brought him bread and flesh in the morning, and bread and flesh in the evening; and he drank of the brook.

7 And it came to pass, ¹³after a while, that ¹⁴the brook dried up, because there had been no rain in the land.

8 ¶ And ¹⁵the word of the LORD came unto him, saying,

9 Arise, get thee to ¹⁶Zarephath, ¹⁷in which ¹⁸belongeth to Zidon, and dwell there: behold, I have commanded a ¹⁹widow woman there to sustain thee.

10 So he arose, and went to Zarephath: and when he came to the gate of the city, behold, the widow woman was there gathering of sticks; and he called to her, and said, ²⁰Fetch me, I pray thee, a little water in a vessel, that I may drink.

11 And ²¹as she was going to fetch it, he called to her, and said, Bring me, I pray thee, ²²a morsel of bread in thine hand.

12 And she said, ²³As the LORD thy God liveth, I have not a cake, ²⁴but an handful of meal in a barrel, and a little oil in a cruse: and, behold, I ²⁵am gathering two sticks, that I may go in and dress it for me and my son, ²⁶that we may eat it, and die.

13 And Elijah said unto her, ²⁷Fear not; go and do as thou hast said: but ²⁸make me thereof a little cake ²⁹first, and bring ³⁰it unto me, and after make for thee and for thy son:

were selected from Judah; but, as if to illustrate the sovereignty of grace, an exception was sometimes made. This great prophet Elijah was from Gilead. Of his family nothing is known; he stands forth somewhat like Melchizedek—a great individual of whose lineage we have no information. God, purposing to chasten the nation, so ordered it that the calamity was connected with the prophet's prayer. This was intended to answer ulterior purposes, which we shall find it did in a very remarkable manner. The ministration of the ravens is a touching element of the narrative, and a beautiful display of the manifold resources of Providence. The prophet's meal was provided for him with all the regularity of the rising sun, and when water failed which the ravens could not supply, he was directed to proceed elsewhere. The miracle here performed effected a double purpose—yielding, at the same time, sustenance to the 14 For ¹thus saith the LORD God of Israel, "The barrel of meal shall not waste, neither shall the cruse of oil fail, until the day that the LORD ²sendeth rain upon the earth.

15 And she went, and ³did according to the saying of Elijah: and she, and he, and her house, did eat ⁴many days.

16 And ⁵the barrel of meal wasted not, neither did the cruse of oil fail, according to the word of the LORD, which he spake ⁶by Elijah.

17 ¶ And it came to pass, after these things, that ⁷the son of the woman, the mistress of the house, fell sick; and his sickness was so sore, ⁸that there was no breath left in him.

18 And she said unto Elijah, What have I to do with thee, O thou man of God? ⁹'art thou come unto me to call my sin to remembrance, and to slay my son?

19 And he said unto her, Give me thy son. And he took him out of her bosom, and carried him up into a loft where he abode, and laid him upon his own bed.

20 And ¹⁰he cried unto the LORD, and said, O LORD my God, ¹¹hast thou also brought evil upon the widow with whom I sojourn, by slaying her son?

21 And he ¹²stretched himself upon the child three times, and cried unto the LORD, and said, 'O LORD my God, I pray thee, let this child's soul come ¹³into him again.

22 And the LORD heard the voice of Elijah; and the soul of the child came into him again, ¹⁴and he revived.

23 And Elijah took the child, and brought him down out of the chamber into the house, and delivered him unto his mother: and Elijah said, ¹⁵'See, thy son liveth.

24 And the woman said to Elijah, ¹⁶Now by this I know that thou ¹⁷art a man of God, ¹⁸and that ¹⁹the word of the LORD in thy mouth is truth.

4 For it was so, when ¹Jezebel ²'cut off the prophets of the LORD, that Obadiah took an hundred prophets, and hid them by fifty ³in a cave, and ⁴'fed them with bread and water.)

5 And Ahab said unto Obadiah, Go into the land, unto all fountains of water, and unto all brooks; peradventure we may find ⁵grass to save the horses and mules alive, that ⁶'we lose not all the beasts.

6 So they divided the land between them, to pass throughout it: ⁷'Ahab went one way by himself, and Obadiah went another way by himself.

7 ¶ And as Obadiah was in the way, behold, Elijah met him: and ⁸'he knew him, and ⁹'fell on his face, and said, ¹⁰'Art thou that ¹¹'my lord Elijah?

8 And he answered him, I am: go, tell thy lord, Behold, Elijah is here.

9 And he said, ¹²'What have I sinned, that thou wouldest deliver thy servant into the hand of Ahab, to slay me?

10 As ¹³'the LORD thy God liveth, there is no nation or kingdom whither my lord hath not sent to seek thee: and when they said, ¹⁴'He is not there, he took an oath of the kingdom and nation, that ¹⁵'they found thee not.

11 And now thou sayest, Go, tell thy lord, Behold, Elijah is here.

12 And it shall come to pass, as soon as I am gone from thee, that ¹⁶'the Spirit of the LORD shall carry thee whither I know not; and so when I come and tell Ahab, and he cannot find thee, ¹⁷'he shall slay me: but I thy servant fear the LORD ¹⁸'from my youth.

13 Was it not told my lord ¹⁹'what I did, when Jezebel slew the prophets of the LORD, how I hid an hundred men of the LORD's prophets by fifty in a cave, and fed them with bread and water?

14 And now thou sayest, Go, tell thy lord, Behold, Elijah is here: and he shall slay me.

15 And Elijah said, As the LORD ²⁰'of hosts liveth, before whom I stand, I will surely shew myself unto him to-day.

16 So Obadiah went to meet Ahab, and told him: and Ahab went to meet Elijah.

17 ¶ And it came to pass, when Ahab saw Elijah, that Ahab said unto him, ²¹'Art thou ²²'he that troubleth Israel?

18 And he answered, ²³'I have not troubled Israel; but thou, and thy father's house, ²⁴'in that ye have forsaken the commandments of the LORD, and thou hast followed Baalim.

19 Now therefore send, and gather to prophet of the Lord, and to his humble hostess with her little son. Here, again, we see sovereignty and mercy beautifully blended together. As the Lord himself subsequently reminded the people, "there were many widows in those days;" but only to one of them was the prophet sent. Ver. 17-24. Human nature is so true to its own instincts, that in cases of special affliction it connects present suffering with former sin. The widow seemed to take this view of the matter with respect to her son. The prophet manifested the strongest sympathy with the suffering parent, and hence his fervent prayer became effectual for the restoration of her child. Thus mercy upon mercy was heaped upon the head of this humble individual—the first miracle preserving from death, and the second restoring the dead.

Chap. XVIII. 1-16. As Elijah had been the means, by his prayer, of shutting up the heavens, his was to be the honour, by prayer again, of opening them,—facts eminently calculated to impress the mind of the ungodly king with the great truth, that there is a God who ruleth in the heavens. It is among the merciful mysteries of me all Israel unto ^cmount Carmel, and the prophets of Baal four hundred and fifty, and the ^dprophets of the groves four hundred, which ^eeat at Jezebel's table.

20 So Ahab sent unto all the children of Israel, and gathered the prophets together unto mount Carmel.

21 ¶ And Elijah came unto all the people, and said, 'How long halt ye between two ^fopinions? 'If the LORD be God, follow him: but if Baal, then follow him. And the people ^ganswered him not a word.

22 Then said Elijah unto the people, I, even ^hI only, remain a prophet of the LORD; but ⁱBaal's prophets are four hundred and fifty men.

23 Let them therefore give us two bullocks; and let them choose one bullock for themselves, and cut it in pieces, and lay ^jit on wood, and put no fire under; and I will dress the other bullock, and lay ^kit on wood, and put no fire under:

24 And call ye on the name of your gods, and I will call on the name of the LORD; and the God that ^lanswereth by fire, let him be God. And all the people answered and said, ^m'It is well spoken.

25 And Elijah said unto the prophets of Baal, Choose you one bullock for yourselves, and dress ⁿit first; for ye are many; and call on the name of your gods, but put no fire under.

26 And they took the bullock which was given them, and they dressed ^oit, and called on the name of Baal ^pfrom morning even until noon, saying, O Baal, ^q'hear us! But there was ^r'no voice, nor any that ^sanswered. And they ^tleaped upon the altar which was made.

27 And it came to pass at noon, that ^uElijah mocked them, and said, Cry ^valoud; for he is a god: either ^whe is talking, or he ^xis pursuing, or he is in a journey, or peradventure he sleepeth, and ^ymust be awaked.

28 And they cried aloud, and ^zcut themselves, after their manner, with knives and lancets, till ^{aa}the blood gushed out upon them.

29 And it came to pass, when mid-day was past, and they ^{ab}prophesied until the time of the ^{ac}offering of the evening sacrifice, that there was neither voice, nor any to answer, nor any ^{ad}that regarded.

30 And Elijah said unto all the people, Come near unto me. And all the people came near unto him: and ^{ae}he repaired the altar of the LORD that was broken down.

31 And Elijah took ^{af}twelve stones, according to the number of the tribes of the sons of Jacob, unto whom the word of the LORD came, ^{ag}saying, Israel shall be thy name;

32 And ^{ah}with the stones he built an altar ^{ai}in the name of the LORD: and he made a trench about the altar, as great as would contain two measures of seed.

33 And he put the wood in order, and cut the bullock in pieces, and laid ^{aj}him on the wood, and said, ^{ak}'Fill four barrels with water, and pour ^{al}it on the burnt-sacrifice, and on the wood.

34 And he said, ^{am}'Do ^{an}it the second time: and they did ^{ao}it the second time. And he said, Do ^{ap}it the third time; and they did ^{aq}it the third time.

35 And the water ^{ar}ran round about the altar; and he filled the trench also with water.

36 And it came to pass, ^{as}at the time of the offering of the evening sacrifice, that Elijah the prophet came near, and said, ^{at}'LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, let it be known this day that thou art God in Israel, and ^{au}that I am thy servant, and ^{av}that I have done all these things at thy word.

37 ^{aw}'Hear me, O LORD, hear me; that this people may know that thou art the LORD God, and ^{ax}that ^{ay}thou hast turned their heart back again.

38 Then the ^{az}'fire of the LORD fell, and consumed the ^{ba}burnt-sacrifice, and the wood, and the stones, and the dust, and licked up the water that ^{bb}was in the trench.

39 And when all the people saw ^{bc}it, ^{bd}'they fell on their faces; and they said, The LORD, he is the God; the LORD, he is the God.

40 And Elijah said unto them, ^{be}'Take the prophets of Baal; let not one of them escape. And they took them; and Elijah brought them down to the brook ^{bf}Kishon, and ^{bg}'slew them there.

41 ¶ And Elijah said unto Ahab, ^{bh}'Get thee up, eat and drink; for ^{bi}there is ^{bj}a sound of abundance of rain.

42 So Ahab went up to eat and to drink: and ^{bj}Elijah went up to the top of Carmel; and ^{bk}he cast himself down upon the earth, and put his face between his knees, 43 And said to his servant, ^{bl}'Go up now, look toward the sea. And he went up, and looked, and said, ^{bm}There is nothing. And he said, ^{bn}'Go again seven times.

44 And it came to pass, at the seventh time, that he said, Behold, there ^{bo}arise

Providence, that the best of servants have often been employed to serve the worst of kings. Obadiah, while a man of eminent piety, was actually appointed governor of Ahab's palace. In that capacity he had opportunities for doing good, on a scale, and with a safety, which he could not otherwise have enjoyed. He was doubtless appointed, among other beneficent arrangements, for the very purpose of preserving the lives of these prophets, who must otherwise have perished. The moral courage of this good man was wonderful. While the queen was intent on cutting off all the prophets of the Lord in the land, he became the patron, provider, and preserver of a hundred of them! Such an act was, of course, a great offence against the queen, and discovery would have been destruction to him. Obadiah knew his master's temper, and was terrified to place himself in the attitude suggested by Elijah; but at length his objections were overcome, and he obeyed. Ver. 17-46. Nothing can surpass the dignity of the prophet in his intercourse with the wicked king. Elijah displayed wonderful wisdom in the matter of the sacrifice, since nothing could be better fitted to test the true character of these a little cloud out of the sea, like a man's hand. And he said, Go up, say unto Ahab, ¹Prepare thy chariot, and get thee down, that the rain stop thee not.

45 And it came to pass, in the mean while, that the heaven was black with clouds and wind, and ²there was a great rain. And Ahab rode, and went to Jezreel.

46 And ³the hand of the LORD was on Elijah; and ⁴he girded up his loins, and ran before Ahab ⁵to the entrance of Jezreel.

CHAPTER XIX.

⁹ God sendeth him to anoint Hazael, Jehu, and Elisha.
¹⁹ Elisha followeth Elijah.

AND Ahab told Jezebel all that Elijah had done, and withal how he had slain all the prophets with the sword.

2 Then Jezebel sent a messenger unto Elijah, saying, ³So let the gods do to me, and more also, ⁴if I make not thy life as the life of one of them by ⁵to-morrow about this time.

3 And when he saw that, ⁴he arose, and went for his life, and came to Beer-sheba, which belongeth to Judah, and left his servant there.

4 ¶ But he himself went a day's journey into the wilderness, and came and sat down under a juniper-tree: and ⁵he requested ⁶for himself that he might die; and said, It is enough: now, O LORD, take away my life; for I am not ⁷better than my fathers.

5 And ⁸as he lay and slept under a juniper-tree, behold, then ⁹an angel touched him, and said unto him, Arise and eat.

6 And he looked, and, behold, there ¹was a cake baken on the coals, and a cruse of water at his ²head: and he did eat and drink, and laid him down again.

7 And the angel of the LORD came again the second time, and touched him, and said, Arise and eat; ⁸because the journey is too great for thee.

8 And he arose, and did eat and drink, and went ⁹in the strength of that meat ¹⁰forty days and forty nights unto Horeb the mount of God.

9 ¶ And he came thither ¹unto a cave, and lodged there: and, behold, the word of the LORD came to him, and he said unto him, ²What doest thou here, Elijah?

ous for the LORD God of hosts: for the children of Israel have forsaken thy covenant, ²thrown down thine altars, and slain thy prophets with the sword; and I, even I ³only, am left; and they seek my life, to take it away.

11 And he said, Go forth, and ²stand upon the mount before the LORD. And, behold, ³the LORD passed by, ⁴and a great and strong wind rent the mountains, and brake in pieces the rocks, before the LORD; but the LORD was not in the wind; and after the wind, ⁵an earthquake; but the LORD was not in the earthquake:

12 And after the earthquake ¹a fire; but the LORD was not in the fire: and after the fire ²a still small voice.

13 And it was so, when Elijah heard it, that he wrapped his face in his mantle, and went out, and stood in the entering in of the cave: and, behold, there ¹came a voice unto him, and said, ²What doest thou here, Elijah?

14 And he said, I have been very jealous for the LORD God of hosts: because the children of Israel have ²forsaken thy covenant, thrown down thine altars, and slain thy prophets with the sword; and I, even I only, am left; and they seek my life, to take it away.

15 And the LORD said unto him, Go, return on thy way to ²the wilderness of Damascus; and when thou comest, ³anoint Hazael to be king over Syria;

16 And ¹Jehu the son of Nimshi shalt thou anoint to be king over Israel; and Elisha the son of Shaphat, of ²Abel-meholah, shalt thou anoint to be prophet in thy room.

17 And it shall come to pass, that ¹him that escapeth ²the sword of Hazael shall Jehu slay; and him that escapeth from ³the sword of Jehu shall ⁴Elisha slay.

18 ¹Yet ²I have left me seven thousand in Israel, all ³the knees which have not bowed unto Baal, and ⁴every mouth which hath not kissed him.

19 ¶ So he departed thence, and found Elisha the son of Shaphat, who was plowing with twelve yoke of oxen before him, and ²he with the twelfth: and Elijah passed by him, and cast ³his mantle upon him.

false prophets. The whole thing was gone about with the utmost deliberation, and everything done in such a manner as was best calculated to fix public attention. Care was taken that the power of Baal should first be tested; the effect turned wholly upon this. Nothing could be more complete and conclusive than the awful manifestation, which produced its appropriate effect on the mind of the people. The prophet took advantage of the moment to secure judgment upon the deceivers of the nation, and the enemies of truth. The false prophets, to the extent of 450, paid the penalty of their impiety with their lives. No sooner was this great point settled than a manifestation of mercy ensued. The clouds of heaven once more burst, pouring down their treasures over all the land, to the astonishment of the king and the delight of the people.

Chap. XIX. 1-3. The prophet had proved too much for the king, who told Jezebel of his mighty works, at the same time apprising her of the death of her prophets. The fact, of course, was to be dealt with as an offence of the most treasonable character; nothing would satisfy her but life for life. The man of God must die! Not so. She, too, will find that he was too strong for her as well as for her prophets. Ver. 4-18. There are limits to human strength, and the courage of even the most lion-hearted man sometimes fails. Elijah was weary of life and trouble, and longed to rest; but his God and Father had more work for him to do, and great work too. The vision that followed, and the communications that were made, sufficed to shew him the great events which were still in the future; and Elijah, recovering his wonted courage, betook himself cheerfully to the

I will follow thee. And he said unto him, ⁴Go back again: for what have I done to thee?

21 And he returned back from him, and took a yoke of oxen, and slew them, and boiled their flesh with the instruments of the oxen, and gave unto the people, and they did eat: then he arose, and went after Elijah, and ministered unto him.

CHAPTER XX.

1 Ben-hadad besiegeth Samaria. 13 The Syrians are slain. 31 Ahab dismisseth Ben-hadad. 35 A prophet reproverth him.

AND ¹Ben-hadad the king of Syria gathered all his host together; and there were ²thirty and two kings with him, and horses and chariots: and he went up and ³besieged Samaria, and warred against it.

2 And ⁴he sent messengers to Ahab king of Israel into the city, and said unto him, Thus saith Ben-hadad,

3 Thy silver and thy gold is mine; thy wives also and thy children, even the goodliest, are mine.

4 And the king of Israel answered and said, My lord, O king, according to thy saying, ⁵I am thine, and all that I have.

5 And the messengers came again, and said, Thus speaketh Ben-hadad, saying, Although I have sent unto thee, saying, Thou shalt deliver me thy silver, and thy gold, and thy wives, and thy children;

6 Yet I will send my servants unto thee to-morrow about this time, and they shall search thine house, and the houses of thy servants; and it shall be, that whatsoever is ⁷pleasant in thine eyes, they shall put it in their hand, and take it away.

7 Then the king of Israel called ⁸all the elders of the land, and said, Mark, I pray you, and see how this man seeketh mischief: for he sent unto me for my wives, and for my children, and for my silver, and for my gold, and I ⁹denied him not.

8 And all the elders, and all the people, said unto him, Harken not unto him, nor consent.

9 Wherefore he said unto the messengers of Ben-hadad, Tell my lord the king, All that thou didst send for to thy servant at the first I will do: but this thing I may not do. And the messengers departed, and brought him word again.

10 And Ben-hadad sent unto him, and said, ¹¹The gods do so unto me, and more also, ¹²if the dust of Samaria shall suffice

11 And the king of Israel answered and said, Tell him, ³Let not him that girdeth on his harness boast himself as he that putteth it off.

12 And it came to pass, when Ben-hadad heard this ⁴message, (as he was ⁵drinking, he and the kings in the ⁶pavilions,) that he said unto his servants, ⁷Set yourselves in array: and they set themselves in array against the city.

13 ¶ And, behold, there ⁸came a prophet unto Ahab king of Israel, saying, Thus saith the LORD, ⁹Hast thou seen all this great multitude? behold, I will deliver it into thine hand this day; and thou shalt know that I am the LORD.

14 And Ahab said, By whom? And he said, Thus saith the LORD, ¹⁰Even by ¹¹the young men of the princes of the provinces. Then he said, Who shall ¹²order the battle? And he answered, Thou.

15 Then he numbered the young men of the princes of the provinces, and they were ¹³two hundred and thirty-two; and after them he numbered all the people, even all the children of Israel, ¹⁴being ¹⁵seven thousand.

16 And they went out at noon: but ¹⁶Ben-hadad was drinking himself drunk in the pavilions, he and the kings, the thirty and two kings that helped him.

17 And the young men of the princes of the provinces went out first: and Ben-hadad sent out, and they told him, saying, There are men come out of Samaria.

18 And he said, ¹⁷Whether they be come out for peace, take them alive; or whether they be come out for war, take them alive.

19 So these young men of the princes of the provinces came out of the city, and the army which followed them.

20 And they slew every one his man: and ¹⁸the Syrians fled, and Israel pursued them; and Ben-hadad the king of Syria ¹⁹escaped on an horse with the horsemen.

21 And the king of Israel ²⁰went out, and smote the horses and chariots, and slew the Syrians with a great slaughter.

22 ¶ And ²¹the prophet came to the king of Israel, and said unto him, Go, ²²strengthen thyself, and mark, and see what thou doest: for ²³at the return of the year the king of Syria will come up against thee.

23 And the servants of the king of Syria said unto him, ²⁴Their gods are gods of the hills, therefore they were stronger work assigned him. Ver. 19-21. The weight of years now pressed heavily upon the prophet, and it became necessary to provide him a successor. In this case the choice was not made by Elijah but his Master. The descent of the mantle upon Elisha was accompanied by a power which drew him to the prophet, much in the same way as when the Apostles of the Lord were selected. It was to all a day of power, by which they were made willing to love and serve God. The conduct of Elisha in slaying the oxen, and making a feast for the people, threw the air of generous festivity over his call, rendering it all the more remarkable to his friends, and the more interesting to the country. From that moment he had no other object than to serve Elijah, and through him the Lord. Thus we find that there is power in the call of God. It is not a mere matter of words, but of the Holy Ghost, by whom the conscience, and judgment, and the heart are controlled, harmonized, and moved in the destined direction.

Chap. XX. 1-34. Royal rapacity, like that of minor subjects, has frequently overshot the mark. The King of Syria acted a part worthy of his own depraved character, and the consequences were such as his conduct than we; but let us fight against them in the plain, and surely we shall be stronger than they.

24 And do this thing; Take the kings away, every man out of his place, and put captains in their rooms:

25 And number thee an army like the army that ¹thou hast lost, horse for horse, and chariot for chariot; and we will fight against them in the plain, and surely we shall be stronger than they. And he hearkened unto their voice, and did so.

26 And it came to pass, at the return of the year, that Ben-hadad numbered the Syrians, and went up to ¹Aphek, to ²fight against Israel.

27 And the children of Israel were numbered, and ³were all present, and went against them: and the children of Israel pitched before them ⁴like two little flocks of kids; but the Syrians filled the country.

28 ¶ And ⁵there came a man of God, and spake unto the king of Israel, and said, Thus saith the LORD, Because the Syrians have said, The LORD is God of the hills, but he is not God of the valleys, ⁶therefore will I deliver all this great multitude into thine hand; and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

29 And they pitched one over against the other ⁷seven days: and so it was, that in the seventh day the battle was joined: and the children of Israel slew of the Syrians ⁸an hundred thousand footmen in one day.

30 But the rest fled to Aphek, into the city; and ⁹there ¹⁰a wall fell upon twenty and seven thousand of the men ¹¹that were left. And Ben-hadad ¹²fled, and came into the city, ¹³into an inner chamber.

31 ¶ And ¹⁴his servants said unto him, Behold now, we have heard that the kings of the house of Israel are ¹⁵merciful kings: let us, I pray thee, ¹⁶put sackcloth on our loins, and ropes upon our heads, and go out to the king of Israel: ¹⁷peradventure he will save thy life.

32 So they girded sackcloth on their loins, and ¹⁸put ropes on their heads, and came to the king of Israel, and said, ¹⁹Thy servant Ben-hadad saith, I pray thee, let me live. And he said, ²⁰Is he yet alive? ²¹he is my brother.

33 Now ²²the men did diligently observe whether ²³any thing would come from him, and did hastily catch it: and they said, Thy brother Ben-hadad. Then he said, merited. He boasted of his multitudes, but made light of the power of that God who made the heavens and the earth. But the slaughter of a hundred thousand men in one day brought him to his senses. It is curious to observe the opinion which the heathen nations, even then, held of Israel's kings, who were pronounced "merciful." This epithet was not undeserved, for, unquestionably, as compared with the bulk of the kings of Israel, the kings of the Heathen were distinguished for cruelty. The appeal was successful. While the submission of the Syrian king was most abject, the deportment of Ahab was generous and noble. This compassionate leniency did more to promote peace and union between the two countries than could have been accomplished by generations of warfare, the victory now on this side and now on

* 2 Chr. 28. 22.

Go ye, bring him. Then Ben-hadad came forth to him; ²and he caused him to come up into the chariot.

34 And Ben-hadad said unto him, The cities which my father took from thy father, I will restore; and thou shalt make streets for thee in Damascus, as my father made in Samaria. Then said Ahab, I will send thee away with this covenant. ³So he made a covenant with him, and sent him away.

35 ¶ And a certain man ⁴of the sons of the prophets said unto his neighbour in the word of the LORD, ⁵Smite me, I pray thee. And the man refused to smite him.

36 Then said he unto him, ⁶Because thou hast not obeyed the voice of the LORD, behold, as soon as thou art departed from me, a lion shall slay thee. And as soon as he was departed from him, a lion found him, and slew him.

37 Then he found another man, and said, Smite me, I pray thee. And the man smote him, ⁷so that in smiting he wounded him.

38 So the prophet departed, and waited for the king by the way, and ⁸disguised himself with ashes upon his face.

39 And as the king passed by, he cried unto the king: and he said, ⁹Thy servant went out into the midst of the battle; and, behold, a man turned aside, and brought a man unto me, and said, Keep this man: if by any means he be missing, then shall thy life be for his life, ¹⁰or else thou shalt ¹¹pay a talent of silver.

40 And as thy servant was busy here and there, ¹²he was gone. And the king of Israel said unto him, ¹³So shall thy judgment be; thyself hast decided it.

41 And he hastened, and took ¹⁴the ashes away from his face; and the king of Israel discerned him that he ¹⁵was of the prophets.

42 And he said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Because thou hast let go out of thy hand a man whom I appointed to utter destruction, therefore ¹⁶thy life shall go for his life, and thy people for his people.

43 And the king of Israel ¹⁷went to his house heavy and displeased, and came to Samaria.

CHAPTER XXI.

¹ Ahab denied Naboth's vineyard. ⁵ Jezebel caused Naboth to be condemned. ¹⁷ Elijah denounceth judgments against Ahab and Jezebel.

AND it came to pass ¹after these things, ²that Naboth the Jezreelite had a that, and a quarrel ever remaining with the one or the other to be adjusted. Ver. 35-43. But Ahab's generosity, on the present occasion, had been exercised at the expense of other considerations, which ought not to have been forgotten. It was not enough that Ben-hadad submitted to him, while his sins against the God of Israel were unrepented of and unforgiven. The Lord had appointed Ben-hadad to utter destruction, and Ahab offended in suffering him to go; and for that error he himself must bear the consequences.

Chap. XXI. 1-24. Ahab's conduct is, at the first sight, reasonable; he would either give a better vineyard, or pay down a fair price in money; but he was forgetful of the fact, that inheritances were not to be

2 And Ahab spake unto Naboth, saying, "Give me thy vineyard, that I may have it for ^aa garden of herbs, because it is near unto my house: and I will give thee for it a better vineyard than it; or, if it ¹seem good to thee, I will give thee the worth of it in money.

3 And Naboth said to Ahab, "The LORD forbid it me, that ¹I should give the inheritance of my fathers unto thee.

4 And Ahab came into his house ⁵heavy and displeased because of the word which Naboth the Jezreelite had spoken to him; for he had said, I will not give thee the inheritance of my fathers: ¹and he laid him down upon his bed, and turned away his face, and would eat no bread.

5 ¶ But Jezebel his wife came to him, and said unto him, "Why is thy spirit so sad, that thou eatest no bread?

6 And he said unto her, "Because I spake unto Naboth the Jezreelite, and said unto him, Give me thy vineyard for money; or else, if it please thee, I will give thee another vineyard for it: and he answered, I will not give thee my vineyard.

7 And Jezebel his wife said unto him, "Dost thou now govern the kingdom of Israel? Arise, and eat bread, and let thine heart be merry: ¹I will give thee the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite.

8 So ¹she wrote letters in Ahab's name, and sealed them with his seal, and sent the letters unto ¹the elders and to ^othe nobles that were in his city dwelling with Naboth.

people, saying, Naboth did ²blaspheme God and ³the king. Then ⁴they carried him forth out of the city, and stoned him with stones, that he died.

14 Then they sent to Jezebel, saying, "Naboth is stoned, and is dead.

15 ¶ And it came to pass, when Jezebel heard that Naboth was stoned, and was dead, that Jezebel said to Ahab, Arise, take possession of the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, which he refused to give thee for money: for Naboth is not alive, but dead.

16 And it came to pass, when Ahab heard that Naboth was dead, that ^bAhab rose up to go down to the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, to take possession of it.

17 ¶ And ^cthe word of the LORD came to Elijah the Tishbite, saying, 18 Arise, go down to meet Ahab king of Israel, ^dwhich is in Samaria: behold, he is in the vineyard of Naboth, whither he is gone down to possess it.

19 And thou shalt speak unto him, saying, Thus saith the LORD, "Hast thou killed, and also taken possession? And thou shalt speak unto him, saying, Thus saith the LORD, "In the place where dogs licked the blood of Naboth shall dogs lick thy blood, even thine.

20 And Ahab said to Elijah, "Hast thou found me, O mine enemy? And he answered, I have found thee; because ¹thou hast sold thyself ¹to work evil in the sight of the LORD.

21 Behold, I will bring evil upon thee, and will take away thy posterity, and will cut off from Ahab ²him that pisseth against the wall, and ³him that is shut up and left in Israel.

22 And will ⁴make thine house like the house of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, and like the house of Baasha the son of Ahijah, for the provocation wherewith thou hast provoked me to anger, and made Israel to sin.

23 And of Jezebel also spake the LORD, saying, The dogs shall eat Jezebel by the ⁵wall of Jezreel.

24 Him ⁶that dieth of Ahab in the city the dogs shall eat; and him that dieth in the field shall the fowls of the air eat.

25 But ⁷there was none like unto Ahab, which did sell himself to work wickedness in the sight of the LORD, ⁸whom Jezebel his wife ⁹stirred up.

alienated to another family or tribe; it was expressly provided, in Leviticus xxv. 23, that the land should not be sold for ever, inasmuch as it was the Lord's. That, then, for which Naboth was murdered was simply obedience to the law of the God of his fathers. This matter supplied an occasion for the development of the true character of Jezebel. Of the many wicked deeds which that woman perpetrated, not the least atrocious was the destruction of this unoffending man. In addition to forging the name of her husband, and using the Royal Seal, she carefully prescribed the process whereby the horrid deed was to be perpetrated; and to the shame of humanity it is recorded, that she found even the elders, and the nobles of the land, willing instruments in the cruel assassination! The sons of Belial were ready to swear away the life of the unoffending man; the oath was followed by sentence of condemnation, and execution immediately ensued. Not the least infamous circumstance here is, the invocation of the sanction of religion. "A fast was proclaimed," and the thing gone about as if traitors had been plotting, and Naboth had been the prime conspirator. The deed done, the infatuated king went to take possession of the property of the dead! That Eye from which nothing can be hid, witnessed the entire process; and, in consequence, commission was given to Elijah to communicate with the wicked king, apprising him of the dreadful fact that he himself was to have fellowship with the dead; that the blood of both, in the same place, was to be "licked" by the dogs! The judgment pronounced was tremendous, and it was 26 And he did ^avery abominably in following idols, ^baccording to all things as did the Amorites, whom the LORD cast out before the children of Israel.

27 ¶ And it came to pass, when Ahab heard those words, that ^che rent his clothes, and put sackcloth upon his flesh, and fasted, and ^dlay in sackcloth, and ^ewent softly.

28 And the word of the LORD came to Elijah the Tishbite, saying, fulfilled in due season. Nor is this all: as the queen had led the way, and been a chief participant with her husband in this frightful enormity, her blood, too, was to be shed, and the dogs, in like manner, were to "lick" it! Ver. 25-29. This terrible communication was not without its effects even on the heart of Ahab; but no mention is made of the relenting of his ferocious and blood-thirsty queen. Not the least remarkable part of this awful narrative is the fact that Ahab had surpassed all his predecessors by "selling himself to work wickedness," and that he was prompted to his enormities by Jezebel his wife. But even this monster of iniquity was not shut out from the Divine compassion. On his humbling himself before the Lord, there was a respite, and the judgments, which nothing could finally set aside, were deferred to a future day.

29 ^aSeest thou how ^bAhab humbleth himself before me? Because he humbleth himself before me, ^cI will not bring the evil in his days; ^dbut ^ein his son's days will I bring the evil upon his house.

Chap. XXII. 1-14. There is always danger attending intercourse with wicked men. The visit of Jehoshaphat not only involved his people in war, but imperilled his own life. Ahab, regardless of God, was governed solely by his own judgment, or rather by his own passions. The amiable Jehoshaphat was a man of another mind; and hence, before engaging in so serious a conflict, he was anxious that inquiry should be made of the Lord. Ahab had no objection, and forthwith some four hundred prophets appeared in his presence, all, without exception, exhorting him to go up against the king of Syria, forasmuch as the Lord would, without fail, give him the victory. Jehoshaphat appears to have had misgivings about these prophets; they were too numerous to be good, and too eager to be truthful. His solicitude prompted the inquiry, whether there was none other; which led Ahab to refer to the faithful Micaiah, the son of Imlah. The fault of this prophet was, that he uniformly prophesied, not good concerning Ahab, but evil. It had been strange if a righteous man, speaking by the Spirit of the Lord, had spoken good things of a bad king.

20 And the LORD said, Who shall ¹persuade Ahab, that he may go up and fall at Ramoth-gilead? And one said on this manner, and another said on that manner.

21 And ¹there came forth a spirit, and stood before the LORD, and said, I will persuade him.

22 And the LORD said unto him, Where-with? And he said, I will go forth, and I will be ¹a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets. And he said, ²Thou shalt persuade him, and prevail also: go forth, and do so.

23 Now therefore, behold, ³the LORD hath put a lying spirit in the mouth of all these thy prophets, and the LORD hath spoken evil concerning thee.

24 ¶ But Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah went near, and ⁴smote Micaiah on the cheek, and said, ⁵Which way went the Spirit of the LORD from me to speak unto thee?

25 And Micaiah said, ⁶Behold, thou shalt see in that day, when thou shalt go ⁷into an inner chamber to hide thyself.

26 And the king of Israel said, Take Micaiah, and carry him back unto Amon the governor of the city, and to Joash the king's son;

27 And say, Thus saith the king, Put this fellow in the prison, and feed him with ⁸bread of affliction, and with water of affliction, until I come in peace.

28 And Micaiah said, ⁹If thou return at all in peace, the LORD hath not spoken by me. And he said, ¹⁰Hearken, O people, every one of you.

29 ¶ So the king of Israel, and Jehoshaphat the king of Judah, went up to Ramoth-gilead.

30 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, ¹¹I will disguise myself, and enter into the battle; but put thou on thy robes. And the king of Israel ¹²disguised himself, and went into the battle.

31 ¶ But the king of Syria commanded his thirty and two captains, that had rule over his chariots, saying, Fight neither with small nor great, save only with the king of Israel.

32 And it came to pass, when the captains of the chariots saw Jehoshaphat, that they said, Surely it ¹³is the king of Israel. And they turned aside to fight against him: and ¹⁴Jehoshaphat cried out.

The deportment of Micaiah was sublime. In vision he beheld the coming disaster, the death of the king, and the dispersion of the nation. Never did prophet witness with more courage against a wicked sovereign, and never did sovereign with more malignity resent the fidelity of a prophet. The chief of these deluded prophets, Zedekiah, rendered himself very conspicuous. The preparation of "horns of iron," as an illustration of Ahab's overthrow of the Syrian king, was a stroke indicating his superior zeal and ingenuity; and when to this is added his personal violence to Micaiah, he was doubtless deemed to have played a very manly part. But the prophet's answer was sufficient to silence and humble him. Ver. 26-36. The king was unmoved, and in the pride of his heart proceeded to punish the man of God for having spoken truth. The unjust and cruel charge given concerning his imprisonment, and his treatment, only led to the iteration of the terrible prediction. Micaiah staked the truth of his character on the result. Ahab, as if distrustful, and fearing the worst, determined to adopt every precaution for the preservation of his own life on the battle-field, although in so doing he placed his fellow monarch in imminent jeopardy. But it was in vain: a vision which nothing could elude, and a Power which nothing could resist, was about to be exerted. He who drew the bow "at a venture" was

THE SECOND BOOK OF THE KINGS,

COMMONLY CALLED,

THE FOURTH BOOK OF THE KINGS.

This Book embraces the history of the Kings of Judah and Israel throughout a period of about 300 years, from the death of Jehoshaphat to the destruction of Jerusalem. This was one of the most important periods of Jewish history, enjoying the labours of the most distinguished Prophets of that economy.

CHAPTER I.

1 Moab rebelleth. 2 Ahaziah, sending to Baal-zebub, hath judgment by Elijah. 3 Elijah twice bringeth fire from heaven on Ahaziah's messengers. 17 Jehoram succeedeth Ahaziah.

THEN ^aMoab rebelled against Israel ^bafter the death of Ahab.

2 ¶ And Ahaziah fell down through ^aa lattice in his upper chamber that was in Samaria, and ^awas sick: and he sent messengers, and said unto them, Go, enquire of ^aBaal-zebub the ^agod of Ekron ^awhether I shall recover of this disease.

3 But ^athe angel of the LORD said to ^aElijah the Tishbite, ^aArise, go up to meet the messengers of the king of Samaria, and say unto them, Is it ^anot because there is not a God in Israel, that ^mye go to enquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron?

4 Now therefore thus saith the LORD, Thou shalt not come down from that bed on which thou art gone up, ^abut shalt surely die. And Elijah departed.

5 ¶ And when the messengers turned back unto him, he said unto them, Why are ye now turned back?

6 And they said unto him, There came a man up to meet us, and said unto us, Go, turn again unto the king that sent you, and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Is it ^anot because there is not a God in Israel, that thou sendest to enquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron? therefore thou shalt not come down from that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die.

7 And he said unto them, ¹What manner of man was ^{he} which came up to meet you, and told you these words?

8 And they answered him, He was ^aan hairy man, and girt with a girdle of leather about his loins. And he said, It is Elijah the Tishbite.

9 Then the king ^psent unto him a captain of fifty with his fifty: and he went up to him; (and, behold, ^qhe sat on the top of an hill): and he spake unto him, ^rThou man of God, the king hath said, Come down.

10 And Elijah answered and said to the captain of fifty, ¹If I be a man of God, then ¹let fire come down from heaven, and consume thee and thy fifty. And there came down fire from heaven, ^uand consumed him and his fifty.

11 ^aAgain also he sent unto him another captain of fifty with his fifty: and he answered and said unto him, ^oO man of God, thus hath the king said, Come down quickly.

12 And Elijah answered and said unto them, ¹If I be a man of God, let fire come only the instrument of executing the purposes of the Great Eternal. What was chance with the archer, was unerring purpose with the Most High. The arrow sped its flight, and reached its mark; the king received his death-blow, and the same night his eyes were closed in death! Ver. 87-53. It was thus not long till the prediction concerning the dogs "licking his blood" was fulfilled, and we shall see that in due season, as with himself, so it was with his queen. The purposes of the Lord, whether for salvation or destruction, shall stand, and though hand join in hand the wicked shall not go unpunished.

Chap. I. 1-18. There are many ways out of the present world, and in the midst of seeming safety there may be impending danger. The lattice was a sort of rail-work erected on the roof, on which the king would appear to have been leaning when it gave way, and he was precipitated to the ground. The fate of Ahaziah was of a character to excite much concern, and prompt inquiry relative to the issue. Wicked in health, he was consistent in sickness, sending, not to the God of Israel whom he had forsaken, but to Baal-zebub, the god of Ekron. Elijah was forthwith at hand, correcting, mortifying, and forewarning him. The messengers sucdown from heaven, and consume thee and thy fifty. And the fire of God came down from heaven, and consumed him and his fifty.

13 ¶ And ^ahe sent again a captain of the third fifty with his fifty: and the third captain of fifty went up, and came and ^bfell on his knees before Elijah, and ^cbesought him, and said unto him, ^bO man of God, I pray thee, let my life, and the life of these fifty thy servants, be precious in thy sight.

14 Behold, there came fire down from heaven, and burnt up the two captains of the former fifties with their fifties: therefore let my ^clife now be precious in thy sight.

15 And the angel of the LORD said unto Elijah, Go down with him; ^dbe not afraid of him. And he arose, and went down with him unto the king.

16 And he said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Forasmuch as thou hast sent messengers to enquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron, (^eis it not because there is no God in Israel to enquire of his word?) therefore thou shalt not come down off that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die.

17 ¶ So he died, according to the word of the LORD which Elijah had spoken: and Jehoram reigned in his stead, ^fin the second year of Jehoram the son of Jehoshaphat king of Judah; because he had no son.

18 Now the rest of the acts of Ahaziah which he did, ^gare they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

CHAPTER II.

1 Elijah divideth Jordan, and granting Elisha his request, is taken up into heaven. 12 Elisha divideth Jordan: 19 he healeth the waters. 23 Children mocking Elisha are destroyed.

AND it came to pass, when the LORD would ^atake up Elijah into heaven ^bby a whirlwind, that Elijah went with ^cElisha from ^dGilgal.

2 And Elijah said unto Elisha, ^eTarry here, I pray thee; for the LORD hath sent me to Beth-el. And Elisha said ^funto him, ^gAs the LORD liveth, and ^has thy soul liveth, ⁱI will not leave thee. So they went down to ^bBeth-el.

cessively sent came in the spirit of their ungodly master, and they were treated accordingly. It must not be supposed that he invoked fire from heaven to gratify a selfish malignity; he was superior to that, and influenced only by a painful sense of solemn duty towards the idolatrous ruler. Seeing he had resorted to a stock, or a stone, to ask of it information respecting the future, it was needful to give him proof that there was a Power beyond the reach of man, to whom all things were known, and whose hand nothing could repel. The third messenger, coming in a spirit of humility, was dealt with mercifully. The prophet visited the sovereign, and with his own voice repeated the awful intimation, that his days were numbered. Death ensued, and there was an end to Ahaziah with his idolatries. The wickedness of the wicked will always have an end, and, at the longest, his triumphs are short.

3 And ^athe sons of the prophets that ^bwere at Beth-el came forth to Elisha, and said unto him, Knowest thou that the LORD will take away ^cthy master from thy head to-day? And he said, Yea, I know it; hold ye your peace.

4 And Elijah said unto him, Elisha, tarry here, I pray thee; for the LORD hath sent me to ^dJericho. And he said, ^eAs the LORD liveth, and ^fas thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. So they came to Jericho.

5 And the sons of the prophets that ^gwere at Jericho came to Elisha, and said unto him, Knowest thou that the LORD will take away thy master from thy head to-day? And he answered, ^hYea, I know it; hold ye your peace.

6 And Elijah said unto him, Tarry, I pray thee, here; for the LORD hath sent me to Jordan. And he said, ⁱAs the LORD liveth, and ^jas thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. And they two went on.

7 And ^kfifty men of the sons of the prophets went, and stood ^lto view afar off: and they two stood by Jordan.

8 And Elijah took ^mhis mantle, and wrapped ⁿit together, and smote the waters, and they ^owere divided hither and thither, so that they two went over on dry ground.

9 ¶ And it came to pass, when they were gone over, that Elijah said unto Elisha, ^pAsk what I shall do for thee, before I be taken away from thee. And ^qElisha said, I pray thee, let ^ra double portion of thy spirit be upon me.

10 And he said, ^sThou hast ^tasked a hard thing: ^unevertheless, ^vif thou see me ^wwhen I am taken from thee, it shall be so unto thee; but if not, it shall not be so.

11 And it came to pass, as they still went on, and talked, that, behold, ^xthere appeared ^ya chariot of fire, and horses of fire, and parted them both asunder; and Elijah went up by a whirlwind ^zinto heaven.

12 ¶ And Elisha saw ^ait, and he cried, ^bMy father, my father, the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof. And ^che saw him no more: and he took hold of his own clothes, and ^drent them in two pieces.

13 He took up also ^ethe mantle of venly service must have an end. Elijah had done and suffered much for the Lord, and his last sands were now running out. Having faithfully and steadily witnessed, before small and great, for God and for truth, he was now to be taken home, that he might rest from his labours, and be present with the Lord. The fact of his ascension appears to have been generally understood. We find the sons of the prophets both at Bethel and at Jericho—places considerably distant from each other—acquainted with the fact, and so excited as to interrogate Elisha concerning it. Their knowledge was specific; they both confined it to the very day. The miracle performed at the Jordan served an immediate purpose. The Divine mission of Elijah was thus at once confirmed at the close of life, and the Divine mission of Elisha established at the commencement of his public career; for by employing the mantle of the departed prophet, the waters were obedient, forming for him a pathway by which he was able to cross. This was seen by the sons

Elijah that fell from him, and went back, and stood by the ³bank of Jordan;

14 And he took the mantle of Elijah that fell from him, and smote the waters, and said, ⁴Where is the LORD God of Elijah? And when he also had smitten the waters, they parted hither and thither; and Elisha went over.

15 And when the sons of the prophets, which were to view at Jericho, saw him, they said, ⁶The spirit of Elijah doth rest on Elisha. And they came to meet him, and ⁷bowed themselves to the ground before him.

16 ¶ And they said unto him, Behold now, there be with thy servants fifty ⁸strong men; let them go, we pray thee, and seek thy master: lest peradventure ⁹the Spirit of the LORD hath taken him up, and cast him upon ¹⁰some mountain, or into some valley. And he said, Ye shall not send.

17 And when they ¹¹ urged him till he was ashamed, he said, Send. They sent therefore fifty men; and they sought three days, but ¹²found him not.

18 And when they came again to him, (for he tarried at Jericho,) he said unto them, Did I not say unto you, Go not?

19 ¶ And the men of the city said unto Elisha, Behold, I pray thee, the situation of this city is pleasant, as my lord seeth; but ¹³the water is naught, and the ground ¹⁴barren.

20 And he said, Bring me a new cruse, and put ¹⁵salt therein: and they brought ¹⁶it to him.

21 And he went forth unto the spring of the waters, and cast the salt in there, and said, Thus saith the LORD, ¹⁷I have healed these waters; ¹⁸there shall not be from thence any more death or barren land.

22 So the waters were healed unto this day, according to the saying of Elisha which he spake.

23 ¶ And he went up from thence unto Beth-el: and as he was going up by the way, there came forth little children out of the city, and ¹⁹mocked him, and said unto him, Go up, thou bald-head; go up, thou bald-head.

of the prophets, and they naturally concluded that Elisha had been baptized for the dead—"The spirit of Elijah doth rest on Elisha." The sons of the prophets did not act a wise part, when they suggested the possibility of the Spirit of the Lord casting down the prophet on some mountain, or into some valley. Still, he indulged their benevolent solicitude, and permitted them for three days to pursue their useless inquiry. There are occasions when strength must give way to weakness, and well-meant folly must be borne with. Ver. 19-25. Elisha commenced his career by the performance of a miracle much calculated to conciliate public favour, as well as to fix general attention. The healing of the waters was a great and significant act, by which he rendered the public his debtors, and earned for the Master he served the meed of grateful praise. Infidels have made much of the children who came to mock the prophet; but the passage, closely examined, supplies nothing to minister to their purpose. These children were but the representatives of their parents. They mocked the man of God, from a profane contempt of his Master in heaven, 24 And he turned back, and looked on them, and ¹cursed them in the name of the LORD: and there came forth two she-bears out of the wood, and ²tore forty and two children of them.

CHAPTER III.

1 Jehoram's reign. 4 Mesha rebelleth. 20 Elisha obtaineth water and promise of victory. 24 The Moabites are overcome.

NOW ¹Jehoram the son of Ahab began to reign over Israel in Samaria the eighteenth year of Jehoshaphat king of Judah, and reigned twelve years.

2 And he ²wrought evil in the sight of the LORD, ³but not like his father, and ⁴like his mother; for he put away the ⁵image of ⁶Baal that his father had made.

3 Nevertheless ⁷he cleaved unto the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, ⁸which made Israel to sin; ⁹he departed not therefrom.

4 ¶ And Mesha king of Moab was ¹⁰a sheep-master, and ¹¹rendered unto the king of Israel an hundred thousand lambs, and an hundred thousand rams, with the wool.

5 But it came to pass, when Ahab was dead, that the king of Moab rebelled against the king of Israel.

6 ¶ And king Jehoram went out of Samaria the same time, and ¹²numbered all Israel.

7 And he went and sent to Jehoshaphat the king of Judah, saying, The king of Moab hath rebelled against me: ¹³wilt thou go with me against Moab to battle? And he said, I will go up: I am as thou art, my people as thy people, and my horses as thy horses.

8 And he said, Which way shall we go up? And he answered, The way through ¹⁴the wilderness of Edom.

9 So the king of Israel went, and the king of Judah, and ¹⁵the king of Edom; and they fetched a compass of seven days' journey: and there was ¹⁶no water for the host, and for the cattle ¹⁷that followed them.

10 And the king of Israel said, Alas!

and an intense love of idolatry, to which they were being trained. With respect to the imprecation, it was expressed in the name of the Lord; and in thus speaking he acted simply in his official capacity, foretelling, rather than desiring, the manner in which their transgression should be punished.

Chap. III. 1-25. There are degrees of reformation as well as of declension. Jehoram went a considerable way in the right direction, but he stopped short at the principal evil. It was much for the king to take away the image that his father had made; but still this amounted to little, compared with the continued support of the system which had been introduced by Jeroboam. The friendship of the kings of Israel was nearly as dangerous to Judah as their hostility. Here, for the second time, good Jehoshaphat was drawn into war, through an over easy temper, and a disposition to make himself agreeable to the king of Israel. Jehoram made no account of God in his wars, and hence there was no inquiry as to the path of duty. Jehoshaphat, as in a that ^athe LORD hath called these three kings together, to deliver them into the hand of Moab!

11 But Jehoshaphat said, Is there not here a prophet of the LORD, that we may enquire of the LORD by him? And one of the king of Israel's servants answered and said, Here is Elisha the son of Shaphat, ^awhich poured water on the hands of Elijah.

12 And Jehoshaphat said, ^aThe word of the LORD is with him. So ^athe king of Israel, and Jehoshaphat, and the king of Edom, went down to him.

13 And Elisha said unto the king of Israel, ^aWhat have I to do with thee? ^aget thee to ^athe prophets of thy father, and to the prophets of thy mother. And the king of Israel said unto him, Nay: for the LORD hath called these three kings together, to deliver them into the hand of Moab.

14 And Elisha said, As the LORD of hosts liveth, before whom I stand, surely, were it not that I regard the presence of Jehoshaphat the king of Judah, I would not look toward thee, nor see thee.

15 But now ^bbring me a minstrel. And it came to pass, when the minstrel played, that ^athe hand of the LORD came upon him.

16 And he said, Thus saith the LORD, Make this valley full of ditches:

17 For thus saith the LORD, ^aYe shall not see wind, neither shall ye see rain; yet that valley shall be filled with water, ^athat ye may drink, both ye, and your cattle, and your beasts.

18 And ^athis is but ^aa light thing in the sight of the LORD: he will deliver the Moabites also into your hand.

19 And ^aye shall smite every fenced city, and every choice city, and shall ^afell every good tree, and stop all wells of water, and ^amar every good piece of land with stones.

20 ¶ And it came to pass in the morning, ^awhen the meat-offering was offered, that, behold, there came water by the way of Edom, and the country was ^afilled with water.

21 And when all the Moabites heard that the kings were come up to fight against them, they ^agathered all that were able to ^aput on armour, and upward, and stood in the border.

22 And they rose up early in the morning, and the sun shone upon the water, and the Moabites saw the water on the other side as red as blood:

23 And they said, This is blood: the kings are surely ^aslain, and they have smitten one another: ^anow therefore, Moab, to the spoil.

24 And when they came to the camp of Israel, the Israelites rose up and ^asmote the Moabites, so that they fled before them: but they ^awent forward smiting the Moabites, even in their country.

25 And they ^abeat down the cities, and on every good piece of land cast every man his stone, and filled it; and they stopped all the wells of water, ^aand felled all the good trees; ^aonly in ^aKir-haraseth left they the stones thereof; howbeit the slingers went about it, and smote it.

27 Then he took his eldest son, that should have reigned in his stead, and ^aoffered him for a burnt-offering upon the wall. And there was great indignation against Israel: and they departed from him, and returned to their own land.

CHAPTER IV.

1 Elisha multiplieth the widow's oil. 8 He giveth a son to the Shunammite. 18 He raiseth her dead son.

NOW there cried a certain woman of the wives of the ^asons of the prophets unto Elisha, saying, Thy servant my husband is dead; and thou knowest that ^athy servant did fear the LORD: and ^athe creditor is come to take unto him my two sons to be bond-men.

2 And Elisha said unto her, What shall I do for thee? tell me, what hast thou in the house? And she said, Thine handmaid hath not any thing in the house, ^asave a pot of oil.

3 Then he said, Go, borrow thee vessels abroad of all thy neighbours, even ^aempty vessels; ^aborrow not a few.

4 And when thou art come in, ^athou shalt shut the door upon thee, and upon thy sons, and shalt pour out into all those former instance, however, manifested anxiety to consult a prophet of the Lord, and Elisha, in consequence, was inquired of. The prophet's deportment, in coming into the presence of the king, was remarkable—intensely expressive of the detestation in which he held the character and conduct of Jehoram. As the prophet cried, But for the presence of Jehoshaphat, "I would not look toward thee, nor see thee," the king must have felt his littleness, and have had his pride deeply wounded. On this occasion, the presence of Jehoshaphat would seem to have contributed to the triumph of Jehoram. Moab was overwhelmed and discomfited, and the havoc that followed was unusually terrible. Ver. 25 painfully illustrates the character of war, shewing the desolations which mark the progress of a triumphant army. They beat down the cities, stopped all the wells of water, cut down all green trees, and swept the whole country as with the besom of destruction. Ver. 26, 27,

The character of idolatry is frightfully exemplified in the conduct of the king of Moab offering as a sacrifice to his idol his eldest son, that ought to have reigned in his stead. There are no lengths to which the madness of idolatry will not carry its disciples. Cruelty and murder are among its most congruous accompaniments. Close intimacies between good and bad men are always perilous to the former. The case of Jehoshaphat stands forth as a beacon to warn the righteous, in every age, to have no unnecessary intercourse with the enemies of God.

Chap. IV. 1-7. Widowhood, orphanage, and poverty, have ever found their chief, if not their only friends, among the people of God. The tender heart of Elisha at once responded to the appeal which was made to him; he only desired to know in what way he could meet the necessities of the impoverished family. In so speaking, vessels, and thou shalt set aside that which is full.

5 So ^ashe went from him, and shut the door upon her and upon her sons, who brought the vessels to her; and she poured out.

6 And it came to pass, when ^bthe vessels were full, that she said unto her son, Bring me yet a vessel. And he said unto her, There is not a vessel more. ^cAnd the oil stayed.

7 Then she came and told the man of God: and he said, Go, sell the oil, and ^dpay thy ^edebt, and live thou and thy children of the rest.

8 ¶ And ^fit fell on a day, that Elisha passed to ^gShunem, where was a great woman: and ^hshe ⁱconstrained him to eat bread. And so it was, that, as oft as he passed by, he turned in thither to eat bread.

9 And ^jshe said unto her husband, Behold now, I perceive that ^kthis is an holy man of God which passeth by us continually.

10 ^lLet us make a little chamber, I pray thee, on the wall; and let us set for him there a bed, and a table, and a stool, and a candlestick: and it shall be, when he cometh to us, that he shall turn in thither.

11 And it fell on a day, that he came thither, and he turned into the chamber, and lay there.

12 And he said to Gehazi his servant, Call this Shunammite. And when he had called her, she stood before him.

13 And he said unto him, Say now unto her, Behold, ^mthou hast been careful for us with all this care; what is to be done for thee? wouldest thou be spoken for to the king, or to the captain of the host? And she answered, ⁿI dwell among mine own people.

14 And he said, What then is to be done for her? And Gehazi answered, Verily ^oshe hath no child, and her husband is old.

15 And he said, Call her. And when he had called her, she stood in the door.

16 And he said, ^pAbout this ^qseason, according to the time of life, ^rthou shalt embrace a son. And she said, Nay, my lord, ^sthou man of God, ^tdo not lie unto thine handmaid.

17 And ^uthe woman conceived, and bare a son at that season that Elisha had said unto her, according to the time of life.

18 ¶ And when the child was grown, it fell on a day, that he went out to his father to the reapers.

19 And he said unto his father, ^cMy head, my head! And he said to a lad, Carry him to his mother.

20 And when he had taken him, and brought him to ^dhis mother, he sat on her knees till noon, ^eand then died.

21 And she went up, and laid him on the bed of the man of God, and shut the door upon him, and went out.

22 And she called unto her husband, and said, Send me, I pray thee, one of the young men, and one of the asses, that ^fI may run to the man of God, and come again.

23 And he said, Wherefore wilt thou go to him to-day? it is neither ^gnew-moon nor sabbath. And she said, It shall be ^hwell.

24 Then ⁱshe saddled an ass, and said to her servant, Drive, and go forward; ^jslack not thy riding for me, except I bid thee.

25 So she went, and came unto the man of God ^kto mount Carmel. And it came to pass, when the man of God saw her afar off, that he said to Gehazi his servant, Behold, yonder is that Shunammite:

26 Run now, I pray thee, to meet her; and say unto her, ^l*Is it well with thee? is it well with thy husband? is it well with the child?* And she answered, ^m*It is well.*

27 And when she came to the man of God to the hill, she caught ⁿhim ^oby the feet: but Gehazi came near to ^pthrust her away. And the man of God said, ^qLet her alone; for her soul is vexed within her: ^rand the LORD hath hid it from me, and hath not told me.

28 Then she said, ^sDid I desire a son of my lord? did I not say, Do not deceive me?

29 Then he said to Gehazi, Gird up thy loins, and ^ttake my staff in thine hand, and go thy way: if thou meet any man, salute him not; and if any salute thee, answer him not again: and ^ulay my staff upon the face of the child.

30 And the mother of the child said, As the LORD liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. And he arose, and followed her.

31 And Gehazi passed on before them, and laid the staff upon the face of the child; but there was ^vneither voice nor ^whearing: wherefore he went again to

he was, of course, acting under the influence of the Divine Spirit, who was graciously pleased, on that occasion, to work a miracle of mercy, much calculated to promote in the whole region faith in the living and true God, and thus to obstruct the progress of idolatry. Ver. 8-37. The prophets, like their Master, were chiefly indebted to the bounty of their friends for the subsistence of the day as it was passing over them; and, like him, they everywhere met with those who deemed it a privilege to minister to their necessities. The deportment of this Shunammite was lovely, humane, and devout; and it did not pass unnoticed by the man of God. The erection of a chamber specially for the prophet more fully fixed his attention, and suggested the thought of some substantial method of expressing obligation. The disinterestedness of his benefactress was beautifully expressed. Satisfied with her lot, she had no desire to obtain the patronage either of the king or the captain of the host. Full of contentment, she wished no more. One thing, however, was within the limits of possibility, which might most materially contribute to the increase of her happiness. This did not escape the notice of the shrewd Gehazi, and it met the approval of his master. In due course, the hospitable woman was the happy mother meet him, and told him, saying, The child is ^{not} awaked.

32 And when Elisha was come into the house, behold, ^{the} child was dead, and laid upon his bed.

33 He went in therefore, and shut the door upon them twain, and ^{prayed} unto the LORD.

34 And he went up, and ^{lay} upon the child, and put his mouth upon his mouth, and his eyes upon his eyes, and his hands upon his hands; and he stretched himself upon the child, and the flesh of the child waxed warm.

35 Then he returned, and walked in the house ^{to} and fro; and went up, and stretched himself upon him: and the child sneezed seven times, ^{and} the child opened his eyes.

36 And he called Gehazi, and said, Call this Shunammite. So he called her: and when she was come in unto him, he said, ^{Take up thy son.}

37 Then she went in, and ^{fell} at his feet, and bowed herself to the ground, and took up her son, and went out.

38 ¶ And Elisha ^{came} again to Gilgal: and there was ^a dearth in the land; and the sons of the prophets ^{were} sitting before him: and he said unto his servant, ^{Set on the great pot, and seethe pottage for the sons of the prophets.}

39 And one went out into the field to gather herbs, and found ^a wild vine, and gathered thereof wild gourds his lap-full, and came and shred ^{them} into the pot of pottage: for they knew ^{them} not.

40 So they poured out for the men to eat: and it came to pass, as they were eating of the pottage, that they cried out, and said, O ^{thou} man of God, ^{there is} death in the pot: and they could not eat thereof.

41 But he said, Then bring meal: ^{and} he cast ^{it} into the pot; and he said, Pour out for the people, that they may eat; and there was no ^{harm} in the pot.

42 ¶ And there came a man from Baal-shalisha, and brought the man of God ^{bread} of the first-fruits, twenty loaves ^{of} barley, and full ears of corn in ^{the} husk thereof: and he said, Give unto the people, that they may eat.

CHAPTER V.

1 Naaman is cured of his leprosy. 16 Elisha refuseth Naaman's gifts. 20 Gehazi is smitten with leprosy.

NOW ^{Naaman}, captain of the host of the king of Syria, was a great man ^{with} his master, and ^{honourable}, because ^{by} him the LORD had given ^{deliverance} unto Syria: he was also a mighty man in valour; ^{but he was} a leper.

2 And the Syrians had gone out ^{by} companies, and had brought away captive out of the land of Israel a little maid; and she ^{waited} on Naaman's wife.

3 And she said unto her mistress, ^{Would} God my lord ^{were} ^{with} the prophet that ^{is} in Samaria! for ^{he would} recover him of his leprosy.

4 And one went in, ^{and} told his lord, saying, Thus and thus said the maid that ^{is} of the land of Israel.

5 And the king of Syria said, Go to, go, and I will send a letter unto the king of Israel. And he departed, ^{and} took ^{with} him ten talents of silver, and six thousand pieces of gold, and ten changes of raiment.

6 And he brought the letter to the king of Israel, saying, Now, when this letter is come unto thee, behold, I have ^{therewith} sent Naaman my servant to thee, that thou mayest recover him of his leprosy.

7 And it came to pass, when the king of Israel had read the letter, ^{that} he rent his clothes, and said, ^{Am} I God, to kill and to make alive, that this man doth send unto me to recover a man of his leprosy? wherefore consider, I pray you, and see how he seeketh a quarrel against me.

8 ¶ And it was so, when Elisha the man of God had heard that the king of Israel had rent his clothes, that he sent to the king, saying, Wherefore hast thou rent thy clothes? let him come now to me, ^{and} he shall know that there is a prophet in Israel.

of a son. But great gains render possible great losses; the death of the child filled her with affliction. She, nevertheless, sorrowed not as a mother without hope, well knowing that the same power which gave could restore him. Her faith was honoured, and her heart was more gladdened by receiving her little son back from the dead. Truly, the cup of cold water given to a disciple of Christ, never loses its reward. Ver. 38-44. The miracle here recorded was strikingly manifest, since the meal had no healing power, and was simply the means through which the Almighty Hand worked for the welfare of the people. The miracle set forth in ver. 43, 44 was somewhat of a foretaste of those miracles of bounty which were to distinguish the ministrations of the Messiah. On the present occasion, the supply was very small; but, by Divine power, it was increased to meet the necessities of a multitude, giving them enough and to spare.

Chap. V. 1-7. In all ages successful war has brought honour and reward to its authors. Naaman had commended himself to the confidence and gratitude of his Royal Master, who was prepared to do for him all that lay within the limits of regal power; but in order to his happiness, he required that which baffled the munificence of kings. The little maid, in the loving simplicity of her heart, uttered language which was attended with important consequences. It is somewhat remarkable, that such implicit confidence should have been placed in her humble statement as to prompt a journey to Judea. We have here a beautiful illustration of simple faith in human testimony—a faith which effectually worked by means of a journey of an expensive and laborious character. The application being made to the king, and not to the prophet, alarmed him, lest it might be a mere pretence to fasten a quarrel. Ver. 8-14. Elisha, however, came to his relief, recommending the stranger to be sent to him. Leper though Naaman was, he wanted not for pride, which was wounded by the seeming indiffer-

9 So Naaman came with his horses and with his chariot, and stood at the door of the house of Elisha.

10 And Elisha ^{sent} a messenger unto him, saying, Go and wash in Jordan ^{seven} times, and thy flesh shall come again to thee, and thou shalt be clean.

11 But Naaman was wroth, and ^{he} went away, and said, ^{Behold,} ^I thought, He will surely come out to me, and stand, and call on the name of the LORD his God, and ^{strike} his hand over the place, and recover the leper.

12 Are not ^{Abana} and ^{Pharpar}, rivers of Damascus, ^{better} than all the waters of Israel? may I not wash in them, and be clean? So he turned, and went away in a rage.

13 And ^{his} servants came near, and spake unto him, and said, My father, ^{if} the prophet had bid thee ^{do some} great thing, wouldest thou not have done ^{it}? how much rather then, when he saith to thee, Wash, and be clean?

14 Then ^{he} went he down, and dipped himself seven times in Jordan, ^{according} to the saying of the man of God: and ^{his} flesh came again like unto the flesh of a little child, and he was clean.

15 ¶ And ^{he} returned to the man of God, he and all his company and came and stood before him: and he said, Behold, ^{now} I know that ^{there is} no God in all the earth, but in Israel; now therefore, I pray thee, take ^a blessing of thy servant.

16 But he said, ^{As} the LORD liveth, before whom I stand, ^I will receive none. And he urged him to take ^{it}; but he refused.

17 And Naaman said, Shall there not then, I pray thee, be given to thy servant two mules' burden of earth? for thy servant ^{will} henceforth offer neither burnt-offering nor sacrifice unto other gods, but unto the LORD.

18 In this thing the LORD pardon thy servant, ^{that} when my master goeth into the house of Rimmon to worship there, and he leaneth on my hand, ^{and} I bow myself in the house of Rimmon: when I bow down myself in the house of Rimmon, ^{the} LORD pardon thy servant in this thing.

19 And ^{he} said unto him, Go in peace. So he departed from him a ^{little} way.

20 ¶ But ^{Gehazi}, the servant of Elisha the man of God, said, Behold, ^{my} master hath spared Naaman this Syrian, in not receiving at his hands that which he brought; but, ^{as} the LORD liveth, I will run after him, ^{and} take somewhat of him.

21 So Gehazi followed after Naaman: and when Naaman saw ^{him} running after him, he lighted down from the chariot to meet him, and said, ^{Is} all well?

22 And he said, All is well. ^{My} master hath sent me, saying, Behold, even now there be come to me from mount Ephraim two young men of the sons of the prophets: ^{give} them, I pray thee, a talent of silver, and two changes of garments.

23 And Naaman said, Be content, take two talents. And he urged him, and bound two talents of silver in two bags, with two changes of garments, and laid ^{them} upon two of his servants; ^{and} they bare ^{them} before him.

26 And ^{he} said unto him, Went not mine heart ^{with} thee, when the man turned again from his chariot to meet thee? ^{Is} it a time to receive money, and to receive garments, and oliveyards, and vineyards, and sheep, and oxen, and men-servants, and maid-servants?

ence of the man of God, who did not deign even to come out to him; and still more was he cut by the apparently absurd injunction to wash in the Jordan. From the pride of his heart, he was very near to losing the unspeakable benefit in store for him. "A word fitly spoken, how good is it!" is an adage never more strikingly exemplified than in the present instance. How reasonable and forcible was the remonstrance of his faithful servants! Naaman felt it, obeyed, and was cured. Few passages more impressively illustrate the simplicity of the Gospel system. Men naturally suppose that a thing so great as the salvation of the immortal soul, requires something correspondingly great to be done or suffered; whereas all that God requires is, belief in the record given concerning his Son, implicit confidence in his sovereign mercy through the blood of the Atonement. This, only this, and the chief of sinners receives pardon, righteousness, peace, and adoption, with all its privileges, and a preparation for an inheritance among the saints in light. Ver. 15-27. The best things, from corruption, become the worst. If special means of spiritual improvement be abused, they become deleterious. Of this, Gehazi supplies one of the most memorable of the many examples scattered throughout the Word of God, and to be found in Sacred History. The noble spirit and the disinterested example of his master were thrown away upon him. The demon of covetousness entering his heart, he wickedly determined to profit by the gratitude of Naaman. In this matter, the prophet's servant sinks, as much as his master rises, in the scale of spiritual dignity. That he might gratify his base love of lucre, he was prepared to violate truth, and to imperil the honour of the God of Israel. There are no lengths to which the passion of covetousness will not prompt men. To gratify it, they will madly resort to falsehood, forgery, violence, or murder. There is something peculiarly awful in Elisha's address to the self-deceived transgressor on his return. Every word must have pierced him as a poignard, and the denouncement of the penalty must have descended upon him as a thunderbolt. To his sorrow he saw that, in bartering conscience and character, health and happiness, for two bags of silver, and two changes of raiment, he had made a miserable bargain. The crime was very great, and the punishment proportionate. The fact, which doubtless became known to Naaman, and to all the country, was eminently calculated to sustain the true religion, and to excite godly fear, and to teach the worshippers of the living and true God, that ⁶ And the man of God said, Where fell it? And he shewed him the place. And he ^gcut down a stick, and cast it in thither; and the iron did swim.

¹⁰ And the king of Israel ^msent to the place which the man of God told him and ⁿwarned him of, and saved himself there, not once nor twice.

¹¹ ¶ Therefore ^othe heart of the king of Syria was sore troubled for this thing; and he called his servants, and said unto them, Will ye not shew me which of us ^pis for the king of Israel?

from him no secrets are hid, and that punishment follows hard upon the heels of sin.

Chap. VI. 1-12. The prophets of Judea commanded the attention of all surrounding nations. The oracles of Heathenism were got up as a species of imitation, but to little purpose. Although some of their answers were strange, the nations were not guided, but misled by them. The prophet of the Lord alone could tell the king of Israel the words of the king of Syria in his bed-chamber. Ver. 18-23. Dangers furnish an occasion to display courage. Elisha set lightly by the power of kings; and when emergencies arose, called for the help of the Lord. Always mighty in prayer, he had but to ask and receive. The prayer, that the host of Syria might be smitten with blindness, was immediately answered, to the astonishment alike of them, and of the inhabitants of the city. The prophet conducting the armed multitudes, who came to seize him, all in a state of total blindness, was the most remarkable spectacle the world had ever seen. As prayer had closed their eyes, so prayer was to open them. On this point, then, aileth thee? And she answered, This woman said unto me, ¹Give thy son, that we may eat him to-day, and we will eat my son to-morrow.

29 So we boiled my son, and did eat him: and I said unto her on the ⁸next day, Give thy son, that we may eat him; and ²she hath hid her son.

30 ¶ And it came to pass, when the king heard the words of the woman, that he rent his clothes; and he passed by upon the wall, and the people looked, and, behold, he had sackcloth within upon his flesh.

31 Then he said, ²God do so, and more also to me, ³if the head of Elisha the son of Shaphat shall stand on him this day.

32 But Elisha sat in his house, and ²the elders sat with him; and the king sent a man from before him: but, ere the messenger came this, he said to the elders, See ye how this ⁴son of a murderer hath sent to take away mine head? Look, when the messenger cometh, shut the door, and hold him fast at the door: is not the sound of his master's feet behind him?

33 And, while he yet talked with them, behold, the messenger came down unto him: and he said, Behold, ²this evil ³is of the LORD; what should I ⁴wait for the LORD any longer?

go unto the camp of the Syrians: and when they were come to the uttermost part of the camp of Syria, ²behold, there was no man there.

6 For ²the Lord had made the host of the Syrians to hear a noise of chariots, and a noise of horses, even the noise of a great host; and they said one to another, Lo, the king of Israel hath hired against us ²the kings of the Hittites, and ³the kings of the Egyptians, to come upon us.

7 Wherefore ²they arose, and fled in the twilight, and left their tents, and ³their horses, and their asses, even the camp as it was, ⁴and fled for their life.

8 And when these lepers came to the uttermost part of the camp, they went into one tent, and did eat and drink, and carried thence silver, and gold, and raiment, and went and ²hid it; and came again, and entered into another tent, and carried thence also, and went and hid it.

9 Then ²they said one to another, We do not well: ³this day is a day of good tidings, and we hold our peace; if we tarry till the morning-light, ²some ³mischievous will come upon us: now therefore come, that we may go and tell the king's household.

10 So they came, and called unto ²the porter of the city; and they told them, saying, We came to the camp of the Syrians, and, behold, there was ³no man there, neither voice of man, but horses tied, and asses tied, and the tents as they were.

11 And he called the porters, and they told it to the king's house within.

12 ¶ And the king arose in the night, and said ²unto his servants, ¹I will now shew you what the Syrians have done to us. They know ²that we ³be hungry; therefore are they gone out of the camp to ⁴hide themselves in the field, saying, When they come out of the city, we shall catch them alive, and get into the city.

13 And ¹one of his servants answered and said, Let some take, I pray thee, five of the horses that remain, which are left ²in the city, (behold, they are as all the multitude of Israel that are left in it; behold, I say, ³they are even as all the multitude of the Israelites that are consumed,) and let us send and see.

15 And they went after them unto Jorhis desire was granted, which revealed to them their true condition as they found themselves in the midst of Samaria. How great the magnanimity of Elisha compared with that of the king of Israel! "Slay them!" "No," said the prophet, "set bread and water before them, that they may eat and drink, and go to their master." It was done: thus refreshed, they returned to their sovereign, who was all but consumed by the coals of fire which had thus been heaped on his head; and, as the proper result, "the bands of Syria came no more into the land of Israel." A battle of the most disastrous character would not have produced such a result. Ver. 24-33. We seldom meet with acknowledgments to the prophets of the Lord for good, while evil in which they had no hand is charged to them. We see here how desirous the king was to wreak vengeance on the offending prophet, who knew that "the son of a murderer" was intent on taking away his life.

Chap. VII. 1-20. The prophet soothed the king by the seemingly absurd promise that by the morrow food should be obtained in abundance. The mouth of Infidelity, always open, ridiculed the prophet, considering the prediction probable on the supposition of bread coming down from heaven. The reply was prompt and awful: "Thou shalt see, but shalt not eat thereof."

16 And the people went out, and ¹⁵ spoiled the tents of the Syrians. So a measure of fine flour was sold for a shekel, and two measures of barley for a shekel, ¹⁶ according to the word of the LORD.

17 ¶ And the king appointed the lord, on whose hand he leaned, to have the charge of the gate: and ¹⁷ the people trode upon him in the gate, and he died, as the man of God had said, who spake when the king came down to him.

18 And it came to pass, as the man of God had spoken to the king, saying, Two measures of barley for a shekel, and a measure of fine flour for a shekel, shall be to-morrow, about this time, in the gate of Samaria;

19 And that lord answered the man of God, and said, Now, behold, ¹⁸ if the LORD should make windows in heaven, might such a thing be? And he said, Behold, thou shalt see it with thine eyes, but shalt not eat thereof.

20 And ¹⁹ so it fell out unto him: for the people trode upon him in the gate, and he died.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 The Shunammite hath her land restored. 7 Hazael killeth his master, and succeedeth him. 16 Jehoram's wicked reign. 24 Ahaziah succeedeth him.

THEN spake Elisha unto the woman, ¹ whose son he had restored to life, saying, Arise, and go thou and thine household, and ² sojourn wheresoever thou canst sojourn: for ³ the LORD hath ⁴ called for a famine; and it shall also come upon the land ⁵ seven years.

2 And the woman arose, and did after the saying of the man of God: and she went ⁶ with her household, and sojourned in ⁷ the land of the Philistines seven years.

3 And it came to pass, at the seven years' end, that the woman returned out of the land of the Philistines: and ⁸ she went forth to cry unto the king for her house, and for her land.

These lepers were compelled to keep without the city, and subjected to all the hardships arising from such exclusion. The alternative of remaining where they were, and going to the city, was death. Their last ray of hope shone from the Syrian camp. They might by possibility be spared and fed, and, if killed, they would die any way. The condition of these men rendered them fit instruments of the purposes of Providence; they were the first to discover the fact, and to announce it to the city. The intelligence filled both king and people with astonishment. The news was too good to be credited. Deception was dreaded—an ambush was suspected; but it turned out even as the men had said, and thus the prediction of the prophet was fulfilled. How simply, naturally, and promptly the intimation was realised touching the death of the infidel lord! When God arises, his enemies are speedily scattered, while those that hate him flee before him.

Chap. VIII. 1-14. Famines in ancient times were terrible beyond anything known in later centuries. These events were part of the means employed to 4 And the king talked with ¹ Gehazi, the servant of the man of God, saying, ² Tell me, I pray thee, ³ all the great things that Elisha hath done.

5 And it came to pass, as he was telling the king how ⁴ he had restored a dead body to life, that, ⁵ behold, the woman, whose son he had restored to life, cried to the king for her house, and for her land. And Gehazi said, ⁶ My lord, O king, this ⁷ is the woman, and this ⁸ is her son, whom Elisha restored to life.

6 And when the king asked the woman, she told him. So the king appointed unto her a certain ⁹ officer, saying, ¹⁰ Restore all that ¹¹ was her's, and all the fruits of the field, since the day that she left the land, even until now.

7 ¶ And Elisha came to ¹² Damascus; and ¹³ Ben-hadad the king of Syria was sick: and it was told him, saying, ¹⁴ The man of God ¹⁵ is come hither.

8 And the king said unto Hazael, ¹⁶ Take a present in thine hand, and go, meet the man of God, and ¹⁷ enquire of the LORD by him, saying, Shall I recover of this disease?

9 So ¹⁸ Hazael went to meet him, and took a present ¹⁹ with him, even of every good thing of Damascus, forty camels' burden, and came and stood before him, and said, ²⁰ Thy son Ben-hadad king of Syria hath sent me to thee, saying, Shall I recover of this disease?

10 And Elisha said unto him, Go, say unto him, Thou mayest certainly recover: howbeit ²¹ the LORD hath shewed me that ²² he shall surely die.

11 And he settled his countenance ²³ stedfastly, until he was ashamed; and the man of God ²⁴ wept.

12 And Hazael said, Why weepeth ²⁵ my lord? And he answered, Because I know ²⁶ the evil that thou wilt do unto the children of Israel: their strong holds wilt thou set on fire, and their young men wilt thou slay with the sword, and wilt ²⁷ dash their children, and rip up their women with child.

13 And Hazael said, But what! ²⁸ is thy servant a dog, that ²⁹ he should do this accomplish the Divine plan, as we find in the case of Jacob and his family. Elisha, ever alive to the kindness of his benefactress, the Shunammite, counselled her by what means to preserve the life of her family. It is most cheering to observe the gratitude of the man of God, and the fidelity of his friendships. When the Shunammite returned, he again proved himself her friend, and through his good offices she recovered her property. When she entertained the humble holy man with his servant, from time to time, and when building the chamber on the wall, she little thought of the return for all her kindness which would be made to her. Godly families never lose by their generous attentions to the self-sacrificing servants of the Lord. The example of the king of Syria serves as a reproach to most of the kings of Israel. When affliction overtook him, he sought not to his own prophets to foretell the issue, but to the Lord, through his servant. The interview with Hazael is exceedingly affecting. Ver. 12 shadows forth the terrible course which he would pursue, and the evil he would do to the children of Israel. The sight of Hazael's own heart, as here mirrored forth in the words of the great thing? And Elisha answered, The LORD hath shewed me that thou shalt be king over Syria.

14 So he departed from Elisha, and came to his master; who said to him, What said Elisha to thee? And he answered, He told me that thou shouldest surely recover.

15 And ^{it} came to pass on the morrow, that he took a thick cloth, and dipped it in water, and spread it on his face, so that he died: and ¹Hazeal reigned in his stead.

16 ¶ And in the fifth year of Joram the son of Ahab king of Israel, Jehoshaphat being then king of Judah, Jehoram the son of Jehoshaphat king of Judah ⁴began to reign.

17 Thirty and two years old was he when he began to reign; and he reigned eight years in Jerusalem.

18 And he walked ⁱⁿ the way of the kings of Israel, as did the house of Ahab; for ¹the daughter of Ahab was ^mhis wife: and he did evil in the sight of the LORD.

19 Yet the LORD would not destroy Judah ²for David his servant's sake, as he promised him to give him always ^aa light, and to his children.

20 ¶ In his days ^oEdom revolted from under the hand of Judah, and ^pmade a king over themselves.

21 So Joram went over to Zair, and all the chariots with him; and he rose by night, and smote the Edomites which compassed him about, and the captains of the chariots: and the people fled into their tents.

22 Yet ^qEdom revolted from under the hand of Judah unto this day. Then ^rLibnah revolted at the same time.

23 And the ^{rest} of the acts of Joram, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

24 And Joram slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David: and ¹Ahaziah his son reigned in his stead.

25 ¶ In the twelfth year of Joram the son of Ahab king of Israel, did Ahaziah the son of Jehoram king of Judah begin to reign.

26 Two and twenty years old was Aha-

CHAPTER IX.

1 Jehu is anointed. 24 He killeth Joram in the field of Naboth. 36 Jezebel eaten by dogs.

AND Elisha the prophet called one of ^athe children of the prophets, and said unto him, ^bGird up thy loins, and take this ^cbox of oil in thine hand, and go to ^dRamoth-gilead:

2 And when thou comest thither, look out there ^eJehu the son of Jehoshaphat, the son of Nimshi, and go in, and make him arise up from ^famong his brethren, and carry him to an ^{inner} chamber;

3 Then take the box of oil, and ^{pour} it on his head, and say, Thus saith the LORD, ¹I have anointed thee king over Israel: then open the door ^{and} flee, and tarry not.

4 ¶ So the young man, ^{even} the young man the prophet, went to Ramoth-gilead.

5 And when he came, behold, the captains of the host ^{were} sitting; and he said, ¹I have an errand to thee, O captain. And Jehu said, Unto which of all us? And he said, To thee, O captain.

6 And ^{he} arose, and went into the house; and he poured the oil on his head, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, ¹I have anointed thee king ^{over} the people of the LORD, ^{even} over Israel.

7 And thou shalt smite the house of Ahab thy master, that ^oI may avenge the prophet, appalled him. "Is thy servant a dog, that he should do this great thing?" Were each of the human family to have a sight of his own heart, it would somewhat tend to diminish both self and social idolatry. We should then, probably, hear less of the inherent worth and dignity of human nature. Ver. 15-29. Hazeal, faithful to his character, soon committed the predicted murder, and ascended the throne of Syria. Joram, while a wicked king, was the son of a worthy father, one of the best kings that ever ruled over Judah. Thus we see, that then, as now, the worst of children sometimes issued from the best of parents. How true, that "grace does not run in the blood!" All bear the image of Adam. Those born again alone bear the image of Christ. May that image shine forth in all its beauty in every soul that shall read this page!

Chap. IX. 1-26. The time was now approaching for the fulfilment of certain judgments on great transgressors, and a proper instrument was found in the person of Jehu. It was reserved for him to smite the house of Ahab, and to avenge the blood of the prophets, and the servants of the Lord, at the hand of Jezebel. It is interesting to observe, that, in all such events, the agent always possesses peculiar adaptation for the work assigned him. Jehu was a man of boundless energy, remarkably distinguished by tact, determination, adroitness, and courage. He made short work with Joram; flight was vain; his time was come, and the arrow of Divine justice failed not to reach its victim. Now came the fulfilment of the awful prophecy, which had gone before. The slaughter of one king did not satisfy the demands of justice. Ahaziah was also appointed to death. Thus two sovereigns perished on the same day; but Jezebel, the promoter of so much mischief, still lives. Her hour, nevertheless, is come. She is thrown headlong from the blood of my servants the prophets, and the blood of all the servants of the LORD, ²at the hand of Jezebel.

8 For the whole house of Ahab shall perish; and ¹I will cut off from Ahab him that pisseth against the wall, and ²him that is shut up and left in Israel.

9 And I will make the house of Ahab ¹like the house of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, and like ²the house of Baasha the son of Ahijah.

10 And ¹the dogs shall eat Jezebel in the portion of Jezreel, and there shall be none to bury her. And ²he opened the door, and fled.

11 ¶ Then Jehu came forth to the servants of his lord: and one said unto him, ¹*Is all well?* wherefore came this ²*mad fellow* to thee? And he said unto them, Ye know the man, and his communication.

12 And they said, It is false; tell us now. And he said, ¹Thus and thus spake he to me, saying, Thus saith the LORD, I have anointed thee king over Israel.

13 Then they hasted, ¹and took every man his garment, and put it under him on the top of the stairs, and ²blew with trumpets, saying, Jehu ³is king.

14 So Jehu the son of Jehoshaphat, the son of Nimshi, ¹conspired against Joram; (now Joram had ²kept Ramoth-gilead, he and all Israel, because of Hazael king of Syria :

15 But king ³Joram was ¹returned to be healed in Jezreel of the wounds which the Syrians ²had given him, when he fought with Hazael king of Syria;) and Jehu said, If it be your minds, then let ³none go forth nor escape out of the city to go to tell it in Jezreel.

16 ¶ So Jehu rode in a chariot, and went to Jezreel; (for Joram lay there.) And ¹Ahaziah king of Judah was come down to see Joram.

17 And there stood ¹a watchman on the tower in Jezreel, and he spied the company of Jehu as he came, and said, I see a company. And Joram said, ¹Take an horseman, and send to meet them, and let him say, ²*Is it peace?*

18 So there went one on horseback to meet him, and said, Thus saith the king, ¹*Is it peace?* And Jehu said, ¹What hast thou to do with peace? turn thee behind me. And the watchman told, saying, The messenger came to them, but he cometh not again.

19 Then he sent out a second on horseback, which came to them, and said, Thus saith the king, ¹*Is it peace?* And Jehu answered, What hast thou to do with peace? turn thee behind me.

20 And the watchman told, saying, He came even unto them, and cometh not again: and the ¹driving is like the driving of Jehu the son of Nimshi; ²for he driveth ³furiously.

21 And Joram said, ¹Make ready. And his chariot was made ready. And ²Joram king of Israel, and Ahaziah king of Judah, went out, each in his chariot, and they went out against Jehu, and ³met him in ⁴the portion of Naboth the Jezreelite.

22 And it came to pass, when Joram saw Jehu, that he said, ¹*Is it peace, Jehu?* And he answered, What peace, so long as ²the whoredoms of thy mother Jezebel, and her witchcrafts, are so many?

23 And Joram turned his hands, and fled, and said to Ahaziah, ¹*There is treachery, O Ahaziah.*

24 ¶ And Jehu ¹drew a bow with his full strength, and ²smote Jehoram between his arms, and the arrow went out at his heart, and he ³sunk down in his chariot.

25 Then said Jehu to Bidkar his captain, Take up, and cast him in the portion of the field of Naboth the Jezreelite: for remember how that, when I and thou rode together after Ahab his father, ¹the LORD laid this burden upon him;

26 Surely I have seen yesterday the ²blood of Naboth, and the blood of his sons, saith the LORD; and ³I will requite thee in this ⁴plat, saith the LORD. Now therefore take and cast him into the plat of ground, according to the word of the LORD.

27 ¶ But when ¹Ahaziah the king of Judah saw this, he fled by the way of the garden-house: and Jehu followed after him, and said, ²Smite him also in the chariot. And they did so at the going up to Gur, which is by ³Ibleam: and he fled to Megiddo, and died there.

28 And his servants carried him in a chariot to Jerusalem, and buried him in his sepulchre with his fathers in the city of David.

29 And ¹in the eleventh year of Joram the son of Ahab began Ahaziah to reign over Judah.

30 ¶ And when Jehu was come to Jezreel, Jezebel heard of it; and she ¹painted her face, and ²tired her head, and looked out at a window.

31 And as Jehu entered in at the gate, she said, ¹*Had ²Zimri peace*, who slew his master?

32 And he lifted up his face to the window, and said, ¹*Who is on my side?* who? And there looked out to him two or three ²eunuchs.

33 And he said, Throw her down. So they threw her down: and some of her blood was sprinkled on the wall, and on the horses; ²and he trode her under foot.

window of her palace, and immediately destroyed, and there, according to the word of the Lord, her flesh is eaten—her “blood licked” by dogs! To the mere natural eye, nothing appeared in all this but the common course of events, though the hand of God was in every part of it. The rise and fall of kingdoms are not the work of chance, but the results of a will which nothing can thwart, wielding a power which nothing can resist. The house of Ahab is now in the way of being utterly extinguished; the next chapter will record its completion. He had sold himself to work iniquity, and as he had sowed, he now reaped. His very name was made to 34 And when he was come in, ⁴he did eat and drink, and said, Go, see now ⁵this cursed woman, and bury her; for she is a king's daughter.

35 And they went to bury her; ¹but they found no more of her than the scull, and the feet, and the palms of her hands.

36 Wherefore they came again, and told him: and he said, ²This is the word of the LORD, which he spake ³by his servant Elijah the Tishbite, saying, In the portion of Jezreel shall dogs eat the flesh of Jezebel:

37 And ¹the carcase of Jezebel shall be as dung upon the face of the field in the portion of Jezreel; so that they shall not say, This is Jezebel.

CHAPTER X.

1 Jehu causeth seventy of Ahab's children to be beheaded.
18 He destroyeth the worshippers of Baal, 29 yet followeth Jeroboam's sins.

AND Ahab had ^aseventy sons ^bin Samaria. And Jehu wrote letters, and sent to Samaria, unto ^cthe rulers of Jezreel, to the elders, and to ^dthem that brought up Ahab's children, saying,

2 Now, ^eas soon as this letter cometh to you, seeing your master's sons ^fare with you, and ^gthere are with you chariots and horses, a fenced city also, and armour;

3 ¹Look even out the best and meekest of your master's sons, and set ²him on his father's throne, and ³fight for your master's house.

4 But they were exceedingly afraid, and said, ¹Behold, two kings stood not before him: ²how then shall we stand?

5 And he that ¹was over the house, and he that ²was over the city, the elders also, and the bringers-up of the children, sent to Jehu, saying, ¹We are thy servants, and will do all that thou shalt bid us; we will not make any king: do thou ²that which is good in thine eyes.

6 Then he wrote a letter the second time to them, saying, If ye ¹be ²mine, and if ye will hearken unto my voice, ³take ye the heads of the men ⁴your master's sons, and come to me to Jezreel by to-morrow this time. Now the king's sons, ⁵being seventy persons, ⁶were with the great men of the city, which brought them up.

7 And it came to pass, when the letter came to them, that they took the king's sons, and ¹slew seventy persons, and put their heads in baskets, and sent him ²them to Jezreel.

8 ¶ And ¹there came a messenger, and told him, saying, They have brought the heads of the king's sons. And he said,

Lay ye them in two heaps at the entering in of the gate ¹until the morning.

9 And it came to pass in the morning, that he went out, and stood, and said to all the people, ¹Ye be righteous: behold, ²I conspired against my master, and slew him; but who slew all these?

10 Know now, that there shall ¹fall unto the earth nothing of the word of the LORD, which the LORD spake concerning the house of Ahab: for ²the LORD hath done ³that which he spake ⁴by his servant Elijah.

11 So Jehu slew all that remained of the house of Ahab in Jezreel, and all his great men, and his ¹kinsfolks, and ²his priests, until ³he left him none remaining.

12 ¶ And he arose and departed, and came to Samaria: and as he ¹was at the ²shearing-house in the way, 13 Jehu ¹met with ²the brethren of Ahaziah king of Judah, and said, Who are ye? And they answered, We are the brethren of Ahaziah; and we go down to ¹salute the children of the king, and the children of the queen.

14 And he said, ¹Take them alive. And they took them alive, and slew them at the pit of the shearing-house, ²even two and forty men; ³neither left he any of them.

15 ¶ And when he was departed thence, he ¹lighted on ²Jehonadab the son of Rechab ³coming to meet him; and he ⁴saluted him, and said to him, ⁵Is thine heart right, as my heart is with thy heart? And Jehonadab answered, It is. If it be, ⁶give me thine hand. And he gave him his hand; and he took him up to him into the chariot.

16 And he said, ¹Come with me, and see my zeal for the LORD. So they made him ride in his chariot.

17 And when he came to Samaria, he slew all that remained unto Ahab in Samaria, till he had destroyed him, according to the saying of the LORD, which he spake to Elijah.

18 ¶ And Jehu gathered all the people together, and said unto them, Ahab served Baal a little, ¹but ²Jehu shall serve him much.

19 Now therefore call unto me ¹all the prophets of Baal, all his servants, and all his priests; let none be wanting; for I have a great sacrifice ²to do to Baal: who-soever shall be wanting, he shall not live. But Jehu did ³it in subtilty, to the intent that he might destroy the worshippers of Baal.

"rot;" he lives in the page of history only to excite execration.

Chap. X. 1-11. Jehu proceeded with great energy to accomplish the work of judgment assigned him. The alternative was submission to his rule, or the battle-field. It is not wonderful, therefore, that the rulers of Jezreel promptly submitted to the conqueror. We have not met with anything more frightful than the vengeance here taken on the sons of Ahab, whose sympathy with their father, and imitation of his guilt, may be safely assumed, else they would have received mercy. Ver. 12-17. Having begun, Jehu made an end by slaying all that remained unto Ahab in Samaria, till he had destroyed his house both root and branch. So unalterable are the purposes—so inevitable the vengeance of Heaven! Ver. 18-36. The principal part of Jehu's mission of destruction yet remained to be fulfilled. He resorted to means the most certain, although somewhat circuitous, for accomplishing the destruction of the devotees of Baal.

20 And Jehu said, ¹Proclaim a solemn assembly for Baal. And they proclaimed it.

21 And Jehu sent through all Israel; and all the worshippers of Baal came, so that there was not a man left that came not. ²And they came into the house of Baal; and the house of Baal was ³full from one end to another.

22 And he said unto him that was over the vestry, Bring forth ⁴vestments for all the worshippers of Baal. And he brought them forth vestments.

23 And Jehu went, and Jehonadab the son of Rechab, into the house of Baal, and said unto the worshippers of Baal, Search, and look that there be here with you none of the servants of the LORD, but the worshippers of Baal only.

24 And when they went in to offer sacrifices and burnt-offerings, Jehu appointed fourscore men without, and said, If any of the men whom I have brought into your hands escape, he that letteth him go, his life shall be for the life of him.

25 And it came to pass, as soon as he had made an end of offering the burnt-offering, that Jehu said to the guard, and to the captains, ¹Go in and slay them; ²let none come forth. And they smote them with the ³edge of the sword; and the guard and the captains cast them out, and went to the city of the house of Baal.

26 And they brought forth the ⁴images out of the house of Baal, and burned them.

27 And they ¹brake down the image of Baal, and brake down the house of Baal, and made it a draught-house unto this day.

28 Thus Jehu destroyed Baal out of Israel.

29 ¶ Howbeit from ¹the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who ²made Israel to sin, Jehu departed not from after them, to wit, ³the golden calves that were in Beth-el, and that were in Dan.

30 And the LORD said unto Jehu, ¹Because thou hast done well in executing that which is right in mine eyes, and hast done unto the house of Ahab ²according to all that was in mine heart, thy children of the fourth generation shall sit on the throne of Israel.

31 But Jehu ¹took ²no heed to ³walk in the law of the LORD God of Israel with all his heart; for he departed not from

CHAPTER XI.

1 Joash being saved from Athaliah's massacre, 4 is anointed king by Jehoiada.

AND when ¹Athaliah, ²the mother of Ahaziah, saw that her son was dead, she arose ³and destroyed all the ⁴seed-royal.

2 But ¹Jehosheba, the daughter of king Joram, sister of Ahaziah, took ²Joash the son of Ahaziah, and stole him from among the king's sons which were slain; and ³they hid him, even him and his nurse, ⁴in the bed-chamber from Athaliah, so that he was not slain.

3 And he was with her hid in the house of the LORD six years: ¹and Athaliah did reign over the land.

4 ¶ And ¹the seventh year Jehoiada sent and fetched the ²rulers over hundreds, with ³the captains and the guard, and brought them to him into the house of the LORD, and ⁴made a covenant with them, and ⁵took an oath of them in the house of the LORD, and shewed them the king's son.

5 And he commanded them, saying, This is the thing that ye shall do; A third part of you ¹that enter in on the sabbath shall even be keepers of ²the watch of the king's house;

6 And a third part shall be at ¹the gate of Sur; and a third part at the gate behind the guard: so shall ye keep the watch of the house, ²that it be not broken down.

7 And two ¹parts of all you that ²go forth on the sabbath, even they shall keep

The judgment was complete. Not a solitary worshipper of the popular god was left in Israel. Hitherto the obedience of Jehu is implicit. "According to all that the Lord had commanded him, so did he." But he now reaches a point at which he makes a halt, and at length the fires of his zeal become extinguished. That zeal, indeed, was never pure; it had too much of self in it. When he took Jehonadab into his chariot, saying, "Come with me, and see my zeal for the Lord," he uttered language which but too clearly revealed the impurity of his motive, and boded but little good during his subsequent career. We are, therefore, prepared for the intimation that he held fast by the sins of Jeroboam, sparing the golden calves,—that source of so much transgression and consequent misery to Israel; and that he "took no heed to walk in the law of the Lord God of Israel with all his heart." Unless the heart be right, zeal, always impure, will be fitful, often shortlived, and seldom fraught with beneficial consequences. True zeal is the fruit of knowledge, faith, charity, and the indwelling Spirit of God.

Chap. XI. 1-16. The bad queens of Israel were, if possible, more ferocious than the worst kings. Athaliah made a frightful commencement of her career, dipping her hands deep in the blood of the seed-royal, for which she was soon visited with appropriate vengeance. Where the Lord has a purpose to accomplish, means are always devised for bringing it about. Joash was preserved amid the carnage, and, in due course, placed on the throne of his fathers. Athaliah, on learning the fact, shouted, "Treason! treason!" This was her last cry, for her cup was filled, and the stroke of justice speedily the watch of the house of the LORD about the king.

8 And ye shall compass the king round about, every man with his weapons in his hand: and ¹he that cometh within the ranges, let him be slain; and be ye with the king as he goeth out, and as he cometh in.

9 And ²the captains over the hundreds did according to all things that Jehoiada the priest commanded: and they took every man his men that were to come in on the sabbath, with them that should go out on the sabbath, and came to Jehoiada the priest.

10 And to the captains over hundreds did the priest give ³king David's spears and shields, that were in the temple of the LORD.

11 And the guard stood, ⁴every man with his weapons in his hand, round about the king, from the right ⁵corner of the temple to the left corner of the temple, along ⁶by the altar and the temple.

12 And ⁷he brought forth the king's son, and ⁸put the crown upon him, and gave him ⁹the testimony: and they made him king, and ¹⁰anointed him; and they clapped their hands, ¹¹and said, ¹²God save the king.

13 ¶ And ¹when Athaliah heard the noise of the guard, and of the people, she came to the people into the temple of the LORD.

14 And when she looked, behold, the king stood by a pillar, as the manner was, and ²the princes and the trumpeters by the king; and ³all the people of the land rejoiced, and blew with trumpets. And Athaliah rent her clothes, and cried, Treason, treason!

15 But Jehoiada the priest commanded the ⁴captains of the hundreds, the officers of the host, and said unto them, Have her forth without the ranges; and him that followeth her kill with the sword. For the priest had said, ⁵Let her not be slain in the house of the LORD.

16 And they laid hands on her; and she went by the way by the which the horses came into the king's house: and ⁶there was she slain.

17 ¶ And Jehoiada ⁷made a covenant between the LORD and the king and the people, that they should be the LORD's people; ²between the king also and the people.

18 And all the people of the land ³went into the house of Baal, and brake it down; his altars and his images ⁴brake they in pieces thoroughly, and ⁵slew Mattan the priest of Baal before the altars: and the priest ⁶appointed ⁷officers over the house of the LORD.

19 And he took the rulers over hundreds, and the captains, and the guard, and all the people of the land; and they brought down the king from the house of the LORD, and came by the way of the gate of the guard to the king's house: and ⁸he sat on the throne of the kings.

20 And all the people of the land rejoiced, and the city was in quiet; and they slew Athaliah with the sword beside the king's house.

21 Seven years old was Jehoash when he began to reign.

CHAPTER XII.

1 Jehoash reigneth well all the days of Jehoiada. 19 He is slain by his servants.

IN ¹the seventh year of Jehu, ²Jehoash began to reign; and forty years reigned he in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Zibiah of Beer-sheba.

2 And ³Jehoash did that which was right in the sight of the LORD all his days wherein Jehoiada the priest instructed him.

3 But ⁴the high places were not taken away: the people still sacrificed and burnt incense in the high places.

4 ¶ And Jehoash ⁵said to the priests, All ⁶the money of the ⁷dedicated things that is brought into the house of the LORD, even ⁸the money of every one that passeth the account, the money ⁹that every man is set at, ¹⁰and all the money that ¹¹cometh into any man's heart to bring into the house of the LORD,

5 Let ¹²the priests take it to them, every man of his acquaintance; and ¹³let them repair the breaches of the house, wheresoever any breach shall be found.

6 But it was so, ¹⁴that in the ¹⁵three and twentieth year of king Jehoash ¹⁶the priests had not repaired the breaches of the house.

7 Then ¹⁷king Jehoash called for Jehoiada the priest, and the other priests, and said unto them, Why repair ye not the breaches of the house? Now therefore descended on her. Ver. 17-21, Jehoiada acted a discreet part, presenting an example of honourable zeal to the latest ages. The influence for good of one upright, wise, and holy man is always great. The multitude never stand in the way of religious reformation. Here a word sufficed to enlist them against idolatry and its emblems. The people made short work of Baal, his altars, and images, and also of his priests. The joy created by the enthroning of the youthful king was enhanced by the destruction of Athaliah, who was an object of hate and fear to all the people. No good could come of a woman the dead bodies of whose grandchildren formed the steps by which she ascended the throne. Many kings were received with joy, while the people that shouted "Hosanna!" only lived to curse the day that witnessed their coronation. But we shall forthwith see that such was not the case with Jehoash.

Chap. XII. 1-21. At the outset of his career, Jehoash was one of the best kings that ever reigned in Judah, and in mercy to the people he swayed the sceptre throughout the long course of forty years. He owed much, under God, to Jehoiada, whose instructions he received with meekness, and obeyed with gladness, and to whose prayers he was doubtless deeply indebted. Jehoash was a reformer from his youth up, and betook himself to set in order the things which were wanting. It is pleasing to observe the integrity with which the workmen conducted the repairs of the House of the Lord. Such was their integrity, that it was not needful to look closely into their accounts, or even to take a note of the monies handed over to them, for "they dealt faithfully." How happy a world will this be when fidelity shall be the universal characteristic of all employers and all workmen—men of high and of low degree!

receive no more money of your acquaintance, but deliver it for the breaches of the house.

8 And the priests consented to receive no more money of the people, neither to repair the breaches of the house.

9 But Jehoiada the priest ^atook a chest, and bored a hole in the lid of it, and set it beside the altar, on the right side as one cometh into the house of the LORD: and ^othe priests that kept the ^bdoor put therein all the money that was brought into the house of the LORD.

10 And it was so, when they saw that there was much money in the chest, that ^bthe king's ^cscribe and the high priest came up, and they ⁷put up in bags, and told the money that was found in the house of the LORD.

11 And they gave the money, being told, into the hands of them that did the work, that had the oversight of the house of the LORD: and they ⁸laid it out to the carpenters and builders that wrought upon the house of the LORD, 12 And to ⁴masons, and hewers of stone, and to buy timber and hewed stone to repair the breaches of the house of the LORD, and for all that ⁹was laid out for the house to repair it.

13 Howbeit there were not made for the house of the LORD ⁷bowls of silver, snuffers, basons, trumpets, any vessels of gold, or vessels of silver, of the money that was brought into the house of the LORD:

14 But they gave that to the workmen, and repaired therewith the house of the LORD.

15 Moreover they reckoned not with the men into whose hand they delivered the money to be bestowed on workmen; ^afor they dealt faithfully.

16 The ^atrespass-money and sin-money was not brought into the house of the LORD: it was the priests'.

17 ¶ Then Hazael king of Syria went up, and fought against Gath, and took it; and Hazael ^aset his face to go up to Jerusalem.

18 And Jehoash king of Judah ^atook all the hallowed things that Jehoshaphat, and Jehoram, and Ahaziah, his fathers, 19 ¶ And ⁷the rest of the acts of Joash, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

20 And ^ahis servants arose, and made a conspiracy, and slew Joash in the ²house of Millo, which goeth down to Silla.

21 For ^aJozachar the son of Shimeath, and Jehoabab the son of ^bShomer, his servants, smote him, and he died; and they buried him with his fathers in the city of David: and Amaziah his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Jehoahaz's wicked reign. 20 Elisha's death; 21 his bones revive a dead man.

IN the ¹three and twentieth year of Joash the son of Ahaziah king of Judah, ^aJehoahaz the son of Jehu began to reign over Israel in Samaria, and reigned seventeen years.

2 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, ^band ²followed the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, which made Israel to sin; he departed not therefrom.

3 ¶ And ^cthe anger of the LORD was kindled against Israel; and he delivered them into the hand of ^dHazael king of Syria, and into the hand of Ben-hadad the son of Hazael, all their days.

4 And ^eJehoahaz besought the LORD, and ^fthe LORD hearkened unto him; for he ^gsaw the oppression of Israel, because the king of Syria oppressed them.

5 (And the LORD gave Israel ^aa saviour, so that they went out from under the hand of the Syrians; and the children of Israel dwelt in their tents, as ^bbeforetime.

6 Nevertheless they ^cdeparted not from the sins of the house of Jeroboam, who made Israel sin, but ^dwalked therein: ^eand there ^fremained the grove also in Samaria.)

7 Neither did he leave of the people to

That day will assuredly come; and let the saints rejoice in the anticipation. It is matter for lamentation that a course so hopefully begun should have so terminated. In the case of Hazael's invasion—instead of acting as other godly kings had acted before, looking to the Lord, and calling in the services of his holy prophets—Jehoash meanly purchased his departure by surrendering to him the hallowed things, and the gold found in the treasures of the House of the Lord. This he did without resorting to any means for averting the calamity, and obtaining the favour of the Most High, who had promised to be a “wall of fire round about his people,” “and the glory in the midst of them.” But out of such a course only evil could come, and hence we are prepared to hear that his servants made a conspiracy and slew him. Thus ended a career which might have been to the honour and the glory of God, and for his own welfare. The death of Jehoiada was the test of his character, and he bore it ill. He and the princes of Judah having turned their backs upon the Lord, repaired to the groves and idols; and not only so, but conspired against Zachariah, the son of his friend and guardian Jehoiada, because he faithfully reproved them: and, sad to tell, “the king remembered not the kindness which Jehoiada, his father, had done to him, but slew his son.”—2 Chr. xxiv. 22. Alas for human nature! There is nothing of which it is not capable. Surely “he that trusteth to his own heart is a fool.” The best of men may become a brier, sharper than a thorn hedge.

Chap. XIII. 1-7. The wisdom, both of individuals and of sovereigns, is, in all trouble, first to repair to the Lord. Jehoahaz, therefore, took the right course, and, accordingly, he was successful. There is no instance of a Jewish king seeking the Lord with penitence and sincerity, failing of his request. The tendency of the whole history is to illustrate the power of prayer. Ver. 8-25. Elisha, no longer youthful and vigorous as when the Jehoahaz but fifty horsemen, and ten chariots, and ten thousand footmen; for the king of Syria had destroyed them, and had made them like the dust by thrashing.

8 ¶ Now ^mthe rest of the acts of Jehoahaz, and all that he did, and his might, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

9 And Jehoahaz slept with his fathers; and they buried him in Samaria: and ^aJoash his son ^ereigned in his stead.

10 ¶ In the thirty and seventh year of Joash king of Judah ^abegan Jehoash the son of Jehoahaz to reign over Israel in Samaria, and reigned sixteen years.

11 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD; he departed not from all the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel sin; but he walked therein.

12 And the rest of the acts of Joash, and all that he did, and his might where-with he fought against Amaziah king of Judah, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

13 And Joash ^eslept with his fathers; and ^aJeroboam sat upon his throne: and Joash was buried in Samaria with the kings of Israel.

14 ¶ Now Elisha was ^afallen sick of his sickness whereof ^ahe died. And Joash the king of Israel came down unto him, and wept over his face, and said, 'O my father, my father! the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof!

15 And Elisha said unto him, Take bow and arrows: and he took unto him bow and arrows.

16 And he said to the king of Israel, ^aPut thine hand upon the bow: and he put his hand upon it: and ^aElisha put his hands upon the king's hands.

17 And he said, 'Open the window eastward: and he opened it. Then Elisha said, Shoot: and he shot. And he said, ^aThe arrow of the LORD's deliverance, and the arrow of deliverance from Syria: for thou shalt smite the Syrians in Aphek, till thou have consumed them.

18 And he said, Take the arrows: and he took them. And he said unto the king of Israel, ^aSmite upon the ground: and ^ahe smote thrice, and stayed.

20 ¶ And Elisha died, and they ^aburied him. And the bands of ^athe Moabites invaded the land at the coming in of the year.

21 And it came to pass, as they were burying a man, that, behold, they spied a band of men; and they cast the man into the sepulchre of Elisha: and when the man ^awas let down, and ^atouch'd the bones of Elisha, he revived, and stood up on his feet.

22 ¶ But Hazael king of Syria oppressed Israel all the days of Jehoahaz.

24 So ^aHazael king of Syria died; and Ben-hadad his son reigned in his stead.

25 And Jehoash the son of Jehoahaz ^atook again, out of the hand of Ben-hadad the son of Hazael, the cities which he had taken out of the hand of Jehoahaz his father by war: three times did Joash beat him, and recovered the cities of Israel.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 Amaziah's good reign. 17 He is slain by conspiracy. 21 Asariah succeedeth him.

IN the second year of ^aJoash son of Jehoahaz king of Israel, ^areigned Amaziah the son of Joash king of Judah.

2 He was twenty and five years old when he began to reign, and reigned twenty and nine years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Jehoaddan of Jerusalem.

3 And ^ahe did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, yet not like David his father; ^ahe did according to all things as Joash his father did.

4 Howbeit ^athe high places were not taken away; as yet the people did sacrifice and burnt incense on the high places.

5 ¶ And it came to pass, as soon as the kingdom was confirmed in his hand, ^athat he slew ^ahis servants which had slain the king his father.

6 But the children of the murderers he slew not: according unto that which is mantle of Elijah fell upon him, had now finished his day and his work, and, therefore, sickness was sent as a messenger to bring him home. The deportment of Joash on this occasion was both creditable and touching. It was lovely to behold the man who wore the crown of Israel standing weeping at the bed-side of the expiring prophet. In a few simple words he expresses important truths. Elisha had been a father to himself, and he had stood in the place of the chariots and horsemen for the protection of Israel. His was the prayer which had power with God. For him to ask was to receive deliverance from affliction, and victory over enemies. The king's visit to the dying prophet was fraught with great encouragement to himself. He was then given to understand that mercy was in store for him and his people, and that he should succeed in opposition to the Syrian oppressor. No one ever yet lost by a visit to the sick-room of departing piety. Nothing contributes so effectually as a death-bed to impress the worthlessness of the present world, and the importance of that which is to come, and the consequent necessity, through life long, of carrying on diligent preparations for the change of worlds.

Chap. XIV. 1-7. Amaziah commenced his reign hopefully, notwithstanding the early period at which he ascended the throne. He shewed discretion in avenging the murder of his father, by not attempting it till the kingdom was confirmed in his hand. New occupants of place and power hazard much by entering on perilous enterprises before they have been fully established. In sparing the children, he displayed humanity, as well as observed the laws of Moses. Ver. 8-20. Amaziah, not-written in the book of the law of Moses, wherein the LORD commanded, saying, ^bThe fathers shall not be put to death for the children, nor the children be put to death for the fathers; but every man shall be put to death for his own sin.

7 ¶ He ¹slew of Edom in ²the valley of Salt ten thousand, and took ¹Selah by war, and called the name of it ¹Joktheel unto this day.

8 ¶ Then ^mAmaziah sent messengers to Jehoash the son of Jehoahaz, son of Jehu, king of Israel, saying, ⁿCome, let us look one another in the face.

9 And Jehoash the king of Israel sent to Amaziah king of Judah, saying, ^oThe thistle that was in Lebanon sent to the cedar that was in Lebanon, saying, Give thy daughter to my son to wife: and there passed by a wild beast that was in Lebanon, and trode down the thistle.

10 Thou hast indeed smitten Edom, and ^pthine heart hath lifted thee up: ^qglory of this, and tarry at ^rhome; for ^rwhy shouldest thou meddle to thy hurt, that thou shouldest fall, even thou, and Judah with thee?

11 But ^sAmaziah would not hear: therefore Jehoash king of Israel went up; and he and Amaziah king of Judah looked one another in the face at ^tBeth-shemesh, which belongeth to Judah.

12 And Judah ^uwas ³put to the worse before Israel; and ^uthey fled every man to their tents.

13 And Jehoash king of Israel took Amaziah king of Judah, the son of Jehoash, the son of Ahaziah, at Beth-shemesh, and came to Jerusalem, and brake down the wall of Jerusalem, from ^vthe gate of Ephraim unto ^vthe corner-gate, four hundred cubits.

14 And he took ^wall the gold and silver, and all the vessels that were found in the house of the LORD, and in the treasures of the king's house, and hostages, and returned to Samaria.

15 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Jehoash which he did, and his might, and how he fought with Amaziah king of Judah, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

16 And ^xJehoash slept with his fathers, and was buried in Samaria with the kings of Israel; and ^yJeroboam his son reigned in his stead.

22 He built ^gElath, and restored it to Judah, after that the king slept with his fathers.

23 ¶ In the fifteenth year of Amaziah the son of Joash king of Judah, Jeroboam the son of Joash king of Israel ^hbegan to reign in Samaria, and reigned forty and one years.

24 And he did that which was evil ⁱin the sight of the LORD: he departed not from all the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin.

29 And Jeroboam slept with his fathers, even with the kings of Israel; and Zachariah his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XV.

1 Azariah's good reign. 5 Jotham and other kings.

IN ¹the ¹twenty and seventh year of Jeroboam king of Israel began Azawithstanding his worth, displayed a great want of wisdom by making war with the son of Jehu. His former success appears to have excited in him the martial spirit to his own undoing. The counsel of this king of Israel, notwithstanding its sarcasm, was good. "Thou hast smitten Edom, and thine heart hath lifted thee up; glory of this, and tarry at home: for why shouldest thou meddle to thy hurt, that thou shouldest fall, even thou, and Judah with thee?" But "pride came before destruction." Amaziah would not listen; the battle was joined, Judah overthrown, and Amaziah taken prisoner. How important to leave off strife before it is meddled with! The subsequent conspiracy, and assassination of Amaziah, concluded the mournful history. Ver. 21-29. It was truly of the Lord's mercies that Israel was not many a time consumed; had it not been that the Lord was upon her side, she would frequently have perished; and her name would have been blotted out from under heaven. The confession is one which, at all times, the people of the Lord may make with truth and profit. The comfort of the faithful is, that the covenant of God is "well ordered in all things and sure," and that his "gifts and callings are without repentance."

Chap. XV. 1-12. Jehu performed a great work in chastening the enemies of the Lord and the advocates of riah son of Amaziah king of Judah to reign.

2 ^bSixteen years old was he when he began to reign; and he reigned two and fifty years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Jeholiah of Jerusalem.

3 And ^che did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his father Amaziah had done;

4 Save that ^dthe high places were not removed: the people sacrificed and burnt incense still on the high places.

5 ¶ And ^ethe LORD smote the king, ^fso that he was a leper unto the day of his death, ^gand dwelt in a several house: and ^hJotham the king's son was over the house, ⁱjudging the people of the land.

6 And the rest of the acts of Azariah, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

7 So ^kAzariah slept with his fathers; and they buried him with his fathers in the city of David: and Jotham his son reigned in his stead.

8 ¶ In ^lthe ^mthirty and eighth year of Azariah king of Judah did Zachariah the son of Jeroboam reign over Israel in Samaria six months.

9 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, as his fathers had done: he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin.

10 And Shallum the son of Jabesh conspired against him, and ⁿsmote him before the people, and ^oslew him, and reigned in his stead.

11 And the rest of the acts of Zachariah, behold, they are written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel.

12 This was the word of the LORD which he spake unto Jehu, saying, Thy sons shall sit on the throne of Israel unto the fourth generation. ^pAnd so it came to pass.

13 ¶ Shallum the son of Jabesh began to reign in the nine and thirtieth year of ^qUzziah king of Judah; and he reigned ^ra full ^smonth in Samaria.

14 For Menahem the son of Gadi went up from ^tTirzah, and came to Samaria, and smote Shallum the son of Jabesh in Samaria, and slew him, and reigned in his stead.

15 And the rest of the acts of Shallum, and his conspiracy which he made, behold, they are written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel.

16 ¶ Then Menahem smote ^uTiphshah, and all that were therein, and the coasts thereof from Tirzah: because they opened 25 But ^kPekah the son of Remaliah, ^la captain of his, conspired against him, and smote him in Samaria, in the palace of the king's house, with Argob and Arich, and with him fifty men of the Gileadites: and he killed him, and reigned in his room.

27 ¶ In the two and fiftieth year of Azariah king of Judah, ^mPekah the son of Remaliah began to reign over Israel in Samaria, and reigned twenty years.

28 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD: he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin.

30 ¶ And Hoshea the son of Elah made idolatry; and in consequence of this, notwithstanding his serious shortcomings, his sons had the honour of sitting on the throne of Israel to the fourth generation. Ver. 13-20. Menahem proved a terrible scourge to Israel, and his hand fell heavy on "the mighty men of wealth," who generally took the lead in departure from the living God. It was therefore meet, that, in proportion to their transgression, they should be visited in the day of the Lord. Ver. 21-38. Jotham formed a pleasing contrast to most of his predecessors. He made an excellent commencement, and did much for the good of his country. Still the same infatuation attended him as had the great majority of kings. The high places were not removed, and the people continued to sacrifice and burn incense there. All the reformers, somehow, stopped short as they approached the chief seats of sin, and the prime sources of temptation. It is not easy for us, in these times, to account for the obstinate perseverance of a conspiracy against Pekah the son of Remaliah, and smote him, and slew him, and ⁶reigned in his stead, ⁷in ⁶the twentieth year of Jotham the son of Uzziah.

31 And the rest of the acts of Pekah, and all that he did, behold, they are written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel.

32 ¶ In the second year of Pekah the son of Remaliah king of Israel began ³Jotham the son of ²Uzziah king of Judah to reign.

33 Five and twenty years old was he when he began to reign; and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was ⁴Jerusha, the daughter of Zadok.

34 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD: he did according to all that his father Uzziah had done.

35 Howbeit the high places were not removed: the people sacrificed and burnt incense still in the high places. He built ¹the higher gate of the house of the LORD.

36 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Jotham, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

37 (In those days the LORD began ²to send against Judah ¹Rezin the king of Syria, and Pekah the son of Remaliah.)

38 And Jotham slept with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the city of David his father: and ⁷Ahaz his son reigned in his stead.

20 Hezekiah succeedeth him.

IN the ¹seventeenth year of Pekah the son of Remaliah, Ahaz the son of Jotham king of Judah began to reign.

2 Twenty years old was Ahaz when he began to reign, and reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem, and ²did not that which was right in the sight of the LORD his God, like David his father.

3 But ¹he walked in the way of the kings of Israel; yea, and ²made his son to pass through the fire, ³according to the abominations of the heathen, whom the LORD cast out from before the children of Israel.

4 And he sacrificed and burnt incense in the high places, and ¹on the hills, and under every green tree.

5 ¶ Then Rezin king of Syria, and Pekah son of Remaliah king of Israel, came up to Jerusalem to war: and they besieged Ahaz, ²but could not overcome him.

6 At that time Rezin king of Syria recovered Elath to Syria, and drave the Jews from ¹Elath: and the Syrians came to Elath, and dwelt there unto this day.

7 So Ahaz sent messengers to ²Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria, saying, ¹I am thy servant, and thy son; come up, ¹and save me out of the hand of the king of Syria, and out of the hand of the king of Israel, which rise up against me.

8 And Ahaz took ¹the silver and gold that was found in the house of the LORD, and in the treasures of the king's house, and sent ²it for a present ¹to the king of Assyria.

9 And the king of Assyria hearkened unto him: for the king of Assyria ²went up against ³Damascus, and took it, and carried ¹the people of it captive to ⁴Kir, ⁵and slew Rezin.

10 ¶ And king Ahaz went to Damascus to meet Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria, and saw an altar that was at Damascus: and king Ahaz sent to Urijah the priest the fashion of the altar, and ²the pattern of it, according to all the workmanship thereof.

11 And Urijah the priest ¹built an altar according to all that king Ahaz had sent from Damascus: so Urijah the priest made ²it against king Ahaz came from Damascus.

12 And when the king was come from Damascus, the king saw the altar; and the king ¹approached to the altar, and offered thereon.

13 And he burnt his burnt-offering and his meat-offering, and poured his drink-offering, and sprinkled the blood ⁴of his peace-offerings, upon the altar.

14 And he brought also ¹the brasen altar, which was before the LORD, from the fore-front of the house, from between the altar and the house of the LORD, and put it on the north side of the altar.

15 And king Ahaz commanded Urijah the priest, saying, Upon the great altar burn ¹the morning burnt-offering, and the evening meat-offering, and ²the king's burnt-sacrifice, and his meat-offering, with the burnt-offering of all the people of the land, and their meat-offering, and their drink-offerings; and sprinkle upon it all the blood of the burnt offering, and all the blood of the sacrifice; and the brasen altar shall be ²for me to enquire by.

16 Thus did Urijah the priest, according to all that king Ahaz commanded.

17 ¶ And king Ahaz cut off ¹the borders of the bases, and removed the laver from off them; and took down ²the sea from off the brasen oxen that were under it, and put it upon a pavement of stones:

both kings and people in this matter: but we find in this a counterpart even in the Church of Christ. There, too, reformation is often carried to a vast extent, while a halt is made as men approach the great popular idol—the world. In spite of the injunction, “Love not the world, neither the things of the world,” that world even the people of God are prone to love.

Chap. XVI. 1-20. Ahaz was a very mixed character, —not the worst, but far from the best of Judah's kings.

By his conduct he became a stumblingblock to the people, and a source of encouragement to the wicked. His whole progress was downward: his intense devotion to idolatry led him further and further wrong. In the case of such a man, vengeance could not long slumber; and hence enemies speedily arose to chastise him. The kingdom of Israel on the one hand, and the kingdom of Syria on the other, afflicted both him and his people. Urijah sadly failed of his duty in complying with the unholy command of his royal master. What God requires of

CHAPTER XVII.

¹ Hoshea's wicked reign. ⁵ Samaria for their sins is capitulated. ²⁴ The strange nations being plagued with lions, make a mixture of religions.

IN the twelfth year of Ahaz king of Judah began ^aHoshea the son of Elah to reign in Samaria over Israel nine years.

2 And he did ^athat which was evil in the sight of the LORD, but not as the kings of Israel that were before him.

3 ¶ Against him came up ^bShalmaneser ^cking of Assyria; and Hoshea became his servant, and ^dgave him ^epresents.

4 And the king of Assyria ^afound conspiracy in Hoshea: for he had sent messengers to So ^bking of Egypt, and ^cbrought no present to the king of Assyria, as he had done year by year; therefore the king of Assyria shut him up, and bound him in prison.

5 ¶ Then the king of Assyria came up throughout all the land, and went up to Samaria, and besieged it three years.

6 In the ninth year of Hoshea the king of Assyria took Samaria, and ^acarried Israel away into Assyria, and placed them in ^bHalah and in Habor ^cby the river of Gozan, and in the cities of ^dthe Medes.

7 For so it was, that the children of Israel had ^asinned against ^bthe LORD their God, ^cwhich had brought them up out of the land of Egypt, from under the hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt, ^dand had feared other gods,

8 And walked in the statutes of the heathen; whom the LORD cast out from before the children of Israel, and ^eof the kings of Israel, which they had made.

9 And the children of Israel did ^asecretly those things that were not right against the LORD their God, and they built them high places in all their cities, from the tower of the watchmen to the fenced city.

10 And ^athey set them up ^bimages and ^cgroves ^din every high hill, and under every green tree:

11 And there they ^aburnt incense in all the high places, as ^bdid the heathen whom the LORD carried away before them; and wrought wicked things to provoke the LORD to anger:

12 For they served idols, ^awhereof the LORD had said unto them, ^bYe shall not do this thing.

13 Yet the LORD ^atestified against Israel ^band against Judah ^cby ^dall the prophets, ^eand by all the seers, saying, ^fTurn ye from your evil ways, and ^gkeep my commandments, ^hand my statutes, according to all the law which I commanded your fathers, and which I sent to you by my servants the prophets.

14 Notwithstanding they would not hear, but ^ahardened their necks, like to the neck of their fathers, that ^bdid not believe in the LORD their God.

15 And they rejected his statutes, and ^ahis covenant that he made with their fathers, and his testimonies which he testified against them; and they followed ^bvanity, and ^cbecame vain, and went after the heathen that were round about them, ^dconcerning whom the LORD had charged them, that they should not do like them.

16 And they left all the commandments of the LORD their God, and made them ^amolten images, ^beven two calves, and made ^ca grove, and ^dworshipped all the host of heaven, and served Baal.

17 And ^athey caused their sons and their daughters to pass through the fire, and ^bused divination and enchantments, and ^csold themselves to do evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger.

18 Therefore the LORD was very angry with Israel, and ^aremoved them out of his sight: there was none left but ^bthe tribe of Judah only.

19 Also ^aJudah kept not the commandments of the LORD their God, but walked in the statutes of Israel which they made.

20 And the LORD ^arejected ^ball the seed of Israel, and afflicted them, and delivered them into the hand of spoilers, until he had cast them out of his sight.

21 For ^ahe rent Israel from the house of ^bDavid; and they made Jeroboam the son of Nebat king: and ^cJeroboam drave Israel from following the LORD, and made them sin ^da great sin.

22 For the children of Israel walked in all the sins of Jeroboam which he did; they departed not from them, his people is, not to improve his laws, but to observe them. All such attempts are an implied impeachment of the Divine perfections.

Chap. XVII. 1-23. Hoshea speedily found, that the "way of transgressors is hard." Deprived of his supremacy, he was rendered a tributary to the king of Assyria; and, failing of his duty, he was speedily called to pay the penalty of transgression. At this period the voice of prophecy was peculiarly powerful. All the prophets, and all the seers, continued to testify against both Judah and Israel, exhorting them to repent, and to return to the Lord; but it was to no purpose: they went on from bad to worse, till the judgments of the Lord threatened to extinguish them. The heaviest blow that ever overtook the posterity of Abraham was that set forth in ver. 23, when "Israel was removed out of his sight," and carried away out of their own land. The Ten Tribes were from this time in a manner lost through the captivity; a portion of them returned to Jerusalem with the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, but the mass remained scattered among the nations in the countries to which they had been carried. Many writers suppose that a remnant of the ten tribes is to be found some-23 Until the LORD removed Israel out of his sight, as he had said by all his servants the prophets. So was Israel carried away out of their own land to Assyria unto this day.

24 ¶ And the king of Assyria brought men from ^bBabylon, and from Cuthah, and from ^cAva, and from ^dHamath, and from Sepharvaim, and placed them in the cities of Samaria instead of the children of Israel; and they possessed Samaria, and dwelt in the cities thereof.

25 And so it was at the beginning of their dwelling there, that they feared not the LORD: therefore the LORD sent lions among them, which slew some of them.

26 Wherefore they spake to the king of Assyria, saying, The nations which thou hast removed, and placed in the cities of Samaria, know not the manner of the God of the land: therefore he hath sent lions among them, and, behold, they slay them; because they know not the manner of the God of the land.

27 Then the king of Assyria commanded, saying, Carry thither one of the priests whom ye brought from thence; and let them go and dwell there, and let him teach them the manner of the God of the land.

28 Then one of the priests, whom they had carried away from Samaria, came and dwelt in Beth-el, and taught them how they should fear the LORD.

29 Howbeit every nation made gods of their own, and put them in the houses of the high places which the Samaritans had made, every nation in their cities wherein they dwelt.

30 And the men of Babylon made Succoth-benoth, and the men of Cuth made Nergal, and the men of Hamath made Ashima, 31 And the Avites made Nibhaz and Tartak, and the Sepharvites burnt their children in fire to Adrammelech and Anammelech, the gods of Sepharvaim.

32 So they feared the LORD, and made unto themselves of the lowest of them priests of the high places, which sacrificed for them in the houses of the high places.

33 They feared the LORD, and served their own gods, after the manner of the nations whom they carried away from thence.

34 Unto this day they do after the former manners: they fear not the LORD, neither do they after their statutes, or after their ordinances, or after the law and commandment which the LORD commanded the children of Jacob, whom he named Israel;

35 With whom the LORD had made a covenant, and charged them, saying, Ye shall not fear other gods, nor bow yourselves to them, nor serve them, nor sacrifice to them:

36 But the LORD, who brought you up out of the land of Egypt with great power, and a stretched-out arm, him shall ye fear, and him shall ye worship, and to him shall ye do sacrifice.

39 But the LORD your God ye shall fear; and he shall deliver you out of the hand of all your enemies.

40 Howbeit they did not hearken, but they did after their former manner.

41 So these nations feared the LORD, and served their graven images, both their children, and their children's children: as did their fathers, so do they unto this day.

CHAPTER XVIII.

1 Hezekiah's good reign. 4 He destroyeth idolatry, and prospereth. 9 Samaria is carried captive for their sins.

NOW it came to pass, in the third year of Hoshea son of Elah king of Israel, that Hezekiah the son of Ahaz king of Judah began to reign.

2 Twenty and five years old was he when he began to reign; and he reigned twenty and nine years in Jerusalem: his mother's name also was Abi, the daughter of Zachariah.

3 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that David his father did.

4 ¶ He removed the high places, and brake the images, and cut down the groves, and brake in pieces the brassen serpent that Moses had made: for unto those days the children of Israel did burn incense to it; and he called it Nehushtan.

5 He trusted in the LORD God of Israel; so that after him was none like him among all the kings of Judah, nor any that were before him.

6 For he clave to the LORD, and departed not from following him, but kept his commandments, which the LORD commanded Moses.

7 And the LORD was with him; and he prospered whithersoever he went where on earth, although there is the utmost uncertainty with respect to their location. Some think that the Afghans are their descendants; others believe that they are to be found among the American Indians; but there is no means of thoroughly establishing either of these positions. Here, then, the Divine patience has run its course, and it becomes necessary, in the counsels of the Most High, to disperse the favoured people. All warnings, all prophets, have hitherto been lost on them; and it only remains to let loose the whirlwind of destruction, that, according to the Divine threatening, they may be carried into foreign lands.

Chap. XVIII. 1-12. We have at length reached a good man, and a wise ruler, Hezekiah. Not only did he equal the best of his predecessors, doing that which was right in the sight of the Lord, according to all that David his father did, but did what they omitted to do,—re-forth: and he ^arebelled against the king of Assyria, and served him not.

8 He smote ^athe Philistines, even unto ^aGaza, and the borders thereof, ^afrom the tower of the watchmen to the fenced city.

9 ¶ And it came to pass, in the fourth year of king Hezekiah, which was the seventh year of Hoshea son of Elah king of Israel, that ^aShalmaneser king of Assyria came up against Samaria, and besieged it.

10 And at the end of three years ^athey took it; even in the sixth year of Hezekiah, (that is the ninth year of Hoshea king of Israel,) Samaria was taken.

11 And ^athe king of Assyria did carry away Israel unto Assyria, and put them in Halah and in Habor by the river of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes;

12 Because ^athey obeyed not the voice of the LORD their God, but transgressed his covenant, and all that ^aMoses the servant of the LORD commanded, and would not bear them, nor do them.

13 ¶ Now, in ^athe fourteenth year of king Hezekiah did ^aSennacherib king of Assyria ^acome up against all the fenced cities of Judah, and took them.

14 And Hezekiah king of Judah sent to the king of Assyria to Lachish, saying, 'I have offended; return from me: that which thou puttest on me will I bear. And the king of Assyria appointed unto Hezekiah king of Judah three hundred talents of silver, and thirty talents of gold.

15 And Hezekiah ^agave him all the silver that was found in the house of the LORD, and in the treasures of the king's house.

16 At that time did Hezekiah cut off the gold from the doors of the temple of the LORD, and from the pillars which Hezekiah king of Judah had overlaid, and gave ^ait to the king of Assyria.

17 And ^athe king of Assyria sent Tartan, and Rab-saris, and Rab-shakeh, from Lachish to king Hezekiah with a ^a'great host against Jerusalem: and they went up, and came to Jerusalem. And when they were come up, they came and stood by ^athe conduit of the upper pool, which is in the highway of the fuller's field.

18 And when they had called to the king, there came out to them ^aEliakim the son of Hilkiah, which was over the household, and ^aShebna the ^ascribe, and Joah the son of Asaph ^athe recorder.

19 And Rab-shakeh said unto them,

Speak ye now to Hezekiah, ^aThus saith the great king, the king of Assyria, ^aWhat confidence is this wherein thou trustest?

20 Thou ^asayest, but they are but vain words,) ^aI have counsel and strength for the war. Now on whom dost thou trust, that thou rebellest against me?

21 Now, behold, thou ^atrustest upon ^athe staff of this bruised reed, even ^aupon Egypt, on which if a man lean, it will go into his hand, and pierce it: so is Pharaoh king of Egypt unto all that trust on him.

22 But if ye say unto me, ^aWe trust in the LORD our God: is not that he ^awhose high places and whose altars Hezekiah hath taken away, and hath said to Judah and Jerusalem, Ye shall worship before this altar in Jerusalem?

23 Now therefore, I pray thee, ^agive pledges to my lord the king of Assyria, and ^aI will deliver thee two thousand horses, if thou be able on thy part to set riders upon them.

24 How then ^awilt thou turn away the face of one captain of the least of my master's servants, and put ^athy trust on Egypt for ^achariots and for horsemen?

25 Am ^aI now come up without the LORD against this place to destroy it? The LORD said to me, Go up against this land, and destroy it.

26 Then said Eliakim the son of Hilkiah, and Shebna, and Joah, unto Rab-shakeh, Speak, I pray thee, to thy servants ^ain the Syrian language; (for we understand it;) and talk not with us in the Jews' language in the ears of the people that are on the wall.

27 But Rab-shakeh said unto them, Hath my master sent me to thy master, and to thee, to speak these words? hath he not sent me to the men which sit on the wall, that they may ^aeat their own dung, and drink ^atheir own piss with you?

28 ¶ Then ^aRab-shakeh stood, and cried with a loud voice in the Jews' language, and spake, saying, Hear the word of ^athe great king, the king of Assyria:

29 Thus saith the king, ^aLet not Hezekiah deceive you; for he shall not be able to deliver you out of his hand:

30 Neither let Hezekiah ^amake you trust in the LORD, saying, The LORD will surely deliver us, and this city shall not be delivered into the hand of the king of Assyria.

31 Hearken not to Hezekiah: for thus moved the high places, broke down the images, cut down the groves, and broke in pieces the brazen serpent that Moses had made, by which the people were ensnared. After him there was none like him among Judah's kings, nor any that were before him. He clave to the Lord with full purpose of heart, and, as a consequence, the Lord was with him, prospering him whithersoever he went. Ver. 13-37. Events soon occurred thoroughly to test the king, and he stood the test in a manner highly creditable to his own character, as well as illustrative of the grace of God. The invasion by Assyria brought things to a crisis, furnishing an occasion, on the one hand, for the exercise of faith, and on the other, for a display of the Divine power. The conduct of Rab-shakeh served, in a remarkable manner, to prepare for the judgments that were to come. His impious defiance of the power of the Most High, and his contempt for Hezekiah's piety, only served to render the judgment which overtook him the more striking and impressive. The language and deportment of this daring idolater exceeds everything of the kind that has yet come before us. His words were heard in heaven, and the decree speedily went forth to dash him, with his master's hosts, in pieces, like a potter's vessel. The deportment of saith the king of Assyria, Make an agreement with me by a present, and come out to me, and then eat ye every man of his own vine, and every one of his fig-tree, and drink ye every one the waters of his cistern;

32 Until I come and take you away to a land like your own land; a land of corn and wine, a land of bread and vineyards, a land of oil-olive and of honey, that ye may live, and not die: and hearken not unto Hezekiah, when he persuadeth you, saying, The LORD will deliver us.

33 Hath any of the gods of the nations delivered at all his land out of the hand of the king of Assyria?

34 Where are the gods of Hamath, and of Arpad? where are the gods of Sepharvaim, Hena, and Ivah? have they delivered Samaria out of mine hand?

35 Who are they among all the gods of the countries, that have delivered their country out of mine hand, that the LORD should deliver Jerusalem out of mine hand?

36 But the people held their peace, and answered him not a word: for the king's commandment was, saying, Answer him not.

37 Then came Eliakim the son of Hilkiah, which was over the household, and Shebna the scribe, and Joah the son of Asaph the recorder, to Hezekiah, with their clothes rent, and told him the words of Rab-shakeh.

AND it came to pass, when king Hezekiah heard it, that he rent his clothes, and covered himself with sackcloth, and went into the house of the LORD.

2 And he sent Eliakim, which was over the household, and Shebna the scribe, and the elders of the priests, covered with sackcloth, to Isaiah the prophet, the son of Amoz.

3 And they said unto him, Thus saith Hezekiah, This day is a day of trouble, and of rebuke, and blasphemy: for the children are come to the birth, and there is not strength to bring forth.

hath heard: wherefore lift up thy prayer for the remnant that are left.

5 So the servants of king Hezekiah came to Isaiah.

6 ¶ And Isaiah said unto them, Thus shall ye say to your master, Thus saith the LORD, Be not afraid of the words which thou hast heard, with which the servants of the king of Assyria have blasphemed me.

7 Behold, I will send a blast upon him, and he shall hear a rumour, and shall return to his own land; and I will cause him to fall by the sword in his own land.

8 ¶ So Rab-shakeh returned, and found the king of Assyria warring against Libnah: for he had heard that he was departed from Lachish.

9 And when he heard say of Tirhakah king of Ethiopia, Behold, he is come out to fight against thee; he sent messengers again unto Hezekiah, saying,

10 Thus shall ye speak to Hezekiah king of Judah, saying, Let not thy God in whom thou trustest deceive thee, saying, Jerusalem shall not be delivered into the hand of the king of Assyria.

11 Behold, thou hast heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all lands, by destroying them utterly: and shalt thou be delivered?

12 Have the gods of the nations delivered them which my fathers have destroyed; as Gozan, and Haran, and Rezeph, and the children of Eden which were in Thelassar?

13 Where is the king of Hamath, and the king of Arpad, and the king of the city of Sepharvaim, of Hena, and Ivah?

14 ¶ And Hezekiah received the letter of the hand of the messengers, and read it: and Hezekiah went up into the house of the LORD, and spread it before the LORD.

15 And Hezekiah prayed before the LORD, and said, O LORD God of Israel, which dwellest between the cherubims, thou art the God, even thou alone, of all the kingdoms of the earth; thou hast made heaven and earth.

16 LORD, bow down thine ear, and hear; open, LORD, thine eyes, and see; and hear the words of Sennacherib, which hath sent him to reproach the living God.

17 Of a truth, LORD, the kings of Assyria have destroyed the nations and their lands,

18 And have cast their gods into the Hezekiah under the emergency was admirable. "Answer him not," was his counsel; and it is frequently applicable in our own times to the circumstances of the children of God. Hezekiah knew that vengeance was the Lord's, and that he would repay it; and, therefore, to the Lord he left it.

Chap. XIX. 1-7. Notwithstanding Hezekiah's meekness, he was deeply wounded by the blasphemy of the invader, but like a wise and holy man, instead of wasting his time in vain lamentations, he went directly to the House of the Lord. Well were it for God's people, in all their tribulations, to adopt a similar course. Isaiah was speedily commissioned to comfort the sorrowing king, who received the intimation that the Lord would send a "blast" upon the invader, driving him back to his own land, where he would fall by the sword. Ver. 8-19. Hezekiah rose with the occasion; the language of Isaiah had filled him with peace, confidence, and hope. Nothing could exceed the spiritual beauty of his deportment, when, proceeding again to the House of the Lord, he spread the letter before the Most High. Behold him there, looking up, and calling upon the God of his fathers to come to the relief of his people! Never fire; ¹for they were no gods, but the work of men's hands, wood and stone; therefore they have destroyed them.

19 Now therefore, ²O LORD our God, I beseech thee, save thou us out of his hand, that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that thou art the LORD God, even thou only.

20 ¶ Then Isaiah the son of Amoz sent to Hezekiah, saying, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, That ²which thou hast prayed to me against Sennacherib king of Assyria I have heard.

21 This is the word that the LORD hath spoken concerning him; ³The virgin, ⁴the daughter of Zion, hath despised thee, and laughed thee to scorn; the daughter of Jerusalem hath shaken her head at thee.

22 ⁵Whom hast thou reproached and blasphemed? and against whom hast thou ⁶exalted thy voice, and lifted up thine eyes on high? even against ⁷the Holy One of Israel.

23 By ⁸thy messengers thou hast reproached the LORD, and hast said, With the multitude of my chariots I am come up to the height of the mountains, to the sides of Lebanon, and will cut down the ⁹tall cedar-trees thereof, and the choice fir-trees thereof: and I will enter into the lodgings of his borders, and into ¹⁰the forest of his Carmel.

24 I have digged and drunk strange waters, and ¹¹with the sole of my feet have I dried up all the rivers of ¹²besieged places.

25 ¹³Hast thou not heard long ago how I have done it, and of ancient times that I have formed it? now have I brought it to pass, that thou shouldst be to lay waste fenced cities into ruinous heaps.

26 Therefore their inhabitants were ¹⁴of small power, they were dismayed and confounded; ¹⁵they were as the grass of the field, and as the green herb, as ¹⁶the grass on the house-tops, and as corn blasted before it be grown up.

27 But I know thy ¹⁷abode, and thy going out, and thy coming in, and thy rage against me.

28 Because ¹⁸thy rage against me and thy tumult is come up into mine ears, therefore I will put my hook in thy nose, and my bridle in thy lips, and I will turn thee back by the way by which thou camest.

29 And this shall be a sign unto thee, ¹⁹Ye shall eat this year such things as grow of themselves, and in the second 33 By the way that he came, by the same shall he return, and shall not come into this city, saith the LORD.

34 For ²³I will defend this city, to save it, ²⁴for mine own sake, and for my servant David's sake.

35 ¶ And it came to pass that night, that ²⁵the angel of the LORD went out, and smote in the camp of the Assyrians an hundred fourscore and five thousand: and ²⁶when they arose early in the morning, behold, they were all dead corpses.

36 So Sennacherib king of Assyria departed, and went and returned, and dwelt at ²⁷Nineveh.

37 And it came to pass, as he was worshipping in the house of Nisroch his god, that Adrammelech and Sharezer his sons smote him with the sword; and they escaped into the land of ²⁸Armenia: and Esarhaddon his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XX.

- 1 Hezekiah, receiving a message of death, by prayer hath his life lengthened. 8 The sun goeth ten degrees backward for a sign. 20 Manasseh succeedeth Hezekiah.

IN those days ²⁹was Hezekiah sick unto death: and the prophet Isaiah the son of Amoz came to him, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, ³⁰Set thine house in order; for ³¹thou shalt die, and not live.

2 Then he turned his face to the wall, and prayed unto the LORD, saying,

3 I beseech thee, O LORD, remember now how ³²I have walked before thee ³³in truth, and with ³⁴a perfect heart, and have done that which is good in thy sight. And Hezekiah wept ³⁵sore.

4 And it came to pass, afore Isaiah was gone out into the middle ³⁶court, that the word of the LORD came to him, saying,

5 Turn again, and tell Hezekiah ³⁷the captain of my people, Thus saith the did monarch before, with, it may be, the exception of David, present a spectacle so touching, so lovely, and so sublime. Ver. 20-37. Again the Lord graciously condescended to lend an ear to the supplications of the afflicted sovereign. We may form some idea of the relief he received when Isaiah apprised him that the Lord had heard his prayer. It was enough: to this nothing could be added. Hour succeeds to hour, night-fall arrives, the Angel of Death descends, and long before the rise of to-morrow's sun, 185,000 men are dead corpses!

Chap. XX. 1-7. The best of men are not exempt from the lot of humanity. Hezekiah was admonished of his frailty, and that the time had come to lay aside his earthly crown. The intelligence overwhelmed him with distress; in his agony he prayed, and the Lord heard him. Hezekiah did not well in demanding a sign. It was enough that the prophet of the Lord assured him of the fact, but the sign, doubtless, contributed to strengthen his faith, and to promote the Divine glory. Ver. 12-21. The congratulations of the king of Babylon, while seemingly, were attended with temptation. It was LORD, the God of David thy father, I have heard thy prayer, ^aI have seen thy tears: behold, I will heal thee; on the third day thou shalt go up unto the house of the LORD.

6 And ^bI will add unto thy days fifteen years; and I will deliver thee and this city out of the hand of the king of Assyria; and ^cI will defend this city for mine own sake, and for my servant David's sake.

7 And Isaiah said, Take a lump of figs: and they took and laid it on the boil, and he recovered.

8 ¶ And Hezekiah said unto Isaiah, ^dWhat shall be the sign that the LORD will heal me, and that I shall go up into the house of the LORD the third day?

9 And Isaiah said, ^eThis sign shalt thou have of the LORD, that the LORD will do the thing that he hath spoken; Shall the shadow go forward ten degrees, or go back ten degrees?

10 And Hezekiah answered, It is a light thing for the shadow to go down ten degrees: nay, but let the shadow return backward ten degrees.

11 And Isaiah the prophet ^fcried unto the LORD; and ^ghe brought the shadow ten degrees backward, by which it had gone down in the ^hdial of Ahaz.

12 ¶ At that time ⁱBerodach-baladan, the son of Baladan, king of Babylon, sent letters and a present unto Hezekiah: ^jfor he had heard that Hezekiah had been sick.

13 And Hezekiah hearkened unto them, and shewed them all the house of his ^kprecious things, the silver, and the gold, and the spices, and the precious ointment, and ^lall the house of his ^marmour, and all that was found in his treasures: ⁿthere was nothing in his house, nor in all his dominion, that Hezekiah shewed them not.

14 ¶ Then came Isaiah the prophet unto king Hezekiah, and said unto him, ^oWhat said these men? and from whence came they unto thee? And Hezekiah said, They are come from ^pa far country, ^qeven from Babylon.

15 And he said, What have they seen in thine house? And Hezekiah answered, ^rAll the things that are in mine house have they seen: there is nothing among my treasures that I have not shewed them.

customary with Eastern monarchs to amass treasures merely for show and ostentation. It would seem to have been in compliance with this custom that Hezekiah acted as he did. There was nothing wrong in the display which he made to the messengers, by itself considered, but it is clear that vanity got the better of him. So great had been the mercy shewn him, first in the deliverance of his country and the marvellous overthrow of his enemies, and then in the restoration of himself, that it could only have one of two effects: if it did not produce grateful, adoring love, it could scarcely fail of vanity, and a consequent forgetfulness of the source whence mercy had flowed. The judgment was severe, but the transgression was great. Such a sin in such a man was peculiarly aggravated; although nothing appeared to the human eye, yet to the eye of the Omniscient it was a grievous departure from perfect love.

16 And Isaiah said unto Hezekiah, Hear the word of the LORD:

17 Behold, the days come, that all that is in thine house, and that which thy fathers have laid up in store unto this day, ^ashall be carried into Babylon: nothing shall be left, saith the LORD.

18 And of ^bthy sons that shall issue from thee, which thou shalt beget, shall they take away; and they shall be eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon.

19 Then said Hezekiah unto Isaiah, ^cGood is the word of the LORD which thou hast spoken. And he said, ^dIs it not good, if ^epeace and truth be in my days?

20 ¶ And the rest of the acts of Hezekiah, and all his might, and how ^fhe made a pool, and a conduit, and brought water into the city, ^gare they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

21 And Hezekiah slept with his fathers: and Manasseh his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XXI

1 Manasseh's reign. 3 His great idolatry. 19 Amon's wicked reign. 23 He being slain, Joniah is made king.

MANASSEH was twelve years old when he began to reign, and reigned fifty and five years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was ^aHephzi-bah.

2 And ^bhe did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, ^cafter the abominations of the heathen, whom the LORD cast out before the children of Israel.

3 For he built up again ^dthe high places which Hezekiah his father had destroyed; and ^ehe reared up altars for Baal, and made a grove, as did ^fAhab king of Israel; ^gand worshipped all the host of heaven, and served them.

4 And he built altars in the house of the LORD, of which the LORD said, ^hIn Jerusalem will I put my name.

5 And he built altars for all the host of heaven ⁱin the two courts of the house of the LORD.

6 And ^jhe made his son pass through the fire, and ^kobserved times, and used enchantments, and dealt with ^lfamiliar spirits and wizards: he ^mwrought much wickedness in the sight of the LORD, to provoke ⁿhim to anger.

7 And ^ohe set a graven image of the Hezekiah received the intelligence of the chastisements which were to come upon him with meek submission. It would appear, however, that selfishness blended with it. "Good is the word of the Lord which thou hast spoken: is it not good if peace and truth be in my days?" No; it is not good, but evil! He is told that all his treasures shall be carried away into Babylon—that his sons shall be led captive, and made eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon. Sad fate, sad service this for the princes of Palestine! Nor would it soothe them to remember that it was the fruit of their father's sin,—that father resting in the grave, while his sons are bending under the yoke of foreign slavery.

Chap. XXI. 1-9. Hezekiah was succeeded by Manasseh his son, who, in all points, presented a most deplorable contrast to his father. It is among the grove that he had made in the house, of which the LORD said to David, and to Solomon his son, ¹In this house, and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen out of all tribes of Israel, will I put my name for ever.

8 Neither ⁹will I make the feet of Israel move any more out of the land which I gave their fathers; ¹⁰only if they will observe to do according to all that I have commanded them, and according to all the law that my servant Moses commanded them.

9 But ¹¹they hearkened not; and Manasseh ¹²seduced them to do ¹³more evil than did the nations whom the LORD destroyed before the children of Israel.

10 ¶ And ¹⁴the LORD spake by his servants the prophets, saying,

11 ¹⁵'Because Manasseh king of Judah hath done these abominations, ¹⁶and hath done wickedly ¹⁷above all that the Amorites did, which ¹⁸were before him, and hath ¹⁹made Judah also to sin with his idols;

12 Therefore thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Behold, ²⁰I am bringing such evil upon Jerusalem and Judah, that ²¹whosoever heareth of it, both his ears shall tingle.

13 And ²²I will stretch over Jerusalem the line of Samaria, and ²³the plummet of the house of Ahab; and ²⁴I will wipe Jerusalem as a man ²⁵wipeth a dish, wiping it, and turning it upside down.

14 And ²⁶I will forsake ²⁷the remnant of mine inheritance, and ²⁸deliver them into the hand of their enemies; and they shall become a prey and a spoil to all their enemies;

15 Because they have done ²⁹that which was evil in my sight, and have provoked me to anger, ³⁰since the day their fathers came forth out of Egypt, even unto this day.

16 Moreover, ³¹Manasseh shed innocent blood very much, till he had filled Jerusalem from ³²one end to another; ³³besides his sin wherewith he made Judah to sin, in doing ³⁴that which was evil in the sight of the LORD.

17 ¶ Now ³⁵the rest of the acts of Manasseh, and all that he did, and his sin that he sinned, ³⁶are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

CHAPTER XXII.

1 Josiah's good reign. 3 He taketh care for the repair of the temple. 8 Hilkiah findeth the book of the law. 15 Huldah prophesieth the destruction of Jerusalem.

JOSIAH ¹was ²eight years old when he began to reign; and he reigned thirty and one years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Jedidah, the daughter of Adaiah of ³Bosath.

2 And he did ⁴that which was ⁵right in the sight of the LORD, and ⁶walked in all the way of David his father, and ⁷turned not aside to the right hand or to the left.

3 ¶ And it came to pass, ⁸in the eighteenth year of king Josiah, ⁹that the king sent Shaphan the son of Azaliah, the son of Meshullam, the scribe, to the house of the LORD, saying,

4 Go up to ¹⁰Hilkiah the high priest, that he may ¹¹sum the silver which is brought into the house of the LORD, which mysteries of Providence that such a man was permitted to reign throughout so long a period, since it furnished an occasion of perpetrating evil upon a scale of the greatest magnitude. This wicked man lost no time in undoing all that his father had done, building up the high places, rearing the altars, and providing for the worship not only of Baal, but of all the host of heaven! The spirit of idolatry burned in his soul so fiercely, that it all but consumed him. Ver. 10-26. Manasseh vied with the worst of his predecessors. The delight of his heart was the commission of iniquity. One abomination succeeded to another, till he had nursed up Israel to the highest pitch of iniquity, even exceeding that of the heathen nations who had been driven out before them. The Lord, who had borne long with his idolatrous perversity, at length warned him that patience would have a limit, and wrath descend. The only response, however, that the wicked man made to these merciful intimations was a more emphatic prosecution of his impious career. "He shed innocent blood very much, till he had filled Jerusalem from one end to another." But, long as was the life of this monster of iniquity, he was cut off at last, giving place to his son, who but too closely resembled himself. Here, however, the span assigned to rule was very short; two brief years brought Amon to the grave; his servants conspired and slew him in his own house. This act, however iniquitous, was yet fraught with mercy to the nation, for had his reign been extended to half that of his father, it is impossible to foresee the evil that would have ensued.

Chap. XXII. 1-7. The removal of the wicked Amon made way for good Josiah, one of the worthiest and loveliest of Judah's kings. Then, as now, occasionally *the keepers of the ¹door have gathered of the people;

5 And let them ¹deliver it into the hand of the doers of the work, that have the oversight of the house of the LORD: and let them give it to the doers of the work which ^{is} in the house of the LORD, ^mto repair the breaches of the house,

6 Unto carpenters, and builders, and masons, and to buy timber and hewn stone to repair the house.

7 Howbeit ⁿthere was no reckoning made with them of the money that was delivered into their hand, because ^othey dealt faithfully.

8 ¶ And Hilkiah the high priest said unto Shaphan the scribe, ^pI have found the book of the law in the house of the LORD: and Hilkiah gave the book to Shaphan, and he read it.

9 And ^qShaphan ^rthe scribe came to the king, and brought the king word again, and said, Thy servants have ²gathered the money that was found in the house, and have delivered it into the hand of them that do the work, that have the oversight of the house of the LORD.

10 And Shaphan the scribe shewed the king, saying, Hilkiah the priest hath delivered me a book: and ^sShaphan read it before ^tthe king.

11 And it came to pass, when the king had heard the words of the book of the law, ^uthat he rent his clothes.

12 And ^vthe king commanded Hilkiah the priest, and ^wAhikam the son of Shaphan, and ^xAchbor the son of ^yMichaiah, and Shaphan the scribe, and Asaiah a servant of the king's, saying,

13 Go ye, ^zenquire of the LORD for me, and for the people, and for all Judah, concerning the words of this book that is found: for ^bgreat is the wrath of the LORD that is kindled against us, because our fathers have not hearkened unto the words of this book, to do according unto all that which is written concerning us.

14 So Hilkiah the priest, and Ahikam, and Achbor, and Shaphan, and Asaiah,

CHAPTER XXIII.

1 Josiah causeth the book of the law to be read. 2 He reneweth the covenant of the Lord; 4 and destroyeth idolatry.

AND ^othe king sent, and they gathered ^punto him all the elders of Judah and of Jerusalem.

2 And the king went up into the house of the LORD, and all the men of Judah, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem with him, and the priests, and the prophets, the best of men sprung from the bosom of the worst of families, and times of the deepest degeneracy were not without patterns of superior excellence. Josiah derived great advantage from his early ascension and admirable tuition. The repairs of the House of the Lord were vigorously prosecuted; and, as we have already seen, the men concerned in it were so remarkable for their integrity, that the money paid into their hands was not even counted, "because they dealt faithfully." Ver. 8-13. Things go ill with individuals, families, and nations where the Word of God is forgotten: the book of the law mentioned here, meant the original copy of the law of Moses, as appears from Second Chronicles xxxiv. 14, which had been deposited in the Ark, and probably taken in bad times, and safely concealed by some devout priest to prevent its destruction. The interval between the death of Moses and Josiah was 827 years. From the effect produced by the book on Josiah, it is clear that he had never written a copy of it, as was required of the kings, nor had he ever read it. Josiah was clearly taught of God; and hence the intelligence he displays concerning the spiritual import of the law, and the depth of his concern on discovering the true condition of his country. He clearly perceived that wrath was deserved because of transgression, and that nothing could bring safety but mercy. Ver. 14-20. Huldah, the prophetess, was obviously a person of credit; and to her, therefore, they repaired, receiving from her lips the word of the Lord, which fully met the case of the alarmed king. He was taught that the wrath anticipated was deserved, and that in due time it would descend, even according to the "words of the book," which the king had read; but that he himself, because of his tenderness, and humility, and sorrow, should not behold the coming calamities. Before that dreadful day arrived, he would be gathered into his grave in peace. The case of Josiah is full of encouragement to the humble penitent who confesses and forsakes his sins, since it shews him that he will not fail to obtain mercy.

Chap. XXIII. 1-14. Josiah lost no time in entering on the work of reformation. In so doing, he made no distinction between people, priests, and prophets, small or great. The matter was one in which all were concerned, and in which accordingly all were invited to share. The covenant was cordially entered into by the people, and the sweeping reforms necessary were gone about with vigour. The priests of Baal were removed, and all the people, ¹both ^bsmall and great: and ^che read in their ears all the words of ^dthe book of the covenant which was found in the house of the LORD.

3 [†]And the king ^estood by a pillar, and ^fmade a covenant before the LORD, ^gto walk after the LORD, and to keep ^hhis commandments, and his testimonies, and his statutes, ⁱwith all ^jtheir heart, and all ^ktheir soul, to perform the words of this covenant that were written in this book: ^land all the people stood to the covenant.

4 And the king commanded Hilkiah the high priest, and the ^mpriests of the second order, and ⁿthe keepers of the door, ^oto bring forth out of the temple of the LORD all the vessels that were made for ^pBaal, and for the grove, and for all the host of heaven; and he burnt them without Jerusalem in the fields of ^qKidron, and carried the ashes of them unto ^rBeth-el.

5 And he ^sput down ^tthe idolatrous priests, whom the kings of Judah had ordained to burn incense in the high places in the cities of Judah, and in the places round about Jerusalem: them also that burnt incense unto Baal, to the sun, and to the moon, and to the ^uplanets, and to ^vall the host of heaven.

6 And he brought out ^wthe grove from the house of the LORD, without Jerusalem, unto the brook Kidron, and stamped it small to powder, and cast the powder thereof upon ^xthe graves of the children of the people.

7 And he brake down the houses of ^ythe sodomites, that were by the house of the LORD, ^zwhere the women wove ^{aa}hangings for the grove.

8 And he brought all the priests out of the cities of Judah, and defiled the high places where the priests had burnt incense, from ^{ab}Geba to ^{ac}Beer-sheba, and brake down the high places of the gates that were in the entering in of the gate of Joshua the governor of the city, which were on a man's left hand at the gate of the city.

9 Nevertheless ^{ad}the priests of the high places came not up to the altar of the LORD in Jerusalem, ^{ae}but they did eat of the unleavened bread among their brethren.

10 And he defiled ^{af}Topheth, which is in ^{ag}the valley of the children of Hinnom, that no man ^{ah}might make his son or his daughter to pass through the fire to Molech.

20 And ^{bx}he ^{by}slew all the priests of the and the altars reared to the Sun, Moon, the Planets, and all the Hosts of Heaven, were destroyed. Josiah kept no terms with iniquity; with the word of the Lord for his guide, his course was to walk according to the commandment. Ver. 15-25. The case was so desperate, that nothing but the most unflinching resolution could have met it; and the courage of Josiah proved every way equal to the occasion. Not only did he destroy the high places, with everything that extended to them, but slew the priests that were there upon the altars, and burnt human bones on them,—an act by which they were utterly desecrated, and considered ever after incapable of being used for purposes of idolatrous worship. By so doing he realised the remarkable prediction which we have already seen in First Kings xiii. 1, 2, uttered three hundred years previously. The enterprise, however, was not complete till the workers with familiar spirits, the wizards, the images, and the idols, were utterly driven from the land. Ver. 25 is of great moment. According to this testimony, he stood alone, a light shining in a dark place, and his splendour eclipsed all lights of a kindred character which shone before and high places that were there upon the altars, and burnt men's bones upon them, and returned to Jerusalem.

21 ¶ And the king commanded all the people, saying, ⁴Keep the passover unto the LORD your God, ⁵as it is written in the book of this covenant.

22 Surely ¹there was not holden such a passover, from the days of the judges that judged Israel, nor in all the days ²of the kings of Israel, nor of the kings of Judah;

23 But in the eighteenth year of king Josiah, wherein this passover was holden to the LORD in Jerusalem.

24 ¶ Moreover, ¹the workers with familiar spirits, and the wizards, and ²the images, and the idols, and all the abominations that were spied in the land of Judah, and in Jerusalem, did Josiah put away, that he might perform the words of the law, which were written in ³the book that Hilkiah the priest found in the house of the LORD.

25 And ¹like unto him was there no king before him, ²that turned to the LORD with all his heart, and with all his soul, and with all his might, ³according to all the law of Moses: neither after him arose there any like him.

26 ¶ Notwithstanding the LORD turned not from the fierceness of his great wrath, wherewith his anger was kindled against Judah, because of all the ⁴provocations that Manasseh had provoked him withal.

27 And the LORD said, ¹I will remove Judah also ²out of my sight, as I have removed Israel, and will cast off this city Jerusalem, which I have chosen, and the house of which I said, ³My name shall be there.

28 ¶ Now ¹the rest of the acts of Josiah, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

29 In his days ¹Pharaoh-nechoh king of Egypt went up against the king of Assyria to the river Euphrates: and king Josiah went against him; and he ²slew him at ³Megiddo, when ⁴he had seen him.

30 And his servants carried him in a chariot dead from Megiddo, and brought him to Jerusalem, and buried him in his own sepulchre: and ¹the people of the land took Jehoahaz the son of Josiah, and anointed him, and made him king in his father's stead.

33 And Pharaoh-nechoh ¹put him in bands at ²Riblah, in the land of Hamath; ³that he might not reign in Jerusalem; and ⁴put the land to a tribute of an hundred talents of silver, and a talent of gold.

34 And Pharaoh-nechoh made ¹Eliakim the son of Josiah king in the room of Josiah his father, and ²turned his name to ³Jehoiakim, and took Jehoahaz away: and ⁴he came to Egypt, and died there.

35 ¶ And Jehoiakim gave the silver and the gold to Pharaoh; but he taxed the land to give the money, according to the commandment of Pharaoh: he exacted the silver and the gold of the people of the land, of every one according to his taxation, to give it unto Pharaoh-nechoh.

36 ¶ ¹Jehoiakim was twenty and five years old when he began to reign; and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Zebudah, the daughter of Pedaiah of Rumah.

37 And ¹he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, according to ²all that his fathers had done.

CHAPTER XXIV.

1 Jehoiakim rebelling, procurereth his own ruin. 10 Jerusalem is taken. 17 Zedekiah's evil reign.

IN ¹his days Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came up, and Jehoiakim became his servant three years; then he turned and rebelled against him.

2 And ¹the LORD sent against him bands of the Chaldees, and bands of the Syrians, and bands of the Moabites, and bands of the children of Ammon, and sent them against Judah to destroy it, ²according to the word of the LORD, which he spake by ³his servants the prophets.

3 Surely ¹at the commandment of the LORD came this upon Judah, to ²remove them out of his sight, ³for the sins of Manasseh, according to all that he did.

4 And also ¹for the innocent blood that he shed, (for he filled Jerusalem with innocent blood,) ²which the LORD would not pardon.

5 ¶ Now ¹the rest of the acts of Jehoiakim, and all that he did, are they not after him. Ver. 26-37. The ascension of Josiah had the effect of extending the space of repentance to the wicked of the nation, who had only to follow the royal example to share the royal mercy. The sun of Josiah that shone with such power and beauty, nevertheless at length set. His successors, for a time, were unworthy of the throne, and distressing consequences followed. The whole narrative clearly teaches that descent guarantees nothing good. Everything exceptional is the fruit of special grace, quickening souls, enlightening, and bringing them to God through the atoning sacrifice of the Lamb. It is much easier to pull down than to build up. The work of good Josiah was speedily subverted, and at an early period the nation became as wicked as before. Nothing but a continual outpouring of the eternal Spirit, baptizing multitudes for the dead, can preserve the Church of God alive on the earth.

Chap. XXIV. 1-7. Where the mere politician sees nothing but the ambition of man, the prophet beholds the hand of the living God. This confederacy against Judah effected the fulfilment of the word of the Lord by the prophets, concerning the sins which had been committed in the days of Manasseh. The innocent blood which he had shed could not be pardoned without penitence; the iniquity was such that vengeance could not be stayed. Let it not be said that this was to punish the innocent people for the sake of the guilty king, at whose unholy hand, during the period of his reign, they had sustained so many calamities. The crimes of the 6 So Jehoiakim ^aslept with his fathers; and Jehoiachin his son reigned in his stead.

7 ¶ And ¹the king of Egypt came not again any more out of his land: for the king of Babylon had taken, ^mfrom the river of Egypt unto the river Euphrates, all that pertained to the king of Egypt.

8 ¶ Jehoiachin ^{was} ^aeighteen years old when he began to reign; and he reigned in Jerusalem three months: and his mother's name ^{was} Nehushta, the daughter of Elnathan of Jerusalem.

9 And he did ^{that which was} evil in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his father had done.

10 ¶ At that time the servants of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came up against Jerusalem, and the city ^{was} besieged.

11 And Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came against the city, and his servants did besiege it.

12 And Jehoiachin the king of Judah went out to the king of Babylon, he, and his mother, and his servants, and his princes, and his ^{officers}; and the king of Babylon ^{took} him in the eighth year of ^{his} reign.

13 And ^{he} carried out thence all the treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king's house, and ^{cut} in pieces all the vessels of gold ^{which} Solomon king of Israel had made in the temple of the LORD, as the LORD had said.

14 And he carried away all Jerusalem, and all the princes, and all the mighty men of valour, ^{even} ten thousand captives, and all the craftsmen and smiths: none remained, save ^{the} poorest sort of the people of the land.

15 And ^{he} carried away Jehoiachin to Babylon, and the king's mother, and the king's wives, and his ^{officers}, and the mighty of the land; ^{those} carried he into captivity from Jerusalem to Babylon.

16 And all the men of might, ^{even} ^aseven thousand, and craftsmen and smiths a thousand, all ^{that were} strong and apt for war, even them the king of Babylon brought captive to Babylon.

17 ¶ And ^{the} king of Babylon made Mattaniah his father's brother king in his stead, and ^{changed} his name to Zedekiah.

18 Zedekiah ^{was} twenty and one years old when he began to reign; and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name ^{was} Hamutal, the daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah.

19 And ^{he} did ^{that which was} evil in the sight of the LORD, according to all that Jehoiakim had done.

20 For ^{through} the anger of the LORD it came to pass in Jerusalem and Judah, until he had cast them out from his presence, that ^{Zedekiah} rebelled against the king of Babylon.

CHAPTER XXV.

1 Jerusalem is besieged. 4 Zedekiah taken, his sons slain, and his eyes put out.

AND it came to pass ⁱⁿ the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, ^{that} ^bNebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came, he, and all his host, against Jerusalem, and ^{pitched} against it; and they built forts against it round about.

2 And the city was besieged unto the eleventh year of king Zedekiah.

3 And on ^{the} ninth day of the fourth month ^{the} famine prevailed in the city, and ^{there was} no bread for the people of the land.

4 ¶ And ^{the} city was broken up, and all the men of war ^{fled} by night by the way of the gate, between two walls, which ^{is} by the king's garden; (now the Chaldees ^{were} against the city round about;) ^{and the king} went the way toward the plain.

5 And the army of the Chaldees pursued after the king, ^{and} overtook him in the plains of Jericho: and all his army were scattered from him.

6 So ^{they} took the king, and brought him up to the king of Babylon to ^mRiblah; and they ^{gave} judgment upon him.

7 And ^{they} slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes, ^{and} ^{put} out the eyes of Zedekiah, and ^{bound} him with fetters of brass, and carried him to Babylon.

8 ¶ And ⁱⁿ the fifth month, on the seventh day of the month, (which ^{is} ^{the} nineteenth year of king Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon,) came ^{Nebuzar-adan}, ^{captain} of the guard, a servant of the king of Babylon, unto Jerusalem:

9 And ^{he} burnt the house of the LORD, and ^{the} king's house, and all the houses of Jerusalem, and every great man's house burnt he with fire.

10 And all the army of the Chaldees, ^{that were} with the captain of the guard, ^{brake} down the walls of Jerusalem round about.

11 Now ^{the} rest of the people ^{that were} left in the city, and the ^{fugitives} deceased king had largely been those of the surviving people. The princes, the mighty men, and the people, had imbibed his spirit and followed his steps. The nation was not less mad upon their idols than was the king. Manasseh, moreover, repented, whereas the people did not. They stood by their course, and now they must meet their doom. Ver. 8-20. This was one of the darkest days that had ever dawned on Jerusalem. The nation's heart was pierced by a foreign sword, and liberty was struck down by one resistless blow. King, princes, people, all were involved in one wide-spread and unparalleled desolation. The cup was nearly full, and the wrath was about to be poured out upon them to the uttermost.

Chap. XXV. 1-7. The siege proved a protracted one, and the sufferings of the city were very great. To flee from the famine, however, was to fall into the hands of the invader. Zedekiah, abandoned of God, had no resource but in stratagem; and in attempting to escape he only hastened his own ruin, which began in the slaughter of his sons before his eyes. This was the last sad spectacle on which he was permitted to look before his eyes were put out, and, bound in fetters of brass, that fell away to the king of Babylon, with the remnant of the multitude, did Nebuzar-adan, the captain of the guard, carry away.

12 But the captain of the guard ^aleft of the poor of the land to be vine-dressers and husbandmen.

13 ¶ And ^athe ^bpillars of brass that were in the house of the LORD, and the ^cbases, and the brasen sea, that was in the house of the LORD, did the Chaldees break in pieces, and carried the brass of them to Babylon.

14 And ^athe pots, and the shovels, and the snuffers, and the spoons, and all the vessels of brass, wherewith they ministered, took they away.

15 And the fire-pans, and the bowls, ^aand such things as were of gold, in gold, and of silver, in silver, the captain of the guard took away.

16 The two pillars, one ^csea, and the bases which Solomon had made for the house of the LORD: ^athe brass of all these vessels was without weight.

17 The height of the ^cone pillar was eighteen cubits, and the chapter upon it was brass; and the height of the chapter three cubits; and the wreathen work, and pomegranates upon the chapter round about, all of brass: and like unto these had the second pillar with wreathen work.

18 ¶ And the captain of the guard took ^aSeraiah the chief priest, and ^bZephaniah the second priest, and the three keepers of the ^cdoor:

19 And out of the city he took an ^aofficer that was set over the men of war, and ^bfive men of them that ^cwere in the king's presence, which were found in the city, and the ^dprincipal scribe of the host, which mustered the people of the land, and threescore men of the people of the land that were found in the city:

20 And Nebuzar-adan, captain of the guard, took these, ^aand brought them to the king of Babylon to Riblah:

21 And the king of Babylon smote them, and slew them at Riblah, in the land of Hamath. ^aSo Judah was carried away out of their land.

22 ¶ And as for the people that remained in the land of Judah, whom Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon had left, even over them he made ^aGedaliah the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, ruler.

23 And when all the captains of the armies, they and their men, heard that the king of Babylon had made Gedaliah governor, there came to Gedaliah to Mizpah, even Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and Johanan the son of Careah, and Seraiah the son of Tanhumeth the Netophathite, and Jaazaniah the son of a Maachathite, they and their men.

24 And Gedaliah ^aswore to them, and to their men, and said unto them, Fear not to be the servants of the Chaldees: dwell in the land, and serve the king of Babylon, and it shall be well with you.

25 But it came to pass ^ain the seventh month, that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, the son of Elishama, of the seed-^aroyal, came, and ten men with him, and smote Gedaliah, that he died, and the Jews and the Chaldees that were with him at Mizpah.

26 And ^aall the people, both small and great, and the captains of the armies, arose, and came to Egypt; for they were afraid of the Chaldees.

27 ¶ And it came to pass, in the seven and thirtieth year of the captivity of Jehoiachin king of Judah, in the twelfth month, on the seven and twentieth day of the month, that Evil-merodach king of Babylon, in the year that he began to reign, did ^alift up the head of Jehoiachin king of Judah out of prison:

29 And changed his prison-garments: and he did eat bread continually before him all the days of his life.

30 And his allowance was a continual allowance given him of the king, a daily rate for every day, all the days of his life.

THE FIRST BOOK OF THE CHRONICLES.

The name of this and the following Book implied Memorials of the Times. The substance of both consists in the record of facts concerning the Kings of Israel and Judah. There is, of necessity, a repetition of many matters contained in the preceding Books; but still there is much that is new and important. One of the peculiarities of the Chronicles is, that they chiefly refer to the Kings of Judah, clearly from the fact that the Messiah was to descend from that tribe. The genealogy connecting him with Abraham is distinct and clear. These Registers possessed a superior value to the Priests, seeing that their right of office was thereby established; and to the Tribes, on their return from captivity in Babylon, they served to settle the question of inheritance.

he was carried captive to Babylon. Ver. 8-21. The next step of the conqueror was the burning of the house of the Lord, and the palace of the king; which was followed by setting fire to Jerusalem itself, when special care was taken that every "great man's" house should be consumed. This was a day of inconceivable sorrow to the faithful few who mourned over the ruin of the country. But sorrow and supplication no longer availed; sentence had gone forth against the transgressors, who must now be punished. Ver. 22-30. A foreign sceptre was now swayed over the Promised Land, and the seed of Abraham were sold into captivity! Though hand join in hand, the wicked shall not go unpunished. The worst fears of the prophet were fully realised, and the joy of the whole earth had now become a scene of unutterable desolation. The movements of Providence often appear to be slow; but the delay is mercy. The Lord willeth not the death of a sinner, but rather that he should turn from his wickedness and live.

33 And the sons of Midian; Ephah, and Epher, and Henoch, and Abida, and Eldaah. All these are the sons of Keturah.

Chap. I. 1-54. This roll of names strikingly demonstrates the faithfulness of God to Abraham in the promise, that he should be the father of many nations. The kings that reigned over Edom descended from Esau; and we are here supplied with some account of their eminent families and distinguished men. Dry as this catalogue is, yet, reflected on, it is much calculated to awaken sentiments of solemnity. What is now to us only a multitude of names, was once a multitude of men, and, as they are, all that now exist will ultimately be.

Earth's occupants are constantly changing. Ever and anon at the one end of society the cradle is receiving its countless myriads, and at the other end the grave. It were difficult to estimate the number of times the earth has changed its population; but it is certain, that all who have existed are still in being in another world, where their position is such as has resulted from their character. There is everywhere the exercise of justice amongst all the miserable, and all the happy ascribe the difference of their position to sovereign mercy alone.

Hadad reigned in his stead: and the name of his city was Pai; and his wife's name was Mehetabel, the daughter of Matred, the daughter of Mezahab.

51 ¶ Hadad died also. And the dukes of Edom were; duke Timnah, duke Aliah, duke Jetheth, 52 Duke Aholibamah, duke Elah, duke Pinon,

53 Duke Kenaz, duke Teman, duke Mibzar,

54 Duke Magdiel, duke Iram. These are the dukes of Edom.

It is deeply instructive to reflect on the genealogy of the Lord Jesus, through the many links by which he became connected with Adam and Eve, to whom his appearance was promised on the dreadful day on which they fell from their first estate, bringing "death into the world, with all our woe."

Chap. II. 1-55. Judah is placed in the foreground, inasmuch as the chief part of the right of the first-born, supremacy, was conferred on him, and from him was to spring the Redeemer of the World. The principal parts of the Jewish Scriptures are those which set forth the promises and prophecies concerning the Messiah, all of which, in a manner the most wonderful, so far as time has allowed, have been fulfilled to the letter. If it be remembered that the art of Printing, which has contributed so much to accuracy in historical transmission, is comparatively a recent discovery, it will create no surprise that trifling mistakes occurred in the transcription of the Sacred Volume. They who have any experience in such matters now-a-days, know with what difficulty perfect accuracy, in the case of innumerable transcripts, can be secured. These minute and trifling errors in date, and even names and numbers, are of no importance whatever to the substantial verity of the inspired text. Infidelity, in magnifying them into principles, and momentous objections, only sports with its own deceivings, and, in due season, it will stand confounded as well as corrected. It is enough for us to know, that "all Scripture is given by inspiration of God," and that it has been transmitted from the remotest ages with an accuracy which bespeaks the superintendence of a

CHAPTER III.

1 The sons of David. 10 His line to Zedekiah. 17 The successors of Jeconiah.

NOW these were ¹the sons of David, which were born unto him in Hebron : the first-born Amnon, of Ahinoam the Jezreelitess ; the second, ²Daniel, of Abigail the Carmelitess ;

3 The third, Absalom, the son of Maachah, the daughter of Talmi king of Geshur ; the fourth, Adonijah, the son of Haggith ;

4 The fifth, Shephatiah of Abital ; the sixth, Ithream, by Eglah his wife.

5 These six were born unto him in Hebron ; and there he reigned seven years and six months : and in Jerusalem he reigned thirty and three years.

6 And these were born unto him in Jerusalem : ⁷Shimea, and Shobab, and Nathan, and Solomon, four, of ⁸Bathsua the daughter of ⁹Ammiel :

7 Ibhar also, and ¹⁰Elishama, and ¹¹Eliphelet,

10 These were all the sons of David, besides the sons of the concubines, and Tamar their sister.

Special Providence at every stage of the Church's history. In looking over the genealogy of the Lord Jesus, it is affecting to see the chequered aspect which it bears. We have here the righteous and there the wicked—here the highest and there the lowest. Truly, "he took not on him the nature of angels," but was made in the likeness of sinful flesh. All may claim him, Jew and Gentile, rich and poor, bond and free. A sharer of our common nature, he participated, genealogically, in the condition of every class, and the fulness of his salvation is available for every creature.

Chap. III. 1-24. These genealogies are brought within the narrowest dimensions consistent with the preservation of the chain. The sons of David were nineteen in number, and it may be reasonably supposed, that through them many superior families were reared, who occupied a distinguished place in the nation. The recital of the names of David's offspring, however, is by no means gratifying; few families turned out worse. From several parts of the history contained in the preceding books, it is easy to observe that David, notwithstanding his transcendent wisdom and piety, was too indulgent to his children. This was the weak part of his admirable character. It comes out once and again that those two sons who, with parricidal hand, raised the standard of rebellion against him, were objects of particular favour. They derived no benefit by way of check, correction, and control, which are so essential to the successful training of even the best natural dispositions. The fruit, therefore, notwithstanding its bitterness, which David reaped, sprung from seed sown by him own over-indulgent hand. Still, the mercy of the Lord spared him; and as his noble heart purposed building a house for the Lord, so the Lord, in token of his approval, built a family for him. It is a very remarkable fact, that the crown of David rested on no fewer than seventeen heads in succession, all of his family. To perfect his glory, Christ Jesus, his King and Lord, after his crucifixion and resurrection, ascended the throne of the Universe, exercising all power in heaven and in earth, and carrying on the affairs of his Mediatorial Kingdom.

12 And Eshton begat Beth-rapha, and Paseah, and Tehinnah the father of ⁱIr-nahash. These are the men of Rechab.

Chap. IV. 1-10. There are few more noticeable things in Scripture than the prayer of Jabez, which presents an example full of beauty to the rising generation. The ignorant and the ungodly think that it is a mean and contemptible thing to be religious, in the Scripture sense of the term; but we are here taught that "Jabez was more honourable than his brethren." His prayer is as full of wisdom as of goodness; while he desired that his coasts might be enlarged, that is, that he might enjoy worldly prosperity, he was still more concerned that the hand of the Lord might be constantly with him, preserving him from evil, that it might not grieve him. Oh, that every young man and every young woman, into whose hands this Note may fall, would but make his prayer their own! While to do so is their duty, it would

CHAPTER V.

1 The line and habitations of Reuben. 11 The chief men and habitations of Gad.

NOW the sons of Reuben, the first-born of Israel, (for ¹he was the first-born; but, ²forasmuch as he defiled his father's bed, ³his birthright was given unto the sons of Joseph the son of Israel; ⁴and the genealogy is not to be reckoned after the birthright.

2 For ⁵Judah prevailed above his brethren, and of him came ⁶the ⁷chief ruler; but the birthright was Joseph's;

3 The ⁸sons, I say, of Reuben, the first-born of Israel, were Hanoch, and Pallu, Hezron, and Carmi.

4 The sons of Joel; Shemaiah his son, Gog his son, Shimei his son,

5 Micah his son, Reaia his son, Baal his son,

6 Beerah his son, whom ⁹Tilgath-pileser king of Assyria carried away captive: he was prince of the Reubenites.

7 And his brethren by their families, (¹when the genealogy of their generations was reckoned,) were the chief, Jeiel, and Zechariah.

8 And Bela the son of Azaz, the son of ²Shema, the son of Joel, who dwelt in ³Aroer, even unto ⁴Nebo and ⁵Baal-meon:

9 And eastward he inhabited unto the entering in of the wilderness from the river Euphrates; ⁶because their cattle were multiplied in the land of Gilead.

10 And in the days of Saul they made war with ⁷the Hagarites, who fell by their hand: and they dwelt in their tents ⁸throughout all the east land of Gilead.

11 ⁹And the children of Gad dwelt over against them, ¹⁰in the land of Bashan, unto Salchah:

12 Joel the chief, and Shapham the next, and Jaanai, and Shaphat in Bashan.

13 And their brethren, of the house of their fathers, were Michael, and Meshulam, and Sheba, and Jorai, and Jachan, and Zia, and Heber, seven.

14 These are the children of Abihail the son of Huri, the son of Jaroah, the son of Gilead, the son of Michael, the son of Jeshiah, the son of Jahdo, the son of Buz; also be their highest privilege. That gained, all is gained, for it involves compliance with the Scripture injunction to seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness. That for which Jabez prayed is substantially necessary to every soul of man; and there is not in the human family one individual debarred from its enjoyment. Such prayers the Lord always hears. "God granted him that which he requested." Ver. 24-43. A special blessing in everything rested upon Judah. Judah, from first to last, was a powerful tribe; and for a long course of generations it constituted a great and prosperous kingdom, making unnatural though necessary wars against the ten tribes that constituted Israel.

Chap. V. 1-17. A place of pre-eminence, as appears in ver. 2, was always assigned to Judah, of whom came the Chief Ruler. The purposes of God were fully realised in all that appertained to that tribe, and, notwithstanding the adverse influences which from age to age were brought to bear against it, it survived every encounter, and triumphed over every adversary. Ver. 18-26. The matter set forth in ver. 20 is deserving of special notice. These warriors triumphed solely be-15 Ahi the son of Abdiel, the son of Guni, chief of the house of their fathers.

16 And they dwelt in Gilead in Bashan, and in her towns, and in all the suburbs of 'Sharon, upon their 'borders.

17 All these were 'reckoned by genealogies in the days of 'Jotham king of Judah, and in the days of 'Jeroboam king of Israel.

18 ¶ The sons of Reuben, and the Gadites, and half the tribe of Manasseh, of 'valiant men, men able to bear buckler and sword, and to shoot with bow, and skilful in war, were 'four and forty thousand seven hundred and threescore, that went out to the war.

19 And they 'made war with the Hagarites, with Jetur, and 'Nephish, and Nodab.

20 And 'they were helped against them, and the Hagarites were delivered into their hand, and all that were with them: for 'they cried to God in the battle, and he was entreated of them; 'because they put their trust in him.

21 And they 'took away their cattle; of their camels fifty thousand, and of sheep two hundred and fifty thousand, and of asses two thousand, and of 'men an hundred thousand.

22 For there fell down many slain, because 'the war was of God. And they dwelt in their steeds 'until the captivity.

23 ¶ And the children of the half-tribe of Manasseh dwelt in the land: they increased from Bashan unto 'Baal-hermon and Senir, and unto mount 'Hermion.

24 And these were the heads of the house of their fathers, even Ephraim, and Ishi, and Eliel, and Azriel, and Jeremiah, and Hodaviah, and Jahdiel, mighty men of valour, 'famous men, and heads of the house of their fathers.

25 ¶ And they transgressed against the God of their fathers, and 'went a whoring 'after the gods of the people of the land, whom God destroyed before them.

26 And the God of Israel 'stirred up the spirit of 'Pul king of Assyria, and the spirit of 'Tilgath-pilneser king of Assyria, and he carried them away, (even the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and the half-tribe of Manasseh,) 'and brought them unto Halah, and Habor, and Hara, and to the river Gozan, unto this day.

cause they were helped. The odds would seem to have been fearfully against them; but the Lord was for them, and hence their victory. The following words are particularly remarkable, and so important that they ought to constitute a principle of action with all the sons and daughters of Almighty God,—“They cried to God in the battle, and he was entreated of them, because they put their trust in him.” Here, then, is an example for the people of God. While fighting the good fight of faith, let them mingle prayer with the strife; for only in proportion to their prayer will be their power, and their consequent victory. The cases to which these beautiful words are applicable are innumerable, although to each individual largely peculiar. The principle, however, is of universal application. Whenever saints are called to fight they are called to pray.

Chap. VI. 31-48. The Jewish worship, notwithstanding the awful prominence given to sacrifice, was largely distinguished by the spirit of praise; and hence the care of David to provide for the "Service of Song in the House of the Lord," after that the Ark had rest. The arrangements of the service, however, were flexible; the matter was more simple, and the parties engaged in it fewer during David's days, it was not till the Temple of Solomon was built that "they waited in their office according to their order." Ver. 49-81. But David was not less careful about the Service of Sacrifice than the Service of Song; where there was so much sin, much sacrifice was indispensable. Never were they permitted, therefore, to lose sight of an Atonement for Israel. Everything pointed to the coming sacrifice, when the Lamb of God should "take away the sins of the world."

upon the altar of the burnt-offering, and on the altar of incense, and were appointed for all the work of the place most holy, and to ^dmake an atonement for Israel, according to all that ^eMoses, the servant of God, had commanded.

50 And these are the sons of Aaron; ^fEleazar his son, Phinehas his son, Abishua his son,

51 Bukki his son, Uzzi his son, Zerahiah his son,

52 Meraioth his son, Amariah his son, Ahitub his son, 53 ^gZadok his son, Ahimaaz his son.

54 ¶ Now ^hthese are their dwelling-places throughout their ⁱcastles, in their coasts, of the sons of Aaron, ^kof the families of the Kohathites; for theirs was the lot.

55 And they gave them ¹Hebron in the land of Judah, and the suburbs thereof round about it.

56 But the fields of the city, and the villages thereof, they gave to Caleb the son of Jephunneh.

57 And to the sons of Aaron they gave the cities of Judah, namely, Hebron, ^mthe city of refuge, and ⁿLibnah with her suburbs, and ^oJattir and Eshtemoa with their suburbs,

58 And ^pHilen with her suburbs, ^qDebir with her suburbs,

59 And ^rAshan with her suburbs, and ^sBeth-shemesh with her suburbs:

60 And out of the tribe of Benjamin; ^tGeba with her suburbs, and ^uAlemeth with her suburbs, and ^vAnathoth with her suburbs. All their cities, throughout their families, were thirteen cities.

61 And ^wunto the sons of Kohath, which were ^xleft of the family of that tribe, were ^ycities given out of the half-tribe, namely, out of the half-tribe of Manasseh, by lot, ten cities.

62 And to the sons of ^zGershon, throughout their families, out of the tribe of Issachar, and out of the tribe of Asher, and out of the tribe of Naphtali, and out of the tribe of Manasseh in Bashan, thirteen cities.

63 Unto the sons of ¹Merari were given by lot, throughout their families, out of the tribe of Reuben, and out of the tribe of Gad, and out of the tribe of Zebulun, twelve cities.

64 And ^cthe children of Israel gave to the Levites these cities ^dwith their suburbs.

65 And they gave by lot, out of the tribe of the children of Judah, and out of the tribe of the children of Simeon, and out of the tribe of the children of Benjamin, ^ethese cities which are called by their names.

The Temple of Service then supplied work for everybody; each according to his qualifications found an office. One class sang, another prayed, another slew the victims, another provided water and fire, and kept the altar, and everything connected with the service, clean. The whole presented a picture of activity and labour for God.

Every one in his own place was honourable and useful, and accepted of the Lord of all. The spectacle here presented is full of instruction to God's people. In every church there is something to do for every member. True piety knows nothing of selfish idleness. Service is indispensable to happiness, and the more that is done 66 And ¹the residue of the families of the sons of Kohath had cities of their coasts out of the tribe of Ephraim.

67 And they gave unto them, of the cities of refuge, ²Shechem in mount Ephraim with her suburbs; they gave also ³Gezer with her suburbs,

68 And ⁴Jokmeam with her suburbs, and ⁵Beth-horon with her suburbs,

69 And ⁶Aijalon with her suburbs, and ⁷Gath-rimmon with her suburbs:

70 And out of the half-tribe of Manasseh; ⁸Aner with her suburbs, and ⁹Bileam with her suburbs, for the family of the remnant of the sons of Kohath.

71 Unto the sons of Gershom were given, out of the family of the half-tribe of Manasseh, ¹⁰Golan in Bashan with her suburbs, and ¹¹Ashtaroth with her suburbs:

72 And out of the tribe of Issachar; ¹²Kedesh with her suburbs, ¹³Daberath with her suburbs,

73 And Ramoth with her suburbs, and Anem with her suburbs:

74 And out of the tribe of Asher; ¹⁴Mashal with her suburbs, and Abdon with her suburbs,

75 And ¹⁵Hukok with her suburbs, and Rehob with her suburbs:

76 And out of the tribe of Naphtali; ¹⁶Kedesh in Galilee with her suburbs, and ¹⁷Hammon with her suburbs, and Kirjathaim with her suburbs.

77 Unto the rest of the children of Merari were given, out of the tribe of Zebulun, ¹⁸Rimmon with her suburbs, Tabor with her suburbs:

78 And on the other side Jordan by Jericho, on the east side of Jordan, were given them, out of the tribe of Reuben, ¹⁹Bezer in the wilderness with her suburbs, and ²⁰Jahzah with her suburbs,

79 Kedemoth also with her suburbs, and Mephaath with her suburbs:

80 And out of the tribe of Gad; ²¹Ramoth in Gilead with her suburbs, and ²²Mahanaim with her suburbs, 81 And ²³Heshbon with her suburbs, and ²⁴Jazer with her suburbs.

the more is enjoyed. Were believers more anxious to lay themselves out for the salvation of souls, and for the good of the saints, and the glory of the Saviour, there would be more comfort than is now enjoyed by very many who are looking and labouring for it in the neglect of the only means through which it can be derived.

Chap. VII. 1-19. The spirit of war prevails to a fearful extent throughout these verses. The only thing for which men were celebrated was military capacity and success. To be great in the battle-field was to be the object of popular admiration. The principle, as now applied to the spiritual warfare, which God's people are required without intermission to carry on, is full of force. Men are really honourable in proportion as they are useful, or at least lay themselves out for usefulness. They who do or suffer most for the Lord Jesus will, in proportion, be objects of his approbation, and his example ought to govern his people. Not wealth, but its employment; not talents, but their use, ought to regulate respectability. It is, nevertheless, lamentably true, that the reverse has been too much the rule of judgment; but a better time is coming. As the Lord himself would judge his people according to their work, so will his people come to judge each other.

Chap. VIII. 1-40. This mass of names is calculated to awaken solemn reflection. It strikingly illustrates the visionary character of human existence. In the days

5 And of the Shilonites; Asaiah the first-born, and his sons.

6 And of the sons of Zerah; Jeuel and their brethren, six hundred and ninety.

7 And of the sons of Benjamin; Sallu the son of Meshullam, the son of Hodaviah, the son of Hasenuah,

8 And Ibneiah the son of Jeroham, and Elah the son of Uzzi, the son of Michri, and Meshullam the son of Shephatiah, the son of Reuel, the son of Ibniyah;

9 And their brethren, according to their generations, nine hundred and fifty and six. All these men were chief of the fathers in the house of their fathers.

10 ¶ And of the priests; Jedaiah, and Jehoiarib, and Jachin,

11 And Azariah the son of Hilkiah, the son of Meshullam, the son of Zadok, the son of Meraioth, the son of Ahitub, the ruler of the house of God;

13 And their brethren, heads of the house of their fathers, a thousand and seven hundred and threescore; very able men for the work of the service of the house of God.

14 ¶ And of the Levites; Shemaiah the son of Hasshub, the son of Azrikam, the son of Hashabiah, of the sons of Merari;

15 And Bakkakkar, Heresh, and Galal, and Mattaniah the son of Micah, the son of Zichri, the son of Asaph;

16 And Obadiah the son of Shemaiah, the son of Galal, the son of Jeduthun, and Berechiah the son of Asa, the son of Elkanah, that dwelt in the villages of the Netophathites.

17 And the porters were Shallum, and Akkub, and Talmon, and Ahiman, and their brethren: Shallum was the chief;

18 (Who hitherto waited in the king's gate eastward;) they were porters in the companies of the children of Levi.

19 And Shallum the son of Kore, the son of Ebiasaph, the son of Korah, and of their flesh, how vast the stir, the strife of the mingled emotions of joy and sorrow, hope and fear, love and hate, in the bosoms of these untold myriads! But they are all gone, and nothing now survives but a portion of their names! That honour, however, arises from their relation to the Church of God; for at that period the earth was probably as thickly peopled as it is now; and yet how little is known of either the sovereigns or subjects, the seats of authority, or the marts of commerce! All are swallowed up in the vast abyss, on the bosom of which a cloud rests, baffling all attempts to scrutinise its dark chambers, and to inquire after those who dwell therein. The more we contemplate the wonderful records of the Inspired Volume, the more are we struck with the importance of the Jewish Scriptures, which stand alone as a monument of the remotest antiquity.

Chap. IX. 13-28. It is with man as with matter: every person is not suited to every place; but there is a place for each, if it could only be found. God employs strong men for strong work, and hence we here read of "many able men for the work of the service of the house of God." The unanimous testimony of these histories is, that great men were raised up for great employment. The examples of this which might be cited are all but innumerable. The call and the qualification always his brethren, of the house of his father, the Korahites, were over the work of the service, keepers of the ²gates of the tabernacle: and their fathers being ³over the host of the LORD, were keepers of the entry.

20 And ¹Phinehas the son of Eleazar was the ruler over them in time past, and ²the LORD was with him.

21 And Zechariah the son of Meshelemiah was porter of the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.

22 All these which were chosen to be porters in the gates were two hundred and twelve. These were reckoned by their genealogy ¹in their villages, whom ²David and Samuel the seer ³did ordain in their ⁴set office.

23 So they and their children had the oversight of the gates of the house of the LORD, namely, the house of the tabernacle, by wards.

24 In four quarters were the porters, toward the east, west, north, and south.

25 And their brethren, which were in their villages, were to come after ¹seven days from time to time with them.

26 For these Levites, the four chief porters, were in ¹their ²set office, and were over the ³chambers ⁴and treasuries of the house of God.

27 ¶ And they lodged round about the house of God, because ¹the charge was upon them, and ²the opening thereof every morning pertained to them.

28 And certain of them had the charge of the ministering vessels, that they should ¹bring them in and out by tale.

29 Some of them also were appointed to oversee the vessels, and all the ¹instruments of the sanctuary, and the fine flour, and the wine, and ²the oil, and ³the frankincense, and the spices.

30 And some ¹of the sons of the priests made the ointment of the spices.

31 And Mattithiah, one of the Levites, (who was the first-born of Shallum the Korahite,) had the ¹set office over the things that were made ²in the pans.

32 And other of their brethren, of the sons of the Kohathites, were over the ¹shew-bread, ²to prepare it every sabbath.

33 And these are ¹the singers, chief of the fathers of the Levites, who remaining in the chambers ²were free; for ³they were ⁴employed in that work day and night.

CHAPTER X.

1 Saul's overthrow and death. 8 The Philistines triumph over him. 11 Jabeah-gilead's kindness to him and his sons.

NOW ¹the Philistines fought against Israel; and the men of Israel fled from before the Philistines, and fell down ²slain in ³mount Gilboa.

2 And the Philistines followed hard after Saul, and after his sons; and the Philistines slew ⁴Jonathan, and ⁵Abinadab, and Malchi-shua, ⁶the sons of Saul.

3 And the battle ⁷went sore against Saul, and the ⁸archers ⁹hit him, and ¹⁰he was wounded of the archers.

4 Then said Saul to his armour-bearer, ¹Draw thy sword, and thrust me through therewith, lest these ²uncircumcised come and ³abuse me. But his armour-bearer would not; for ⁴he was sore afraid. So ⁵Saul took a sword, and fell upon it.

5 And when his armour-bearer saw that Saul was dead, he fell likewise on the sword, and died.

went together, and in the absence of the latter there was no proof of the former. Success in everything was from the Lord, and hence Phinehas succeeded in his rule, "because the Lord was with him." No man need fear the respectable and efficient discharge of the duties of his station thus accompanied, inasmuch as both the wisdom and the strength of the Most High are secured to him; and thus prepared, there is no function to which he is not equal. Ver. 27-44. It is pleasing to observe the common sense which characterised all the arrangements connected with the house of God. It is important that a man shall live as near as possible to the sphere in which he labours. As a rule, this is one of the conditions of prosperity. Personal superintendence is necessary to safety and success in most businesses; but in proportion as men's residences are far away from their offices and their workshops, will time be lost and danger incurred. Pride in this respect has frequently been followed by ruin. God has connected means with ends, and everything is, as far as possible, to be avoided which tends to impair the completeness of the means since it cannot fail to affect the success of the end.

Chap. X. 1-14. The account here given of the death of Saul exactly corresponds in all its parts with that which we have already considered. Saul, notwithstanding his ungodly character, had yet cultivated so much of right feeling as to lead him to recoil from the "uncircumcised," as the enemies of that God who had raised him to his authority. The most notable additional circumstance which is here set forth is, that his death was the punishment of his transgression of the command of the Lord, and of his intercourse with the woman who had a 6 So ^mSaul died, and his three sons, and all his house died together.

7 And when all the men of Israel that were in the valley saw that they fled, and that Saul and his sons were dead, ⁿthen they forsook their cities, and fled: and the Philistines came and dwelt in them.

8 ¶ And it came to pass on the morrow, when the Philistines came ^oto strip the slain, that they found Saul and his sons fallen in mount Gilboa.

9 And when they had stripped him, they ^ptook his head, and his armour, and sent into the land of the Philistines round about, to carry ^qtidings unto their idols, and to the people.

10 And they put his armour in the house of ^rtheir gods, and fastened his head ^sin the temple of Dagon.

11 ¶ And when all Jabesh-gilead heard all that the Philistines had done to Saul, 12 They arose, all the valiant men, and took away the body of Saul, and the bodies of his sons, and brought them to Jabesh, and buried their bones under the oak in Jabesh, and ^tfasted seven days.

13 ¶ So Saul died for his transgression which he ^ucommitted against the LORD, even against the word of the LORD, which he kept not, and also for asking counsel of one that had ^va familiar spirit, to enquire of it;

14 And ^wenquired not of the LORD: therefore ^xhe slew him, and ^yturned the kingdom unto David the son of ^zJesse.

CHAPTER XI.

1 David made king. 4 He winneth the castle of Zion from the Jebusites by Joab's valour. 10 A catalogue of his worthies.

THEN all Israel gathered themselves to David unto Hebron, saying, Behold, we are thy bone and thy flesh.

2 And moreover, ¹in time past, even when Saul was king, thou wast he that ledest out and broughtest in Israel; and the LORD thy God said unto thee, ^aThou shalt ²feed my people Israel, and thou shalt be ruler over my people Israel.

3 Therefore came all the elders of Israel to the king to Hebron; and ^bDavid made a covenant with them in Hebron before the LORD; and they ^canointed David king over Israel, according to the word of the LORD ^dby Samuel.

4 ¶ And ^dDavid and all Israel went to Jerusalem, which ^uis Jebus, where the Jebusites were, ^ethe inhabitants of the land.

5 And the inhabitants of Jebus said to David, Thou shalt not come hither. Nevertheless David took ^tthe castle of Zion, which ^uis the city of David.

6 And David said, ^vWhosoever smiteth the Jebusites first shall be ^wchief and captain. So Joab the son of Zeruiah went first up, and was chief.

7 And ^xDavid dwelt in the castle; therefore they called ^yit the city of David.

8 And he built the city round about, even from Millo round about: and Joab ^zrepaired the rest of the city.

9 So David ¹waxed greater and greater: ²for the LORD of hosts ^uwas with him.

10 ¶ These also ^uare the chief of the mighty men whom David had, who ⁸strengthened themselves with him in his kingdom, and with all Israel, ^kto make him king, ¹according to the word of the LORD concerning Israel.

11 And this ^uis the number of the mighty men whom David had; ^mJashobeam, ⁿan Hachmonite, the chief of the captains: he lifted up his spear against three hundred, slain ^uby him at one time.

12 And after him ^uwas ⁿElezar, the son of Dodo, the Ahohite, who ^uwas one of the three mighties.

13 He was with David at ^oPas-dammim, and there the Philistines were gathered together to battle, where was a parcel of ground full of barley; and the people fled from before the Philistines:

14 And they ¹set themselves in the midst of ^uthat parcel, and delivered it, and slew the Philistines; and ²the LORD saved them by a great ²deliverance.

15 Now three ³of the thirty captains went down to the rock to David, into the cave of Adullam; and the host of the Philistines encamped in the valley of ⁴Rephaim.

16 And David ^uwas then in the hold, and the Philistines' garrison ^uwas then at Beth-lehem.

17 And David longed, and said, Oh that one would give me drink ^uof the water of the well of Beth-lehem, that ^uis at the gate!

familiar spirit. Special importance is given to the fact that he "inquired not of the Lord," but inquired of that spirit. As the penalty of this transgression, he was slain, together with his sons and natural successors, and then the kingdom transferred to David. No two men ever presented a more remarkable contrast than did Saul and David, and no two reigns were more dissimilar. Every step of Saul's career was one which led to ruin, and in proportion as his transgressions multiplied, his heart hardened, till at last he became utterly abandoned, having cast behind him the fear of God, and began to conduct himself as the most benighted of the heathen. David, on the contrary, improves in piety with years, ripening more and more at every step of his pilgrimage for the glory that awaited him.

Chap. XI. 1-47. As time drew on, the minds of men were moulded in such a way as, in the course of things, to accomplish the purposes of Providence. David did not sue to the people, but the people to him; and hence his elevation as the people's act was all the more satisfactory to himself, and gratifying to them. Power and place pursued him, and not he them. The people shewed a correct remembrance of his past deeds in the service of Saul, and clearly recognised the Divine purpose towards him as the future shepherd of Israel. David, while he manifested no anxiety, was frank and cordial in all his communications with the nation, supported by the pleasing consciousness that he was in the hands of God. The object of the Divine choice, and destined to accomplish the purposes of Heaven, he gave himself up to the guidance of the Lord, who had called him from the sheepfold to guide the children of Israel. At this time Joab, together with his brother, was of especial service to him,

18 And the three ^abrake through the host of the Philistines, and drew water out of the well of Beth-lehem, that was by the gate, and took it, and brought it to David: but David would not drink of it, but poured it out to the Lord,

19 And said, "My God forbid it me, that I should do this thing. "Shall I drink the blood of these men ^athat have put their lives ^ain jeopardy? for with the jeopardy of their lives they brought it: therefore he would not drink it. These things did these three mightiest.

20 And Abishai the brother of Joab, he was chief of the three: for lifting up his spear against three hundred, he slew them, and had a name among the three.

21 Of the three he was more honourable than the two, for he was their captain; ^ahowbeit he attained not to the first three.

22 Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, the son of a valiant man of Kabzeel, ^awho had done many acts; he slew two lion-like men of Moab: also he went down and ^aslew a lion in a pit in a snowy day.

23 And he slew an Egyptian, ^aa man of great stature, ^afive cubits high; and in the Egyptian's hand was a spear like a weaver's beam; and he went down to him with a staff, and plucked the spear out of the Egyptian's hand, and ^aslew him with his own spear.

24 These things did Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, and had a name among the three mighties.

25 Behold, he was honourable among the thirty, ^abut attained not to the first three; and David set him over his guard.

CHAPTER XII.

1 The companies that came to David at Ziklag. 23 The armies that came to him at Hebron.

NOW ^athese are they that came to David to Ziklag, ^awhile he yet kept himself close because of Saul the son of Kish; and they were among the mighty men, helpers of the war.

2 They were armed with bows, and ^acould use both the right hand and the left in hurling stones, and shooting arrows out of a bow, even of Saul's brethren of Benjamin.

3 The chief was Abiezer, then Joash, the sons of ^aShemaah the Gibeathite; and Jeziel, and Pelet, the sons of Azmaveth; and Berachah, and Jehu the Antothite,

4 And Ismaiah the ^aGibeonite, a mighty man among the thirty, and over the thirty; and Jeremiah, and Jahaziel, and Johanan, and Jozabad the ^aGederathite,

5 Eluzai, and Jerimoth, and Bealiah, and Shemariah, and Shephatiah the Haruphite,

6 Elkanah, and Jesiah, and Azareel, and Joezer, and Jashobeam, the Korhites,

7 And Joelah and Zebadiah, the sons of Jeroham of Gedor.

since they greatly contributed to the successful prosecution of his wars, and the establishment of the peace in which he had ultimately to rejoice. Ver. 9 is one of those gems on which the heart of the Christian delights to rest—"David waxed greater and greater, for the Lord was with him." Where the Lord is, all will go well: there will be no want of either wisdom or power. At no previous or subsequent period was the military spirit so extensively prevalent as in the days of David. His reign was the age of heroism. His "mighty men" were each a host in himself, and many who attained not the rank of the "mighties" were, nevertheless, distinguished for prowess and success in warlike operations. It was, doubtless, in those days, a pre-eminent honour to be among the worthies of David; but the most insignificant among the soldiers of Christ enjoy a distinction incalculably greater. There is no heroism comparable to that which is moral; and Christ himself, as the King of the Saints, is at once the model and the judge of spiritual heroes.

Chap. XII. 1-22. The facts comprised in these verses, taken as the emblems of spiritual attainments, are full of instruction. Versatility and perplexity, adroitness and promptitude, are strikingly indicated in ver. 2, and still more in ver. 8. To hurl the stone, to shoot the arrow, to handle the shield and buckler, are acts beauti-

8 And of the Gadites there separated themselves unto David, ^ointo the hold to the wilderness, men of might, and men ^oof war fit for the battle, that could handle shield and buckler, ^o'whose faces were like the faces of lions, and were ^oas ^o'swift as the roes upon the mountains;

9 Ezer the first, Obadiah the second, Eliab the third,

10 Mishmannah the fourth, Jeremiah the fifth,

11 Attai the sixth, Eliel the seventh,

12 Johanan the eighth, Elzabad the ninth,

13 Jeremiah the tenth, Machbanai the eleventh.

14 These were of the sons of Gad, captains of the host: ^o'one of the least was over an hundred, and the greatest over a thousand.

15 These are they that went over Jordan in the first month, when ^o'it had ^o'overflowed all his banks; and they put to flight all ^o'them of the valleys, both toward the east and toward the west.

16 And there came of the children of Benjamin and Judah to the hold unto David.

17 And David went out ^o'to meet them, and answered and said unto them, ^o'If ye be come peaceably unto me to help me, ^o'mine heart shall be ^o'knit unto you: but if ye be come to betray me to mine enemies, seeing there is no ^o'wrong in mine hands, ^o'the God of our fathers look thereon, and ^o'rebuke it.

18 Then ^o'the spirit ^o'came upon Amasai, who was chief of the captains, and he said, Thine are we, David, and on thy side, thou son of Jesse: ^o'Peace, peace be unto thee, and peace be to thine helpers; for ^o'thy God helpeth thee. Then David received them, and made them captains of the band.

19 And there fell some of Manasseh to David, when he came with the Philistines against Saul to battle; but they helped them not; for the lords of the Philistines, upon advisement, sent him away, saying, He will fall to his master Saul ^o'to the jeopardy of our heads.

20 As he went to Ziklag, there fell to him of Manasseh, Adnah, and Jozabad, and Jedaiel, and Michael, and Jozabad, and Elihu, and Zilthai, ^o'captains of the thousands that were of Manasseh.

21 And they helped David ^o'against ^o'the band of the rovers; for they were all mighty men of valour, and were captains in the host.

22 For at that time, ^o'day by day, there came to David to help him, until it was a great host, like ^o'the host of God.

23 ¶ And these are ^o'the numbers of the ^o'bands that were ready armed to the war, and came to David to Hebron, to turn the kingdom of Saul to him, ^o'according to the word of the LORD.

24 The children of Judah, that bare shield and spear, were six thousand and eight hundred, ready ^o'armed to the war.

25 Of the children of Simeon, mighty men of valour for the war, seven thousand and one hundred.

26 Of the children of Levi, four thousand and six hundred.

27 And Jehoiada was ^o'the leader of the Aaronites, and with him were three thousand and seven hundred;

28 And ^o'Zadok, a young man mighty of valour, and of his father's house twenty and two captains.

29 And of the children of Benjamin, ^o'the kindred of Saul, three thousand: for hitherto ^o'the greatest part of them had kept the ward of the house of Saul.

30 And of the children of Ephraim twenty thousand and eight hundred, mighty men of valour, ^o'famous throughout the house of their fathers.

31 And of the half-tribe of Manasseh eighteen thousand, which were expressed by name, to come and make David king.

32 And of the children of Issachar, which were men that had ^o'understanding of the times, ^o'to know what Israel ought to do: the heads of them were two hundred; and ^o'all their brethren were at their commandment.

33 Of Zebulun, such as went forth to battle, ^o'expert in war, with all instruments of war, fifty thousand, which could ^o'keep rank: they were ^o'not of double heart.

34 And of Naphtali a thousand captains, and with them, with shield and spear, thirty and seven thousand.

35 And of the Danites, expert in war, twenty and eight thousand and six hundred.

36 And of Asher, such as went forth to battle, ^o'expert in war, forty thousand.

37 And on the other side of Jordan, of the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and of the half-tribe of Manasseh, with all man-fully corresponding with those mental and moral qualities which fit men for eminent usefulness in the Church of God. The idea of "faces like the faces of lions," and "swiftness as that of the roes upon the mountains," are strikingly emblematic of moral heroism. All events conspired to strengthen the hands of David, whose adherents continually multiplied; and they were composed of men precisely of the character his circumstances required,—all "mighty men of valour," and captains in the host. Ver. 23-40. The account given us of the children of Issachar is remarkable. In times of difficulty or perplexity, few Scriptures have been more frequently resorted to than ver. 32. It is astonishing that these people, as a whole, should, in point of sagacity, so far have surpassed the rest of the nation. They present a lovely picture of intelligence combined with order. They "possessed understanding of the times to know what Israel ought to do." They were observant, reflecting men, careful to learn and to mark both the ways of God and the ways of men. The number also was great. It has been but seldom that "two hundred" men of consummate wisdom met together, and, more remarkable still, "all their brethren were at their commandment." Here was unity, confidence, and provision for efficient co-operation. Few things in history, either sacred or profane, can compare with this remarkable statement. When the hearts of ner of instruments of war for the battle, an hundred and twenty thousand.

38 All these men of war, that could keep rank, came with a perfect heart to Hebron, to make David king over all Israel: and all the rest also of Israel were of one heart to make David king.

39 And there they were with David three days, ⁴eating and drinking: for their brethren had prepared for them.

40 Moreover, they that were nigh them, even unto Issachar, and Zebulun, and Naphtali, brought bread on asses, and on camels, and on mules, and on oxen, and meat, ⁴meal, cakes of figs, and bunches of raisins, and wine, and oil, and oxen, and sheep abundantly; for ⁵there was joy in Israel.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 David fetcheth the ark from Kirjath-jearim. 9 Uzza being smitten, the ark is left at the house of Obed-edom.

AND David consulted with the captains of thousands and hundreds, and with every leader.

2 And David said unto all the congregation of Israel, If it seem good unto you, and that it be of the LORD our God, let us ¹send abroad unto our brethren every where, that are left in all the land of Israel, and with them also to the priests and Levites which are in ²their cities and suburbs, that they may gather themselves unto us:

3 And let us ³bring again ^bthe ark of our God to us: for we enquired not at it in the days of Saul.

4 And all the congregation said that they would do so: for ^cthe thing was right in the eyes of all the people.

5 So David gathered all Israel together, from ^dShihor of Egypt even unto the entering of ^eHemath, to bring the ark of God from Kirjath-jearim.

6 And David went up, and all Israel, to ^fBaalath, that is, to Kirjath-jearim, which belonged to Judah, to bring up thence the ark of God the LORD, ^gthat dwelleth between the cherubims, ^hwhose name is called on it.

7 And they ⁴carried the ark of God ¹in a new cart out of the house of Abinadab: and Uzza and Ahio drave the cart.

8 And ²David and all Israel played before God with all ³their might, and with ⁴singing, and with harps, and with psalteries, and with timbrels, and with cymbals, and with trumpets.

9 ¶ And when they came unto the thrashing-floor of ¹Chidon, Uzza put forth his hand to hold the ark; for the oxen ⁶stumbled.

10 And the anger of the LORD was kindled against Uzza, and he smote him, because he put his hand to the ark: and ⁷there he died before God.

11 And David was displeased, because the LORD had made a breach upon Uzza: wherefore that place is called ¹Perez-uzza to this day.

12 And David was ²afraid of God that day, saying, How shall I bring the ark of God ³home to me?

13 So David ⁴brought not the ark ⁵home to himself to the city of David, but carried it aside into the house of Obed-edom the Gittite.

14 And the ark of God remained with the family of Obed-edom in his house three months. And ⁶the LORD blessed the house of Obed-edom, and all that he had.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 Hiram's kindness to David. 2 David's felicity in people, wives, and children. 8 His two victories.

NOW Hiram king of Tyre sent messengers to David, and timber of cedars, with masons and carpenters, to build him an house.

2 ¶ And David perceived that ³the LORD had confirmed him king over Israel; for his kingdom was lifted up on high, ⁴because of his people Israel.

3 ¶ And David took ¹more wives at Jerusalem: and David begat more sons and daughters.

4 Now these ²are the names of ³his children which he had in Jerusalem: ⁴Shammua, and Shobab, Nathan, and ⁵Solomon,

5 And Ithar, and ⁶Elishua, and Elpalet, nations are deeply moved, there is nothing they will not accomplish. On the elevation of David, the unanimity of the people towards him was surprising. They were of one heart to make him king. The festivity of the occasion was extraordinary: the banquet extended to three days! Thus the hospitality described in ver. 40 is not exceeded by anything contained in sacred writ.

Chap. XIII. 1-14. David's heart was ever turning towards the Lord, and on all occasions his primary question was, how he might best promote the Divine glory; and hence his anxiety for the restoration of the Ark, which had been utterly neglected in the days of Saul. On this great matter the heart of the people was one with that of the king, and provision was accordingly made for its restoration. Amidst the joy of the procession, the death of Uzza occurred, which fell as a thunderbolt on David and the people. All were filled with fear, lest any additional mistake might bring down further judgments. He was therefore very glad to have the Ark disposed of in the house of Obed-edom, who was greatly blessed, as well as honoured, by this important circumstance. It has been well observed, that it is the wisdom of those who are setting out in the world, to take God's Ark with them—to make his oracles their counsellors, and his laws their rule. They are likely to succeed best who are most concerned, in all things, to please the Lord. We are not told in what respect the house of Obed-edom was blessed; but the results were of a nature to attract public attention, and to require perpetual testimony to be borne to that effect in the Sacred Oracles. God's people were never yet losers by lending themselves to the furtherance of God's work. The Shunammite, in after years, when she looked for nothing, was amply compensated for her generous attention to the prophet. In every age, those of God's people who have been most distinguished by their kindness and generosity to his servants, have always found it a good investment.

Chap. XIV. 1-17. Among David's friends was Hiram, who manifested sincere and ardent attachment. David was careful to watch the workings of Providence in confirming him in the kingdom; and such was the unanimity, the cordiality, and the loyalty of the people, as to impart to the kingdom unparalleled strength. David enjoyed peace until he was in a position successfully to wage war; but even then, when the Philistines invaded him,

6 And Nogah, and Nepheg, and Japhia,
7 And Elishama, and ¹Beeliada, ²and Eliphalet.

8 ¶ And when the Philistines heard that David was anointed king over all Israel, ¹all the Philistines went up to seek David: and David heard of it, and went out against them.

9 And the Philistines came and spread themselves in ¹the valley of Rephaim.

10 And David ¹enquired of God, saying,
¹Shall I go up against the Philistines?
and wilt thou deliver them into mine hand? And the LORD said unto him, ²Go up; for I will deliver them into thine hand.

11 So they came up to Baal-perazim; and David smote them there. Then David said, God hath broken in upon mine enemies by mine hand, ¹like the breaking forth of waters: therefore they called the name of that place ²Baal-perazim.

12 And when they had left their gods there, David gave a commandment, and they ³were burned with fire.

13 And the Philistines yet again spread themselves abroad in the valley.

14 Therefore David enquired again of God; and God said unto him, Go not up after them; ¹turn away from them, and come upon them over against the mulberry-trees.

15 And it shall be, when thou shalt hear ²a sound of going in the tops of the mulberry-trees, ³that ⁴then thou shalt go out to battle: ⁵for God is gone forth before thee, to smite the host of the Philistines.

16 David therefore ¹did as God commanded him: and they smote the host of the Philistines from ²Gibeon even to ³Gazer.

17 And the ¹fame of David went out into all lands; and the LORD brought ²the fear of him upon all nations.

gether to Jerusalem, to bring up the ark of the LORD unto his place which he had prepared for it.

4 And David assembled ¹the children of Aaron, and the Levites.

5 Of the sons of Kohath; Uriel the chief, and his ²brethren an hundred and twenty.

6 Of the sons of Merari; Asaiah the chief, and his brethren two hundred and twenty.

7 Of the sons of Gershom; Joel the chief, and his brethren an hundred and thirty.

8 Of the sons of ¹Elizaphan; Shemaiah
the chief, and his brethren two hundred.

9 Of the sons of ²Hebron; Eliel the chief, and his brethren fourscore.

10 Of the sons of Uzziel; Amminadab the chief, and his brethren an hundred and twelve.

11 And David called for ³Zadok and Abiathar the priests, and for the Levites, for Uriel, Asaiah, and Joel, Shemaiah, and Eliel, and Amminadab,

12 And said unto them, Ye are the chief of the fathers of the Levites: ¹sanctify yourselves, both ye and your brethren, that ye may bring up the ark of the LORD God of Israel unto the place that I have prepared for it.

13 For because ye ²did it not at the first,
³the LORD our God made a breach upon us, for that we sought him not after the due order.

14 So the priests and the Levites ¹sanc-tified themselves to bring up the ark of the LORD God of Israel.

15 And the children of the Levites ¹bare the ark of God upon their shoulders, with the staves thereon, as Moses commanded, according to the word of the LORD.

16 And ²David spake to the chief of the Levites, to appoint their brethren to be ³the singers with instruments of musick, psalteries, and harps, and cymbals, sounding, by lifting up the voice with joy.

17 So the Levites appointed ¹Heman
the son of Joel; and of his brethren, ²Asaph the son of Berechiah; and of the sons of Merari their brethren, ³Ethan the son of Kushaiah;

18 And with them their brethren of the second degree, Zechariah, Ben, and ¹Jaaziel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehiel, and Unni, Eliab, and Benaiah, and Ma-seiah, and Mattithiah, and Eliphele, and he was careful to abstain from conflict until he inquired of the Lord as to the path of duty; but the moment he heard the words, "Go up," combined with the promise of victory, he put every power in motion to meet the foe; and when the victory was achieved, he gave the Lord all the glory. His military reputation filled the earth, which materially contributed to keep his enemies in check, and paved the way for ultimate tranquillity.

"The Lord brought the fear of him upon all nations," is very significant language, which serves to explain much of his subsequent prosperity. Thus David is a faithful type of the Lord Jesus, who must reign till all his enemies shall have been put under his feet.

Chap. XV. 1-24. David, taught by awful experience in the case of Uzza, was this time careful how he proceeded with the Ark, announcing that no one ought to carry it but the Levites, whom the Lord had chosen for that purpose, and to minister unto him for ever. On this occasion there was a vast preparation for the undertaking. The Levites were commanded to sanctify themselves before they proceeded, which was done accordingly; and then they bore the Ark on their shoulders, with staves, and not on a "cart," as had been done in the previous case, which proved so fatal to Uzza. Ver. 25-29. The removal of the Ark was a great national occurrence, and hence David, the leaders, and the captains of the people,

Mikneiah, and Obed-edom, and Jeiel, the porters.

19 So the singers, Heman, Asaph, and Ethan, were appointed to sound with cymbals of brass;

20 And Zechariah, and Aziel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehiel, and Unni, and Eliab, and Maaseiah, and Benaiah, with psalteries on Alamoth;

21 And Mattithiah, and Elipheleh, and Mikneiah, and Obed-edom, and Jeiel, and Azariah, with harps on the Sheminith to excel.

22 And Chenaniah, chief of the Levites, was for song: he instructed about the song, because he was skilful.

23 And Berechiah and Elkanah were door-keepers for the ark.

24 And Shebaniah, and Jehoshaphat, and Nethaneel, and Amasai, and Zechariah, and Benaiah, and Eliezer, the priests, did blow with the trumpets before the ark of God: and Obed-edom and Jehiah were door-keepers for the ark.

25 ¶ So David, and the elders of Israel, and the captains over thousands, went to bring up the ark of the covenant of the LORD out of the house of Obed-edom with joy.

26 And it came to pass, when God helped the Levites that bare the ark of the covenant of the LORD, that they offered seven bullocks and seven rams.

27 And David was clothed with a robe of fine linen, and all the Levites that bare the ark, and the singers, and Chenaniah the master of the song with the singers: David also had upon him an ephod of linen.

28 Thus all Israel brought up the ark of the covenant of the LORD with shouting, and with sound of the cornet, and with trumpets, and with cymbals, making a noise with psalteries and harps.

29 ¶ And it came to pass, as the ark of the covenant of the LORD came to the city of David, that Michal, the daughter of Saul, looking out at a window, saw king David dancing and playing; and she despised him in her heart.

2 And when David had made an end of offering the burnt-offerings and the peace-offerings, he blessed the people in the name of the LORD.

3 And he dealt to every one of Israel, both man and woman, to every one a loaf of bread, and a good piece of flesh, and a flagon of wine.

4 ¶ And he appointed certain of the Levites to minister before the ark of the LORD, and to record, and to thank and praise the LORD God of Israel;

5 Asaph the chief, and next to him Zechariah, Jeiel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehiel, and Mattithiah, and Eliab, and Benaiah, and Obed-edom; and Jeiel with psalteries and with harps; but Asaph made a sound with cymbals;

6 Benaiah also and Jahaziel the priests with trumpets continually before the ark of the covenant of God.

7 ¶ Then on that day David delivered first this psalm, to thank the LORD, into the hand of Asaph and his brethren.

8 Give thanks unto the LORD, call upon his name, make known his deeds among the people.

9 Sing unto him, sing psalms unto him, talk ye of all his wondrous works.

10 Glory ye in his holy name: let the heart of them rejoice that seek the LORD.

11 Seek the LORD and his strength, seek his face continually.

12 Remember his marvellous works that he hath done, his wonders, and the judgments of his mouth;

13 O ye seed of Israel his servant, ye children of Jacob, his chosen ones.

14 He is the LORD our God; his judgments are in all the earth.

15 Be ye mindful always of his covenant, the word which he commanded to a thousand generations;

16 Even of the covenant which he made with Abraham, and of his oath unto Isaac;

17 And hath confirmed the same to Jacob for a law, and to Israel for an everlasting covenant,

18 Saying, Unto thee will I give the land of Canaan, the lot of your inheritance;

19 When ye were but few, even a few, and strangers in it.

20 And when they went from nation to nation, and from one kingdom to another people,

21 He suffered no man to do them were all engaged in bringing it from the house of Obed-edom. This joyful event was followed by a sacrifice on a large scale, by which it was stamped with an evangelical character. Since the coronation of David, there had been no such day of exultation. The only drawback on David's joy was the conduct of Saul's daughter, whose language revealed her true spiritual condition. She was manifestly her father's daughter,—proud and worldly, and an enemy to that true worship of which her royal husband was, in that day, the chief teacher, and the principal type.

Chap. XVI. 1-6. This great event was now accomplished without any further judgment; and the heart of David was filled with joy, which he expressed by the devout festivities which ensued. Ver. 7-36. The Divine Spirit moving him, he penned a psalm of singular beauty and appropriateness for the occasion, full of thanksgiving, confidence, and love. It commended itself to all hearts, and drew forth to the uttermost the affections of the people, who, when Asaph had done, added their hearty Amen, and praised the Lord. Ver. 37-48. Ample provision was made for ministering to the Lord before the ark, and Obed-edom received the prominence which was due to his piety and years. The morning and evening offering was a significant act, intended to 23 Sing unto the LORD, all the earth; shew forth from day to day his salvation.

24 Declare his glory among the heathen; his marvellous works among all nations.

25 For great ^{is} the LORD, and greatly to be praised: ^mhe also ^{is} to be feared above all gods.

26 For all the gods of the people are idols: but ⁿthe LORD made the heavens.

27 Glory and honour ^{are} in his presence; ^ostrength and gladness ^{are} in his place.

28 Give unto the LORD, ye kindreds of the people, give unto the LORD ^pglory and strength.

29 Give unto the LORD the glory ^{due} unto his name: ^qbring an offering, and come before him; worship the LORD in ^rthe beauty of holiness.

30 Fear before him, all the earth: the world also shall be ^sstable, that it be not moved.

31 Let the heavens be glad, and let the earth rejoice; and let ^{men} say among the nations, ^tThe LORD reigneth.

32 Let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof; let the fields rejoice, and all that ^{is} therein.

33 Then shall the trees of the wood sing out at the presence of the LORD, ^ubecause he cometh to judge the earth.

34 O give thanks unto the LORD; for ^{he} is good: for his mercy ^{endureth} for ever.

35 And say ye, Save us, O God of our salvation, and gather us together, and deliver us from the heathen, ^vthat we may give thanks to thy holy name, and ^wglory in thy praise.

36 Blessed ^{be} the LORD God of Israel for ever and ever. And all the people ^xsaid, Amen, and praised the LORD.

37 ^ySo he left there, before the ark of the covenant of the LORD, Asaph and his brethren, to minister before the ark continually, as every day's work required;

38 And Obed-edom with their brethren, threescore and eight; Obed-edom also the son of Jeduthun, and Hosah, ^{to be} porters:

39 And Zadok the priest, and his brethren the priests, ^zbefore the tabernacle of the LORD, in the high place that ^{was} at Gibeon,

CHAPTER XVII.

³ David, forbidden to build God an house, 11 is promised blessings in his seed. 16 His prayer and thanksgiving.

NOW it came to pass, ^aas David sat in his house, that David said to Nathan the prophet, Lo, I dwell in an house of cedars, but ^bthe ark of the covenant of the LORD ^{remaineth} ^cunder curtains.

2 Then Nathan said unto David, Do all that is in thine heart; ^dfor God ^{is} with thee.

3 ^eAnd it came to pass the same night, that the word of God came to Nathan, saying,

4 Go and tell David my servant, Thus saith the LORD, ^fThou shalt not build me an house to dwell in:

5 For I have not dwelt in an house since the day that I brought up Israel unto this day; but have ^ggone ^hfrom tent to tent, and from ⁱone tabernacle to ^janother.

6 Whosoever I have ^kwalked with all Israel, spake I a word to any of the judges of Israel, whom I commanded to ^lfeed my people, saying, Why have ye not built me an house of cedars?

7 Now therefore thus shalt thou say unto my servant David, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, ^mI took thee from the sheep-cote, ⁿeven ^ofrom following the sheep, that thou shouldst be ruler over my people Israel;

8 And ^pI have been with thee whithersoever thou hast walked, and have cut off all thine enemies from before thee, and have ^qmade thee a name like the name of the great men that ^rare in the earth:

9 Also ^sI will ordain a place for my people Israel, and will ^tplant them, and they shall dwell in their place, and shall be moved no more; neither shall ^uthe children of wickedness ^vwaste them any more, as at the beginning, keep alive in the breasts of the people a permanent sense of their shortcomings, and the necessity of constant mercy, as well as the duty of constant praise. David's religion was a religion of gratitude and joy. He was never weary of blessing the Lord. Men are seen as well in little as in large things: and many of these, like a small aperture, which reveals an extended view, contribute greatly to illustrate character. After all was over, the people departed every man to his own home, and David "returned to bless his house." It is a sad affair when men's religion is a thing merely of public form, and when no testimony for God is borne at home, and no supplication is there made for the blessing of the God of Jacob!

Chap. XVII. 1-27. David, now established in his throne, and surrounded by an affectionate people, became solicitous for the honour of the Ark of the Covenant. He could no longer bear to dwell himself in a house of cedar, while the emblems of the Divine presence had nothing but curtains. The prophet received a message for the king, which, while it interdicted his 10 And ^asince the time that I commanded judges to be over my people Israel: ^bmoreover, I will subdue all thine enemies. Furthermore I tell thee, that ^cthe LORD will build thee an house.

11 ¶ And it shall come to pass, when thy days be expired, that thou must ^dgo to be with thy fathers, that ^eI will raise up thy seed after thee, which shall be of thy sons; and I will establish his kingdom.

12 ^fHe shall build me an house, and ^gI will stablish his throne for ever.

13 ^hI will be his father, and he shall be ⁱmy son; and ^jI will not take my mercy away from him, ^kas I took it from him that was before thee:

14 But I will settle him ^lin mine house and in my kingdom for ever; and his throne shall be established for evermore.

15 According to all these words, and according to all this vision, so did Nathan speak unto David.

16 ¶ And David the king came and sat before the LORD, and said, ^mWho am I, O LORD God, and what is mine house, ⁿthat thou hast brought me hitherto?

17 And yet this was a small thing in thine eyes, O God; for thou hast also spoken of thy servant's house for a great while to come, and ^ohast regarded me according to the estate of a man of high degree, O LORD God.

18 What can David ^pspeak more to thee for the honour of thy servant? for ^qthou knowest thy servant.

19 O LORD, for thy servant's sake, and ^raccording to thine own heart, hast thou done all this greatness, in making known all these ^sgreat things.

20 O LORD, there is none like thee, neither is there any God ^tbesides thee, according to all that we have heard with our ears.

21 And ^uwhat one nation in the earth is like thy people Israel, whom God went to ^vredeem to be his own people, to make thee a name of greatness and terribleness, ^wby driving out nations from before thy people, whom thou hast redeemed out of Egypt?

22 For ^xthy people Israel didst thou make thine own people for ever; and thou, LORD, becamest their God.

23 Therefore now, LORD, ^ylet the thing that thou hast spoken concerning thy servant, and concerning his house, be established for ever, and do as thou hast said.

24 Let it even be established, ^zthat thy name may be magnified for ever, saying,

CHAPTER XVIII.

1 David subdueth the Philistines and the Moabites. 3 He smiteth Hadarezer and the Syrians.

NOW after this it came to pass, that David smote the Philistines, and subdued them, and took ^aGath and her towns out of the hand of the Philistines.

2 And ^bhe smote Moab; and the Moabites became David's servants, and brought gifts.

3 ¶ And David smote ^cHadarezer king of ^dZobah unto Hamath, as he went to establish his dominion ^eby the river Euphrates.

4 And David took from him a thousand chariots, and ^fseven thousand horsemen, and twenty thousand footmen: David also ^ghoughed all the chariot horses, but reserved of them an hundred chariots.

5 And when the Syrians of ^hDamascus came ⁱto help Hadarezer king of Zobah, David slew of the Syrians two and twenty thousand men.

6 Then David put ^jgarrisons in Syria-damascus; and the Syrians became David's servants, and brought gifts. ^kThus the LORD preserved David whithersoever he went.

7 And David took the ^lshields of gold that were on the servants of Hadarezer, and brought them to Jerusalem.

8 Likewise from ^mTibhath, and from Chun, cities of Hadarezer, brought David very much brass, ⁿwherewith Solomon made the brassen sea, and the pillars, and the vessels of brass.

9 ¶ Now when ^oTou king of Hamath heard how David had smitten all the host of Hadarezer king of Zobah,

10 He sent ^pHadoram his son to king David, to ^qenquire of his welfare, and to ^rcongratulate him, because he had fought against Hadarezer, and smitten him; (for Hadarezer ^shad war with Tou;) and with pious project, encouraged him with the assurances it contained. Nothing could be more gratifying to his paternal heart than the assurances and statements relative to the great things which were to be done by his son. The prophet having communicated with the king, he at once repaired to the Lord, opening his heart to his heavenly Father in a strain of the meekest love, and the holiest confidence. At no period does David appear more devout, heavenly, and sublime than on this occasion. He had received a promise, and it now only remained for him to rest upon it: "Let it please thee to bless the house of thy servant, for thou blessest, and it shall be blessed for ever." Here is an illustration of true piety, which, in every age, has served to instruct, delight, and edify the people of God.

Chap. XVIII. 1-17. David once more came into conflict with the Philistines, whom he discomfited with terrible slaughter; and, notwithstanding the seasons of peace which ensued, war soon returns. Our enemies are both active and powerful, and there is no safety but in perpetual conflict. It is only by the resistance of the Wicked One that he is made to flee. Notwithstanding David's successive struggles, and consequent exposure to him all manner of vessels of gold, and silver, and brass.

11 Then also king David °dedicated unto the LORD, with the silver and the gold that he brought from all these nations; from Edom, and from Moab, and from the children of Ammon, and from the Philistines, and from °Amalek.

12 Moreover, °Abishai the son of Zeruiah slew of the Edomites in the valley of Salt eighteen thousand.

13 ¶ And he put °garrisons in Edom; and °all the Edomites became David's servants. Thus the LORD preserved David whithersoever he went.

14 ¶ So David reigned over all Israel, and °executed judgment and justice among all his people.

15 And Joab the son of Zeruiah was over the host; and Jehoshaphat the son of Ahilud °recorder;

16 And Zadok the son of Ahitub, and °Abimelech the son of °Abiathar, were the priests; and °Shavsha was scribe;

17 And °Benaiah the son of Jehoiada was over the Cherethites and the Pelethites; and the sons of David were chief °about the king.

CHAPTER XIX.

1 David's messengers, sent to comfort Hanun, are disgracefully treated. 6 The Ammonites are overcome.

NOW it came to pass after this, that °Nahash the king of the children of Ammon died, and his son reigned in his stead.

2 And David said, °I will shew kindness unto Hanun the son of Nahash, because his father shewed kindness to me. And David sent messengers to comfort him concerning his father. So the servants of David came into the land of °the children of Ammon to Hanun, to comfort him.

3 But °the princes of the children of Ammon said to Hanun, °Thinkest thou that °David doth honour thy father, that he hath sent comforters unto thee? are not his servants come unto thee for °to search, and to overthrow, and to spy out the land?

4 Wherefore Hanun °took David's servants, and °shaved them, °and cut off their garments in the midst, hard by their buttocks, and °sent them away.

danger and death, yet °the Lord preserved him whithersoever he went." While David warred, he ruled, and was very careful in the discharge of the judicial functions, "executing judgment and justice among all his people." Had he done otherwise, he would not have been a meet type of the Son of God, the habitation of whose throne is justice and judgment. It was amongst David's felicities that his sons were his servants. They were "chief about the king." Nothing was wanted to add to his happiness, but that they should have breathed his spirit, and imitated his example. To a parent, no society is so sweet and precious as that of his own sons, provided they be faithful, loving, and reverential.

Chap. XIX. 1-5. Among the many graces which distinguished David, and adorned his character, was gratitude for benefits, and sympathy with affliction. He had not forgotten the kindness of Nahash, and, after 10 Now when Joab saw that the °battle was °set against him before and behind, he chose out of all the °choice of Israel, and put them in array against the Syrians.

11 And the rest of the people he delivered unto the hand of °Abishai his brother, and they set themselves in array against the children of Ammon.

12 And he said, If the Syrians be too strong for me, then thou shalt help me: but if the children of Ammon be too strong for thee, then I will help thee.

13 Be °of good courage, and let us behave ourselves valiantly for our people, and for the cities of our God; and let the LORD do that which is good in his sight.

14 So Joab, and the people that were with him, drew nigh before the Syrians unto the battle; and °they fled before him.

15 And when the children of Ammon saw that the Syrians were fled, °they likewise fled before Abishai his brother, and entered into the city. Then Joab came to Jerusalem.

16 ¶ And when the Syrians saw that they were put to the worse before Israel, they sent messengers, °and drew forth the Syrians that were beyond the °river;

his death, he manifested a suitable return for it to his son. Evil counsellors, however, perverted this deed of disinterested benevolence into one of political cunning, for purposes of evil, and counselled an act of individual cruelty and public insult. On that occasion, however, David overlooked the indignity, instead of treating it as a ground of war. Ver. 6-19. The Ammonites, not satisfied with this limited wrong, in their infatuation prepared for war with David, which brought upon themselves swift destruction. David's generals, on the occasion, acted with great heroism. The exhortation of Joab furnishes a fine spiritual motto for all who are engaged in the promotion of the work of the Lord: "Be of good courage, and let us behave ourselves valiantly for our people, and for the cities of our God; and let the Lord do that which is good in his sight." There is here a great principle. The concern of Christians is duty only; and that done, the issues may be safely left to the and °Shophach, the captain of the host of Hadarezer, went before them.

17 And it was told David; and he gathered all Israel, and passed over Jordan, and came upon them, and set the battle in array against them. So when David had put the battle in array against the Syrians, they fought with him.

18 But the Syrians fled before Israel; and David slew of the Syrians seven thousand men which fought in chariots, and forty thousand footmen, and killed Shophach the captain of the host.

19 And when the servants of Hadarezer saw that they were put to the worse before Israel, they made peace with David, and became his servants: neither would the Syrians help the children of Ammon any more.

CHAPTER XX.

1 Rabbah is besieged by Joab, spoiled by David, and the people tortured. 4 Three overthrowes of the Philistines.

AND it came to pass, that after the year was expired, at the time that kings go out to battle, Joab led forth the power of the army, and wasted the country of the children of Ammon, and came and besieged Rabbah; (but David tarried at Jerusalem;) and Joab smote Rabbah, and destroyed it.

2 And David took the crown of their king from off his head, and found it to weigh a talent of gold, and there were precious stones in it; and it was set upon David's head: and he brought also exceeding much spoil out of the city.

3 And he brought out the people that were in it, and cut them with saws, and with harrows of iron, and with axes: even so dealt David with all the cities of the children of Ammon. And David and all the people returned to Jerusalem.

4 ¶ And it came to pass after this, that there arose war at Gezer with the Philistines; at which time Sibbechai the Hushathite slew Sippai, that was of the children of the giant; and they were subdued.

5 And there was war again with the Philistines; and Elhanan the son of Jair slew Lahmi, the brother of Goliath the Gittite, whose spear's staff was like a weaver's beam.

6 And yet again there was war at Gath, where was a man of great stature, whose fingers and toes were four and twenty, six on each hand, and six on each foot; and he also was the son of the giant.

7 But when he defied Israel, Jonathan the son of Shimea, David's brother, slew him.

8 These were born unto the giant in Gath; and they fell by the hand of David, and by the hand of his servants.

CHAPTER XXI.

1 David numbereth the people. 8 He repenteth; 9 and chooseth the penitence.

AND Satan stood up against Israel, and provoked David to number Israel.

2 And David said to Joab, and to the rulers of the people, Go, number Israel from Beer-sheba even to Dan; and bring the number of them to me, that I may know it.

3 And Joab answered, The LORD make his people an hundred times so many more as they be: but, my lord the king, are they not all my lord's servants? why then doth my lord require this thing? why will he be a cause of trespass to Israel?

4 Nevertheless the king's word prevailed against Joab: wherefore Joab departed, and went throughout all Israel, and came to Jerusalem.

5 ¶ And Joab gave the sum of the number of the people unto David. And all they of Israel were a thousand thousand and an hundred thousand men that drew sword; and Judah was four hundred threescore and ten thousand men that drew sword.

6 But Levi and Benjamin counted he not among them: for the king's word was abominable to Joab.

7 ¶ And God was displeased with this thing; therefore he smote Israel.

8 And David said unto God, I have sinned greatly, because I have done this thing: but now, I beseech thee, do away the iniquity of thy servant; for I have done very foolishly.

9 ¶ And the LORD spake unto Gad, David's seer, saying,

10 Go and tell David, saying, Thus saith the LORD, I offer thee three things: choose thee one of them, that I may do it unto thee.

11 So Gad came to David, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Choose thee

Master in heaven. The loss of 7000 chariots, and 40,000 footmen, together with the commander-in-chief, was a tremendous penalty to pay for their infatuation.

Chap. XX. 1-8. Everything in ancient times was upon a large scale. Crimes were vast, and their punishment corresponded with them. Ver. 3 exhibits modes of death which are now horrible to reflect on. Without taking into account the difference of circumstances and of civilisation, it is impossible rightly to estimate such a state of things. It is a noticeable feature among the Philistines, that they had among them men of prodigious stature, and corresponding strength. The giant mentioned in ver. 6—an enormous man—was the son of a giant, who, like Goliath, exulting in his strength, defied Israel, till a nephew of David's slew him. In military, as in mental conflicts, skill is better than strength.

In all these cases, it is clear that Divine power was present to give the representatives of the true Church the victory. The spiritual bearings of the subject are obvious:—there is no enemy over which the weakest child of God, divinely aided, may not triumph. Whatever the strength, numbers, or ferocity of his foes, he is able to overcome them by "the blood of the Lamb."

Chap. XXI. 1-8. We have already referred to David's numbering the people, and the calamities which followed it. Here, however, the act which so provoked the Lord, is distinctly ascribed to the Wicked One. Satan stood up against Israel, and induced David to do a deed which could not fail to bring down upon him the Divine judgments. Even Joab, a man by no means remarkable for a tender conscience, recoiled from it, clearly perceiving its objectionable nature. He was,

12 Either three years' famine; or three months ¹to be destroyed before thy foes, while that the sword of thine enemies overtaketh thee; or else three days the sword of the LORD, ²even the pestilence, in the land, and ³the angel of the LORD destroying throughout all the coasts of Israel. ⁴Now therefore advise thyself what word I shall bring again to him that sent me.

13 And David said unto Gad, ¹I am in a great strait: ²let me fall now into the hand of the LORD; ³for very ⁴great are his mercies: but let me not fall into the hand of man.

14 ¶ So ¹the LORD sent pestilence upon Israel: and there fell of Israel seventy thousand men.

15 And God sent an angel ¹unto Jerusalem to destroy it: and as he was destroying, the LORD beheld, and he ²repented him of the evil, and said to the angel that destroyed, ³It is enough, stay now thine hand. And the angel of the LORD stood by the thrashing-floor of ⁴Ornan the Jebusite.

16 ¶ And David lifted up his eyes, and ¹saw the angel of the LORD stand between the earth and the heaven, having a drawn sword in his hand stretched out over Jerusalem: then David and the elders of Israel, who were ²clothed in sackcloth, fell upon their faces.

17 And David said unto God, ¹Is it not I that commanded the people to be numbered? even I it is that have sinned, and done evil indeed; but ²as for ³these sheep, what have they done? ⁴Let thine hand, I pray thee, O LORD my God, be on me, and ⁵on my father's house; but not on thy people, that they should be plagued.

18 ¶ Then the angel of the LORD commanded Gad to say to David, ¹that David should go up, and set up an altar unto the LORD in the thrashing-floor of Ornan the Jebusite.

19 And David ¹went up at the saying of Gad, which he spake in the name of the LORD.

20 ¹And Ornan turned back, and saw the angel; and his four sons with him hid themselves. Now Ornan was thrashing wheat.

21 And as David came to Ornan, Ornan looked, and saw David, and went out of the thrashing-floor, and ¹bowed himself to David with his face to the ground.

22 Then David said to Ornan, ¹Grant me the place of ²this thrashing-floor, that I may build an altar therein unto the LORD: ³thou shalt grant it me for the full price; ⁴that the plague may be stayed from the people.

23 And Ornan said unto David, ¹Take it to thee, and let my lord the king do that which is good in his eyes: lo, I give thee ²the oxen also for burnt-offerings, and the thrashing-instruments for wood, and the wheat for the meat-offering; I give it all.

24 And king David said to Ornan, ¹Nay; but I will verily buy it for the full price: for I will not take that which is thine for the LORD, nor offer burnt-offerings without cost.

25 So David gave to Ornan for the place six hundred shekels of gold by weight.

26 And David ¹built there an altar unto the LORD, and offered burnt-offerings and peace-offerings, ²and called upon the LORD; and he answered him from heaven ³by fire upon the altar of burnt-offering.

29 For ¹the tabernacle of the LORD, which Moses made in the wilderness, and the altar of the burnt-offering, were at that season in the high-place at ²Gibeon.

30 But David could not go before it to enquire of God: for ¹he was afraid because of the sword of the angel of the LORD.

nevertheless, overruled, and therefore proceeded, although with much reluctance, to the task assigned him, and reported the result to his royal master. The act, however, served to reveal the true strength of the country at that period, which was certainly such as to give a most exalted conception of the military power of Israel. A force of 1,100,000 men who drew the sword in Israel, and 470,000 in Judah, present a fearful picture of martial strength. Speaking after the manner of men, a host of nearly 1,600,000 in arms constituted an array which might well inspire surrounding nations with terror; but, when to that we add the promised presence of the Most High, working according to the counsels of his own will, and by mysterious means of his own selection, or directly with his own hand, we have something far more terrible than men that drew the sword, whatever their numbers, experience, or prowess. The united military power of all Europe at the present moment but slightly exceeds that of Israel and Judah alone. From this we learn the frightful extent to which the martial spirit was then cultivated. David soon discovered his mistake, and, perceiving the consequences with alarm, deeply humbled himself before the Lord. Ver. 9-17. David upon this, as upon all important occasions, conducted himself with admirable propriety. He wisely selected the least of three terrible evils. As the calamity went on, David was permitted to behold the Destroying Angel, sword in hand, stretched out over Jerusalem, the seat of authority, and the residence of the bulk of the population. The sight overwhelmed him beyond expression, and called forth all that was in him of piety, penitence, and compassion. In his agony, he immediately betook himself to his only and never-failing source of consolation—the mercy-seat! His prayer was heard, and the work of destruction was stayed. The lesson to be learned from the whole is, the sin and danger of human confidence. So far from strength, it is very weakness. The Lord alone is the refuge of his people, their strength, and their shield.

Chap. XXII. 1-5. David, however much at home in conducting the wars of the Lord, was still more so in matters connected with peace and religion. His heart was now full of good desires and purposes touching the

CHAPTER XXIII.

1 Solomon made king. 2 The Levites ordered. 7 The sons of Gershon, 12 Kohath, 21 and Merari.

SO when David was ^aold and full of days, ^bhe made Solomon his son king over Israel.

2 ^c¶ And ^dhe gathered together all the princes of Israel, with the priests and the Levites.

3 Now ^ethe Levites were numbered from the age of thirty years and upward: and their number by their polls, man by man, was thirty and eight thousand.

4 Of which, twenty and four thousand were to ^fset forward the work of the house of the LORD; and six thousand were officers and judges:

5 Moreover, four thousand were porters;

temple. From his love to the Lord, he was solicitous that it should be "exceedingly magnifical, of fame and of glory throughout all countries." He was anxious that the institution of this temple should present a visible embodiment of the truth as it was taught by the holy prophets, and be worthy of the "people whose God was the Lord." To this end he brought the whole strength of the people to bear on the preparations, previous to his death, and the result was prodigious. Ver. 6-19. The charge to Solomon is full of wisdom, piety, and pathos, and eminently calculated to affect the tender heart of the youthful ruler, who even then knew the truth, and feared the Lord. It was his happiness to enjoy, to the fullest extent, that for which his father had so long been labouring—the blessing of peace, which was indispensable to his mission. David's prayer for his son is very touching. Had Solomon steadfastly continued to exemplify his father's prayer, he would have ended as he begun, presenting somewhat approaching to the perfection of humanity, and have been a far worthier type of God manifest in the flesh. The secret of prosperity was clearly pointed out. He had only to fulfil the statutes of the Lord,—to be strong and of a good courage. It is deeply affecting to hear the venerable king enumerating the preparations he had made in his trouble for the house of the Lord. His command to the princes, also, to aid his son, is very touching; the exhortation to set their heart and soul to seek the Lord their God, was spirit-stirring in an eminent degree. Were all Christian men, of wealth and influence, to imitate David and his people, what a world would this become!

Chap. XXIII. 1-24. The figures herein employed give us some idea of the magnitude of the preparations. From ver. 3 we are taught that the priests did not begin to serve till the age of thirty, according to the appointment of Moses, since they were not till then considered to have reached their full strength, and they were not and four thousand ^opraised the LORD with ¹the instruments which I made, said David, to praise therewith.

6 And David ^odivided them into ²courses among the sons of Levi, namely, ¹Gershon, Kohath, and Merari.

7 ¶ Of the Gershonites were ¹Laadan and Shimei.

8 The sons of Laadan; the chief was Jehiel, and Zetham, and Joel, three.

9 The sons of Shimei; Shelomith, and Haziel, and Haran, three. These were the chief of the fathers of Laadan.

10 And the sons of Shimei were Jahath, ¹Zina, and Jeush, and Beriah. These four were the sons of Shimei.

11 And Jahath was the chief, and ¹Zizah the second; but Jeush and Beriah ³had not many sons; therefore they were in one reckoning, according to their father's house.

12 ¶ The sons of Kohath; Amram, Izhar, Hebron, and Uzziel, four.

13 The sons of Amram; Aaron and Moses; and Aaron was ^mseparated, that he should ⁿsanctify the most holy things, he and his sons for ever, ^oto burn incense before the LORD, to minister unto him, and to bless in his name for ever.

14 Now concerning Moses, ^pthe man of God, his sons were named of the tribe of Levi.

15 The sons of Moses were ^qGershon and Eliezer.

16 Of the sons of Gershon, ^rShebuel was the chief.

17 And the sons of Eliezer were Rehabiah ^sthe chief. And Eliezer had none other sons; but the sons of Rehabiah ^twere very many.

18 Of the sons of Izhar; ^uShelomith the chief.

19 Of the sons of Hebron; Jeriah the first, Amariah the second, Jahaziel the third, and Jekameam the fourth.

20 Of the sons of Uzziel; Micah the first, and Jesiah the second.

21 ¶ The sons of Merari; ^vMahli and Mushi. The sons of Mahli; Eleazar and Kish.

22 And Eleazar died, and had no sons, but daughters; and their ^wbrethren the sons of Kish ^xtook them.

25 For David said, The LORD God of Israel hath given rest unto his people, ⁴that they may dwell in Jerusalem for ever:

26 And also unto the Levites; they shall no more ⁵carry the tabernacle, nor any vessels of it for the service thereof.

27 For, ⁶by the last words of David, the Levites were ⁷numbered from twenty years old and above:

28 Because their ⁸office was to wait on the sons of Aaron, for the service of the house of the LORD, in the courts, and ⁹in the chambers, and in the purifying of all holy things, and the work of the service of the house of God;

29 Both for ¹⁰the shew-bread, and for ¹¹the fine flour for meat-offering, and for the ¹²unleavened cakes, and for that which is baked in the ¹³pan, and for that which is fried, and for all manner of ¹⁴measure and size;

31 And to offer all burnt-sacrifices unto the LORD ¹⁷in the sabbaths, in the new-moons, and on the ¹⁸set feasts, by number, according to the order commanded unto them, continually before the LORD:

32 And that they should ¹⁹keep the charge of the tabernacle of the congregation, and the charge of the holy place, and ²⁰the charge of the sons of Aaron their brethren, in the service of the house of the LORD.

CHAPTER XXIV.

1 The divisions of the sons of Aaron into four and twenty orders. 20 The Kohathites, 27 and the Merarites divided by lot.

NOW these are ²¹the divisions of the sons of Aaron. ²²The sons of Aaron; Nadab and Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar.

2 But ²³Nadab and Abihu ²⁴died before deemed efficient beyond the age of fifty. The number of this important class was great, amounting to 38,000. The "courses" mentioned in ver. 6 were so many companies, each of which conducted the service in turn, changing weekly. David was everywhere, and in everything, a man of order. Notwithstanding the abundance of his resources, there was no waste of any kind permitted. As he drew near to the close of his career, he appears to have become intensely solicitous to turn everything to the best account. Although so soon to quit the present sphere, he displayed no less zeal than if he had been to remain for another generation; and in this he is a model to all the people of God. The Church of Christ is an Estate, which each generation has received from its predecessors; it ought, therefore, to make a conscience of handing it down, not only without deterioration, but, as far as possible, in an improved condition. Ver. 25-32. David made much of general peace as a means of spiritual progress. Wars are fatal to the interests of religion in and around the seat of conflict. While peace is necessary to Gospel progress, Gospel development, in its full power, is conservative of the interests of peace. The Levites, although a subordinate, were yet an important class of officers, performing not only the heavier work of the temple, but also discharging important duties touching worship. Their duties, as described in these verses, were multifarious and constant. They had every morning to thank and praise the Lord, and likewise in the evening to offer burnt sacrifices on the sabbaths, at new moons, and at the set feasts. Religion, notwithstanding its grace and freedom, if the people will follow the Lord fully, makes heavy and constant demands on the heart, the hand, and earthly substance. Blessed are they who never get weary in well-doing, for they shall, without fail, reap in due season.

Chap. XXIV. 1-31. The high priesthood had been established in the line of Eleazar, and in the person of their father, and had no children; therefore Eleazar and Ithamar executed the priest's office.

3 And David distributed them, both Zadok, of the sons of Eleazar, and Ahimelech, of the sons of Ithamar, according to their offices in their service.

4 And there were more chief men found of the sons of Eleazar than of the sons of Ithamar; and thus were they divided. Among the sons of Eleazar there were sixteen chief men of the house of their fathers, and eight among the sons of Ithamar, according to the house of their fathers.

5 Thus were they divided by lot, one sort with another; for the governors of the sanctuary, and governors of the house of God, were of the sons of Eleazar, and of the sons of Ithamar.

6 And Shemaiah the son of Nethaneel the scribe, one of the Levites, wrote them before the king, and the princes, and Zadok the priest, and Ahimelech the son of Abiathar, and before the chief of the fathers of the priests and Levites: one principal household being taken for Eleazar, and one taken for Ithamar.

7 Now the first lot came forth to Jehoiarib, the second to Jedaiah,

8 The third to Harim, the fourth to Seorim,

9 The fifth to Malchijah, the sixth to Mijamin,

10 The seventh to Hakkoz, the eighth to Abijah,

11 The ninth to Jeshuah, the tenth to Shecaniah,

12 The eleventh to Eliashib, the twelfth to Jakim,

13 The thirteenth to Huppah, the fourteenth to Jeshebeab,

14 The fifteenth to Bilgah, the sixteenth to Immer,

15 The seventeenth to Hezir, the eighteenth to Aphas,

16 The nineteenth to Pethahiah, the twentieth to Jehezkel,

17 The one and twentieth to Jachin, the two and twentieth to Gamul, 18 The three and twentieth to Delaiah, the four and twentieth to Maziah.

19 These were the orderings of them in their service, to come into the house of the LORD, according to their manner, under Aaron their father, as the LORD God of Israel had commanded him.

20 ¶ And the rest of the sons of Levi were these: Of the sons of Amram; Shubael: of the sons of Shubael; Jehdeiah.

21 Concerning Rehabiah: of the sons of Rehabiah, the first was Isshiah.

CHAPTER XXV.

1 The number and offices of the singers. 8 Their division by lot into four and twenty orders.

MOREOVER David, and the captains of the host, separated to the service of the sons of Asaph, and of Heman, and of Jeduthun, who should prophesy with harps, with psalteries, and with cymbals: and the number of the workmen, according to their service, was:

2 Of the sons of Asaph; Zaccur, and Joseph, and Nathaniah, and Asareliah, the sons of Asaph, under the hands of Asaph, which prophesied according to the order of the king.

3 Of Jeduthun: the sons of Jeduthun; Gedaliah, and Zeri, and Jeshiah, Hashabiah, and Mattithiah, six, under the hands of their father Jeduthun, who prophesied with a harp, to give thanks and to praise the LORD.

4 Of Heman: the sons of Heman; Bukkiah, Mattaniah, Uzziel, Shebuel, and Jerimoth, Hananiah, Hanani, Eliathah, Giddalti, and Romamti-ezer, Joshbekashah, Mallothi, Hothir, and Mahazioth:

5 All these were the sons of Heman the king's seer in the words of God, to lift up the horn. And God gave to Heman fourteen sons and three daughters.

6 All these were under the hands of their father for song in the house of the LORD, with cymbals, psalteries, and harps, for the service of the house of God, according to the order of the king.

Phinehas; but the prerogative was lost on the death of Eli. From that time we find the descendants of Ithamar sharing equally in that dignity with the family of Eleazar, and, to prevent jealousy between the two, David makes the distribution by lot. The division of labour not only lightens it, but throws into it an element of individuality, which is, both morally and physically, beneficial to the performers. The great thing to be avoided is strife and vainglory; and the best preservative against this is humility of mind, and contentedness to occupy the situation allotted us by Providence, whether obscure or conspicuous, with fidelity, order, and zeal.

Chap. XXV. 1-31. The captains of the host were the princes of the people, and the chief of the priests, before whom the lots were cast for priests and Levites. As already intimated, praise was a principal part of the temple service, as it ever ought to be in the Church of Christ, since the Gospel is an affair of mercy and bounty, which can never be adequately acknowledged. This praise is not only a high duty, but an element of happiness and strength. Gratitude, excited to a high pitch, becomes joy, realizing the precious Scripture—"The joy

CHAPTER XXVI.

1 The divisions of the porters. 13 The gates assigned by lot. 20 The Levites that had the charge of the treasures. 29 Officers and judges.

CONCERNING the divisions of ^athe porters: Of the ^bKorhites was ^cMeshelemiah the son of Kore, of the sons of ^dAsaph.

2 And the sons of Meshelemiah were Zechariah the first-born, Jediel the second, Zebadiah the third, Jathniel the fourth,

3 Elam the fifth, Jehohanan the sixth, Elioenai the seventh.

4 Moreover, the sons of ^eObed-edom were Shemaiah the first-born, Jehozabad the second, Joah the third, and Sacar the fourth, and Nethaneel the fifth,

5 Ammiel the sixth, Issachar the seventh, Peulthai the eighth; for ^fGod blessed ^hhim.

6 Also unto Shemaiah his son were sons born, that ruled throughout the house of their father; for they were ^gmighty men of valour.

7 The sons of Shemaiah; Othni, and Rephael, and Obed, Elzabad, (whose brethren were strong men,) Elihu, and Sema-chiah.

8 All these of the sons of Obed-edom: they, and their sons, and their brethren, able men for strength for the service, were threescore and two of Obed-edom.

9 And ^hMeshelemiah had sons and brethren, strong men, eighteen.

10 Also ⁱHosah, of the children of Merari, had sons; Simri the chief, (for though he was not the first-born, yet ^khis father made him the chief,)

11 Hilkiah the second, Tebaliah the third, Zechariah the fourth: all the sons and brethren of Hosah were thirteen.

12 Among these were the divisions of the porters, even among the chief men, having ^lwards one against another, to minister in the house of the LORD.

13 ¶ And they cast lots, ^mas well the small as the great, according to the house of their fathers, for every gate.

14 And the lot eastward fell to ⁿShelemiah: then for ^oZechariah his son (a wise counsellor) they cast lots, and his lot came out northward.

15 To Obed-edom southward; and to his sons the house of ^pAsuppim.

16 To Shuppim and ^qHosah the lot came forth westward, with the gate Shallecheth, by the ^rcauseway of the going up, ^sward against ward.

17 ^tEastward were six Levites, northward four a day, southward four a day, and toward Asuppim two and two.

of the Lord shall be your strength." The best preparation for hard work, and, if need be, severe suffering, is being "filled with joy and peace in believing." To such no task is hard, no burden heavy.

Chap. XXVI. 1-32. Religion, in the hands of David, supplied employment for nearly as many people as war. Every class of men were valuable for something. In this there is a striking analogy to the state which the Gospel 18 At Parbar westward, four at the causeway, and two at Parbar.

19 These are the divisions of the porters among the sons of 'Kore, and among the sons of Merari.

20 ¶ And of the Levites, Ahijah was over the 'treasures of the house of God, and over the treasures of the 'dedicated things.

21 As concerning the sons of 'Laadan; the sons of the Gershonite Laadan, chief fathers, even of Laadan the Gershonite, were 'Jehieli.

22 The sons of Jehieli; Zetham, and Joel his brother, which were 'over the treasures of the house of the LORD.

23 Of the 'Amramites, and the Izharites, the Hebronites, and the Uzzielites:

24 And 'Shebuel the son of Gershom, the son of Moses, was ruler of the treasures.

25 And his brethren by 'Eliezer; 'Rehabiah his son, and Jeshaiiah his son, and Joram his son, and Zichri his son, and 'Shelomith his son:

26 Which Shelomith and his brethren were 'over all the treasures of the dedicated things, which David the king, and the chief fathers, the captains over thousands and hundreds, and the captains of the host, had dedicated.

27 Out of the 'spoils won in battles did they dedicate 'to maintain the house of the LORD.

28 And all that 'Samuel the seer, and Saul the son of Kish, and 'Abner the son of Ner, and 'Joab the son of Zeruiah, had dedicated; and whosoever had dedicated any thing, it was under the hand of Shelomith, and of his brethren.

29 ¶ Of the 'Izharites, Chenaniah and his sons were for 'the outward business over Israel, for 'officers and judges.

30 And of the 'Hebronites, Hashabiah and his brethren, men of valour, a thousand and seven hundred, were 'officers among them of Israel on this side Jordan westward, in all the business of the LORD, and in the service of the king.

31 Among the Hebronites was 'Jerijah the chief, even among the Hebronites, according to the generations of his fathers. In the 'fortieth year of the reign of David they were sought for, and there were found among them mighty men of valour at 'Jazer of Gilead.

32 And his brethren, 'men of valour, were two thousand and seven hundred 'chief fathers, whom king David made rulers over the 'Reubenites, the Gadites, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, for every

1 The twelve captains for every several month. 16 The princes of the twelve tribes.

NOW the children of Israel after their number, to wit, the chief fathers and 'captains of thousands and hundreds, and their officers that 'served the king in 'any matter of the courses, which came in and went out 'month by month throughout all the months of the year, of every course were twenty and four thousand.

3 Of the children of 'Perez was 'the chief of all the captains of the host for the first month.

4 And over the course of the second month was 'Dodai an Ahohite, and of his course was Mikloth also the ruler: in his course likewise were twenty and four thousand.

5 The third captain of the host, for the third month, was 'Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, a 'chief priest: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

6 This is that Benaiah, who was 'mighty among the thirty, and above the thirty: and in his course was Ammizabad his son.

7 The fourth captain, for the fourth month, was 'Asahel the brother of Joab, and Zebadiah his son after him: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

8 The fifth captain, for the fifth month, was 'Shamhuth the Izrahite: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

9 The sixth captain, for the sixth month, was 'Ira the son of Ikkeah the Tekoite: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

will bring about, when the talent, culture, rank, and station of the whole world, so long consumed in war, will be consecrated to the interests of peace. The mere waste of a few campaigns among the great powers of the earth would go far to civilise the bulk of the human family. Thanks be to God, already the prophecy is, to a considerable extent, fulfilled, that "many shall run to and fro;" and knowledge is being rapidly "increased."

Chap. XXVII. 1-34. The wars of David, viewed analogically, serve very impressively to illustrate the nature of the conflict which is now being waged by the Church of Christ. In David's days, the nation might be likened to one great camp; every man was a soldier, or in some way ministering to the interests of the enterprise. Even in time of peace, what may be called his militia amounted to a host of well-nigh 300,000. Now, the Church of Christ, viewed in this light, is still far behind in the development of its resources. Her chief defects refer to prayer, the preaching of the Word to the perishing the children of Ephraim: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

15 The twelfth captain, for the twelfth month, was ^aHeldai the Netophathite, of ^bOthniel: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

16 ^c Furthermore, over the tribes of Israel; the ruler of the Reubenites was Eliezer the son of Zichri: of the Simeonites; Shephatiah the son of Maachah:

17 Of the Levites; Hashabiah the son of Kemuel: ^d of the Aaronites; Zadok:

18 Of Judah; ^e Elihu, one of the brethren of David: of Issachar; Omri the son of Michael:

19 Of Zebulun; Ishmaiah the son of Obadiah: of Naphtali; Jerimoth the son of Azriel:

20 Of the children of Ephraim; Hoshea the son of Azariah: of the half-tribe of Manasseh; Joel the son of Pedaiah:

21 Of the half-tribe of Manasseh in Gilead; Iddo the son of Zechariah: of Benjamin; Jaasiel the son of ^f Abner:

22 Of Dan; Azareel the son of Jeroham. These were the princes of the tribes of Israel.

23 ^g But David took not the number of them from twenty years old and under; because the LORD had said ^h he would increase Israel like to the stars of the heavens.

24 Joab the son of Zeruiah ⁱ began to number, but he finished not, because there fell wrath for it against Israel; neither ^j was the number put in the account of the Chronicles of king David.

25 ^k And over ^l the king's treasures was Bazaemeth the son of Adiel: and over ^m the storehouses in the fields, in the cities, and in the villages, and in the castles, was Jehonathan the son of Uziah:

26 And over them that did the work of the field, for tillage of the ground, was Ezri the son of Chelub:

27 And over the vineyards was Shimei the Ramathite: over ⁿ the increase of the vineyards for the wine-cellars was Zabdi the Shiphmite:

28 And ^o over the olive-trees, and the sycamore-trees that were in the low plains, was Baal-hanan the Gederite: and over the cellars of oil was Joash:

29 And over the herds that fed in ^p Sharon was Shitrai the Sharonite: and

CHAPTER XXVIII

1 David exhorteth to fear God. 9, 20 He encourageth Solomon to build the temple.

AND David ^a assembled all the princes of Israel, the princes of the tribes, and the captains of the companies that ministered to the king by course, and the captains over the thousands, and captains over the hundreds, and the stewards over all the ^b substance and possession of the king, ^c and of his sons, with ^d the ^e officers, and with the mighty men, and with all the valiant men, unto Jerusalem.

2 Then David the king ^f stood up upon his feet, and said, Hear me, ^g my brethren, and my people: As for me, ^h I had in mine heart to build an house of ⁱ rest for the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and for ^j the footstool of our God, and had made ready for the building:

3 But God said unto me, ^k Thou shalt not build an house for my name, because thou ^l hast been a man of war, and hast shed ^m blood.

4 Howbeit the LORD God of Israel ⁿ chose me before all the house of my father to be king over Israel for ever: for he hath ^o chosen Judah to be the ruler; and of the house of Judah the house of my father; and ^p among the sons of my father he liked me, to make ^q me king over all Israel:

5 And of ^r all my sons (for the LORD hath given me many sons) ^s he hath chosen Solomon my son ^t to sit upon the throne of the kingdom of the LORD over Israel.

at home, the religious teaching of the young, financial arrangements, and the diffusion of Christian knowledge in heathen lands. The number of Christian Churches which, tested by the Scripture standard on these points, would pass muster, although considerable, is comparatively small, and hence the slow progress which Christianity is making in the world. The feeling of multitudes would appear to be, that little if anything more is required in the way of evangelisation. They attach no importance to the prayer of David relative to the dominion of the Messiah, "Let the whole earth be filled with his glory." They are only concerned about their own personal salvation, and not very intensely even about that. It is hardly to be expected that persons who can look on a "world lying in wickedness," without emotion, should be filled with very great anxiety how they themselves may escape from the wrath to come. They are slow to believe that the Christian life is really a conflict; and accordingly they entertain no adequate conception of the injunction, to "fight the good fight of faith," and "lay hold of eternal life."

Chap. XXVIII. 1-8. Things now began to assume, in the eye of David, a very solemn aspect. He clearly perceived that his life and labours were drawing to a close, and hence he made every preparation for the great event. Having assembled the people, acting on the principle of giving "line upon line," he rehearsed to them the great facts of his own history, especially reminding them of the Divine communications which had been made to him concerning the Temple. Ver. 9, 10. Having, with great dignity and affection, exhorted the heads of the nation, he addressed himself to Solomon his son, whom he urged, with profound wisdom and of the 'gold of Ophir, and seven thousand talents of refined silver, to overlay the walls of the houses withal:

5 The gold for things of gold, and the silver for things of silver, and for all manner of work to be made by the hands of artificers. And who then is willing to ¹consecrate his service this day unto the LORD?

6 ¶ Then ¹the chief of the fathers and princes of the tribes of Israel, and the captains of thousands and of hundreds, with the rulers over the king's work, offered willingly,

7 And gave, for the service of the house of God, of gold, five thousand talents and ten thousand drams; and of silver, ten thousand talents; and of brass, eighteen thousand talents; and one hundred thousand talents of iron.

8 And they with whom precious stones were found gave them to the treasure of the house of the LORD, by the hand of ^mJehiel the Gershonite.

9 Then the people rejoiced, for that ⁿthey offered willingly, because with ^operfect heart they offered willingly to the LORD: and ^pDavid the king also rejoiced with great joy.

10 ¶ Wherefore ^qDavid blessed the LORD before all the congregation: and David said, 'Blessed be thou, ^rLORD God of Israel ^sour father, for ever and ever.

11 Thine, O LORD, ^tis the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the ^umajesty: for ^vall that ^wis in the heaven and in the earth ^xis thine; ^ythine is the kingdom, O LORD, and thou art ^zexalted as head above all.

12 Both ^ariches and honour ^bcome of thee, and thou ^creignest over all; and in thine hand ^dis ^epower and might; and in thine hand ^fit is to make great, and to give strength unto all.

13 Now therefore, our God, ^gwe thank thee, and praise thy glorious name.

14 But ^hwho ⁱam I, and what ^jis my people, ^kthat we should ^lbe able to offer so ^mwillingly after this sort? for ⁿall things ^ocome of thee, and of ^pthine own have we given thee.

15 For ^qwe are strangers before thee, and sojourners, as ^rwere all our fathers: ^sour days on the earth are as a shadow, and ^tthere is none ^uabiding.

16 O LORD our God, ^vall this store that we have prepared to build thee an house for thine holy name ^wcometh of thine hand, and ^xis all thine own.

18 O ^eLORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, our fathers, ^fkeep this for ever ^gin the imagination of the thoughts of the heart of thy people, and ^hprepare their heart unto thee:

19 And ⁱgive unto Solomon my son a perfect heart, to keep thy commandments, thy testimonies, and thy statutes, and to do all ^jthese things, and to build the palace, for the which I have made provision.

20 ¶ And David said to all the congregation, ^kNow bless the LORD your God. And all the congregation blessed the LORD God of their fathers, and ^lbowed down their heads, and ^mworshipped the LORD, and the king.

21 And they ⁿsacrificed sacrifices unto the LORD, and offered burnt-offerings unto the LORD, on the morrow after that day, even a thousand bullocks, a thousand rams, and a thousand lambs, with their ^odrink-offerings, and sacrifices in abundance for all Israel;

22 And did ^peat and drink before the LORD on that day with great gladness: and they made Solomon the son of David king the second time, and ^qanointed him unto the LORD to be the chief governor, and Zadok to be priest.

23 ¶ Then Solomon ^rsat on the throne of the LORD as king instead of David his father, and prospered; and ^sall Israel obeyed him.

24 And all the princes, and the mighty men, and all the sons likewise of king David, ^tsubmitted themselves unto Solomon the king.

25 And the LORD ^umagnified Solomon exceedingly in the sight of all Israel, and ^vbestowed upon him ^wsuch royal majesty as had not been on any king before him in Israel.

26 ¶ Thus David the son of Jesse reigned over all Israel.

27 And the time that he reigned over Israel ^xwas ^yforty years; seven years reigned he in Hebron, and thirty and three years reigned he in Jerusalem.

28 And he died in ^za good old age, full of days, riches, and honour; and Solomon his son reigned in his stead.

29 Now ^athe acts of David the king, force in the expression, "I have set my affection to the house of my God." Having himself given to the extent of his means, that is, to the extent of many millions, he then stimulated his people to follow his example, which they did in a manner worthy of their king. They gave of gold and silver upwards of twenty-six millions sterling, bearing a proportion to the gifts of David of five to three, which shews the unparalleled munificence of the king. Among the happiest hours of David's life was that in which he beheld the people offering with such willingness, and in such abundance. The song of thanksgiving, composed for the occasion, is a burst of grateful, adoring joy, inferior to nothing in the Book of Psalms. Ver. 20-30. The festivities of the occasion in connexion with sacrifice, were on the same magnificent scale with the contribution. No such occasion before had passed over the head of the nation, and with the exception of the opening of the Temple, none such ever passed again. David's work was now done, and hence he retired to the grave, full of age, riches, and honour, while his son Solomon ascended the throne, the splendid type of a King greater than Solomon. When the earth shall come to resemble, in its antitypical character, the state of the Jewish nation at the moment we speak of, then first and last, behold, they are written in the ⁸book of Samuel the seer, and in the book of ¹Nathan the prophet, and in the book of Gad the seer,

THE SECOND BOOK OF THE CHRONICLES.

This Book comprises the reigns of all the Kings of the House of David over Judah, after the separation of the Ten Tribes, down to Judah's captivity in Babylon, extending to the deliverance of Israel by Cyrus, including a period of at least 416 years, and, perhaps, somewhat more.

CHAPTER I.

¹ The solemn offering of Solomon at Gibeon. ⁷ His choice of wisdom is blessed by God. ¹³ His strength and wealth.

AND Solomon the son of David ^awas strengthened in his kingdom, and the ^bLORD his God was with him, and ^cmagnified him exceedingly.

² Then Solomon spake unto all Israel, ^dto the captains of thousands and of hundreds, and to the judges, and to every governor in all Israel, ^ethe chief of the fathers.

³ So Solomon, and all the congregation with him, went to the high place that was at Gibeon; for there was ^fthe tabernacle of the congregation of God, which Moses, the servant of the LORD, had made in the wilderness.

⁴ But ^hthe ark of God had David brought up from Kirjath-jearim to the place which David had prepared for it: ⁱfor he had pitched a tent for it at Jerusalem.

⁶ And Solomon went up thither to the brasen altar before the LORD, which was at the tabernacle of the congregation, and offered ^ma thousand burnt-offerings upon it.

⁷ ¶ In that night did God appear unto Solomon, and said unto him, ⁿAsk what I shall give thee.

⁸ And Solomon said unto God, ^oThou hast shewed great mercy unto David my father, and hast made me to reign in his stead.

⁹ Now, O LORD God, ^plet thy promise unto David my father be established: for thou hast made me king over a people ^qlike the dust of the earth in multitude.

¹⁰ Give me now wisdom and knowledge, that I may go out and come in before this people: ^bfor who can judge this thy people, that is so great?

¹¹ And God said to Solomon, Because ^cthis was in thine heart, and thou hast not asked riches, wealth, or honour, nor the life of thine enemies, neither yet hast asked long life; but hast asked wisdom and knowledge for thyself, ^dthat thou mayest judge my people, over whom I have made thee king:

¹³ ¶ Then Solomon came from his journey to the high place that was at Gibeon to Jerusalem, from before the tabernacle of the congregation, and reigned over Israel.

¹⁴ And ^gSolomon gathered chariots and horsemen: and he had a thousand and four hundred chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen, which he placed in the chariot cities, and with the king at Jerusalem.

¹⁵ And ^hthe king ⁱmade silver and gold at Jerusalem as plentiful as stones, and cedar-trees made he as the ^jsycamore-trees that are in the vale for abundance.

¹⁶ And ^kSolomon had horses brought out of Egypt, and linen yarn: the king's merchants received the linen yarn at a price.

will be realised the language of David himself concerning the Lord Jesus, "All nations shall be blessed in him, and all nations shall call him blessed."

Chap. I. 1-17. The appearance of the Lord to Solomon was an event of the deepest interest, forasmuch as it served to test the spirit of the youthful sovereign, and obtained certain promises of a nature eminently calculated to support and encourage him in the great work on which he had entered. He commenced his reign with a sense of the responsibility which attached to him, and of his own utter insufficiency for the discharge of functions so great and various. Nothing can be more in character than his request; and nothing could more illustrate the Divine bounty, grace, and kindness than the assurances tendered. Had he only closed as he began, how different had been his history, and how worthy of his illustrious parent, whose own light shone more and more unto the perfect day! There is much in this opening chapter of Solomon's history calculated to instruct the people of God. It shews them that in everything the claims of the Lord are first to be considered. First God, then the creature

AND Solomon ^adetermined to build an house ^bfor the name of the LORD, and ^can house for his kingdom.

2 And Solomon ^dtold out threescore and ten thousand men to bear burdens, and fourscore thousand to hew in the mountain, and three thousand and six hundred to oversee them.

3 ¶ And Solomon sent to ^eHiram the king of Tyre, saying, ^f'As thou didst deal with David my father, and didst send him cedars to build him an house to dwell therein, ^geven so deal with me.

4 Behold, ^h'I build an house to the name of the LORD my God, ⁱto dedicate it to him, and ^jto burn before him ^k'sweet incense, and for ^l'the continual shewbread, and for ^m'the burnt-offerings morning and evening, on the sabbaths, and on the new-moons, and on ⁿ'the solemn feasts of the LORD our God. 5 And the house which I build is ^o'great; for ^p'great is our God above all gods.

6 But ^q'who ^r'is able to build him an house, seeing the heaven, and heaven of heavens, cannot contain him? ^s'who am I then, that I should build him an house, ^t'save only to burn sacrifice before him?

9 Even to prepare me timber in abundance: for the house which I am about to build ^{ab}'shall be ^{ac}'wonderful great.

10 And, behold, ^{ad}'I will give to thy servants, the hewers that cut timber, twenty thousand measures of beaten wheat, and twenty thousand measures of barley, and twenty thousand ^{ae}'baths of wine, and twenty thousand baths of oil.

^c Gen. 22. 14.

11 ¶ Then Hiram the king of Tyre answered in writing, which he sent to Solomon, ^a'Because the LORD hath loved his people, he hath made thee king over them.

12 ^bHiram said moreover, Blessed be the LORD God of Israel, ^c'that made heaven and earth, who hath given to David the king a wise son, ^d'endued with prudence and understanding, that might build ^e'an house for the LORD, and an house for his kingdom.

13 And now I have sent a cunning man, endued with understanding, ^f'of Hiram my father's;

14 ^g'The son of a woman of the daughters of Dan, and his father ^hwas a man of Tyre, ⁱ'skilful to work in gold, and in silver, in brass, in iron, in stone, and in timber, in purple, in blue, and in fine linen, and in crimson; also to grave any manner of graving, and to find out every device which shall be put to him, with thy cunning men, and with the cunning men of my lord David thy father.

15 Now therefore the wheat, and the barley, the oil, and the wine, ^j'which my lord hath spoken of, let him send unto his servants:

16 And ^k'we will cut wood out of Lebanon, as ^l'much as thou shalt need; and we will bring it to thee in floats by sea to ^mJoppa, and thou shalt carry it up to Jerusalem.

17 ¶ And Solomon ⁿ'numbered all ^o'the strangers that ^pwere in the land of Israel ^q'after the numbering wherewith David his father had numbered them; and they were found an hundred and fifty thousand, and three thousand and six hundred.

18 And he set ^r'threescore and ten thousand of them to be bearers of burdens, and fourscore thousand to be hewers in the mountain, and three thousand and six hundred overseers to set the people a work.

CHAPTER III.

1 The place and time of building the temple. 3 The measure and ornaments of the house. 10 The cherubims.

THEN ^a'Solomon began to build the house of the LORD at Jerusalem ^bin mount Moriah, ^c'where the LORD appeared unto David his father, in the place —first the soul, then the body. If all be right for eternity, there need be no very great solicitude as to time.

Chap. II. 1-10. Solomon having thoroughly imbibed his father's spirit, that the one great thing to be attended to was the building of the Temple of the Lord, lost no time in communicating with Hiram, who entertained his application with the most intense cordiality. Ver. 11-18. Hiram speaks as a man who knew the truth, and who worshipped the God of Israel, which may account for the affectionate interest he took in Solomon, as also in the history of David. The number of strangers in the country, upwards of 153,000 men, was very great, and the wise king was at special pains to turn them to account, supplying them at once with labour and with bread, and strengthening himself by their physical power. This people would seem to have had no particular vocation, but to have been a sort of wanderers, or emigrants, in pursuit of whatever might turn up for their advantage. Solomon's mode of dealing with them indicates his peculiarly practical turn of mind. While he did this, it was clearly not for want of labourers among his own people, for he acknowledges in his prayer that they "were like the dust of the earth in multitude." We may therefore view it as a master-stroke of policy to employ this immense army of idle strangers, in regular labour, which would keep them out of mischief. Were governments to collect the fugitives and the vagabonds of the nations, and provide them with work and bread, we should require fewer prisons and penitentiaries, hulks and penal colonies. In this, as in everything else, the Scriptures are the great code of social wisdom.

Chap. III. 1-17. So stupendous were the preparations of Solomon, that notwithstanding the multitudes that David had prepared in the thrashing-floor of ^oOrnan the Jebusite.

2 And he began to build ^din the second day of the second month, in the fourth year of his reign.

3 ¶ Now these are the things wherein ^oSolomon was ²instructed for the building of the house of God. ^rThe length by cubits after the first measure was three-score cubits, and the breadth twenty cubits.

4 And the porch that was in the front of the house, the length of it was according to the breadth of the house, twenty cubits, and the height was an hundred and twenty: and he overlaid it within with pure gold.

5 And ^othe greater house he ceiled with fir-tree, which he overlaid with fine gold, and set thereon palm-trees and chains.

6 And he ^ogarnished the house with ^hprecious stones for beauty; and the gold was gold of Parvaim.

7 He ^ooverlaid also the house, the beams, the posts, and the walls thereof, and the doors thereof, with gold; and ^hgraved cherubims on the walls.

8 ¶ And he made ¹the most holy house, the length whereof was according to the breadth of the house, twenty cubits, and the breadth thereof twenty cubits: and he overlaid it with fine gold, amounting to six hundred talents.

9 And the weight of the nails was fifty shekels of gold. And he overlaid the upper chambers with gold.

10 And in the most holy house he made ^mtwo cherubims of ^himage-work, and overlaid them with gold.

11 And the wings of the cherubims were twenty cubits long; one wing of the one cherub was five cubits, reaching to the wall of the house; and the other wing was likewise five cubits, reaching to the wing of the other cherub.

12 And one wing of the other cherub was five cubits, reaching to the wall of the house; and the other wing was five cubits also, joining to the wing of the other cherub.

13 The wings of these cherubims spread themselves forth twenty cubits: and they stood on their feet, and their faces were ^hinward.

14 ¶ And he made ²the vail of blue, and purple, and crimson, and fine linen, and ^hwrought cherubims thereon.

15 ¶ Also he made before the house ^otwo pillars of thirty and five cubits

CHAPTER IV.

1 The altar of brass. 2 The molten sea. 6 The ten lavers, candlesticks, and tables. 19 The instruments of gold.

MOREOVER, he made ^aan altar of brass, twenty cubits the length thereof, and twenty cubits the breadth thereof, and ten cubits the height thereof.

2 ¶ Also he made ^aa molten sea of ten cubits from ¹brim to brim, round in compass, and five cubits the height thereof; and a line of thirty cubits did compass it round about.

3 And under it was ^cthe similitude of oxen, which did compass it round about; ten in a cubit, compassing the sea round about. Two rows of oxen were cast, when it was cast.

4 It ^dstood upon twelve oxen, ³three looking toward the north, and three looking toward the west, and three looking toward the south, and three looking toward the east: and the sea was set above upon them, and all their hinder parts were inward.

5 And the thickness of it was an hand-breadth, and the brim of it like the work of the brim of a cup, ²with flowers of lilies; and it received and held ³three thousand baths.

6 ¶ He made also ^oten lavers, and put five on the right hand, and five on the left, to wash in them: ^osuch things as they offered for the burnt-offering they washed in them; ^hbut the sea was for the priests to wash in.

7 And he made ¹ten candlesticks of gold ^aaccording to their form, and set them in the temple, five on the right hand, and five on the left.

8 He made also ¹ten tables, and placed them in the temple, five on the right side, and five on the left: and he made an hundred ^hbasons of gold.

9 ¶ Furthermore, he made ^mthe court of the priests, and the great court, and doors for the court, and overlaid the doors of them with brass.

he employed, it was not till the fourth year of his reign that he commenced operations. Here, then, is an event which may be likened to the laying of the foundations of the Church of Christ, the spiritual temple, not made with hands. Many previous events derive special significance from this enterprise. The temple was built at Jerusalem, where the Lord had been pleased to put his name, and on Mount Moriah, where he appeared to his faithful servant, and answered him by fire. There atonement was made on a former occasion; and there again atoning sacrifices were to be perpetuated. The Christian is here forcibly reminded of God in Christ as the true temple, in all points infinitely more glorious than the wondrous structure of Solomon. But, while God is in Christ, Christ is in his people, every one of whom is a spiritual stone, occupying a place in the true Church, which is the "habitation of God through the Spirit." Thus viewed, these events are richly fraught with Gospel instruction, calculated alike to encourage and to edify the people of God.

Chap. IV. 1-22. The brasen altar is entitled to special consideration, since all the sacrifices were to be offered thereon, and sanctified by it. This reminds us

10 And he set the sea on the right side of the east end, over against the south.

11 ¶ And Hiram made the pots, and the shovels, and the ⁵basons. And Hiram ⁶finished the work that he was to make for king Solomon for the house of God;

12 To wit, the two pillars, and ²the pommels, and the chapters which were on the top of the two pillars; and the two wreaths to cover the two pommels of the chapters which were on the top of the pillars;

13 And ⁹four hundred pomegranates on the two wreaths; two rows of pomegranates on each wreath, to cover the two pommels of the chapters which were upon ⁷the pillars.

14 He made also bases, and ⁸lavers made he upon the bases;

15 One sea, and twelve oxen under it.

16 The ⁹pots also, and the shovels, and the ⁴flesh-hooks, and all their instruments, did ⁷Hiram his father make to king Solomon, for the house of the LORD, of ⁹bright brass.

17 In the plain of Jordan did the king cast them, in the ¹clay ground between Succoth and ²Zeredathah.

18 Thus Solomon made all these vessels in great abundance: for ⁴the weight of the brass could not be found out.

19 ¶ And Solomon made ²all the vessels that were for the house of God, ²the golden altar also, and ⁷the tables whereon the shew-bread was set;

20 Moreover, ²the candlesticks with their lamps, that they should burn after the manner before ²the oracle, of pure gold;

21 And ²the flowers, and the lamps, and the tongs, made he of gold, and that ²perfect gold;

22 And the ²snuffers, and the ³basons, and the spoons, and the censers of pure gold: and the entry of the house, the inner doors thereof for the most holy place, and the doors of the house of the temple, were of gold.

CHAPTER V.

1 The dedicated treasures. 2 The bringing up of the ark of the covenant. 11 God being praised, giveth a sign of his favour.

THUS all the work that Solomon made for the house of the LORD was finished: and Solomon ²brought in all the things that David his father had dedicated; and the silver, and the gold, of the Great Sacrifice which was shadowed forth, and ultimately presented on Calvary for the destruction of death, and the salvation of a lost world. The very smoke was not without significance; as it ascended to heaven, the hearts of believers might well accompany it to the mercy-seat. Our devotions are true and right just in proportion as Christ occupies the mind. As without shedding of blood there is no remission, so they who have obtained forgiveness through it are ever to keep it in remembrance. The molten sea also taught its lessons. Water was placed there for the purpose of priestly ablution, clearly prefiguring "the washing of regeneration, and the renewing of the Holy Ghost." That water might remove stains from the body, but the blood of Christ only can do so from the soul; and there and all the instruments, put he among the treasures of the house of God.

2 ¶ Then Solomon assembled the elders of Israel, and all the heads of the tribes, ²the chief of the fathers of the children of Israel, unto Jerusalem, to bring up the ark of the covenant of the LORD ⁴out of the city of David, which is Zion.

3 Wherefore all the men of Israel assembled themselves unto the king ²in the feast which was in the seventh month.

4 And all the elders of Israel came; and ²the Levites took up the ark.

5 And they brought up the ark, and ²the tabernacle of the congregation, and all the holy vessels that were in the tabernacle; these did the priests and the Levites bring up.

6 Also ²king Solomon, and all the congregation of Israel that were assembled unto him before the ark, sacrificed sheep and oxen, which could not be told nor numbered for multitude.

7 And the priests brought in the ark of the covenant of the LORD unto his place, ¹to the oracle of the house, into the most holy place, even under the wings of the cherubims:

8 For the cherubims spread forth their wings over the place of the ark, and the cherubims covered the ark and ²the staves thereof above.

9 And they drew out the staves of the ark, that the ends of the staves were seen from the ark before the oracle, but they were not seen without. And ¹there it is unto this day.

10 There was nothing in the ark, ¹save the two tables which Moses put therein at Horeb, ²when ²the LORD made a covenant with the children of Israel, when they came out of Egypt.

11 ¶ And it came to pass, when the priests were come out of the holy place; (for all the priests that were ²present were ²sanctified, and did not then ⁹wait by course:

12 Also the Levites which were the singers, all of them of Asaph, of Heman, of Jeduthun, with their sons and their brethren, being ²arrayed in white linen, having cymbals, and psalteries, and harps, stood at the east end of the altar, and with them ²an hundred and twenty priests sounding with trumpets;)

is no corruption it cannot cleanse. The gold within is strikingly significant of internal purity, and conformity to the image of Christ. "Without holiness no man can see the Lord." As we approximate death, the grave, and paradise, we ought to be constantly growing in "meekness for the inheritance of the saints in light."

Chap. V. 1-14. All these matters have a spiritual bearing, and in that light only are they now valuable. The Lord Jesus was clearly typified by the Ark, and as such it was a token of the Divine presence. As then, so now, the Lord is ever with and among his people "the hope of glory." The promise, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world," is like Him who gave it, immutable, "the same yesterday,

13 It came even to pass, as the trumpeters and singers were ^{as} one, to make one sound to be heard in praising and thanking the LORD, and when they lifted up their voice with the trumpets, and cymbals, and instruments of musick, and praised the LORD, saying, For ^{he} is good; for his mercy endureth for ever: that ^{then} the house was filled with a cloud, even the house of the LORD;

14 So that the priests could not stand to minister by reason of the cloud: for the glory of the LORD had filled the house of God.

CHAPTER VI.

1 Solomon having blessed the people, blaseth God. 12 His prayer at the consecration of the temple.

THEN said Solomon, "The LORD hath said that he would dwell in the thick darkness.

2 But ^I have built an house of habitation for thee, and a place for thy dwelling for ever.

3 ¶ And the king ^{turned} his face, and ^{blessed} the whole congregation of Israel: (and ^{all} the congregation of Israel stood:)

4 And he said, "Blessed be the LORD God of Israel, ^{who} hath with his hands fulfilled that which he spake with his mouth to my father David, saying,

5 ^{Since} the day that I brought forth my people out of the land of Egypt, I chose no city among all the tribes of Israel to build an house in, that ^{my} name might be there; ^{neither} chose I any man to be a ruler over my people Israel:

6 But I have chosen Jerusalem, that my name might be there; and have ^{chosen} David to be over my people Israel.

7 Now, ^{it} was in the heart of David my father to build an house for the name of the LORD God of Israel:

8 But the LORD said to David my father, Forasmuch as it was in thine heart to build an house for my name, ^{thou} didst well in that it was in thine heart:

9 Notwithstanding thou shalt not build the house; but thy son, which shall come forth out of thy loins, he shall build the house for my name.

10 The LORD therefore hath performed his word that he hath spoken; for ^I am risen up in the room of David my father, and am set on the throne of Israel, as the LORD promised, and have built the house for the name of the LORD God of Israel:

11 And in it have ^I put the ark, wherein is the covenant of the LORD, that he made with the children of Israel.

12 ¶ And he stood before the altar of the LORD, in the presence of all the congregation of Israel, and ^{spread} forth his hands,

14 And said, O LORD God of Israel, there is ^{no} God like thee in the heaven, nor in the earth; which ^{keepest} covenant, and ^{showest} mercy unto thy servants that ^{walk} before thee with all their hearts:

15 Thou which hast kept with thy servant David my father that which thou hast promised him; and spakest with thy mouth, and hast fulfilled it with thine hand, as it is this day.

16 Now therefore, O LORD God of Israel, ^{keep} with thy servant David my father that which thou hast promised him, saying, ^{There} shall not fail thee a man in my sight to sit upon the throne of Israel; yet so that thy children take heed to their way ^{to} walk in my law, as thou hast walked before me.

17 Now then, O LORD God of Israel, ^{let} thy word be verified, which thou hast spoken unto thy servant David.

18 (But ^{will} God in very deed dwell with men on the earth? Behold, ^{heaven}, and the heaven of heavens, cannot contain thee; how much less this house which I have built!)

to-day, and for ever." The singers remind us of our duty, —the one song required oneness of heart; and this is one of the conditions of acceptable praise and prayer. In proportion to our unity is the proof of our love, and our love is demonstrative of our sonship. It is the fruit of the indwelling Spirit, and a part of the Divine nature.

"He that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God, and God in him."

Chap. VI. 1-42. Having in our remarks on First Kings, Chapter viii., pointed to the peculiar qualities, beauties, and excellences of Solomon's prayer, we need return and confess thy name, and pray and make supplication before thee ¹in this house:

25 Then hear thou from the heavens, and ²forgive the sin of thy people Israel, and bring them again unto the land which thou gavest to them and to their fathers.

26 ¶ When ³the heaven is shut up, and there is no rain, because they have sinned against thee; yet if they pray toward this place, and confess thy name, and ⁴turn from their sin, when thou dost afflict them:

27 Then hear thou from heaven, and forgive the sin of thy servants, and of thy people Israel, ⁵when thou hast taught them the ⁶'good way wherein they should walk; and ⁷'send rain upon thy land, which thou hast given unto thy people for an inheritance.

28 ¶ If there be ⁸'dearth in the land, if there be pestilence, if there be blasting, or mildew, ⁹'locusts, or caterpillars; if their enemies besiege them in the ¹⁰'cities of their land; whatsoever sore, or whatsoever sickness ¹¹there be:

30 Then hear thou from heaven thy dwelling-place, and forgive, and ¹⁵'render unto every man according unto all his ways whose heart thou knowest; (for thou only knowest the hearts of the children of men;)

31 That they may ¹⁶'fear thee, to walk in thy ways, ¹⁷'so long as they live in the land which thou gavest unto our fathers.

32 ¶ Moreover, concerning ¹⁸'the stranger, which is not of thy people Israel, but ¹⁹'is come from a far country for thy great name's sake, and ²⁰'thy mighty hand, and thy stretched-out arm; if they come and pray in this house:

33 Then hear thou from the heavens, ²¹even from thy dwelling-place, and do according to all that the stranger calleth to thee for; ²²'that all people of the earth may know thy name, and fear thee, as ²³doth thy people Israel, and may know that ²⁴'this house, which I have built, is called by thy name.

34 ¶ If ²⁵'thy people go out to war against their enemies by the way that thou shalt send them, and they pray unto thee ²⁶'toward this city which thou hast chosen, and the house which I have built for thy name;

CHAPTER VII.

1 God giving testimony to Solomon's prayer, the people worship him. 5 Solomon's sacrifice.

NOW, ¹'when Solomon had made an end of praying, ²'the fire came down from heaven, and consumed the burnt-offering and the sacrifices; and ³'the glory of the LORD filled the house.

2 And ⁴'the priests could not enter into the house of the LORD, because the glory of the LORD had filled the LORD's house.

3 And when all the children of Israel saw how the fire came down, and the glory of the LORD upon the house, ⁵'they bowed themselves with their faces to the ground upon the pavement, and worshipped, and praised the LORD, ⁶saying, 'For he is good; for his mercy endureth for ever.

4 ¶ Then the king and all the people offered sacrifices before the LORD.

5 And king Solomon offered ⁷'a sacrifice of twenty and two thousand oxen, and an hundred and twenty thousand sheep. So the king and all the people ⁸'dedicated the house of God.

6 And ⁹'the priests waited on their offices; the Levites also with instruments of musick of the LORD, which David the not repeat them here. It is a prayer which, for depth, comprehensiveness, and sublimity, surpasses everything contained in the Old Testament Scriptures, and is only inferior to the prayer of the Son of God himself contained in the Gospel by John.

Chap. VII. 1-11. This was the most wondrous thing of the kind that ever occurred even in Judea. The festivity was on a scale inculcably surpassing everything which had previously occurred. Ver. 12-22. The heavenly visit made to the king that night met all the king had made to praise the LORD, *because his mercy endureth for ever, when David praised by their ¹ministry; and ¹the priests sounded trumpets before them, and all Israel stood.

7 Moreover, Solomon ^mhallowed the middle of the court that was before the house of the LORD: for there he offered burnt-offerings, and the fat of the peace-offerings, because the brazen altar which Solomon had made was not able to receive the burnt-offerings, and the meat-offerings, and the fat.

8 ¶ Also at the same time Solomon ^mkept the feast seven days, and all Israel with him, a very great congregation, from ^othe entering in of Hamath unto the river of Egypt.

9 And in the eighth day they made a ²solemn assembly; for they kept the dedication of the altar ⁷seven days, and the feast seven days.

10 And on the three and twentieth day of the seventh month he sent the people away into their tents, ⁴glad and merry in heart for the goodness that the LORD had shewed unto David, and to Solomon, and to Israel his people.

11 Thus Solomon finished the house of the LORD, and the king's house: and ¹all that came into Solomon's heart to make in the house of the LORD, and in his own house, he prosperously effected.

12 ¶ And ¹the LORD appeared to Solomon by night, and said unto him, ¹I have heard thy prayer, and ^uhave chosen this place to myself for an house of sacrifice.

1 Solomon's buildings. 7 The Gentiles made tributaries.

12 Solomon's yearly sacrifices.

AND it came to pass ²at the end of twenty years, wherein Solomon had built the house of the LORD, and his own house,

2 That ^hthe cities which Hiram had restored to Solomon, Solomon built them, and caused the children of Israel to dwell there.

3 And Solomon went to ^oHamath-zobah, and prevailed against it.

4 And ^hhe built Tadmor in the wilderness, and all the store-cities which he built in Hamath.

5 Also he built ^oBeth-horon the upper, and Beth-horon the nether, fenced cities, with walls, gates, and bars; necessities of the case, supplying encouragement the most ample for both the king and the nation to hold on in the way of well-doing, and presenting, in the shape of a threatening, a barrier against everything approaching to evil, such as ought, in every age, to have restrained them. The chapter supplies extraordinary encouragement to persevering supplication. Solomon had but to ask in order to receive; and so it is with all the children of God. The review of the history of the Church of Christ on earth—and, could it be correctly got at, with rare exceptions, the history of each true believer—would be particularly humbling. It has been one incessant course of unfaithfulness, inconsistency, ingratitude, and rebellion! When the Lord has sent prosperity, it has been generally abused, and rendered subservient rather to sin than to holiness. Fatherly chastisement has been the consequence, which has, through mercy, been followed by repentance; forgiveness has succeeded, accompanied with fresh mercies; and yet, strange and sad to say, the whole course of transgression has been run over again! How much does the Christian require to pray, "Hold thou me up, and I shall be safe!"

Chap. VIII. 1-6. Tadmor, now known as Palmyra, is a place noted in history. From small beginnings, it arose to be the capital of a province, which sent 80,000 men to join the Assyrian army. Its very ruins exhibit a wall eleven miles in circumference. Ver. 7-13. Solomon's determination in ver. 11, that his wife should not dwell in the house of David, king of Israel, because the places were holy whereunto the Ark of the Lord had come, is not a little remarkable. The queen was a 9 But ^oof the children of Israel did Solomon make no servants for his work; but ^pthey were men of war, and chief of his captains, and captains of his chariots and horsemen.

10 And these were the chief of king Solomon's officers, even ^qtwo hundred and fifty, that bare rule over the people.

11 ¶ And Solomon brought up the daughter of Pharaoh out of the city of David unto the house that he had built for her: for he said, My wife shall not dwell in the house of David king of Israel, because the places are ^rholy, whereunto the ark of the LORD hath come.

12 ¶ Then Solomon offered burnt-offerings unto the LORD ^son the altar of the LORD, which he had built before the porch;

13 Even after a certain rate ^tevery day, offering according to the commandment of Moses, on the sabbaths, and on the new-moons, and on the solemn feasts, ^uthree times in the year, even in the feast of unleavened bread, and in the feast of weeks, and in the feast of tabernacles.

14 ¶ And he appointed, according to the order of David his father, ^vthe courses of the priests to their service, and the Levites to their charges, to praise and minister before the priests, as the duty of every day required; the porters also by their courses at every gate: for ^wso ^xhad David ^ythe man of God commanded.

15 And they departed not from the commandment of the king unto the priests and Levites, concerning any matter, or concerning ^zthe treasures.

16 ¶ Now all the work of Solomon was prepared unto the day of the foundation of the house of the LORD, and until it was finished: so the house of the LORD was perfected.

17 ¶ Then went Solomon to ^aEzion-geber, and to ^bEloth, at the sea-side in the land of Edom.

18 And ^cHuram sent him, by the hands of his servants, ships, and servants that had knowledge of the sea; and they went with the servants of Solomon to Ophir, and took thence four hundred and fifty talents of gold, and brought them to king Solomon.

CHAPTER IX.

1 The queen of Sheba admireth Solomon's wisdom. 18 Solomon's riches. 29 His death.

AND ^awhen the queen of ^bSheba heard of ^cthe fame of Solomon, she came to prove Solomon ^dwith hard questions at Jerusalem, with a very great company, and ^ecamels that bare ^fspices, and gold in abundance, and precious stones: and when she was come to Solomon, ^gshe communed with him of all that was in her heart.

2 And Solomon ^htold her all her questions: and ⁱthere was nothing hid from Solomon which he told her not.

3 And when the queen of Sheba had ^jseen the wisdom of Solomon, and ^kthe house that he had built,

4 And ^lthe meat of his table, and ^mthe sitting of his servants, and the attendance of his ministers, and their apparel; his ⁿcup-bearers also, and their apparel; and ^ohis ascent by which he went up into the house of the LORD; ^pthere was no more spirit in her.

5 And she said to the king, It was ^qa true ^rreport which I heard in mine own land of thine ^sacts, and of thy wisdom:

6 Howbeit ^tI believed not their words, until I came, and mine eyes had seen it; and, behold, ^uthe one half of the greatness of thy wisdom was not told me: for thou ^vexceedest the fame that I heard.

7 ^wHappy are thy men, and happy are these thy servants, which stand continually before thee, and hear thy wisdom.

8 ^xBlessed be the LORD thy God, ^ywhich delighted in thee, to set thee on his throne, to be king for the LORD thy God: ^zbecause thy God loved Israel, to establish them for ever, therefore made he thee king over them, ^ato do judgment and justice.

9 And ^bshe gave the king an hundred and twenty talents of gold, and ^cof spices great abundance, and precious stones: neither was there any such spice as the queen of Sheba gave king Solomon.

10 And the servants also of Hiram, and the servants of Solomon, ^dwhich brought gold from Ophir, brought ^ealgum-trees, and precious stones.

11 And the king made ^fof the algum-trees ^gterraces to the house of the LORD, and to the king's palace, and ^hharps and psalteries for singers: and there were none such seen before in the land of Judah.

12 And king Solomon gave to the queen of Sheba ⁱall her desire, whatsoever she asked, besides ^jthat which she had brought unto the king. So she turned, and went away to her own land, she and her servants.

heathen, and, from what we find elsewhere, there seems no reason to doubt that she continued to cleave to her superstitions. While Solomon felt right, and acted as became him in the matter of her exclusion from the house of David, he grievously erred in forming any such union, which was a direct transgression of the law, that could not fail to be attended with evil consequences.

Chap. IX. 1-31. The case of the queen of Sheba we have already considered; but we have here some additional facts touching the material splendour of Solomon. Nothing previous had ever resembled it; nor was it eclipsed or even approached, by aught that followed. The more importance attaches to this circumstance, when it is taken in connexion with the royal testimony,

13 ¶ Now ^{the weight of gold that came to Solomon in one year was six hundred and threescore and six talents of gold;}

14 Besides that which chapmen and merchants brought: and all the kings of Arabia, and ^{governors of the country,} brought gold and silver to Solomon.

15 ¶ And king Solomon made ^{two hundred targets of beaten gold: six hundred shekels of beaten gold went to one target.}

16 And three hundred shields made he of beaten gold; three hundred shekels of gold went to one shield: and the king put them ^{in the house of the forest of Lebanon.}

17 ¶ Moreover, the king made ^{a great throne of ivory, and overlaid it with pure gold.}

18 And there were six steps to the throne, with a footstool of gold, which were fastened to the throne, and stays on each side of the sitting place, and two lions standing by the stays.

19 And ^{twelve lions stood there on the one side and on the other upon the six steps:} there was not the like made in any kingdom.

20 ¶ And all ^{the drinking-vessels of king Solomon were of gold, and all the vessels of the house of the forest of Lebanon were of pure gold:} ^{none were of silver;} ^{it was not any thing accounted of in the days of Solomon.}

21 For the king's ships went to ^{Tarshish with the servants of Hiram: every three years once came the ships of Tarshish, bringing gold, and silver, ivory, and apes, and peacocks.}

22 And king Solomon ^{passed all the kings of the earth in riches and wisdom.}

23 ¶ And all the kings of the earth ^{sought the presence of Solomon, to hear his wisdom, that God had put in his heart.}

24 And they brought every man his present, vessels of silver, and vessels of gold, and raiment, harness, and spices, horses, and mules, a rate year by year.

25 ¶ And Solomon had ^{four thousand stalls for horses and chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen; whom he bestowed in the chariot-cities, and with the king at Jerusalem.}

26 ¶ And he ^{reigned over all the kings, from the river even unto the land of the Philistines, and to the border of Egypt.}

27 And the king ^{made silver in Jerusalem as stones, and cedar-trees made he as the sycamore-trees that are in the low plains in abundance.}

28 And they ^{brought unto Solomon horses out of Egypt, and out of all lands.}

29 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Solomon, first and last, are they not written in the ^{book of Nathan the prophet, and in the prophecy of Ahijah the Shilonite, and in the visions of Iddo the seer against Jeroboam the son of Nebat?}

30 And Solomon reigned in Jerusalem over all Israel forty years.

31 And Solomon ^{slept with his fathers;} and he was buried in the city of David his father: and Rehoboam his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER X.

1 Rehoboam refusing the old men's counsel, 10 ten tribes revolt; 18 and he fleeth.

AND ^{Rehoboam went to Shechem: for to Shechem were all Israel come to make him king.}

2 And it came to pass, when ^{Jeroboam the son of Nebat (who was in Egypt, whither he had fled from the presence of Solomon the king) heard it,} that Jeroboam returned out of Egypt.

3 And ^{they sent and called him: so Jeroboam and all Israel came, and spake to Rehoboam, saying,}

4 Thy ^{father made our yoke grievous: now therefore ease thou somewhat the grievous servitude of thy father, and his heavy yoke that he put upon us, and we will serve thee.}

5 And he said unto them, ^{Come again unto me after three days. And the people departed.}

6 ¶ And king Rehoboam ^{took counsel with the old men that had stood before Solomon his father while he yet lived, saying, What counsel give ye me to return answer to this people?}

7 And they spake unto him, saying, ^{If thou be kind to this people, and please them, and speak good words to them, they will be thy servants for ever.}

8 But ^{he forsook the counsel which the old men gave him, and took counsel with the young men that were brought up with him, that stood before him.}

9 And he said unto them, ^{What advice give ye, that we may return answer to this people, which have spoken to me, saying, Ease somewhat the yoke that thy father did put upon us?}

10 And the young men that were brought up with him spake unto him, saying, ^{Thus shalt thou answer the people that spake unto thee, saying, Thy father made our yoke heavy, but make thou it somewhat lighter for us; thus shalt thou say unto them, My little finger shall be thicker than my father's loins.}

11 For whereas my father ^{put a heavy yoke upon you, I will put more to your yoke: my father chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions.}

"Vanity of vanities, all is vanity." Solomon's wealth and glory could minister nothing towards supplying the longings of the hungry soul, and filling it with gladness. Only truth can act on mind, and only the Gospel can meet the case of man in his present condition. Great riches, that they may not prove ruinous, require great grace; and unless the grace accompany, it is infinitely better to go without the riches.

Chap. X. 1-19. The case of Rehoboam we have dealt with in our remarks on the Book of Kings, which recorded the folly and infatuation of that misguided man.

12 ¶ So Jeroboam and all the people came to Rehoboam on the third day, as the king bade, saying, Come again to me on the third day.

13 And the king answered them roughly: and king Rehoboam forsook the counsel of the old men, 14 And answered them after ^{the} advice of the young men, saying, ^{My} father made your yoke heavy, but I will add thereto: My father chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions.

15 So the king hearkened not unto the people: for ^{the} cause was of God, ^{that} the LORD might perform his word, which he spake by the hand of Ahijah the Shilonite to Jeroboam the son of Nebat.

16 ¶ And when all Israel saw that the king would not hearken unto them, the people answered the king, saying, What portion have we in David? and we have none inheritance in the son of Jesse; every man to your tents, O Israel: and now, ^{David}, see to thine own house. ^bSo all Israel went to their tents.

17 But as for the children of Israel that dwell in the cities of Judah, Rehoboam reigned over them.

18 Then king Rehoboam sent ^{Hadoram}, that was over the tribute; and the children of Israel ^{stoned} him with stones, that he died: but king Rehoboam ^{made} speed to get him up to his chariot, to flee to Jerusalem.

19 And ^{Israel} rebelled against the house of David ^{unto} this day.

CHAPTER XI.

1 Rehoboam raising an army to subdue Israel, is forbidden by Shemaiah; 18 his wives.

AND ^{when} Rehoboam was come to Jerusalem, he gathered of the house of Judah and Benjamin ^{an} hundred and fourscore thousand chosen men, which were warriors, to fight against Israel, that he might bring the kingdom again to Rehoboam.

2 But the word of the LORD came ^{to} Shemaiah ^{the} man of God, saying,

3 Speak unto Rehoboam the son of Solomon, king of Judah, and ^{to} all Israel in Judah and Benjamin, saying,

4 Thus saith the LORD, Ye shall not go up, nor fight ^{against} your brethren: ^{return} every man to his house; ^{for} this thing is done of me. And ^{they} obeyed the words of the LORD, and returned from going against Jeroboam.

5 ¶ And Rehoboam dwelt in Jerusalem, and ^{built} cities for defence in Judah.

11 And he fortified the strongholds, and put ^{captains} in them, and store of victual, and of oil and wine.

12 And in every several city he ^{put} shields and spears, and made them exceeding strong, ^{having} Judah and Benjamin on his side.

13 ¶ And the priests and the Levites that were in all Israel ^{resorted} to him out of all their coasts.

17 So they strengthened the kingdom of Judah, and made Rehoboam the son of Solomon strong, three years: for three years they walked in the way of David and Solomon.

18 ¶ And Rehoboam took him Mahalath, the daughter of Jerimoth the son of David, to wife, and Abihail, the daughter of Eliab the son of Jesse;

19 Which bare him children; Jeush, and Shamariah, and Zaham.

20 And after her he took ¹Maachah, the daughter of ²Absalom, which bare him ³Abijah, and Attai, and Ziza, and Shelomith.

21 And Rehoboam loved Maachah the daughter of Absalom above all his wives and his concubines: (for he took eighteen wives, and threescore concubines; and begat twenty and eight sons, and threescore daughters.)

22 And Rehoboam ^{made} Abijah the son of Maachah the chief, ^{to be} ruler among his brethren: for he thought to make him king.

While his history constitutes a principal section of the record of royal errors in Judea, it presents a beacon to rulers of every class, and all degrees of dignity, from the least to the greatest, reminding them that the effect of outrage on the indefeasible rights of human nature, is to excite rebellion, which may bring along with it a train of unforeseen disasters.

Chap. XI. 1-23. No class of men could be more unlike the regal character of Christ than his royal types in Israel and Judah. They too much resembled the crowned heads of the heathen world; in a majority of instances even exceeding them in wickedness and cruelty. The great business of the kings of the earth has been mutual injury, and, by consequence, the destruction of their people. Among them, the path to glory was the path of desolation; but Christ "came not to destroy men's lives, but to save them;" and his kingdom once fairly established, he will make "wars to cease to the ends of the earth." Rehoboam imitated only the bad parts of his father's character, exhibiting nothing of the good. As human nature is now constiof all his children throughout all the countries of Judah and Benjamin, unto every fenced city; and he gave them victual in abundance: and he desired ²many wives.

CHAPTER XII.

1 Rehoboam, forsaking God, is punished by Shishak. 18 His reign and death.

AND it came to pass, ^awhen Rehoboam had established the kingdom, and had strengthened himself, ^bhe forsook the law of the LORD, and ^call Israel with him.

2 And it came to pass, ^dthat, in the fifth year of king Rehoboam, ^eShishak king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem, ^fbecause they had transgressed against the LORD.

3 With ^gtwelve hundred chariots, and threescore thousand horsemen: and the people ^hwere ⁱwithout number that came with him out of Egypt; the ^jLubims, the Sukkiims, and the ^kEthiopians.

4 And he took ^lthe fenced cities which ^mpertained to Judah, and ⁿcame to Jerusalem.

5 ¶ Then came ^oShemaiah the prophet to Rehoboam, and ^pto the princes of Judah that were gathered together to Jerusalem because of Shishak, and said unto them, Thus saith the LORD, ^q"Ye have forsaken me, and therefore have I also ^rleft you in the hand of Shishak.

6 Whereupon the princes of Israel and the king ^shumbled themselves; and they said, ^t"The LORD is righteous.

7 And when ^uthe LORD saw that they humbled themselves, the word of the LORD came to Shemaiah, saying, They have humbled themselves; ^vtherefore I will not destroy them, but I will grant them ^wsome deliverance; ^xand my wrath shall not be poured out upon Jerusalem by the hand of Shishak.

8 Nevertheless they shall be his servants; that ^ythey may know my service, and the service of the kingdoms of the countries.

9 So Shishak king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem, and ^ztook away the treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king's house; he took all; he carried away also the shields of gold which Solomon had made.

10 Instead of which king Rehoboam made shields of brass, and committed ^{aa}them to the hands of ^{ab}the chief of the guard, that kept the entrance of the king's house.

11 And when the king entered into the house of the LORD, the guard came and fetched them, and brought them again into the guard-chamber.

12 And ¹when he humbled himself, the wrath of the LORD turned from him, that he would not destroy ²him altogether: and ³also in Judah things went well.

13 ¶ So king Rehoboam strengthened himself in Jerusalem, and reigned; for Rehoboam ⁴was one and forty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned seventeen years in Jerusalem, ⁵the city which the LORD had chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, ⁶to put his name there: and his mother's name ⁷was Naamah ⁸an Ammonitess.

14 And he did evil, because he ⁹prepared not his heart ¹⁰to seek the LORD.

15 Now the acts of Rehoboam, first and last, ¹¹are they not written in the ¹²'book of ¹³Shemaiah the prophet, and of Iddo the seer concerning genealogies? And ¹⁴there ¹⁵were ¹⁶Wars between Rehoboam and Jeroboam continually.

16 And Rehoboam slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David: and ¹⁷Abijah his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Abijah, succeeding, maketh war against Jeroboam; 18 and overcometh him.

NOW, ¹in the eighteenth year of king Jeroboam began Abijah to reign over Judah.

2 He reigned three years in Jerusalem: (his mother's name also ²was ³Michaiah, the daughter of Uriel of ⁴Gibeah:) ⁵and there was war between Abijah and Jeroboam.

3 And Abijah set ⁶the battle in array with an army of valiant men of war, ⁷even ⁸four hundred thousand chosen men: Jeroboam also set the battle in array against him with ⁹'eight hundred thousand chosen men, ¹⁰being mighty men of valour.

4 ¶ And Abijah stood up upon mount ¹¹Zemaraim, which ¹²is in mount Ephraim, and said, ¹³Hear me, thou Jeroboam, and all Israel;

5 ¹⁴Ought ye not to know that ¹⁵the LORD God of Israel gave the kingdom over Israel ¹⁶to David for ever, ¹⁷even to him and to his sons by ¹⁸a covenant of salt?

6 Yet Jeroboam the son of Nebat, the servant of Solomon the son of David, is risen up, and hath ¹⁹rebelled against his lord.

7 And there are gathered unto him ²⁰vain men, ²¹the children of Belial, and have strengthened themselves against Rehoboam the son of Solomon, when Reho-tuted, the lesson of evil is easily imbibed, but it requires much vigilance, time, and labour to train children up in the way of holiness.

Chap. XII. 1-16. Rehoboam, by his example, taught, as he himself learned from bitter experience, that to forsake God was to forsake his own mercies. Sin, whether in the great or the little, cannot always go unpunished: but it is great and aggravated in proportion to the dignity and the mercies enjoyed by the perpetrator. All that can be said of Rehoboam is, that he shewed some signs of repentance, in consequence of which he obtained a respite. He supplied an important lesson touching the experience of the believer. "He did evil, because he prepared not his heart to seek the Lord." What a lesson is here! How simple, natural, and reasonable is it, and yet the soul recoils from it! There are perhaps few points more important, and yet less attended to, even among the people of God. Where this preparation is largely neglected, the consequences must inevitably prove calamitous.

Chap. XIII. 1-22. Abijah spoke well, but his conduct did not correspond with his creed. His heart was not boam was "young and tender-hearted, and "could not withstand them.

8 And now ye think to withstand "the kingdom of the LORD in the hand of the sons of David; and ye be "a great multitude, and there are "with you golden calves, which Jeroboam made you for gods.

9 Have ye not "cast out the priests of the LORD, the sons of Aaron, and the Levites, and have "made you priests after the manner of the nations of other lands? so that whosoever cometh to "consecrate himself "with a young bullock and seven rams, the same may be a priest of them that are "no gods.

10 But as for us, "the LORD is our God, and we have not forsaken him; and "the priests, which minister unto the LORD, are the sons of Aaron, and the Levites wait upon their business:

11 And "they burn unto the LORD, every morning and every evening, burnt-sacrifices and "sweet incense: the "shew-bread also set they in order upon the pure table; and "the candlestick of gold, with the lamps thereof, to burn every evening: for "we keep the charge of the LORD our God; but ye have forsaken him.

12 And, behold, "God himself is with us for our captain, and his priests with sounding trumpets to cry alarm against you. O children of Israel, "fight ye not against the LORD God of your fathers; for ye shall not prosper.

13 ¶ But Jeroboam caused "an ambushment to come about behind them: so they were before Judah, and the ambushment was behind them.

14 And when Judah looked back, behold, the battle was before and behind; and they "cried unto the LORD, and the priests sounded with the trumpets.

15 Then the men of Judah gave a shout: and "as the men of Judah shouted, it came to pass, that God smote Jeroboam and all Israel before Abijah and Judah.

16 And the children of Israel fled before Judah; and God "delivered them into their hand.

17 And Abijah and his people slew them with a great slaughter: so there fell down slain of Israel five hundred thousand chosen men.

18 Thus the children of Israel were brought under at that time, and the children of Judah prevailed, "because they relied upon the LORD God of their fathers.

19 And Abijah pursued after Jeroboam, and took cities from him; Beth-el with the towns thereof, and Jeshanah with the towns thereof, and "Ephraim with the towns thereof.

20 Neither did Jeroboam recover strength again in the days of Abijah: and "the LORD struck him, and he died.

21 ¶ But Abijah "waxed mighty, and married fourteen wives, and begat twenty and two sons, and sixteen daughters.

22 And the rest of the acts of Abijah, and his ways, and his sayings, are written in the "story of the prophet Iddo.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 Asa destroyeth idolatry. 9 He overcometh Zerah, and spoileth the Ethiopians.

SO Abijah "slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city of David; and "Asa his son reigned in his stead. In his days the land was quiet ten years.

2 And Asa did that which was "good and right in the eyes of the LORD his God:

3 For "he took away the altars of the strange gods, and "the high places, and "brake down the "images, and "cut down the groves;

4 And "he commanded Judah to "seek the LORD God of their fathers, and "to do the law and the commandment.

5 Also he took away out of all the cities of Judah the high places and the "images: and the kingdom was quiet before him.

6 ¶ And "he built fenced cities in Judah: "for the land had rest, and he had no war in those years; because "the LORD had given him rest.

7 Therefore "he said unto Judah, Let us build these cities, and make about them walls and towers, gates and bars, "while the land is yet before us; because we have sought the LORD our God, we have sought him, and he hath given us rest on every side: so they built and prospered.

8 ¶ And Asa had an army of men that bare targets and spears, out of Judah three hundred thousand; and out of Benjamin, that bare shields and drew right with God; and where the heart is wrong, the fact will be continually obtruding itself on the notice of others. It was then, as now, but too common for the form and the power of godliness to be separated. A form is good and necessary to the conservation and the improvement of the power; if, however, there be nothing but form, it will be unavailing for any purpose contemplated by true religion. Still, there may be justice on the side even of the inconsistent; and the God of justice may avenge them against their oppressors, while he has fatherly chastisements in store, at the proper time, for themselves, in order to the promotion of their own good.

Chap. XIV. 1-8. Asa having first entered into the narrow way himself, then adopted measures for the reformation of his people. He did not rest satisfied with small improvements, but went to the root of the matter, everywhere removing the high places and the images. In so doing he but consulted his own interests, since it materially tended to the peace of the country, and to its consequent prosperity. Great stress is laid on the fact that the "kingdom was quiet," that the "land had rest," and the king had "no war in those years, because the Lord had given him rest;" and therefore it is acknowledged that they had obtained this great blessing "on every side," and "so they built, and prospered." Peace is the essential condition of the advancement of a country in all that constitutes true civilisation. Ver. 9-15. "The wicked," however, "cannot rest," but are "like the troubled sea," driven to and fro. The Ethiopians marched against Asa a million of men; but he was not afraid. Conscious of having done no wrong, he could make his appeal to the Lord; which he does, in ver. 11, in a manner full of piety, humility, and confidence. "It is nothing with thee to help, whether with many, or with them that have no power." This language demon-bows, two hundred and fourscore thousand: all these were mighty men of valour.

9 ¶ And there came out against them Zerah the Ethiopian, with an host of a thousand thousand, and three hundred chariots; and came unto Mareshah.

10 Then Asa went out against him, and they set the battle in array in the valley of ⁴Zephathah at Mareshah.

11 And Asa ⁵cried unto the LORD his God, and said, LORD, it is nothing with thee to help, whether with many, or with ⁶them that have no power: help us, O LORD our God; for we ⁷rest on thee, and ⁸in thy name we go against this multitude. O LORD, thou art our God; ⁹let not ¹⁰man prevail against thee.

12 So ¹¹the LORD smote the Ethiopians before Asa, and before Judah: and the Ethiopians fled.

13 And Asa, and the people that were with him, pursued them unto Gerar: and the Ethiopians were overthrown, that they could not recover themselves; for they were ¹²destroyed before the LORD, and before ¹³his host: and they carried away very much spoil.

14 And they smote all the cities round about Gerar; for ¹⁴the fear of the LORD came upon them: and they spoiled all the cities; for there was exceeding much spoil in them.

15 They smote also the tents of cattle, and carried away sheep and camels in abundance, and returned to Jerusalem.

CHAPTER XV.

¹Asa, with others, makes a solemn covenant with God. ¹⁵He removeth Maachah his mother from being queen for her idolatry.

AND ¹the Spirit of God came upon Azariah the son of Oded:

2 And he went out ²to meet Asa, and said unto him, ³Hear ye me, Asa, and all Judah and Benjamin; THE LORD is with you, while ye be with him; and ⁴if ye seek him, he will be found of you; but ⁵if ye forsake him, he will forsake you.

3 Now for ⁶a long season Israel hath been without ⁷the true God, and without ⁸a teaching priest, and ⁹without law, states the suitable preparedness of Asa's mind for the great event which was to follow. Such confidence in God could not go without its reward. "We rest on thee, and in thy name we go against this multitude." This was the sure way to victory; and accordingly, the Lord took the matter into his own hand, and in a manner the most marvellous, overwhelmed the invaders. This is the true spirit of evangelism; thus it was that the apostles went forth to make the conquest of the world. They required nothing but the Lord's presence, which everywhere gave them the victory; and that presence was pledged to them in the Divine commission—"Lo, I am with you alway." That which was meant here to destroy Judah, was the means of vastly augmenting the wealth of the country.

Chap. XV. 1-7. Azariah's exhortation comprises facts of great moment to the Church of God in every age. The principle set forth in ver. 2 is immutable, "The Lord is with his people while they are with him." If they seek him, he will be found of them. The condition of a nation without the true God, a teaching priest-

4 But when they ¹in their trouble did turn unto the LORD God of Israel, and sought him, he was ²found of them.

5 And in those times there was ³no peace to him that went out, nor to him that came in, but ⁴great vexations were upon all the inhabitants of the countries.

6 And ⁵nation was ⁶destroyed of nation, and city of city: for ⁷God did vex them with all adversity.

7 Be ⁸ye strong therefore, and let not your hands be weak; for ⁹your work shall be rewarded.

8 ¶ And when Asa heard these words, and the prophecy of Oded the prophet, he took courage, and put away ¹⁰the ¹¹abominable idols out of all the land of Judah and Benjamin, and out of the cities which he had taken from mount Ephraim, and renewed ¹²the altar of the LORD that was before the porch of the LORD.

9 And he gathered all Judah and Benjamin, and the strangers with them out of Ephraim and Manasseh, and out of Simeon: (for they fell to him out of Israel in abundance, when ¹³they saw that the LORD his God was with him:)

10 So they gathered themselves together at Jerusalem in the third month, in the fifteenth year of the reign of Asa.

11 And they ¹⁴offered unto the LORD ¹⁵the same time, of the spoil which they had brought, seven hundred oxen and seven thousand sheep.

12 And ¹⁶they entered into a covenant to seek the LORD God of their fathers with all their heart, and with all their soul;

13 That ¹⁷whosoever would not seek the LORD God of Israel should be put to death, ¹⁸whether small or great, whether man or woman.

14 And ¹⁹they sware unto the LORD with a loud voice, and with shouting, and with trumpets, and with cornets.

15 And all Judah ²⁰rejoiced at the oath: for they had ²¹sworn with all their heart, and sought him with their whole desire; and he was found of them: and the LORD gave them rest round about.

16 ¶ And also concerning Maachah, ²²the hood, and the Divine law, is fearful. The portraiture contained in ver. 5, 6, is one of national misery perfected. The most distressing periods of human history present nothing worse than is there set forth, when "God did vex them with all adversity." It is matter of great encouragement to sinful men who mourn their past iniquities, that when they in their trouble turn to the Lord and seek him, he is always found of them. Bad as things are with individuals, families, and nations, but for the afflictions with which they are visited it would be much worse. None have had occasion to regret trouble which brought them to acknowledge God, and humble themselves at his mercy-seat. Asa was cheered by the remarkable words of the prophet. His hands were thereby greatly strengthened, and he turned the communication to the best account, by rendering it subservient to purposes of further reformation. Ver. 8-19. When the Lord has prepared the heart of a people, those who have to manage matters find it easy work. The covenant was entered into "with all their heart, and with all their soul." The penalty set forth in ver. 13 was only suited to that period. No man may now mother of Asa the king, ^ahe removed her from being queen, because she had made an ^aidol in a grove: and Asa cut down her idol, and stamped it, and burnt it at the brook Kidron.

17 But ^athe high places were not taken away out of Israel: nevertheless ^athe heart of Asa was perfect all his days.

18 ¶ And he ^bbrought into the house of God the things that his father had dedicated, and that he himself had dedicated, silver, and gold, and vessels.

19 And there was no more war unto the five and thirtieth year of the reign of Asa.

CHAPTER XVI.

1 Asa, by a league with the Syrians, diverteth Baasha from building of Ramah. 11 He seeketh not to God, but to the physicians. 13 His death and burial.

IN the six and thirtieth year of the reign of Asa, ^aBaasha king of Israel came up against Judah, and built Ramah, ^bto the intent that he might let none go out or come in to Asa king of Judah.

2 Then Asa ^abrought out silver and gold out of the treasures of the house of the LORD, and of the king's house, and sent to Ben-hadad king of Syria, that dwelt at ^aDamascus, saying,

3 There is ^aa league between me and thee, as there was between my father and thy father: behold, I have sent thee silver and gold; go, ^abreak thy league with Baasha king of Israel, that he may depart from me.

4 And Ben-hadad ^ahearkened unto king Asa, and sent the captains of ^ahis armies against the cities of Israel; and they smote ^aIjon, and ^aDan, and Abel-maim, and all the ^astore-cities of Naphtali.

5 And it came to pass, when Baasha heard it, that he left off building of Ramah, and let his work cease.

6 Then Asa the king took all Judah; and they carried away the stones of Ramah, and the timber thereof, wherewith Baasha was a building; and he built therewith ^aGeba, and ^aMizpah.

be persecuted into religion, or punished because of his obduracy. Nothing may be used beyond the moral means appointed by the Lord Jesus Christ. Again, Asa found his account in the piety of the nation. The evil spirit of war was subdued, and both he and his people enjoyed the blessings of peace. We shall ever find, that in proportion to the piety of a country is its tranquillity and its happiness, so that the highest patriotism is the promotion of true religion.

Chap. XVI. 1-6. No wisdom or excellence at the outset affords any guarantee for its continuance to the close of life. It was not to be expected that Asa, after the mighty deliverance he had experienced on the invasion of the Ethiopians, on the return of danger would have forgotten the Lord, and had recourse to carnal policy. Had he solicited no alliance with the king of Syria, but made his appeal as aforetime to the God of heaven, the result had been much otherwise. In the former instance, he acted as a man of God—in the latter, as a man of the world. Ver. 7-14. The language of the prophet was so clear, and his rebuke so well-founded, that there was no resisting it. The king stood condemned by his own former course; but, instead of falling under the rebuke

7 ¶ And at that time Hanani the seer came to Asa king of Judah, and said unto him, ^a"Because thou hast relied on the king of Syria, and not ^arelied on the LORD thy God, therefore is the host of the king of Syria escaped out of thine hand.

8 Were not the Ethiopians and the Lubims ^aa huge host, with very many chariots and horsemen? yet, because thou didst rely on the LORD, he delivered them into thine hand.

9 For ^athe eyes of the LORD run to and fro throughout the whole earth, ^ato shew himself strong in the behalf of them whose heart is perfect toward him. Herein ^athou hast done foolishly: therefore from henceforth thou shalt have wars.

10 Then Asa was wroth with the seer, and ^aput him in a prison-house; for he was in a rage with him because of this thing. And Asa ^aoppressed some of the people the same time.

11 ¶ And, behold, the acts of Asa, first and last, lo, they are written in the book of the Kings ^aof Judah and Israel.

12 And Asa, in the thirty and ninth year of his reign, was ^adiseased in his feet, until his disease was exceeding great: yet in his disease he sought not to the LORD, but to the ^aphysicians.

13 ¶ And Asa slept with his fathers, and died in the one and fortieth year of his reign.

14 And they buried him in ^ahis own sepulchres, which he had ^amade for himself in the city of David, and laid him in the bed which was filled with ^asweet odours and divers kinds of spices prepared by ^athe apothecaries' art; and they made a very great burning for him.

CHAPTER XVII.

1 Jehoshaphat reigneth well, and prospereth. 7 He sendeth Levites to teach in Judah. 12 His captains and armies.

AND ^aJehoshaphat his son reigned in his stead, ^aand strengthened himself against Israel.

2 And he placed forces in all the fenced of Heaven, he now scouts it in a very improper spirit, thrusting the prophet of the Lord into the prison-house, because of the "rage" that moved him! We are prepared to hear that he "oppressed some of the people" at the same time; the perpetration of one outrage is a preparation for another. Having thus dishonoured the Lord, and "stumbled the hearts of the righteous," a penalty was to attend his conduct. He was henceforth to have "wars." None ever began better than Asa—few ever ended worse. The rebuke of the prophet had no beneficial effect upon him. There is much comprised in the words, "his disease was exceeding great, yet he sought not to the Lord, but to the physicians." The same infidel principle that guided him in his politics guided him in his personal afflictions. The idea of God is altogether shut out, and he will acknowledge no means of health or cure other than those of human origin. This history, as presenting two aspects, supplies two lessons—in the first part, he is an example to follow; in the second, a beacon to avoid.

Chap. XVII. 1-9. Jehoshaphat made an excellent commencement, and, "setting the Lord always before him," the work of his hands was in everything estabcities of Judah, and set garrisons in the land of Judah, and in the cities of Ephraim, which Asa his father had taken.

3 And ^{the} LORD was with Jehoshaphat, because ^{he} walked in the first ways of ^{his} father David, and ^{sought} not unto Baalim;

4 But sought to the LORD God of his father, and ^{walked} in his commandments, and not after the doings of Israel:

5 Therefore ^{the} LORD established the kingdom in his hand; and all Judah ^{brought} to Jehoshaphat presents; and he had riches and honour in abundance.

6 And ^{his} heart was ^{lifted up} in the ways of the LORD: moreover, ^{he} took away the high places and groves out of Judah.

7 ^{Also} in the third year of his reign he sent to his princes, even to Ben-hail, and to Obadiah, and to Zechariah, and to Nethaneel, and to Micaiah, ^{to} teach in the cities of Judah.

8 And with them ^{he sent} Levites, even Shemaiah, and Nathaniah, and Zebadiah, and Asahel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehonathan, and Adonijah, and Tobijah, and Tob-adonijah, Levites; and with them Elishama and Jehoram, ^{priests}.

9 And they taught in Judah, and ^{had} ^{the} book of the law of the LORD with them, and went about ^{throughout} all the cities of Judah, and taught the people.

10 ^{And} the fear of the LORD ^{fell} upon all the kingdoms of the lands that ^{were} round about Judah, ^{so} that they made no war against Jehoshaphat.

11 Also ^{some} of the Philistines brought Jehoshaphat presents, and tribute-silver; and the Arabians brought him flocks, seven thousand and seven hundred rams, and seven thousand and seven hundred he-goats.

12 ^{And} Jehoshaphat waxed great exceedingly; and he built in Judah ^{castles}, and cities of store.

13 And he had much business in the cities of Judah: and the men of war, mighty men of valour, ^{were} in Jerusalem.

14 And these ^{are} ^{the} numbers of them, according ^{to} the house of their fathers: of Judah, the captains of thousands; Adnah the chief, and with him mighty men of valour three hundred thousand.

15 And ^{next} to him ^{was} Jehohanan the captain, and with him two hundred and fourscore thousand.

CHAPTER XVIII.

1 Jehoshaphat and Ahab go against Ramoth-gilead. 4 Ahab's false prophets assure him of victory. 15 Micaiah's prophecy, &c.

NOW Jehoshaphat had ^{riches} and honour in abundance, and ^{joined} affinity with Ahab.

2 And ^{after certain} years ^{he} went down to Ahab to Samaria: and ^{Ahab} killed sheep and oxen for him in abundance, and for the people that ^{he} had with him, and ^{persuaded} him to go up with him to Ramoth-gilead.

3 And Ahab king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat king of Judah, Wilt thou go with me to Ramoth-gilead? And he answered him, ^{I am} as thou art, and my people as thy people; and ^{we will be} with thee in the war.

4 ^{And} Jehoshaphat said unto the king of Israel, ^{Enquire}, I pray thee, at the word of the LORD to-day.

5 Therefore the king of Israel gathered together of ^{prophets} four hundred men, and said unto them, ^{Shall we go to} Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall I forbear? And they said, ^{Go up}; for God will deliver ^{it} into the king's hand.

6 ^{But} Jehoshaphat said, ^{Is there} not here a prophet of the LORD ^{besides}, that we might enquire of him?

7 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, ^{There is yet} ^{one} man, by whom we may enquire of the LORD: but ^{I hate} him; for he never prophesied ^{good} unto ^{me}, but always evil: the same ^{is} Micaiah the son of Imla. And Jehoshaphat said, ^{Let not the king say} so.

8 And the king of Israel called for one of his ^{officers}, and said, ^{Fetch quickly} Micaiah the son of Imla.

9 And the king of Israel, and Jehoshaphat king of Judah, ^{sat} either of them hated. He laboured hard to undo the evils which had arisen during the late period of the reign of his predecessor. No king has yet come before us who so nearly approached David and Solomon in the gift of social administration. He aimed at emancipating the mind of his people from darkness, and hence the scheme he adopted to "teach in the cities of Judah." He set apart a body of the most eminent men of the land to operate as a species of Home Missionaries: and such was the importance he attached to this work, that he selected for it a portion of the princes and of the Levites—the best and ablest men he could command—who "went throughout all Judah, and taught the people." Ver.

10-19. This happy work was materially promoted by the peace with which the Lord blessed the king and the country, and the result of the whole was exceedingly to advance the national greatness. There is in everything a sure way to true success, although such is the unhappy state of human nature, that it prefers conducting the search in other and devious paths.

Chap. XVIII. 1-34. In the history of the better class of Jewish kings, we always find that there is a crisis. They proceed well up to a given period, and they prosper accordingly; but after that, the tone of their piety becomes lowered; they form evil associations; and by on his throne, clothed in their robes, and they sat in a void place at the entering in of the gate of Samaria; and all the prophets prophesied before them.

10 And Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah had made him horns of iron, and said, Thus saith the LORD, With these thou shalt push Syria until they be consumed.

11 And all the prophets prophesied so, saying, Go up to Ramoth-gilead, and prosper; for the LORD shall deliver it into the hand of the king.

12 And the messenger that went to call Micaiah spake to him, saying, Behold, the words of the prophets declare good to the king with one assent: let thy word therefore, I pray thee, be like one of theirs, and speak thou good.

13 And Micaiah said, As the LORD liveth, even what my God saith, that will I speak.

14 And when he was come to the king, the king said unto him, Micaiah, shall we go to Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall I forbear? And he said, Go ye up, and prosper, and they shall be delivered into your hand.

15 ¶ And the king said to him, How many times shall I adjure thee that thou say nothing but the truth to me in the name of the LORD?

16 Then he said, I did see all Israel scattered upon the mountains, as sheep that have no shepherd: and the LORD said, These have no master; let them return therefore every man to his house in peace.

17 And the king of Israel said to Jehoshaphat, Did I not tell thee that he would not prophesy good unto me, but evil?

18 Again he said, Therefore hear the word of the LORD; I saw the LORD sitting upon his throne, and all the host of heaven standing on his right hand and on his left.

19 And the LORD said, Who shall entice Ahab king of Israel, that he may go up and fall at Ramoth-gilead? And one spake saying after this manner, and another saying after that manner.

20 Then there came out a spirit, and stood before the LORD, and said, I will entice him. And the LORD said unto him, Wherewith?

21 And he said, I will go out, and be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets. And the LORD said, Thou shalt entice him, and thou shalt also prevail: go out, and do even so.

22 Now therefore, behold, the LORD hath put a lying spirit in the mouth of these thy prophets, and the LORD hath spoken evil against thee.

23 ¶ Then Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah came near, and smote Micaiah upon the cheek, and said, Which way went the Spirit of the LORD from me to speak unto thee?

24 And Micaiah said, Behold, thou shalt see on that day when thou shalt go into an inner chamber to hide thyself.

25 Then the king of Israel said, Take ye Micaiah, and carry him back to Amon the governor of the city, and to Joash the king's son;

26 And say, Thus saith the king, Put this fellow in the prison, and feed him with bread of affliction, and with water of affliction, until I return in peace.

27 And Micaiah said, If thou certainly return in peace, then hath not the LORD spoken by me. And he said, Harken, all ye people.

28 ¶ So the king of Israel, and Jehoshaphat the king of Judah, went up to Ramoth-gilead.

29 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, I will disguise myself, and will go to the battle; but put thou on thy robes. So the king of Israel disguised himself; and they went to the battle.

30 Now the king of Syria had commanded the captains of the chariots that were with him, saying, Fight ye not with small or great, save only with the king of Israel.

31 And it came to pass, when the captains of the chariots saw Jehoshaphat, that they said, It is the king of Israel; therefore they compassed about him to fight: but Jehoshaphat cried out, and the LORD helped him; and God moved them to depart from him.

32 For it came to pass, that, when the captains of the chariots perceived that it was not the king of Israel, they turned back again from pursuing him.

33 ¶ And a certain man drew a bow at a venture, and smote the king of Israel between the joints of the harness: therefore he said to his chariot-man, Turn thine hand, that thou mayest carry me out of the host; for I am wounded.

34 And the battle increased that day: howbeit the king of Israel stayed himself up in his chariot against the Syrians until the even; and about the time of the sun going down he died.

degrees they depart from God by an evil heart of unbelief. It is an aggravation of the folly of Jehoshaphat, that he sought to Ahab, not Ahab to him; and the wicked king craftily endeavoured to turn his visit to political account, prevailing with him to join in his warlike undertakings. Jehoshaphat displayed both rashness and weakness in the haste and cordiality with which he complied. His error is particularly manifest in this: he first engages to unite with Ahab, and then proposes that inquiry should be made of the Lord concerning the propriety of the enterprise. The process ought to have been reversed—first he should have insisted on inquiring of the Lord, and have been guided by the answer. Jehoshaphat resembles too many people even in the most important events of life, who first determine for themselves a certain course of action, and then profess to look to God for Divine guidance! Such conduct cannot be sufficiently reprehended, as both impious and hypocritical: and to remember Jehoshaphat may be to correct the evil.

CHAPTER XIX.

1 Jehoshaphat visiteth his kingdom. 5 His instructions to the judges, &c.

AND Jehoshaphat the king of Judah returned to his house in peace to Jerusalem.

2 And ^aJehu the son of Hanani the seer went out to meet him, and said to king Jehoshaphat, ^bShouldst thou help the ungodly, and love them that ^chate the LORD? therefore ^dis wrath upon thee from before the LORD.

3 Nevertheless there are ^egood things found in thee, in that thou hast taken away the groves out of the land, and hast prepared thine heart to seek God.

4 ^fAnd Jehoshaphat dwelt at Jerusalem: and he ^gwent out again through the people, from Beer-sheba to ^hmount Ephraim, and brought them back unto the LORD God of their fathers.

5 ⁱAnd ^jhe set judges in the land, throughout all the fenced cities of Judah, city by city;

8 ^tMoreover, in Jerusalem did Jehoshaphat set of the Levites, and of the priests, and of the chief of the fathers of Israel, for ^uthe judgment of the LORD, and for controversies, when they returned to Jerusalem.

9 And he charged them, saying, Thus shall ye do in the fear of the LORD, faithfully, and with a perfect heart.

10 And what cause soever shall come to you of your brethren that dwell in their cities, ^vbetween blood and blood, between law and commandment, statutes and judgments, ye shall even ^wwarn them that they trespass not against the LORD, and so wrath come upon you, and upon your brethren: this do, and ye shall not trespass.

Chap. XIX. 1-4. Jehoshaphat, through the mercy of God, escaped with his life, although his peril was great. But whatever his sins, there was no indication of repentance; which led the prophet to address to him the awful question—"Shouldst thou help the ungodly, and love them that hate the Lord?" No man on earth had less title to his affection or his confidence than had Ahab; and to make a boast of friendship for that wicked king, and to unite with him in his wars, was to add positive transgression to gross impropriety. We see from this the follies into which good men may fall, for the prophet testified that Jehoshaphat had prepared his heart "to seek God;" and his sincerity is placed beyond doubt by the fact that it availed in securing for him a measure of the Divine forbearance. Ver. 5-11. The remarkable administrative talent of Jehoshaphat, referred to in a previous chapter, is strikingly exemplified here. The establishment of Judges in the land throughout all the cities, was a most important step for the public good; and the exhortations he gave them were worthy alike of his wisdom and his piety. Happy the land that has an abundant supply of judges of such a spirit, and governed by such principles! The institution of a tribunal to deal with ecclesiastical controversies, was also another great step in the way of national advancement; while the charge given in ver. 9, 10 was such as to admit of no improvement, and to bespeak a wisdom proceeding from Heaven. But courage, as well as integrity, is required in such high matters, since it will be frequently necessary for the judge to decide against the great, the wealthy, and the influential. Hence the propriety of the closing injunction—"Deal courageously, and the Lord shall be with the good."

Chap. XX. 1-13. Jehoshaphat, fearing the advance of such enemies, at once betook himself to the only source of comfort and safety. He hastened to the Mercy-Seat, and invoked the Lord's aid for his people. His own prayer presented a tone of confidence from which the best might be anticipated, while it exhibited a most vade, when they came out of the land of Egypt, but they turned from them, and destroyed them not;

11 Behold, I say, ¹how they reward us, to come ²to cast us out of thy possession, which thou hast given us to inherit.

12 O our God, ¹wilt thou not judge them? for we have no might against this great company that cometh against us; neither know we what to do: but ²our eyes are upon thee.

13 And ¹all Judah stood before the LORD, with their little ones, their wives, and their children.

14 ¶ Then upon Jahaziel the son of Zechariah, the son of Benaiah, the son of Jeiel, the son of Mattaniah, a Levite of the sons of Asaph, ¹came the Spirit of the LORD in the midst of the congregation;

15 And he said, Harken ye, all Judah, and ye inhabitants of Jerusalem, and thou king Jehoshaphat, Thus saith the LORD unto you, ¹Be not afraid nor dismayed by reason of this great multitude; for ²the battle is not yours, but God's.

16 To-morrow go ye down against them: behold, they come up by the ¹cliff of Ziz; and ye shall find them at the end of the ²brook, before the wilderness of Jeruel.

17 Ye shall ¹not need to fight in this battle: set yourselves, ²stand ye still, and see the salvation of the LORD with you, O Judah and Jerusalem: fear not, nor be dismayed; to-morrow go out against them: ³for the LORD will be with you.

18 And Jehoshaphat ¹bowed his head with his face to the ground: and all Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem fell before the LORD, worshipping the LORD.

19 And ¹the Levites, of the children of the Kohathites, and of the children of the ²Korhites, stood up to praise the LORD God of Israel with ³a loud voice on high.

20 ¶ And they rose early in the morning, and went forth into the wilderness of ¹Tekoa: and as they went forth, Jehoshaphat stood and said, ²Hear me, O Judah, and ye inhabitants of Jerusalem; ³Believe in the LORD your God, so shall ye be established; ⁴believe his prophets, so shall ye prosper.

21 And when he had ¹consulted with the people, he ²appointed singers unto the LORD, and ³that should praise ⁴the beauty of holiness, as they went out before the army, and to say, ¹Praise the LORD; for his mercy endureth for ever.

22 ¶ And ¹when they began ²to sing and to praise, ³the LORD set ambushments against the children of Ammon, Moab, and mount Seir, which were come against Judah; and they ⁴were smitten.

23 For the children of Ammon and Moab stood up against the inhabitants of ¹mount Seir, utterly to slay and destroy ²them: and when they had made an end of the inhabitants of Seir, every one helped ³to destroy another.

24 And when Judah came toward the watch-tower in the wilderness, they looked unto the multitude, and, behold, ¹they were dead bodies fallen to the earth, and ²none escaped.

25 And when Jehoshaphat and his people came to take away the spoil of them, ¹they found among them in abundance both riches with the dead bodies, and ²precious jewels, (which they stripped off for themselves,) more than they could carry away: and they were three days in gathering of the spoil, it was so much.

26 ¶ And on the fourth day they assembled themselves in the valley of ¹Berachah; for there they ²blessed the LORD: therefore ³the name of the same place was called The valley of Berachah unto this day.

27 Then they returned, every man of Judah and Jerusalem, and Jehoshaphat in the ¹fore-front of them, to go again to Jerusalem with joy: for ²the LORD had made them to rejoice over their enemies.

28 And they came to Jerusalem ¹with psalteries, and harps, and trumpets, unto the house of the LORD.

29 And ¹the fear of God was on all the kingdoms of those countries, when ²they had heard that the LORD fought against the enemies of Israel.

30 So the realm of Jehoshaphat was quiet; for ¹his God gave him rest round about.

31 ¶ And ¹Jehoshaphat reigned over Judah. He was thirty and five years old when he began to reign, and he reigned twenty and five years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Azubah, the daughter of Shilhi.

32 And he walked in the way of Asa his father, and ¹departed not from it, attractive example to his awakened people. How humbly and confidently he enumerates the mercies of the Lord, and his benefits to Israel in times past! Ver. 12 exhibits the perfection of filial confidence—"We have no might against this great company that cometh against us; neither know we what to do; but our eyes are upon thee." Here, then, is a motto which the people of God, whether acting in their individual or associated capacity, would do well to keep steadily in view. It is the spiritual attitude which best becomes the creature, and which is the best preparation for a display of Divine mercy. Ver. 14-21. True prayer never fails to obtain an answer, and, if need be, speedily. The Spirit of the Lord forthwith assured the king that all would be well, enjoining him neither to fear nor be dismayed on account of the multitude, since the battle was not his but the Lord's.

The occasion was an extraordinary one, and the Divine display of power and vengeance would correspond with it. The king, with his people, would be simply a spectator; it would be their privilege to stand still and see the salvation of the Lord. Such was the testimony; and the king received it with joy, in the fullest confidence that it would be done. The people united in the faith, and participated in the holy confidence of their sovereign. In ver. 20, the principle of trust in order to the blessing is impressively set forth. Ver. 22-30. All things were now ready for the terrible manifestation of the Divine displeasure. The carnage was perfect. Every one helped to destroy his neighbour, and the mighty hosts became heaps of slain. None escaped! The plunder sufficed to enrich the country, and render what was meant to have been an all-devouring visitation a national doing that which was right in the sight of the LORD.

33 Howbeit the high places were not taken away; for as yet the people had not prepared their hearts unto the God of their fathers.

34 Now the rest of the acts of Jehoshaphat, first and last, behold, they are written in the ⁴book of ¹Jehu the son of Hanani, who is ⁶mentioned in the book of the Kings of Israel.

35 ¶ And after this ²did Jehoshaphat king of Judah join himself with Ahaziah king of Israel, ¹who did very wickedly:

36 And he joined himself with him to make ships to go to ^mTarshish: and they made the ships in ^aEzion-gaber.

37 Then Eliezer, the son of Dodavah of Maresah, prophesied against Jehoshaphat, saying, Because thou hast joined thyself with Ahaziah, ^othe LORD hath broken thy works. And the ships were broken, that they were not able to go to Tarshish.

CHAPTER XXI.

1 Jehoram succeeded Jehoshaphat. 5 His wicked reign. 18 His incurable disease.

NOW ¹Jehoshaphat slept with his fathers, and ^bwas buried with his fathers in the city of David: and ^cJehoram his son reigned in his stead.

2 And he had brethren, the sons of Jehoshaphat, Azariah, and Jehiel, and Zechariah, and Azariah, and Michael, and Shephatiah: all these were the sons of Jehoshaphat king of Israel.

3 And their father ^dgave them great gifts of silver, and of gold, and of precious things, with fenced cities in Judah: but the kingdom gave he to Jehoram, because he was the first-born.

4 Now, when Jehoram was risen up to the kingdom of his father, he strengthened himself, and ^eslew all his brethren with the sword, and divers also of the princes of Israel.

5 ¶ Jehoram was thirty and two years old when he began to reign; and ^fhe reigned eight years in Jerusalem.

6 And he walked ^gin the way of the kings of Israel, like as did the house of Ahab: for ^hhe had the daughter of Ahab to wife: and he wrought that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD.

nant that he had made with David, and ¹as he promised to give a ¹light to him and to his sons for ever.

8 ¶ In his days ^mthe Edomites revolted from under the ²dominion of Judah, ⁿand made themselves a king.

9 Then Jehoram went forth with his princes, and all his chariots with him: and he rose up by night, and smote the Edomites which compassed him in, and the captains of the chariots.

10 So the Edomites revolted from under the hand of Judah unto this day. The same time also did ^oLibnah revolt from under his hand; ^pbecause he had forsaken the LORD God of his fathers.

11 Moreover, ^qhe made high places in the mountains of Judah, and ^rcaused the inhabitants of Jerusalem to commit ^rfornication, and ^scompelled Judah thereto.

12 ¶ And there came ^aa writing to him from ^tElijah the prophet, saying, Thus saith the LORD God of David thy father, Because thou hast not walked ^vin the ways of Jehoshaphat thy father, nor ^win the ways of Asa king of Judah,

13 But hast walked ^xin the way of the kings of Israel, and hast made Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to go a ^ywhoring, like to the whoredoms of the house of Ahab, and also ^zhast slain thy brethren of thy father's house, which were better than thyself:

14 Behold, with a great ³plague will the LORD smite ^dthy people, and ^ethy children, and thy wives, and all thy goods;

15 And thou shalt have great sickness ^fby disease of thy bowels, until ^gthy bowels fall out by reason of ^hthe sickness day by day.

16 ¶ Moreover, ⁱthe LORD stirred up against Jehoram the spirit of the Philistines, and of the Arabians, that were near the Ethiopians:

17 And they came up into Judah, and brake into it, and ^jcarried away all the substance that was found in the king's house, and his sons also, and his wives; so that there was never a son left him, save ^kJehoahaz, the youngest of his sons.

18 ¶ And after all this the LORD smote him in his bowels with an incurable disease.

19 And it came to pass, that, in process of time, after the end of two years, his benefaction. The effect of an event so mysterious and fearful could not be very great on surrounding kingdoms: and the Lord used it to secure rest for Jehoshaphat and his people. Ver. 31-37. But the king, as if he had forgotten the crime, and the dangers arising from his association with Ahab, again joined himself to Ahaziah, who did very wickedly. In this, as in the former case, the first advance appears to have been on the part of Jehoshaphat,—a circumstance which greatly aggravated his transgressions. He was not led into temptation; in spite of reproof and experience, with his eyes open, he walked into it! This conduct brought upon him the Divine displeasure, and the consequent defeat of the enterprise in which he and Ahaziah had united.

Chap. XXI. 1-11. Jehoram was the basest of men, and the wickedest of kings. A reign begun in fraternal murder, could come to no good. The circumstance that he had married a daughter of Ahab deserves particular notice, since to her, in part, the wickedness of his course is attributed. Ver. 12-20. It was not customary for the prophets to write, but to deliver, in their own persons, the message of the Lord. In the present case, however, the prophet transmitted a written communication, censuring the king for his misconduct, and apprising him of the disaster which would flow from it to his country, as also to himself. Ver. 15 was a frightful intimation. The stroke was one of the heaviest and most horrible that ever overtook an evildoer. It is impossible to conceive of a chastisement more terrible or revolting; but it was inflicted to the letter, and thus there was an end of an infamous reign. Nations rarely err in their bowels fell out by reason of his sickness: so he died of sore diseases: and his people ¹made no burning for him, like the burning of his fathers.

20 Thirty and two years old was he when he began to reign; and he reigned in Jerusalem eight years, and departed ²without being desired: howbeit they buried him in the city of David, but not in the sepulchres of the kings.

CHAPTER XXII.

¹ Ahaziah succeeding, reigneth wickedly. ⁵ He is slain by Jehu. ¹⁰ Athaliah usurpeth the kingdom.

AND ^athe inhabitants of Jerusalem made ^bAhaziah his youngest son king in his stead: for the band of men that came with the Arabians to the camp had ^cslain all the eldest. So Ahaziah the son of Jehoram king of Judah reigned.

² Forty and two years old was Ahaziah when he began to reign; and he reigned one year in Jerusalem: his mother's name also was ^aAthaliah, the daughter of Omri.

³ He also walked in the ways of the house of Ahab: for ¹his mother was ²his counsellor to do wickedly.

⁴ Wherefore he did evil in the sight of the LORD, like the house of Ahab: for ^bthey were his counsellors, after the death of his father, to his destruction.

⁵ ¶ He ¹walked also after their counsel, and ²went with Jehoram the son of Ahab king of Israel to war against Hazael king of Syria at ¹Ramoth-gilead: and the Syrians smote Joram.

⁶ And he returned to be healed in Jezreel because of the wounds ¹which were given him at Ramah, when he fought with Hazael king of Syria. And ²Azariah the son of Jehoram king of Judah went down ³to see Jehoram the son of Ahab at Jezreel, because he was sick.

⁷ And the ²destruction of Ahaziah ^awas of God, by coming to Joram: for, when he was come, ^bhe went out with Jehoram against Jehu the son of Nimshi, whom ^cthe LORD had anointed to cut off the house of Ahab.

⁸ And it came to pass, that, ¹when Jehu was executing judgment upon the house of Ahab, and found the princes of Judah, and the sons of the brethren of Ahaziah, that ministered to Ahaziah, he slew them.

⁹ And ^ahe sought Ahaziah: and they caught him, (for he was hid ^bin Samaria,) estimate of regal character. When death has done its work, and the crowned head has been brought to the grave, a public judgment is always virtually, if not formally, pronounced on his character. "The people made no burning for him like the burning of his fathers." "He departed without being desired." Thus it is written, "The memory of the wicked shall rot; but the memory of the righteous shall be had in everlasting remembrance."

Chap. XXII. 1-12. It is mournful when a mother becomes the prompter of her son to iniquity; yet so it was with Ahaziah. But for her he might have acted very differently. With unholy hands she led him into the depths of the iniquity which characterized the house of Ahab. He was prompted to his destruction. A good and brought him to Jehu; and when they had slain him, they buried him: ^aBecause (said they) he is the son of Jehoahaphat, who sought the LORD with all his heart. So the house of Ahaziah had no power to keep still the kingdom.

¹⁰ ¶ But when ^aAthaliah, the mother of Ahaziah, saw that her son was dead, she arose and destroyed all the seed-royal of the house of Judah.

¹² And he was with them hid in the house of God six years: and ^aAthaliah reigned over the land.

CHAPTER XXIII.

¹ Jehoiada maketh Joash king. ¹² Athaliah is slain. ¹⁶ Jehoiada restoreth the worship of God, &c.

AND in the ^aseventh year Jehoiada strengthened himself, and took the captains of hundreds, Azariah the son of Jeroham, and Ishmael the son of Jehohanan, and Azariah the son of Obed, and Maaseiah the son of Adaiah, and Elishaphat the son of Zichri, into ^bcovenant with him.

² And they ^awent about in Judah, and gathered the Levites out of all the cities of Judah, and ^athe chief of the fathers of Israel, and they came to Jerusalem.

⁴ This is the thing that ye shall do; A third part of you ^aentering on the sabbath, of the priests and of the Levites, ^ashall be ^bporters of the ^cdoors; mother is the best of blessings, and a wicked mother the deepest of curses. The conduct of Athaliah was highly reprehensible; but it met with its appropriate reward. As is the sowing so must be the reaping, both to sovereigns and to subjects. Sin must bring misery, and transgression unrepented of, destruction.

⁵ And a third part ^ashall be at ^bthe king's house; and a third part at ^bthe gate of the foundation: and all the people ^ashall be in the courts of the house of the LORD.

Chap. XXIII. 1-21. The points contained in this chapter have already been brought forth in Second Kings. The only circumstance, therefore, that merits particular notice, is the joy created by the covenant, that the people and their king should be the Lord's. On that occasion, contrary to the rule, the people took the work of reform into their own hands, visiting the house of Baal, pulling it in pieces, breaking the images and the altar, and slaying the priests. All reforms are genuine, satis-

7 And ^mthe Levites shall compass the king round about, every man with his weapons in his hand; and ⁿwhosoever else cometh into the house, he shall be put to death: but be ye with the king when he cometh in, and when he goeth out.

8 So ^othe Levites, and all Judah, did according to all things that Jehoiada the priest had commanded, and took every man his men that were to come in on the sabbath, with them that were to go out on the sabbath: for Jehoiada the priest dismissed not ^pthe courses.

9 Moreover, Jehoiada the priest delivered to the captains of hundreds ^qspears, and bucklers, and shields, that had been king David's, which were in the house of God.

10 And he set all the people, every man having his weapon in his hand, from the right ^rside of the temple to the left side of the temple, ^salong by the altar and the temple, by the king round about.

11 Then ^tthey brought out the king's son, and ^uput upon him the crown, and ^vgave him ^wthe testimony, and made him king; and Jehoiada and his sons ^xanointed him, and said, ^yGod save the king.

12 ¶ Now, ^zwhen Athaliah heard the noise of the people running and praising the king, ^ashe came to the people into the house of the LORD.

13 And she looked, and, behold, ^bthe king stood at his pillar at the entering in, ^cand the princes and the trumpets by the king: and ^dall the people of the land rejoiced, and ^esounded with trumpets; also ^fthe singers with instruments of musick, and such as taught to sing praise. Then Athaliah rent her clothes, and said, ^gTreason, treason!

14 Then Jehoiada the priest brought out the captains of hundreds that were set over the host, and said unto them, Have her forth of the ranges; and ^hwhoso followeth her, let him be slain with the sword. For the priest said, ⁱSlay her not in the house of the LORD.

15 So they laid hands on her: and when she was come to the entering of the horse-gate, by the king's house, they slew her there.

16 ¶ And Jehoiada ^jmade a covenant between him, and between all the people, and between the king, ^kthat they should be the LORD's people.

house of Baal, and brake it down, and ^mbrake his altars and his images in pieces, and slew Mattan the priest of Baal before the altars.

18 Also Jehoiada appointed the offices of the house of the LORD by the hand of the priests the Levites, whom David had distributed in the house of the LORD, to offer the burnt-offerings of the LORD, ⁿas it is written in the law of Moses, with rejoicing and with singing, ^oas it was ordained ^pby David.

19 And he set the porters at the gates of the house of the LORD, that none ^qwhich was unclean in any thing should enter in.

20 And he took the captains of hundreds, and the nobles, and the governors of the people, and all the people of the land, and brought down the king from the house of the LORD: and they came through the high gate into the king's house, and set the king upon the throne of the kingdom.

21 And ^rall the people of the land rejoiced: and the city was quiet, after that they had slain Athaliah with the sword.

CHAPTER XXIV.

1 Joash reigneth well all the days of Jehoiada. 15 Jehoiada being dead, 17 Joash falleth to idolatry. 25 He is slain by his servants.

JOASH ^swas seven years old when he began to reign; and he reigned forty years in Jerusalem: his mother's name also was Zibiah of Beer-sheba.

2 And ^tJoash did ^uthat which was right in the sight of the LORD ^vall the days of Jehoiada the priest.

3 And Jehoiada ^wtook for him ^xtwo wives; and he begat sons and daughters.

4 ¶ And it came to pass after this, ^ythat Joash was minded to ^zrepair the house of the LORD.

5 And he gathered together the priests and the Levites, and said to them, Go out unto the cities of Judah, and ^agather of all Israel money to repair the house of your God from year to year, and see that ye hasten the matter: ^bhowbeit the Levites hastened it not.

6 And the king called for Jehoiada the chief, and said unto him, ^cWhy hast thou not required of the Levites to bring in, out of Judah, and out of Jerusalem, ^dthe collection, ^eaccording to the commandment of Moses, the servant of the LORD, and of the congregation of Israel, for the ^ftabernacle of witness?

factory, and lasting, in proportion as they are popular. The Reformation from Popery supplies an example. In those nations where the rulers reformed against the wishes of the people, the work was imperfect—subject to changes and fluctuation; but where the people took the lead, in opposition to the government, the change was deep, general, and permanent. One thing only was requisite to complete the satisfaction of the people—the death of Athaliah; and that accomplished, the city was quiet.

Chap. XXIV. 1-14. The greatest blessing, next to a good and wise parent, is a good and wise tutor or guardian. Joash was greatly indebted to the counsel of Jehoiada, to whom, mainly, is to be ascribed the good which distinguished the commencement of his reign. The king's zeal on behalf of the temple was praiseworthy, although the tardiness of the priests and Levites rebounded but little to their credit. Here the princes and the people acted a far more exemplary part, shewing that there was the utmost readiness among them to advance the great work on which the king had set his heart. Athaliah, "that wicked woman," had greatly damaged the House of the Lord; and the large sum which was necessary to repair it, was forthcoming to an extent greater than the necessities of the case required. Ver. 15-27. The death of Jehoiada was a great calamity both to the king and the country. His burial became the wicked woman, had broken up the house of God; and also all the dedicated things of the house of the LORD ²did they bestow upon Baalim.

8 And ^oat the king's commandment they made a chest, and set it without at the gate of the house of the LORD.

9 And they made a ²proclamation through Judah and Jerusalem, to bring in to the LORD the ³collection that Moses, the servant of God, laid upon Israel in the wilderness.

10 And all the princes, and all the people ⁴rejoiced, and brought in, and cast into the chest, until they had made an end.

11 Now it came to pass, that ⁵at what time the chest was brought unto the king's office by the hand of the Levites, and when they saw that there was much money, the king's scribe and the high priest's officer came and emptied the chest, and took it, and carried it to his place again. Thus they did day by day, and gathered money in abundance.

12 And the king and Jehoiada ⁶gave it to such as did the work of the service of the house of the LORD, and hired ⁷masons and carpenters to repair the house of the LORD, and also such as wrought iron and brass to mend the house of the LORD.

13 So the workmen wrought, and ⁸the work was perfected by them, and they set the house of God ⁹in his state, and strengthened it.

14 And when they had finished ¹⁰it, they brought the rest of the money before the king and Jehoiada, whereof were made ¹¹vessels for the house of the LORD, even ¹²vessels to minister, and ¹³to offer withal, and spoons, and vessels of gold and silver: and they ¹⁴offered burnt-offerings in the house of the LORD continually ¹⁵all the days of Jehoiada.

15 ¹⁶¶ But Jehoiada waxed old, and was ¹⁷full of days when he died; ¹⁸an hundred and thirty years old was he when he died.

16 And they buried him ¹⁹in the city of David among the kings, ²⁰because he had done good in Israel, both toward God, and toward his house.

17 ²¹¶ Now ²²after the death of Jehoiada came ²³the princes of Judah, and made obeisance to the king: then the king hearkened unto them.

18 And ²⁴they left the house of the LORD God of their fathers, and served groves and idols; and ²⁵wrath came upon Judah and Jerusalem for this their trespass.

19 Yet ²⁶he sent prophets to them, to bring them again unto the LORD; and they testified against them: but they would not ¹give ear.

20 And ²the Spirit of God ³came upon Zechariah ⁴the son of Jehoiada the priest, which stood above the people, and said unto them, Thus saith God, ⁵Why transgress ye the commandments of the LORD, that ye cannot prosper? ⁶Because ye have forsaken the LORD, he hath also forsaken you.

21 And they ⁷conspired against him, and ⁸stoned him with stones at the commandment of the king in the court of the house of the LORD.

22 Thus Joash the king ⁹remembered not the kindness which Jehoiada his father had done to him, but slew his son: and when he died, he said, ¹⁰The LORD look upon ¹¹it, and require ¹²it.

23 ¹³¶ And it came to pass ¹⁴at the end of the year, that ¹⁵the host of Syria came up against him: and they came to Judah and Jerusalem, and destroyed all the princes of the people from among the people, and sent all the spoil of them unto the king of ¹⁶Damascus.

24 For the army of the Syrians ¹⁷came with a small company of men, and the LORD ¹⁸delivered a very great host into their hand, because they had forsaken the LORD God of their fathers: ¹⁹so they executed judgment against Joash.

25 And when they were departed from him, (for they left him in great diseases,) his own servants conspired against him ²⁰for the blood of the sons of Jehoiada the priest, and slew him on his bed, and he died; and they buried him in the city of David, but they buried him not in the sepulchres of the kings.

26 And these ²¹are they that conspired against him; ²²Zabad the son of Shimeath an Ammonitess, and Jehoabad the son of ²³Shimrith a Moabitess.

27 ²⁴¶ Now ²⁵concerning his sons, and the greatness of the ²⁶burdens laid upon him, and the ²⁷repairing of the house of God, behold, they ²⁸are written in the ²⁹1st story of the book of the Kings: and Amaziah his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XXV.

¹ Amariah beginneth to reign well. ² Having hired an army of Israelites against the Edomites, 11 he overthroweth them. 17 He provoketh Joash to his overthrow.

AMAZIAH ³was ⁴twenty and five years old when he began to reign; and he reigned twenty and nine years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Jehoaddan of Jerusalem.

signal for backsliding. As one sinner "destroyeth much good," the removal of one saint may prove the outlet of much evil. The prophets of the Lord did their duty; but so infatuated were the people, that they would not listen to the voice of merciful correction and gracious warning. The worst, however, was yet to come. Joash, the king, forgot his aged friend, Jehoiada, and all his kindness, and the benefits thence derived, and actually slew his faithful son for testifying on behalf of God! The punishment of this wicked deed came speedily—a handful of Syrians sufficed to overthrow the host of the Israelites, forasmuch as they had forsaken the God of their fathers.

Chap. XXV. 1-18. Amariah, upon the whole, made a bad beginning, and a worse end. Yet the address of the prophet was not wholly lost upon him; he complied, and found his account in it. There is no hatred greater than that which springs from mortified pride; these disbanded soldiers, therefore, wreaked their vengeance upon the unoffending cities of Judah. Ver. 14-16. Amariah adds another to the numerous examples of royal infatua-

2 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, but not with a perfect heart.

3 ¶ Now it came to pass, when the kingdom was established to him, that he slew his servants that had killed the king his father:

4 But he slew not their children, but did as it is written in the law in the book of Moses, where the LORD commanded, saying, The fathers shall not die for the children, neither shall the children die for the fathers, but every man shall die for his own sin.

5 ¶ Moreover, Amaziah gathered Judah together, and made them captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, according to the houses of their fathers, throughout all Judah and Benjamin: and he numbered them from twenty years old and above, and found them three hundred thousand choice men, able to go forth to war, that could handle spear and shield.

6 He hired also an hundred thousand mighty men of valour out of Israel for an hundred talents of silver.

7 But there came a man of God to him, saying, O king, let not the army of Israel go with thee: for the LORD is not with Israel, to wit, with all the children of Ephraim.

8 But if thou wilt go, do it, be strong for the battle; God shall make thee fall before the enemy: for the LORD hath power to help, and to cast down.

9 And Amaziah said to the man of God, But what shall we do for the hundred talents which I have given to the army of Israel? And the man of God answered, The LORD is able to give thee much more than this.

10 Then Amaziah separated them, to wit, the army that was come to him out of Ephraim, to go home again: wherefore their anger was greatly kindled against Judah, and they returned home in great anger.

11 ¶ And Amaziah strengthened himself, and led forth his people, and went to the valley of Salt, and smote of the children of Seir ten thousand.

12 And other ten thousand left alive did the children of Judah carry away captive, and brought them unto the top of the rock, and cast them down from the top of the rock, that they all were broken in pieces.

13 ¶ But the soldiers of the army which Amaziah sent back, that they should not go with him to battle, fell upon the cities of Judah, from Samaria even unto Beth-horon, and smote three thousand of them, and took much spoil.

14 ¶ Now it came to pass, after that Amaziah was come from the slaughter of the Edomites, that he brought the gods of the children of Seir, and set them up to be his gods, and bowed down himself before them, and burned incense unto them.

15 Wherefore the anger of the LORD was kindled against Amaziah, and he sent unto him a prophet, which said unto him, Why hast thou sought after the gods of the people, which could not deliver their own people out of thine hand?

16 And it came to pass, as he talked with him, that the king said unto him, Art thou made of the king's counsel? forbear; why shouldst thou be smitten? Then the prophet forbore, and said, I know that God hath determined to destroy thee, because thou hast done this, and hast not hearkened unto my counsel.

17 ¶ Then Amaziah king of Judah took advice, and sent to Joash, the son of Jehoahaz, the son of Jehu, king of Israel, saying, Come, let us see one another in the face.

18 And Joash king of Israel sent to Amaziah king of Judah, saying, The thistle that was in Lebanon sent to the cedar that was in Lebanon, saying, Give thy daughter to my son to wife: and there passed by a wild beast that was in Lebanon, and trode down the thistle.

19 Thou sayest, Lo, thou hast smitten the Edomites, and thine heart lifteth thee up to boast: abide now at home; why shouldst thou meddle to thine hurt, that thou shouldst fall, even thou, and Judah with thee?

20 But Amaziah would not hear; for it came of God, that he might deliver them into the hand of their enemies, because they sought after the gods of Edom.

21 So Joash the king of Israel went up; and they saw one another in the face, both he and Amaziah king of Judah, at Beth-shemesh, which belongeth to Judah.

22 And Judah was put to the worse before Israel, and they fled every man to his tent.

23 And Joash the king of Israel took Amaziah king of Judah, the son of Joash, the son of Jehoahaz, at Beth-shemesh, and brought him to Jerusalem, and brake down the wall of Jerusalem, from the tion touching idolatry,—actually adopting and worshipping images of the Edomites whom he had conquered. The appeal of the prophet ought to have cut him to the heart, and deeply humbled him in his own esteem; but it was not so. He scorned and menaced the man of God, ordering him to persevere at the peril of his life! The prophet obeyed, but not without the stern intimation, "I know that God hath determined to destroy thee, because thou hast done this, and not hearkened to my counsel." The fearful testimony was still despised, and vengeance arrived in due course. Ver. 17-23. The sentence had gone forth, and none could reverse it. The counsel of Joash was good, but the infatuated monarch despised it; and thus, by his own perversity, he fulfilled the purposes of God concerning himself. Not only was his army slain and dispersed, but he himself was taken captive. From the time of his worshipping the gods of Edom, his downward career commenced, and terminated in his slaughter at the hands of conspirators. Here, then, we have another example of the awful consequences of self-sufficiency, contempt of warning, and rejection of mercy.

24 And he took ²all the gold and the silver, and all the vessels that were found in the house of God with Obed-edom, and the treasures of the king's house, the hostages also, and returned to Samaria.

25 ¶ And Amaziah the son of Joash king of Judah lived after the death of ³Joash, son of Jehoahaz king of Israel, fifteen years.

26 Now the ⁴rest of the acts of Amaziah, first and last, behold, are they not written in the book of the Kings of Judah and Israel?

27 ¶ Now, after the time that Amaziah did turn away from following the LORD, they ⁵made a conspiracy against him in Jerusalem; and he fled to Lachish: but they sent to Lachish after him, and slew him there.

28 And they brought him upon horses, and buried him with his fathers in ⁶the city of Judah.

CHAPTER XXVI.

1 Uzziah succeeded Amaziah, and reigned well in the days of Zechariah: ⁷9 his buildings: ⁸11 his host, and engines of war: ⁹16 he invaded the priest's office, and is smitten with leprosy: ¹⁰23 his death, &c.

THEN ¹¹all the people of Judah took ¹²Uzziah, who was sixteen years old, and made him king in the room of his father Amaziah.

2 He built ¹³Eloth, and ¹⁴restored it to Judah, after that the king slept with his fathers.

3 Sixteen years old was ¹⁵Uzziah when he began to reign, and he reigned fifty and two years in Jerusalem: his mother's name also was ¹⁶Jecoliah of Jerusalem.

4 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, ¹⁷according to all that his father Amaziah did.

5 And ¹⁸he sought God in the days of Zechariah, who ¹⁹had understanding in the ²⁰visions of God: and ²¹as long as he sought the LORD, God made him to prosper.

6 And he went forth and ²²warred against the Philistines, and brake down ²³the wall of Gath, and the wall of Jabneh, and the wall of Ashdod, and built cities ²⁴about Ashdod, and among the Philistines.

7 And ²⁵God helped him against the Philistines, and against ²⁶the Arabians that dwelt in Gur-baal, and the Me-hunims.

even to the entering in of Egypt; for he strengthened himself exceedingly.

9 ¶ Moreover, Uzziah built towers in Jerusalem, at ¹the corner-gate, and at ²the valley-gate, and at ³the turning of the wall, and ⁴fortified them.

10 Also he built towers in the desert, and ⁵digged many wells: for ⁶he had much cattle, both in the low country, and in the plains; husbandmen also, and vine-dressers in the mountains, and in ⁷Carmel: for he loved ⁸husbandry.

11 ¶ Moreover, Uzziah had an host of fighting men, that ⁹went out to war by bands, according to the number of their account by the hand of Jeiel the scribe, and Maaseiah the ruler, under the hand of Hananiah, one of the king's captains.

12 The whole number of the chief of the fathers of the mighty men of valour were two thousand and six hundred.

13 And under their hand was ¹⁰an army, ¹¹three hundred thousand, and seven thousand and five hundred, that made war with mighty power, to help the king against the enemy.

14 And Uzziah prepared for them, throughout all the host, shields, and spears, and helmets, and habergeons, and bows, and ¹²slings to cast stones.

15 And he made in Jerusalem engines, invented by ¹³cunning men, to be on the towers, and upon the bulwarks, to shoot arrows and great stones withal: and his name ¹⁴spread far abroad; for he was marvelously helped, till he was strong.

16 ¶ But ¹⁵when he was strong, his heart was lifted up to his destruction: for he transgressed against the LORD his God, and ¹⁶went into the temple of the LORD ¹⁷to burn incense upon the altar of incense.

17 And ¹⁸Azariah the priest went in after him, and with him fourscore priests of the LORD, that were ¹⁹valiant men;

18 And they ²⁰withstood Uzziah the king, and said unto him, It appertaineth not unto thee, Uzziah, to burn incense unto the LORD, but ²¹to the priests the sons of Aaron, that are consecrated to burn incense: go out of the sanctuary; for thou hast trespassed: ²²neither shall it be for thine honour from the LORD God.

19 Then Uzziah was wroth, and ²³had a censer in his hand to burn incense: and, while he was wroth with the priests, ²⁴the leprosy even rose up in his forehead before the priests in the house of the LORD, from beside the incense altar.

Chap. XXVI. 1-15. Uzziah, notwithstanding the early period at which his reign began, did well. "He sought God in the days of Zechariah, who had understanding in the visions of God; and as long as he sought the Lord, God made him to prosper." What words are these! What a lesson they communicate! They concern every human being; and none who act upon the principle here set forth will ever be disappointed. Ver. 16-23. Prosperity produced its usual effects; the heart of the once humble and zealous king was lifted up to his own destruction; forgetting the commandments of Moses, and despising the arrangements of the Most High, and setting aside the priests, he entered with uplifted mind, and with unhallowed footsteps, into the Temple of the Lord to burn incense. But his impiety cost him dear. The priests acted, as became them, with all fidelity and boldness, laying down the law, and the Lord forthwith confirmed their decision by inflicting on the infatuated king one of the heaviest calamities that could have befallen him. Leprosy laid hold upon him, and clave to him till the day of his death, which led to all the discomfort and humiliation of living apart in a separate house, and in his utter separation from the House of the Lord, which he had so rashly dishonoured.

20 And Azariah the chief priest, and all the priests, looked upon him, and, behold, he was leprous in his forehead, and they thrust him out from thence; yea, himself hasted also to go out, because ¹the LORD had smitten him.

21 And Uzziah the king was a leper unto the day of his death, and ²dwelt in a ³several house, being a leper; for he was cut off from the house of the LORD: and Jotham his son was over the king's house, judging the people of the land.

22 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Uzziah, first and last, did ¹Isaiah the prophet, the son of Amoz, write.

23 So Uzziah slept with his fathers, and they buried him with his fathers in the field of the burial which belonged to the kings; for they said, He is a leper: and Jotham his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XXVII.

1 Jotham reigneth well and prospereth. 5 he subdeth the Ammonites: 7 his reign: 9 Ahaz succeedeth him.

JOTHAM was ¹twenty and five years old when he began to reign; and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem: his mother's name also was Jerushah, the daughter of Zadok.

2 And ²he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his father Uzziah did: howbeit ³he entered not into the temple of the LORD. And ⁴the people did yet corruptly.

3 ¶ He built the ⁵high gate of the house of the LORD, and on the wall of ¹Ophel he built much.

4 Moreover, ²he built cities in ³the mountains of Judah, and in the forests he built castles and towers.

5 ¶ He fought also with ⁴the king of the Ammonites, and prevailed against them. And the children of Ammon gave him the same year an hundred talents of silver, and ten thousand measures of wheat, and ten thousand of barley. ²So much did the children of Ammon pay unto him, both the second year and the third.

6 So Jotham became mighty, because he ³prepared his ways before the LORD his God.

7 ¶ Now ¹the rest of the acts of Jotham, and all his wars, and his ways, lo, they are written in the book of the Kings of Israel and Judah.

8 He was five and twenty years old when he began to reign, and reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem.

9 ¶ And ¹Ahaz Jotham slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city of David; and Ahaz his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

1 Ahaz, reigning wickedly, is afflicted by the Syrians: 26 he dying, Hezekiah succeedeth him.

AHAZ was twenty years old when he began to reign; and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem: but he did not that which was right in the sight of the LORD, ¹like David his father:

2 For ²he walked in the ways of the kings of Israel, and made also ³molten images for ⁴Baalim.

3 Moreover, ¹he burnt incense in ²the valley of the son of Hinnom, and ³burnt his children in the fire, ⁴after the abominations of the heathen, whom the LORD had cast out before the children of Israel.

4 He ¹sacrificed also and burnt incense in the high places, and on the hills, and under every green tree.

5 Wherefore the LORD ¹his God ²delivered him into the hand of the king of Syria; and they smote him, and carried away a great multitude of them captives, and brought them to ³Damascus: and he was also delivered into the hand of the king of Israel, who smote him with a great slaughter.

6 For ²Pekah the son of Remaliah slew in Judah ³an hundred and twenty thousand in one day, which were all ⁴valiant men; ⁵because they had forsaken the LORD God of their fathers.

7 And Zichri, a mighty man of Ephraim, slew Maaseiah the king's son, and Azrikam the governor of the house, and Elkanah that was ⁴next to the king.

8 And the children of Israel ²carried away captive of their ³brethren two hundred thousand, women, sons, and daughters, and took also away much spoil from them, and brought the spoil to Samaria.

9 But a prophet of the LORD was there, whose name was Oded: and ¹he went out before the host that came to Samaria, and said unto them, Behold, ²because the LORD God of your fathers was wroth with Judah, he hath delivered them into your hand, and ye have slain them in a rage that reacheth up unto heaven.

The punishment was not greater than the sin; and through it the king became a lasting monument of the Divine displeasure, and a warning to the heady and the high-minded.

Chap. XXVII. 1-9. Jotham entered upon his office in a proper spirit, but the people "did yet corruptly." It is not often that a sovereign is better than his subjects; but the present case supplies an exception. He became mighty because "he prepared his ways before the Lord his God," finely exemplifying the doctrine, "Wisdom's ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace." The short way to be mighty is in a man's own sight to be nothing, that God may be all in all. The history of Jotham, although short, is pregnant with important lessons, and full of encouragement to the single-minded. If his career was brief, it was honourable, and he was cut off at a time when his praise was in every mouth, and his virtues acknowledged by the whole body of the people. His death was a cause of sorrow, not of joy. It ought to be the ambition of every man so to live, that when he dies he may be missed in the walks of excellence. The man who goes about doing good, whatever his station in life, is always sure of success in some measure, and, by consequence, his disappearance from the earth will leave a blank which will excite a sigh.

Chap. XXVIII. 1-15. Ahaz set out badly, and increased in wickedness as he advanced. His responsibility was great, from the excellence of his training, and the beauty of the example which was set before him: but he neglected alike his advantages, and proved unworthy of his office. The penalty of forsaking God, as 10 And now ye purpose to ^ukeep under the children of Judah and Jerusalem for bond-men and bond-women unto you: but are there ^vnot with you, even with you, sins against ^wthe LORD your God?

11 Now hear me therefore, and ^xdeliver the captives again, which ye have taken captive of your brethren; for ^ythe fierce wrath of the LORD is upon you.

12 Then certain of ^zthe heads of the children of Ephraim, Azariah the son of Johanan, Berechiah the son of Meshillemoth, and Jehizkiah the son of Shallum, and Amasa the son of Hadlai, ^astood up against them that came from the war, 13 And said unto them, Ye shall not bring in the captives hither: for whereas we have offended against the Lord already, ye intend to ^badd more to our sins and to our trespass: for our trespass is great, and there is fierce wrath against Israel.

14 So the armed men left the captives and the spoil before the princes and all the congregation.

15 And the men which were ^cexpressed by name rose up, and took the captives, and with the spoil ^dclothed all that were naked among them, and arrayed them, and shod them, and ^egave them to eat and to drink, and anointed them, and carried all the feeble of them upon asses, and brought them to Jericho, ^fthe city of palm-trees, to their brethren: then they returned to Samaria.

16 ¶ At that time ^gdid king Ahaz send unto the kings of Assyria to help him.

17 For again ^hthe Edomites had come and smitten Judah, and carried away ⁱcaptives.

18 The ^jPhilistines also had invaded the cities of the low country, and of the south of Judah, and had taken ^kBeth-shemesh, and ^lAjalon, and ^mGederoth, and ⁿShocho with the villages thereof, and ^oTimnah with the villages thereof, Gimzo also and the villages thereof: and they dwelt there.

19 For ^pthe LORD brought Judah low ^qbecause of Ahaz king of ^rIsrael; for he ^smade Judah naked, and transgressed sore against the LORD.

20 And ^tTilgath-pilneser king of Assyria came unto him, and ^udistressed him, but strengthened him not.

set forth in ver. 6, was exacted in a terrible manner; one hundred and twenty thousand slain men proclaimed the transgression of Judah! The protest of Oded was excellent, and produced its effect. "Are there not with you, even with you, sins against the Lord?" was an appeal which it was difficult to withstand. The result was the surrender of the captives, and the return of the conquerors to their own country. A bad king is the greatest of calamities. Ver. 16-27. The king of Assyria is a very meet emblem of false confidence amongst men. He only "distressed" those who sought his aid; he took the sacrilegious bribe with open hand from Ahaz, "but he helped him not." Nothing, however, could instruct Ahaz. Having been separated by his sins from the true God, he had recourse to the Syrian gods to see what help he might obtain in that quarter, "but they were the ruin of him, and of all Israel." He that forsakes God for an idol will very soon feel that he has made a poor 21 For ^aAhaz took away a portion out of the house of the LORD, and out of the house of the king, and of the princes, and gave it unto the king of Assyria: but he helped him not.

22 ¶ And ^bin the time of his distress did he trespass yet more against the LORD: ^cthis is that king Ahaz.

23 For ^dhe sacrificed unto the gods of ^eDamascus, which smote him; and he said, ^fBecause the gods of the kings of Syria help them, therefore will I ^gsacrifice to them, that they may help me: but ^hthey were the ruin of him, and of all Israel.

24 And Ahaz gathered together the vessels of the house of God, and ⁱcut in pieces the vessels of the house of God, and shut up the doors of the house of the LORD, and ^jhe made him altars in every corner of Jerusalem.

25 And in every several city of Judah he made high places to ^kburn incense unto other gods, and provoked to anger the LORD God of his fathers.

26 ¶ Now ^lthe rest of his acts, and of all his ways, first and last, behold, they ^mare written in the book of the Kings of Judah and Israel.

27 And Ahaz slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city, even in Jerusalem; but they brought him not into the sepulchres of the kings of Israel: and Hezekiah his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XXIX.

1 Hezekiah's good reign: 3 he restoreth religion. 12 The house of God cleansed.

HZEKIAH^a began to reign when he was five and twenty years old; and he reigned nine and twenty years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Abijah, the daughter of ^bZechariah.

2 And he ^cdid that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that David his father had done.

3 ¶ He, ^din the first year of his reign, in the first month, ^eopened the doors of the house of the LORD, and repaired them.

4 And he brought in the priests and the Levites, and gathered them together into the ^feast street,

5 And said unto them, ^gHear me, ye and perilous exchange. Ahaz consummated his iniquity by cutting in pieces the vessels of the Lord, shutting up the doors of the Lord's house, and making altars in every corner of Jerusalem. The man who did so shewed that he was a vessel meet for destruction; one disaster accordingly followed another, till at last he reached his limits, when he was removed, that he might give place to a better man.

Chap. XXIX. 1-11. Hezekiah had much work to do, with a heart and a hand to set about it. He opened his royal commission in an excellent spirit, and success attended every step of his progress. Knowing how much depended upon the priesthood and the Levites, his exhortation to them was close, fervent, and parental. "My sons, be not now negligent, for the Lord hath chosen you to stand before him to serve him." A good king, intent upon good works, will never want for co-operation.

Levites; Sanctify now yourselves, and ^asanctify the house of the LORD God of your fathers, and carry forth the filthiness out of the holy place.

6 For ^aour fathers have trespassed, and done that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD our God, and ^ahave forsaken him, and have ^aturned away their faces from the habitation of the LORD, and ^aturned their backs.

7 Also ^mthey have shut up the doors of the porch, and put out the lamps, and have not burnt incense, nor offered burnt-offerings in the holy place unto the God of Israel.

8 ^aWherefore the wrath of the LORD was upon Judah and Jerusalem, and he hath delivered them to ^atrouble, ^oto astonishment, and to hissing, as ye see with your eyes.

9 For, lo, ^pour fathers have fallen by the sword; and our sons, and our daughters, and our wives, are in captivity for this.

10 Now it is in mine heart ^ato make a covenant with the LORD God of Israel, that his fierce wrath may turn away from us.

11 My sons, be not now ^anegligent; for ^athe LORD hath chosen you to stand before him, to serve him, and that ye should minister unto him, and ^aburn incense.

12 ¶ Then the Levites arose, Mahath the son of Amasai, and Joel the son of Azariah, of the sons of the ^aKohathites: and of the sons of Merari; Kish the son of Abdi, and Azariah the son of Jehalelel: and of the Gershonites; Joah the son of Zimmah, and Eden the son of Joah:

13 And of the sons of ^aElizaphan; Shimri and Jeiel: and of the sons of ^aAsaph; Zechariah and Mattaniah:

14 And of the sons of Heman; Jehiel and Shimei: and of the sons of ^aJeduthun; Shemaiah and Uzziel.

15 And they gathered their brethren, and sanctified themselves, and came, according to the commandment of the king, ^aby the words of the LORD, ^vto cleanse the house of the LORD.

16 And the priests went into ^athe inner part of the house of the LORD, to cleanse it, and brought out ^aall the uncleanness that they found in the temple of the LORD into the court of the house of the LORD. And the Levites took it, to carry it out abroad into the brook ^bKidron.

17 Now they began on the first day of the first month to sanctify, and on the eighth day of the month came they to ^athe porch of the LORD: so they sanctified the house of the LORD in eight days; and in ^athe sixteenth day of the first month they made an end.

18 Then they went in to Hezekiah the king, and said, We have cleansed all the house of the LORD, and the altar of burnt-offering, with all the vessels thereof, and the shew-bread table, with all the vessels thereof.

19 Moreover, all the vessels, which king Ahaz in his reign did cast away in his transgression, have we prepared and sanctified, and, behold, they are before the altar of the LORD.

20 ¶ Then Hezekiah the king ^arose early, and gathered the rulers of the city, and went up to the house of the LORD.

21 And they brought ^aseven bullocks, and seven rams, and seven lambs, and seven he-goats, for ^aa sin-offering for the kingdom, and for the sanctuary, and for Judah: and he commanded the priests, the sons of Aaron, to offer them on the altar of the LORD.

22 So they killed the bullocks, and the priests received the blood, and ^asprinkled it on the altar: likewise, when they had killed the rams, they sprinkled the blood upon the altar: they killed also the lambs, and they sprinkled the blood upon the altar.

23 And they brought ^aforth the he-goats for the sin-offering before the king and the congregation; and ^athey laid their hands upon them.

24 And the priests killed them, and they made ^areconciliation with their blood upon the altar, to make an atonement for all Israel: for the king commanded that the burnt-offering and ^athe sin-offering should be made for all Israel.

25 And ^mhe set the Levites in the house of the LORD with cymbals, with psalteries, and with harps, ^aaccording to the commandment of David, and of ^aGad the king's seer, and ^aNathan the prophet: for so was the commandment ^vof the LORD by his prophets.

26 And the Levites stood with ^athe instruments of David, and ^athe priests with the trumpets.

27 And Hezekiah commanded to offer the burnt-offering upon the altar: and ^awhen the burnt-offering began, the song of the LORD began also with the trumpets, and with ^athe instruments ordained by David king of Israel.

28 And ^aall the congregation worshipped, and the ^asingers sang, and the trumpeters sounded: and all this continued until the burnt-offering was finished.

29 And when they had made an end of offering, the king, and all that were ^apresent with him, ^abowed themselves, and worshipped.

30 Moreover, Hezekiah the king and the princes commanded the Levites to sing praise unto the LORD ^awith the words of David, and of Asaph the seer:

Ver. 34-36. Numerous although the priesthood seemed sometimes to be, they were never greater than the work required; and on the present occasion the force was not complete. This circumstance sufficed to illustrate the flexible character of the Jewish institutions. Where the legally appointed instrumentality could not be commanded, it became not only lawful but obligatory to choose the next best. Acting on this principle, the Levites united with the priests for the honour of performing the same duties. It was not to the honour of the priests that "the Levites were more upright in heart to sanctify themselves than the priests." The and ²they sang praises with gladness, and they bowed their heads and worshipped.

31 Then Hezekiah answered and said, Now ye have ³consecrated yourselves unto the LORD, come near, and bring ⁴sacrifices and ⁵thank-offerings into the house of the LORD. And the congregation brought in sacrifices and thank-offerings; and ⁶as many as were of a free heart, burnt-offerings.

32 And ⁷the number of the burnt-offerings, which the congregation brought, was threescore and ten bullocks, an hundred rams, and two hundred lambs: all these were for a burnt-offering to the LORD.

33 And the consecrated things were six hundred oxen, and three thousand sheep.

34 But the priests were too few, so that they could not flay all the burnt-offerings: wherefore ⁸their brethren the Levites ⁹did help them, till the work was ended, and until the other priests had sanctified themselves; for the Levites were more ¹⁰upright in heart to sanctify themselves than the priests.

35 And also the burnt-offerings were in abundance, with the fat of the peace-offerings, and ¹¹the drink-offerings for every burnt-offering. So the service of the house of the LORD was set in order.

36 And ¹²Hezekiah rejoiced, and all the people, that ¹³God had prepared the people: for the thing was done suddenly.

CHAPTER XXX.

1 Hezekiah proclaimeth a passover. 13 The assembly destroy the altars of idolatry.

AND Hezekiah sent to all Israel and Judah, and wrote letters ²also to Ephraim and Manasseh, that they should come ³to the house of the LORD at Jerusalem, ⁴to keep the passover unto the LORD God of Israel.

2 For the king had taken counsel, and his princes, and all the congregation in Jerusalem, to keep the passover ⁵in the second month.

3 For they could not keep it ⁶at that time, because the priests had not sanctified themselves sufficiently, neither had the people gathered themselves together to Jerusalem.

4 And the thing ⁷pleased the king and all the congregation.

5 So they established a decree ⁸to make proclamation throughout all Israel, ⁹from Beer-sheba even to Dan, that they should come to keep the passover unto the LORD

God of Israel at Jerusalem: for they had not done ¹it of a long time in such sort as it was written.

6 So the posts went with the letters from the ²king and his princes throughout all Israel and Judah, and according to the commandment of the king, saying, Ye children of Israel, ³turn again unto the LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, and he will return to the remnant of you that are escaped out of the hand of the kings of Assyria.

7 And be not ye like your fathers, and like your brethren, which trespassed against the LORD God of their fathers, who therefore gave them up to desolation, as ye see.

8 Now, ⁴be ye not stiff-necked, as your fathers were, but ⁵yield yourselves unto the LORD, and enter into his sanctuary, ⁶which he hath sanctified for ever; and ⁷serve the LORD your God, that the ⁸fierceness of his wrath may turn away from you.

9 For if ye turn again unto the LORD, your brethren and your children ⁹shall find compassion before them that lead them captive, ¹⁰so that they shall come again into this land: for ¹¹the LORD your God is gracious and merciful, and ¹²will not ¹³turn away ¹⁴his face from you, if ye return unto him.

10 So the posts passed from city to city, through the country of Ephraim and Manasseh, even unto Zebulun: but ¹⁵they laughed them to scorn, and mocked them.

11 Nevertheless divers of Asher, and Manasseh, and of Zebulun, ¹⁶humbled themselves, and came to Jerusalem.

12 Also in Judah ¹⁷the hand of God was to give them one heart to do ¹⁸the commandment of the king and of the princes, by the word of the LORD.

13 ¶ And there assembled at Jerusalem much people to keep the feast of unleavened bread in the second month, a very great congregation.

14 And they arose, and took away the ¹⁹altars that were in Jerusalem, and all the altars for incense took they away, and cast them into the brook Kidron.

15 Then they killed the passover on the fourteenth day of the second month: and the priests and the Levites were ashamed, ²⁰and sanctified themselves, and brought in the burnt-offerings into the house of the LORD.

16 And they stood in their ²¹place, after piety of the priesthood ought to have been in the highest degree shining. Their duties required this; a lower state of accomplishment was supposed to suffice for the Levites, although it doubtless became both to love the Lord their God with their whole hearts. Hezekiah had much ground for exultation when he beheld the zeal, liberality, and devotedness of the people, whose heart the Lord had prepared. Whatever God does is well done; and he has but to touch the heart to make his people willing to do all his pleasure.

Chap. XXX. 1-12. The tone of mind in which the king proclaimed a passover was eminently calculated to animate the hearts of the faithful; but to the sons of Belial it was an occasion for contempt and neglect. Several whole tribes "laughed the posts to scorn, and mocked them." It was not thus, however, in other places, and particularly in Judah, where the hand of the Lord gave the people "one heart to do the commandment of the king." Here again we see beautifully exemplified the success of the king, and the operation of an invisible Hand disposing them to do that which it was their duty to do. Ver. 13-27. To some extent, both the priests and the Levites were faulty, lagging far behind the zealous king. They were, nevertheless, "ashamed," which indicates that they were not yet thoroughly hard-their manner, according to the law of Moses, the man of God: the priests sprinkled the blood, which they received of the hand of the Levites:

17 For there were many in the congregation that were not sanctified; therefore the Levites had the charge of the killing of the passovers for every one that was not clean, to sanctify them unto the LORD.

18 For a multitude of the people, even many of Ephraim, and Manasseh, Issachar, and Zebulun, had not cleansed themselves, yet did they eat the passover otherwise than it was written: but Hezekiah prayed for them, saying, The good LORD pardon every one.

19 That prepareth his heart to seek God, the LORD God of his fathers, though he be not cleansed according to the purification of the sanctuary.

20 And the LORD hearkened to Hezekiah, and healed the people.

21 And the children of Israel, that were present at Jerusalem, kept the feast of unleavened bread seven days with great gladness: and the Levites and the priests praised the LORD day by day, singing with loud instruments unto the LORD.

22 And Hezekiah spake comfortably unto all the Levites that taught the good knowledge of the LORD: and they did eat throughout the feast seven days, offering peace-offerings, and making confession to the LORD God of their fathers.

23 And the whole assembly took counsel to keep other seven days: and they kept other seven days with gladness.

24 For Hezekiah king of Judah did give to the congregation a thousand bullocks, and seven thousand sheep; and the princes gave to the congregation a thousand bullocks, and ten thousand sheep: and a great number of priests sanctified themselves.

25 And all the congregation of Judah, with the priests and the Levites, and all the congregation that came out of Israel, and the strangers that came out of the land of Israel, and that dwelt in Judah, rejoiced.

26 So there was great joy in Jerusalem: for since the time of Solomon, the son of David king of Israel, there was not the like in Jerusalem.

27 Then the priests the Levites arose and blessed the people: and their voice was heard, and their prayer came up to his holy dwelling-place, even unto heaven.

CHAPTER XXXI.

1 The people forward in destroying idolatry. 11 Hezekiah appointeth officers to dispose of the tithes. 20 His sincerity of heart.

NOW, when all this was finished, all Israel that were present went out to the cities of Judah, and brake the images in pieces, and cut down the groves, and threw down the high places and the altars out of all Judah and Benjamin, in Ephraim also and Manasseh, until they had utterly destroyed them all. Then all the children of Israel returned, every man to his possession, into their own cities.

2 And Hezekiah appointed the courses of the priests, and the Levites after their courses, every man according to his service, the priests and Levites for burnt-offerings, and for peace-offerings, to minister, and to give thanks, and to praise in the gates of the tents of the LORD.

3 He appointed also the king's portion of his substance for the burnt-offerings, to wit, for the morning and evening burnt-offerings, and the burnt-offerings for the sabbaths, and for the new-moons, and for the set feasts, as it is written in the law of the LORD.

4 Moreover, he commanded the people that dwelt in Jerusalem to give the portion of the priests and the Levites, that they might be encouraged in the law of the LORD.

5 And as soon as the commandment came abroad, the children of Israel brought in abundance the first-fruits of corn, wine, and oil, and honey, and of all the increase of the field; and the tithe of all things brought they in abundantly.

6 And concerning the children of Israel and Judah, that dwelt in the cities of Judah, they also brought in the tithe of oxen and sheep, and the tithe of holy things which were consecrated unto the LORD their God, and laid them by heaps.

7 In the third month they began to lay the foundation of the heaps, and finished them in the seventh month.

8 And when Hezekiah and the princes came and saw the heaps, they blessed the LORD, and his people Israel.

9 Then Hezekiah questioned with the priests and the Levites concerning the heaps.

10 And Azariah the chief priest, of the house of Zadok, answered him, and said, Since the people began to bring the offerings into the house of the LORD, we have ended, and they therefore proceeded to sanctify themselves. From the haste, however, with which the affair was gone about, and other circumstances, great numbers were not legally qualified; but the prayer of the king secured for them an indemnity, which extended to every one that prepared his heart to seek the Lord God of his fathers, though he was not cleansed according to the purification of the sanctuary. The happy king, delighted with the spirit of the people, diffused life and gladness on every hand, speaking comfortably to the Levites, that "taught the good knowledge of the Lord." An affair so happily begun had a happy termination. The priests blessed the people, and their voice was heard, and their prayers came up even unto heaven. "Wherever the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty." Grace and joy go together.

Chap. XXXI. 1-19. While the people went on with the work of reformation, which they carried with a high and resistless hand, Hezekiah was at much pains to arrange the Temple Service, and to provide for its proper conduct. When piety prospered, the priests were cared for; on the present occasion, accordingly, we find that the supply so much exceeded the demand, as to require an arrangement for storing it up. While Hezekiah was careful to see that the priests and the Levites performed their duty, he was not less attentive to their comfort.

had enough to eat, and have left plenty: for ^bthe LORD hath blessed his people; and that which is left is this great store.

11 ¶ Then Hezekiah commanded to prepare ^cchambers in the house of the LORD; and they prepared them.

12 And brought in the offerings, and the tithes, and the dedicated things, faithfully; ^cover which Cononiah the Levite was ruler, and Shimei his brother was the next.

13 And Jehiel, and Azariah, and Nathath, and Asahel, and Jerimoth, and Jozabad, and Eliel, and Ismachiah, and Mahath, and Benaiah, were overseers, ^cunder the hand of Cononiah and Shimei his brother, at the commandment of Hezekiah the king, and ^dAzariah the ruler of the house of God.

14 And Kore, the son of Imnah the Levite, the porter toward the east, was over ^cthe free-will offerings of God, to distribute the oblations of the LORD, and ^cthe most holy things.

15 And ^cnext him were Eden, and Miniamin, and Jeshua, and Shemaiah, Amariah, and Shecaniah, in ^cthe cities of the priests, in their ^cset office, to give to their brethren by courses, as well to the great as to the small:

16 Besides their genealogy of males, from three years old and upward, even unto every one that entereth into the house of the LORD, ^bhis daily portion for their service in their charges, according to their courses;

17 Both to the ^cgenealogy of the priests by the house of their fathers, and the Levites from twenty years old and upward, in their charges, by their courses;

18 And to the genealogy of all their little ones, their wives, and their sons, and their daughters, through all the congregation: for in their ^cset office ^cthey sanctified themselves in holiness:

19 Also of the sons of Aaron the priests, which were in ^cthe fields of the suburbs of their cities, in every several city, the men that were expressed by name, to give portions to all the males among the priests, and to all that were reckoned by genealogies among the Levites.

20 ¶ And thus did Hezekiah throughout all Judah, and ^mwrought that which was good, and right, and truth, before the LORD his God.

21 And in every work that he began in the service of the house of God, and in the law, and in the commandments, to

CHAPTER XXXII.

1 Sennacherib invadeth Judah. 21 An angel destroyeth the Assyrians. 24 Hezekiah's sickness and recovery: 32 he dying, Manasseh succeedeth him.

AFTER these things, and the establishment thereof, Sennacherib ^bking of Assyria came, and entered into Judah, and encamped against the fenced cities, and thought to ^cwin them for himself.

2 And when Hezekiah saw that Sennacherib was come, and that ^che was purposed to fight against Jerusalem,

3 He ^ctook counsel with his princes and his mighty men to stop the waters of the fountains which were without the city; and they did help him.

4 So there was gathered much people together, who stopped all the fountains, and the brook that ^cran through the midst of the land, saying, Why should the kings of Assyria come, and find much water?

5 Also ^che strengthened himself, and built up all the wall that was broken, and raised it up to the towers, and another wall without, and repaired ^cMillo in the city of David, and made ^cdarts and shields in abundance.

6 And he set captains of war over the people, and gathered them together to him ^cin the street of the gate of the city, and spake ^ccomfortably to them, saying,

7 Be ^cstrong and courageous, be not afraid nor dismayed for the king of Assyria, nor for all the multitude that is with him: ^bfor there be more with us than with him.

8 With him is ^can arm of flesh; but ^cwith us is the LORD our God, to help us, and ^cto fight our battles. And the people ^crested themselves upon the words of Hezekiah king of Judah.

9 ¶ After this did Sennacherib king of Assyria send his servants to Jerusalem, (but he ^chimself laid siege against ^mLachish, and all his ^cpower with him,) unto Hezekiah king of Judah, and unto all Judah that were at Jerusalem, saying,

10 Thus saith Sennacherib king of Assyria, Whereon do ye trust, that ye abide in the ^csiege in Jerusalem?

11 Doth not Hezekiah persuade you ^cto give over yourselves to die by famine and by thirst, saying, ^cThe LORD our God shall deliver us out of the hand of the king of Assyria?

12 Hath not the same Hezekiah taken

This was a proper course to pursue. The labourer is worthy of his hire; and therefore the Lord Jesus has ordered that they who preach the gospel should live of the gospel. Ver. 20, 21. The testimony here borne to Hezekiah is in the highest degree honourable. He finely exemplified the doctrine of entire consecration. With him service was privilege; it was happiness to obey. In every work he began in the service of the house of God, "he did it with all his heart, and prospered."

Chap. XXXII. 1-8. Hezekiah, like a wise man, employed the season of tranquillity to prepare for troublesome times; and he had not very long to wait. The king of Assyria wantonly invaded his territory. This occasion sufficed to test the true spirit of the king, who most beautifully exemplified the higher qualities of manhood and of piety. The exhortations contained in ver. 7 and 8 are admirable for spirit, point, and piety. Hezekiah believed the Lord, and "the people rested upon the words of the king." The confidence here displayed by Hezekiah was most amply justified in the stupendous results that followed. Ver. 24-33. Having spoken at considerable length on the subject of this chapter already, it only remains to advert to the additional matter which away his high places and his altars, and commanded Judah and Jerusalem, saying, ¹Ye shall worship before ²one altar, and burn incense upon it?

13 Know ye not what ¹I and my fathers have done unto all the people of other lands? were the gods of the nations of those lands any ways able to deliver their lands out of mine hand?

14 Who was there among all the gods of those nations that my fathers utterly destroyed, that could deliver his people out of mine hand, that ²your God should be able to deliver you out of mine hand?

15 Now therefore let not Hezekiah deceive you, nor ¹persuade you on this manner, neither yet believe him: for no god of any nation or kingdom was able to deliver his people out of mine hand, and out of the hand of my fathers; how ²much less shall your God deliver you out of mine hand?

16 And his servants spake ²yet more against the LORD God, and ¹against his servant Hezekiah.

17 He wrote also letters to rail on the LORD God of Israel, and to speak against him, saying, ²As the gods of the nations of other lands have not delivered their people out of mine hand, so shall not the God of Hezekiah deliver his people out of mine hand.

18 Then they cried with a loud voice, in the Jews' speech, unto the people of Jerusalem that were on the wall, ²to affright them, and to trouble them, that they might take the city.

19 And they spake against ¹the God of Jerusalem, as against the gods of the people of the earth, which were ²the work of the hands of man.

20 ¶ And for this cause Hezekiah the king, and ²the prophet Isaiah, the son of Amoz, prayed and cried to heaven.

21 And ¹the LORD sent an ²angel, which ³cut off all the mighty men of valour, and ⁴the leaders and captains in the camp of the king of Assyria: so he returned ¹with shame of face to his own land. And when he was come into the house of his god, they that came forth of his own bowels ²slew him there with the sword.

22 Thus ¹the LORD saved Hezekiah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, from the hand of Sennacherib the king of Assyria, and from the hand of all other, and ²guided them on every side.

23 And many brought ²gifts unto the LORD to Jerusalem, and ¹presents to ¹Matt. 1. 10.

²Manasse.

Hezekiah king of Judah; so that he was magnified in the sight of all nations from thenceforth.

24 ¶ In those days ¹Hezekiah was sick to the death, and prayed unto the LORD: and he spake unto him, and he ²gave him a sign.

25 But Hezekiah ¹rendered not again according to the benefit done unto him; for ²his heart was lifted up: therefore there was wrath upon him, and upon Judah and Jerusalem.

26 Notwithstanding ¹Hezekiah humbled himself for the ²pride of his heart, (both he and the inhabitants of Jerusalem,) so that the wrath of the LORD came not upon them ³in the days of Hezekiah.

27 ¶ And Hezekiah had exceeding much riches and honour: and he made himself treasuries for silver, and for gold, and for precious stones, and for spices, and for shields, and for all manner of ⁴pleasant jewels;

28 Storehouses also for the increase of corn, and wine, and oil; and ⁵stalls for all manner of beasts, and cotes for flocks.

29 Moreover he provided him cities, and ⁶possessions of flocks and herds in abundance; for ⁷God had given him substance very much.

30 This same Hezekiah also stopped the upper water-course of Gihon, and brought it straight down to the west side of the city of David. ⁸And Hezekiah prospered in all his works.

31 ¶ Howbeit in the business of the ⁹ambassadors of the princes of Babylon, who sent unto him to enquire of the wonder that was done in the land, God ¹⁰left him, ¹¹to try him, ¹²that he might know all that was in his heart.

32 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Hezekiah, and his ¹³goodness, behold, they are written ¹⁴in the vision of Isaiah the prophet, the son of Amoz, and in the book of the Kings of Judah and Israel.

33 And Hezekiah slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the ¹⁵chiefest of the sepulchres of the sons of David; and all Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem ¹⁶did him honour at his death: and Manasseh his son reigned in his stead.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

1 Manasseh's wicked reign. 11 He is carried into Babylon, humbleth himself before God, is restored to his kingdom, and dieth. 20 Amon succeedeth him. 24 He is slain by his servants. 25 Josiah succeedeth him.

MANASSEH was twelve years old when he began to reign; and he reigned fifty and five years in Jerusalem:

is here set forth. In the passage before us, the errors of the king are stated with greater explicitness. "He did not render again according to the benefit done to him; for his heart was lifted up." This sufficiently accounts for his vain display, and for the offence which he thereby gave to the Lord. But notwithstanding this great and lamentable forgetfulness, the grace that was in him served to keep the Divine life alive, so that he humbled himself for the pride of his heart, and therefore the wrath was postponed till he had been gathered to his fathers. This case, which proved so severe a test, was designed of the Lord to humble him, and "God left him to try him, that he might know what was in his heart." It is only by temptation that the secrets of the soul are revealed. Peter never knew what was in him till Satan began the work of sifting, when he speedily brought out chaff in abundance from the wheat, which, however, was of an excellent character. And so with Hezekiah. That he was an eminently good and holy man, admits of no dispute. We have but this one spot darkening the lustre of a bright and a long career. As a fruit of Hezekiah's piety, he prospered in all his works; and when he died, he was mourned and honoured in an unusual degree by his people.

2 But did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, ¹like unto the abominations of the heathen, whom the LORD had cast out before the children of Israel.

3 ¶ For ²he ¹built again the high places which Hezekiah his father had broken down, and he reared up altars for Baalim, and ³made groves, and worshipped all ⁴the host of heaven, and served them.

4 Also ⁵he built altars in the house of the LORD, whereof the LORD had said, ⁶"In Jerusalem shall my name be for ever."

5 And he built altars for all the host of heaven in the two courts of the house of the LORD.

6 And he ⁷caused his children to pass through the fire in the valley of the son of Hinnom; also ⁸he observed times, and used enchantments, and used witchcraft, and ⁹dealt with a familiar spirit, and with wizards: he wrought much evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger.

7 And he set a carved image, the idol which he had made, in the house of God, of which God had said to David, and to Solomon his son, In this house, and in Jerusalem, ¹⁰which I have chosen before all the tribes of Israel, will I put my name for ever:

8 Neither will I any more remove the foot of Israel from out of the land which I have appointed for your fathers; so that they will take heed ¹¹to do all that I have commanded them, according to the whole law, and the statutes, and the ordinances, by the hand of Moses.

9 So Manasseh ¹²made Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to err, and to do worse than ¹³the heathen, whom the LORD had destroyed before the children of Israel.

10 ¶ And ¹⁴the LORD spake to Manasseh, and to his people; but they would not hearken.

11 Wherefore ¹⁵the LORD brought upon them ¹⁶the captains of the host ¹⁷of the king of Assyria, which took Manasseh among the thorns, and bound him with ¹⁸fetters, and carried him to Babylon.

12 And ¹⁹when he was in affliction, ²⁰he besought the LORD his God, ²¹and humbled himself greatly before the God of his fathers, 13 And prayed unto him: and ²²he was entreated of him, and heard his supplication, and ²³brought him again to Jerusalem into his kingdom. Then Manasseh ²⁴knew that the LORD he was God.

14 ¶ Now after this he built a wall without the city of David, on the west side of Gihon, in the valley, even to the entering in at ¹the fish-gate, and compassed about ²Ophel, and raised it up a very great height, and put captains of war in all the fenced cities of Judah.

15 And he took away the strange gods, and the idol out of the house of the LORD, and all the altars that he had built in the mount of the house of the LORD, and in Jerusalem, and cast them out of the city.

16 And he ³repaired the altar of the LORD, and sacrificed thereon ⁴peace-offerings and ⁵thank-offerings, and commanded Judah to serve the LORD God of Israel.

17 Nevertheless ⁶the people did sacrifice still in the high places, yet unto the LORD their God only.

18 ¶ Now the rest of the acts of Manasseh, and his prayer unto his God, and the words of ⁷the seers that spake to him in the name of the LORD God of Israel, behold, they are written in the book of the Kings of Israel:

19 ⁸His prayer also, and how God was entreated of him, and all his sins, and his trespass, and the places wherein he built high places, and set up groves and graven images, before he was humbled, behold, they are written among the sayings of ⁹the seers.

20 ¶ So Manasseh slept with his fathers, and they buried him in his own house: and ¹⁰Amon his son reigned in his stead.

21 ¶ Amon was two and twenty years old when he began to reign, and reigned ¹¹two years in Jerusalem.

22 But he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, as did Manasseh his father: for Amon sacrificed unto all the carved images which Manasseh his father had made, and served them;

23 And humbled not himself before the LORD, as Manasseh his father had humbled himself; but Amon ¹²trespassed more and more.

24 And ¹³his servants conspired against him, and slew him in his own house.

25 ¶ But the people of the land ¹⁴slew all them that had conspired against king Amon: and the people of the land made Josiah his son king in his stead.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

1 Josiah's good reign. 8 He destroyeth idolatry. 8 He repaireth the temple; 19 and, causing the law to be read, reneweth the covenant between God and the people.

¹⁵ JOSIAH was ¹⁶eight years old when he began to reign; and he reigned in Jerusalem one and thirty years.

Chap. XXXIII. 1-13. The name of Manasseh is but another for iniquity in its most finished forms. Mad upon his idols, he clave to them till they proved his destruction. He did not err for the want of warning. The Lord spake to him and to his people, but they would not hearken: they added sin to sin, till judgment succeeded to judgment, and the perverse king found himself taking shelter amongst thorns, where he was bound with fetters, and carried captive to Babylon. Then, for the first time, he began to reflect, and besought the Lord his God for mercy, and was heard, in being allowed to return to his own kingdom. "Then he knew that the Lord he was God." Truly "the Lord is known by the judgments he executeth." Ver. 18-25. Few cases more strikingly exemplify the privilege of prayer than that of Manasseh. The grace which sufficed to meet the case of such a man is equal to the case of any man; and if then, how much more now, that the blood of Christ has been shed for the sins of men! Such cases become special patterns, illustrating the abundance of mercy, and its ever-during character.

Chap. XXXIV. 1-28. Amongst Jewish sovereigns a very high place is due to Josiah. We have already

2 And he did that which was ^cright in the sight of the LORD, and walked in the ways of David his father, and ^ddeclined neither to the right hand nor to the left.

3 ¶ For in the eighth year of his reign, ^ewhile he was yet young, he began ^fto seek after the God of David his father; and in the twelfth year ^ghe began to purge Judah and Jerusalem from ^hthe high places, and the groves, and the carved images, and the molten images.

4 And they ⁱbrake down the altars of Baalim in his presence; and the ^jimages that ^kwere on high above them he cut down; and the groves, and the carved images, and the molten images, he brake in pieces, and ^lmade dust of them, and strowed ^mit upon the ⁿgraves of them that had sacrificed unto them.

5 And ^ohe burnt the bones of the priests upon their altars, and ^pcleansed Judah and Jerusalem.

6 And ^qso did he ^rin the cities of Manasseh, and Ephraim, and Simeon, even unto Naphtali, with their ^smattocks round about.

7 And when he had broken down the altars and the groves, and had beaten the graven images ^tinto powder, and cut down all the idols throughout all the land of Israel, he returned to Jerusalem.

8 ¶ Now, in ^uthe eighteenth year of his reign, when he had purged the land, and the house, he ^vsent Shaphan the son of Azaliah, and ^wMaaseiah the governor of the city, and Joah the son of Joahaz the ^xrecorder, to repair the house of the LORD his God.

9 And when they came to ^yHilkiah the high priest, ^zthey delivered the money that ^{aa}was brought into the house of God, which the Levites that kept the doors had gathered of the hand of Manasseh and Ephraim, and of all the remnant of Israel, and of all Judah and Benjamin; and they returned to Jerusalem.

10 And they put ^{ab}it ^{ac}in the hand of the workmen that had the oversight of the house of the LORD, and they gave it to the workmen that wrought in the house of the LORD, to repair and amend the house:

11 Even to the artificers and builders gave they ^{ad}it, to buy hewn stone, and timber for couplings, and to ^{ae}floor the houses which ^{af}the kings of Judah had destroyed.

12 And the men did the work ^{ag}faithfully: and the overseers of them ^{ah}were Jahath and Obadiah, the Levites, of the sons of Merari; and Zechariah and Meshullam, of the sons of the Kohathites, to set ^{ai}it forward; and ^{aj}other of the Levites, ^{ak}all that could skill of instruments of musick.

13 Also ^{al}they were ^{am}over the bearers of burdens, and ^{an}were overseers of all that wrought the work in any manner of service: and of the Levites ^{ao}there were ^{ap}scribes, and ^{aq}officers, and ^{ar}porters.

14 ¶ And when they brought out the money that was brought into the house of the LORD, ^{as}Hilkiah the priest found a book of ^{at}the law of the LORD ^{au}given by ^{av}Moses.

15 And Hilkiah answered and said to Shaphan the scribe, I have found the book of the law in the house of the LORD. And Hilkiah delivered the book to Shaphan.

16 And ^{aw}Shaphan carried the book to the king, and brought the king word back again, saying, All that was committed to ^{ax}thy servants, they do ^{ay}it.

17 And they have ^{az}gathered together the money ^{ba}that was found in the house of the LORD, and have delivered it into the hand of the overseers, and to the hand of the workmen.

18 Then Shaphan the scribe told the king, saying, Hilkiah the priest hath given me a book. ^{bb}And Shaphan read ^{bc}it before the king.

19 And it came to pass, when the king had heard ^{bd}the words of the law, ^{be}that he rent his clothes.

20 And the king commanded Hilkiah, and ^{bf}Ahikam the son of Shaphan, and ^{bg}Abdon the son of Micah, and Shaphan the scribe, and ^{bh}Asaiah a servant of the king's, saying, 21 Go, ^{bi}enquire of the LORD for me, and for them ^{bj}that are left in Israel and in Judah, concerning the words of the book that is found: ^{bk}for great is the wrath of the LORD that is poured out upon us, because our fathers have not kept the word of the LORD, to do after ^{bl}all that is written in this book.

22 And Hilkiah, and ^{bm}they that the king ^{bn}had appointed, went to Huldah ^{bo}the prophetess, the wife of Shallum the son of Tikvath, the son of ^{bp}Hasrah, keeper of the ^{bq}wardrobe; (now she dwelt in Jerusalem in the ^{br}college;) and they spake to her to that ^{bs}effect.

23 ¶ And she answered them, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Tell ye the man that sent you to me,

24 Thus saith the LORD, Behold, ^{bt}I will bring evil upon this place, and upon the inhabitants thereof, ^{bu}even all the curses that are written in the book which they have read before the king of Judah:

25 Because they have forsaken me, and have burned incense unto other gods, that they might provoke me to anger with all the works of their hands; therefore ^{bv}my referred to his distinguished excellences, and the great services he did to his people. Like all genuine reformers, he began with himself, first exemplifying, and then teaching. For young persons, no other king except Solomon has such charms;—he was one of themselves. Raised to power in the eighth year of his age, in the eighth year of his reign he betook himself, in good earnest, to religion, seeking after the God of David his father. Four years afterwards, when he became somewhat strengthened, he commenced with great zeal the work of reformation. Offensive reforms require strong hands to realise them. It was, therefore, prudent in Josiah to postpone the work until his throne was somewhat established. But even then he was only twenty wrath shall be poured out upon this place, and shall not be quenched.

26 And as for the king of Judah, who sent you to enquire of the LORD, so shall ye say unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel concerning the words which thou hast heard, 27 Because ^athine heart was tender, and thou didst humble thyself before God, when thou heardest his words against this place, and against the inhabitants thereof, and humbledst thyself before me, and didst rend thy clothes, and weep before me; I have even heard thee also, saith the LORD.

28 Behold, I will gather thee to thy fathers, and thou shalt be gathered to thy grave ^ain peace, ^aneither shall thine eyes see all the evil that I will bring upon this place, and upon the inhabitants of the same. So they brought the king word again.

29 ^aThen ^athe king sent and gathered together all the elders of Judah and Jerusalem.

30 And the king went up into the house of the LORD, and all the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and the priests, and the Levites, and all the people, ^agreat and small; and ^bhe read in their ears all the words of ^athe book of the covenant that was found in the house of the LORD.

31 And the king stood ^din his place, and ^amade a covenant before the LORD, to walk after the LORD, and to keep his commandments, and his testimonies, and his statutes, with all his heart, and with all his soul, to perform the words of the covenant which are written in this book.

32 And ^ahe caused all that were ^apresent in Jerusalem and Benjamin to stand to it. And the inhabitants of Jerusalem ^adid according to the covenant of God, the God of their fathers.

33 And Josiah took away all the abominations out of all the countries that pertained to the children of Israel, and made all that were present in Israel to serve, even to serve the LORD their God. And ^aall his days they departed not ^afrom following the LORD, the God of their fathers.

years of age,—a fact which greatly redounds to his honour. Few kings, at so early a period, have troubled themselves about social improvement; and nothing but great zeal, and a single eye to the Divine glory, on the part of Josiah, could have prompted him to such a course, and only the blessing of the Most High could have crowned his efforts with success. The matter of the Book of the Covenant is peculiar to this king. Its discovery, the use he made of it, and the happy results which followed, are among the distinguishing characteristics of his government. Josiah was a king who began, continued, and ended well, and in that capacity he presents a lovely example to all Christians. The effect of his labours, sustained by his example, was evident among his people, who, throughout the whole of his life, continued steadfastly to adhere to the service of the true God.

CHAPTER XXXV.

1 Josiah causes a solemn passover to be celebrated. 20 He is slain in battle against Pharaoh-necho. 25 Great lamentations are made for him.

MOREOVER, ^aJosiah kept a passover unto the LORD in Jerusalem: and they killed the passover on ^bthe fourteenth day of the first month.

2 And he set the priests in their ^ccharges, and ^dencouraged them to the service of the house of the LORD;

3 And said unto ^ethe Levites that taught all Israel, which were holy unto the LORD, ^fPut the holy ark ^gin the house which Solomon, the son of David king of Israel, did build; ^hit shall ⁱnot be a burden upon ^jyour shoulders: ^kserve now the LORD your God, and his people Israel,

4 And prepare ^lyourselves by ^mthe houses of your fathers, ⁿafter your courses, according to the writing of David king of Israel, and ^oaccording to the writing of Solomon his son.

5 And ^pstand in the holy place, according to the divisions of the ^qfamilies of the fathers of your brethren the ^rpeople, and ^safter the division of the families of the Levites.

6 So ^tkill the passover, and ^usanctify yourselves, and prepare your brethren, that ^vthey may do according to the word of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

7 And ^wJosiah ^xgave to the people, of the flock, lambs and kids, all for the ^ypassover-offerings, for all that were present, to the number of thirty thousand, and three thousand bullocks: these ^zwere of ^athe king's substance.

8 And ^bhis princes ^cgave ^dwillingly unto the people, to the priests, and to the Levites: ^eHilkiah, and Zechariah, and Jehiel, ^frulers of the house of God, gave unto the priests for the passover-offerings two thousand and six hundred ^gsmall cattle, and three hundred oxen.

9 Conaniah also, and Shemaiah, and Nethaneel, his brethren, and Hashabiah, and Jeiel, and Jozabad, chief of the Levites, ^hgave unto the Levites for passover-offerings five thousand ⁱsmall cattle, and five hundred oxen.

10 So the service was prepared, and ^jthe priests stood in their place, and the Le-piety is always to raise religious ordinances in the estimation of the people. This may generally be taken as a test of the spiritual condition of a community. In proportion as they are prized, the truth itself is prized. As the one sinks in public estimation, so does the other. This principle was exemplified in the days of Jehoshaphat, Hezekiah, and Josiah in a very remarkable manner; but the case of Josiah eclipsed both its predecessors. Occurring in the eighteenth year of the king's reign, and the twenty-sixth of his life, it may be considered as the crisis of his history. The sun of his regal glory now stood in the meridian, but a cloud was at hand to overshadow it. It is not safe, in spiritual things, to judge according to appearances; men are never more successfully tempted than after occasions of great spiritual excitement and felicity. The very happiness of such seasons seems to throw them off their guard, and to render them more accessible to the Wicked One than they otherwise would have been. There are few godly vites in their courses, according to the king's commandment.

11 And they killed the passover, and ^athe priests sprinkled the blood from their hands, and the Levites ^aflayed them.

12 And they removed the burnt-offerings, that they might give according to the divisions of the families of the people, to offer unto the LORD, ^bas it is written in the book of Moses: and so did they with the oxen.

13 And they ^croasted the passover with fire, according to the ordinance: but the other holy offerings ^dsod they in pots, and in caldrons, and in pans, and ^edivided them speedily among all the people.

14 And afterward they made ready for themselves, and for the priests: ^fbecause the priests the sons of Aaron were busied in offering of burnt-offerings and the fat until night; therefore the Levites prepared for themselves, and for the priests the sons of Aaron.

15 And the singers, the sons of Asaph, were in their ^gplace, ^haccording to the commandment of David, and Asaph, and Heman, and Jeduthun the king's seer; and ⁱthe porters waited at every gate: they might not depart from their service; for their brethren the Levites prepared for them.

16 So all the service of the LORD was prepared the same day, to keep the passover, and to offer burnt-offerings upon the altar of the LORD, according to the commandment of king Josiah.

17 And the children of Israel that were ^jpresent kept the passover at that time, and ^kthe feast of unleavened bread seven days.

18 And ^lthere was no passover like to that kept in Israel, from the days of Samuel the prophet; neither did all the kings of Israel keep such a passover as Josiah kept, and the priests, and the Levites, and all Judah and Israel that were present, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

19 In the eighteenth year of the reign of Josiah was this passover kept.

20 ^mAfter all this, when Josiah had prepared the ⁿtemple, ^oNecho king of Egypt came up to fight against ^pCarche-

CHAPTER XXXVI.

1 Jehoahaz succeeding, is deposed by Pharaoh. 5 Jehoahaz reigning ill, is carried into Babylon: 9 Jehoahaz succeeded. 11 Zedekiah's evil reign. 23 Cyrus' proclamation.

THEN ^athe people of the land took ^bJehoahaz the son of Josiah, and made him king in his father's stead in Jerusalem.

2 Jehoahaz was twenty and three years old when he began to reign; and he reigned three months in Jerusalem.

3 And the king of Egypt ^cput him down at Jerusalem, and ^dcondemned the land in an hundred talents of silver, and a talent of gold.

men whose personal experience does not supply illustrations. Not realising the presence of evil, they are but too apt to think it is far away, and their very security becomes the cause of their failure. Josiah greatly erred in acting as he did towards the king of Egypt, without consulting the prophets. In the event of such consultation, he would have received direction which would have led to a very opposite course. The words of the king of Egypt are remarkable; he was not hostile to Josiah, and he deprecated the idea of collision with him. Such words ought to have led Josiah to ponder well his course:—"I am not against thee this day, but against the house wherewith I have war; for God hath commanded me to make haste; forbear, then, from meddling with God, who is with me, that he destroy thee not." On hearing these awful words, it became Josiah, though late, to review his course, and to seek the counsel which he ought to have sought in the beginning. He was, nevertheless, resolute on his purpose; he joined in the battle, and the fated arrow found its mark, which brought him to the dust. But notwithstanding this error, there can be no doubt of the integrity of his heart, and the superiority of his piety. If he was cut off in his early prime, he had commenced his reign in childhood, so that its length was considerable. His death was a heavy blow to the nation; even Jeremiah joined in the lamentation. The historian, in ver. 26, has a remarkable expression:—"The rest of the acts of Josiah, and his goodness, are written in the Book of the Kings." With respect to the mass of the kings, it is not their goodness, but their evil, that is pointed out. Josiah's character throughout is one of shining excellence, and his error is as instructive as his obedience. It adds another to the many examples of the unhappy consequences of a man's proceeding in his own wisdom, or in his own strength, and the necessity of habitually referring everything to the Lord.

Chap. XXXVI. 1-23. Nothing more need be said of 4 And the king of Egypt ^cmade Eliakim his brother king over Judah and Jerusalem, and turned his name to Jehoiakim. And ^dNecho took Jehoahaz his brother, and carried him to Egypt.

5 ¶ ^eJehoiakim was twenty and five years old when he began to reign; and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem: and he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD his God.

6 Against him ^fcame up Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and bound him in ^gfetters, to carry him to Babylon.

7 Nebuchadnezzar also carried of ^hthe vessels of the house of the LORD to Babylon, and put them in his temple at Babylon.

8 Now the rest of the acts of Jehoiakim, and his abominations which he did, and that which was found in him, behold, ⁱthey are written in the book of the Kings of Israel and Judah; and ^jJehoiachin his son reigned in his stead.

9 ¶ ^kJehoiachin was ^leight years old when he began to reign; and he reigned three months and ten days in Jerusalem: and he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD.

sent to them by ^ahis messengers, rising up ^b'betimes, and sending; ^c'because he had compassion on his people, and on his dwelling-place:

22 ¶ ^sNow, ^t'in the first year of Cyrus king of Persia, ^u'(that the word of the LORD, ^vspoken by the mouth of Jeremiah, might be accomplished,) the LORD stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of Persia, that he made a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and ^wput it also in writing, saying,

23 Thus saith Cyrus king of Persia, ^x'All the kingdoms of the earth hath the LORD God of heaven given me; and ^y'he hath charged me to build him an house in Jerusalem, which ^z'is in Judah: ^a'who ^b'is there among you of all his people? The LORD his God ^c'be with him, and let him go up.

Jehoahaz, who was speedily removed, as also Jehoiakim, who was carried to Babylon. The principal object of attention is Zedekiah, who committed a twofold error: he set light by the prophet of the Lord, and rebelled against the king of Babylon. As was the king, so were the people. The depravity of the country had reached a great height. They were ready for destruction. A people who mocked the messengers of God, despised his words, and misused his prophets, had nothing to look for but wrath. It is not difficult to perceive that the land was ripe for destruction. A signal was given, and an instrument in the hands of Providence speedily appeared, inflicting indiscriminate judgment upon young men and maidens, old men and them that stooped for age; all were delivered over to the invader, and the house of the Lord was destroyed. The history is full of warning both to individuals and to nations. Notwithstanding the boundless mercy of the Lord, there are limits to his patience; and they who despise the mercy, must submit to the judgment.

EZRA.

We have here the history of the Restoration from Babylon under Zerubbabel, and afterwards under Ezra, at the close of the seventy years' captivity. The narrative comprises about eighty years. Ezra was of the house of Aaron; and he displays a zeal worthy of his rank and position. While the Book is full of piety and of patriotism, it supplies a striking illustration of superior personal religion.

CHAPTER I.

NOW, "in the first year of Cyrus king of Persia, (that the word of the LORD ^bby the mouth of Jeremiah might be fulfilled,) the LORD stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of Persia, "that he ¹made a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and ²put it also in writing, saying,

3 Who is there among you of all his people? "his God be with him, and let him go up to Jerusalem, which is in Judah, and build the house of the LORD God of Israel ("he is the God) which is in Jerusalem.

5 ¶ Then rose up the chief of the fathers of Judah and Benjamin, and the priests, and the Levites, with all them "whose spirit God had raised, to go up to build the house of the LORD which is in Jerusalem.

6 And all they that were about them "strengthened their hands with vessels of silver, with gold, with goods, and with beasts, and with precious things, besides all that was "willingly offered.

7 ¶ Also "Cyrus the king brought forth the vessels of the house of the LORD, which "Nebuchadnezzar had brought forth out of Jerusalem, and had put them in the house of his gods;

Chap. I. 1-11. Cyrus was mentioned, with the achievements he was destined to perform, by the prophet Isaiah, 200 years previous to his birth,—a fact by which, historians tell us, he was deeply affected when he was shewn it in Scripture. When he found both his name and his work set forth in the Jewish writings, he had before his own eyes proof, the most convincing and astonishing, that there was a God in the heaven, to whom the future is equally known with the past and the present. The proclamation of Cyrus, which is one of the most remarkable things in history, clearly betokens the finger of inspiration. He speaks as a man directly inspired, and displays a benevolence towards the Jews, and a concern for the glory of the Most High God, not to be explained on mere human principles. He was, in his own order, a species of preacher; and the effect produced by his address very beautifully illustrates the operation of the Gospel. While multitudes remained unmoved, others awoke from their stupor, promptly and gladly availing themselves of the royal permission. The chief of the fathers arose, together with the priests and the Levites, "with all them whose spirit God had raised, to go up to build the house of the Lord which is in Jerusalem." Here the analogy to the preaching of the Gospel is perfect. The proclamation came to them, not in word only, as it did to the rest, but in power; and hence they at once set themselves to the holy enterprise.

Chap. II. 68-70. The spirit of the multitude, whose hearts the Lord had touched, was such as to inspire a well grounded confidence that they would not prove wanting in the day of trial, notwithstanding the difficulties with which they would have to contend. It is noted that the more opulent men took the lead in the matter of liberality; the chief of the fathers offered freely. Their gifts were limited only by their ability. Where Jeshua, and Kadmiel, of the children of °Hodaviah, seventy and four.

41 The singers: the children of °Asaph, an hundred twenty and eight.

42 The children of °the porters: the children of Shallum, the children of Ater, the children of Talmon, the children of Akkub, the children of Hatita, the children of Shobai, in all an hundred thirty and nine.

43 ¶ The °Nethinims: the children of Ziha, the children of °Hasupha, the children of Tabbaoth, 44 The children of Keros, the children of °Siaha, the children of Padon, 45 The children of °Lebanah, the children of Hagabah, the children of Akkub, 46 The children of Hagab, the children of °Shalmal, the children of Hanan, 47 The children of Giddel, the children of Gahar, the children of Reaiah, 48 The children of Rezin, the children of Nekoda, the children of Gazzam, 49 The children of Uzza, the children of °Paseah, the children of Besai,

50 The children of Asnah, the children of °Mehunim, the children of Nephusim,

52 The children of °Bazluth, the children of Mehida, the children of Harsha, 53 The children of Barkos, the children of Sisera, the children of °Thamah, 54 The children of Nezhiah, the children of Hatipha.

55 ¶ The children of °Solomon's servants: the children of Sotai, the children of Sophereth, the children of °Peruda,

57 The children of Shephatiah, the children of Hattil, the children of °Pochereth of Zebaim, the children of °Ami.

58 All the °Nethinims, and the children of Solomon's servants, were three hundred ninety and two.

59 And these were they which went up from Tel-melah, °Tel-harsa, Cherub, Addan, and Immer; but they could not shew their father's house, and their °seed, whether they were of Israel:

60 The children of °Delaiah, the children of Tobiah, the children of Nekoda, six hundred fifty and two.

61 ¶ And of °the children of the priests: the children of Habaiah, the children of Koz, the children of Barzillai; (which took a wife of the daughters of °Barzillai the Gileadite, and was called after their name:)

62 These sought their register among those that were reckoned by genealogy, the rich set the example, the poor and persons of lesser means will never lag behind. The great lesson taught by this chapter is, the terrible effect which had been produced by the Captivity. How great the contrast between the return from Babylon and the departure from Egypt! On the latter occasion, there were no fewer than 600,000 men able to bear arms, besides women, children, and men of advanced years. The numbers who returned from Babylon did not reach 50,000. This gives us an impressive view of the negligence and the carnality of the vast remainder, who preferred living and dying in a state of thralldom in the midst of heathen Babylon, to the recovery of their freedom, and a return to the land of their fathers' sepulchres, that amid toil, trial, and danger they might build the Holy City. This is a sad picture of the spiritual state which exists, on all sides, amongst ourselves. How small are the numbers of the faithful in Christ Jesus, as compared with the impenitent millions! The freeness of the Gospel is finely exemplified. The proclamation extended to every Jew in Babylon; but they were not found; ¹therefore ⁴were they, as polluted, put from the priesthood.

63 And the ⁵Irshatha said unto them, that they ²should not eat of the most holy things, till there stood up a priest with ³Urim and with Thummim.

64 ¶ The whole congregation together was ¹forty and two thousand three hundred and threescore, 65 Besides their ²servants and their maids, of whom there were seven thousand three hundred thirty and seven; and there were among them ³two hundred singing-men and singing-women.

66 Their horses were seven hundred thirty and six; their mules, two hundred forty and five;

67 Their camels, four hundred thirty and five; their asses, six thousand seven hundred and twenty.

68 ¶ And some of the chief of the fathers, when they came to the house of the LORD which is at Jerusalem, ¹offered freely for the house of God, to set it up ²in his place:

69 They gave after their ability, unto ³the treasure of the work, threescore and one thousand drams of gold, and five thousand pound of silver, and one hundred priests' garments.

70 So ¹'the priests, and the Levites, and some of the people, and the singers, and the porters, and the Nethinims, dwelt in their cities, and all Israel in their cities.

CHAPTER III.

1 The altar is set up. 4 Offerings renewed. 8 The foundation of the temple laid.

AND when ¹'the seventh month was come, and the children of Israel were in the cities, the people gathered themselves together ²as one man to Jerusalem.

2 Then stood up ³Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and his brethren the priests, and ⁴Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and his brethren, and builded the altar of the God of Israel, to offer burnt-offerings thereon, ⁵as it is written in the law of Moses, the man of God.

3 And they set ¹'the altar upon his bases; (²for fear was upon them because of the people of those countries;) and they offered burnt-offerings thereon unto the LORD, even ³burnt-offerings morning and evening.

4 ¶ They kept also ¹'the feast of tabernacles, as it is written, and offered ²'the none were excluded; return was permitted to all and every one, although by the vast multitude it was disregarded, while those who availed themselves of it were prompted so to do by Divine power.

Chap. III. 1-7. The seventh month was important to the Jews, inasmuch as on the tenth day thereof was the great day of the atonement. They had left Babylon in the spring, and consumed four months on their journey. The spirit of unity which prevailed was a pledge of prosperity. Not a moment was lost, when the fragment of the tribes assembled, in building an altar to the God of Israel, and for burnt-offerings. Whithersoever Abraham sojourned, the first thing was uniformly to build an altar to the Lord; till that was accomplished, he could think of nothing else. Ver. 8-18. Where so daily burnt-offerings by number, according to the custom, ¹as the duty of every day required;

5 And afterward offered ¹'the continual burnt-offering, both of the new-moons, and of all the set feasts of the LORD that were consecrated, and of every one that ²willingly offered a free-will-offering unto the LORD.

6 From the first day of the seventh month began they to offer burnt-offerings unto the LORD: but ²'the foundation of the temple of the LORD was not yet laid.

7 ¶ They ²'gave money also unto the masons, and to the ³carpenters; and ⁴meat, and drink, and oil, unto them of Zidon, and to them of Tyre, to bring cedar-trees from Lebanon to the sea of ⁵Joppa, ⁶according to the grant that they had of Cyrus king of Persia.

8 ¶ Now, in the second year of their coming unto the house of God at Jerusalem, in the second month, began ¹'Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and the remnant of their brethren the priests and the Levites, and all they that were come out of the captivity unto Jerusalem; and appointed the Levites, from ²'twenty years old and upward, to set forward the work of the house of the LORD.

9 Then stood Jeshua with his sons and his brethren, Kadmiel and his sons, the sons of ¹'Judah, ²'together, to set forward the workmen in the house of God; the sons of Henadad, with their sons and their brethren the Levites.

10 And when the builders laid the foundation of the temple of the LORD, they ¹'set the priests in their apparel with ²'trumpets, and the Levites, the sons of Asaph, with cymbals, to praise the LORD, ³'after the ordinance of David king of Israel.

11 And they sang together by course, in praising and giving thanks unto the LORD; because he is good, for his mercy endureth for ever toward Israel. And all the people ¹'shouted with a great shout, when they praised the LORD, ²'because the foundation of the house of the LORD was laid.

12 But ¹'many of the priests and Levites, and chief of the fathers, who were ancient men, that had seen the first house, ²'when the foundation of this house was laid much was to be done, and so few to do it, it became necessary, not only to task human power to the uttermost, but somewhat to relax the law which precluded the Levites from assisting till the thirtieth year of their age. Here, from twenty years and upwards, they were engaged in setting forward the work of the House. The foundation of the temple was laid amidst circumstances expressive of the people's joy. They celebrated in their song the goodness and the mercy of the Lord. The heart of the whole was moved; all the people shouted with a great shout; but, amid the general gladness, there was a remnant of a former generation, who could not but contrast the present with the previous temple. Remembering the circumstances under which it was founded and reared, and the matchless glory by which it was distinguished, they wept with a loud voice as they beheld before their eyes, wept with a loud voice; and many shouted aloud for joy:

13 So that the people could not discern the noise of the shout of joy from the noise of the weeping of the people: for the people shouted with a loud shout, and the noise was heard afar off.

CHAPTER IV.

1 The building hindered. 7 The letter to Artaxerxes. 17 His decree to stop the work.

NOW, when ^athe adversaries of Judah and Benjamin heard that the ¹children of the captivity builded the temple unto the LORD God of Israel;

2 Then they came to Zerubbabel, and to the chief of the fathers, and said unto them, ^bLet us build with you: for we seek your God, as ye do; and we do sacrifice unto him since the days of ^cEsarhaddon king of ^dAssur, which brought us up hither.

3 But Zerubbabel, and Jeshua, and the rest of the chief of the fathers of Israel, said unto them, ^eYe have nothing to do with us to build an house unto our God; but we ourselves together will build unto the LORD God of Israel, as ^fking Cyrus the king of Persia hath commanded us.

4 Then the people of the land ^gweakened the hands of the people of Judah, and ^htroubled them in building,

5 And ⁱhired counsellors against them, to frustrate their purpose, all the days of Cyrus king of Persia, even until the reign of Darius king of Persia.

6 And in the reign of ²Ahasuerus, in the beginning of his reign, ^kwrote they unto him an accusation against the inhabitants of Judah and Jerusalem.

7 ¶ And in the days of Artaxerxes wrote ³Bishlam, Mithredath, Tabeel, and the rest of their ⁴companions, unto Artaxerxes king of Persia; and the writing of the letter was written in ⁵the Syrian tongue, and interpreted in the Syrian tongue.

8 Rehum the chancellor, and Shimshai the ⁶scribe, wrote a letter against Jerusalem to Artaxerxes the king in this sort:

9 Then wrote Rehum the chancellor, and Shimshai the scribe, and the rest of their ⁶companions; the Dinaites, the Apharsathchites, the Tarpelites, the Apharsites, the Archevites, the Babylonians,

¹⁰ the Susanchites, the Dehavites, and the ¹¹Elamites,

10 And the rest of the nations whom the great and noble Asnapper brought over, and set in the cities of Samaria, and the rest that are on this side the river, and ⁷at such a time.

11 ¶ This is the copy of the letter that they sent unto him, even unto Artaxerxes the king; Thy servants the men on this side the river, and at such a time.

12 Be it known unto the king, that the Jews, which came up from thee to us are come unto Jerusalem, building the ^orebellious and the ^pbad city, and have ^qset up the walls thereof, and ⁹joined the foundations.

13 Be it known now unto the king, that ^rif this city be builded, and the walls set up again, then will they not ¹pay toll, tribute, and custom, and so thou shalt endamage the ²revenue of the kings.

14 Now, because we ³have maintenance from the king's palace, and it was not meet for us to see the king's dishonour, therefore have we sent and certified the king,

15 That search may be made in the book of the records of thy fathers: so shalt thou find in the book of the records, and know, that ^tthis city is a rebellious city, and hurtful unto kings and provinces, and that they have ⁴moved sedition ⁵within the same of old time; ⁶for which cause was this city destroyed.

16 We certify the king, that if this city be builded again, and the walls thereof set up, by this means ^uthou shalt have no portion on this side the river.

17 Then sent the king an answer unto Rehum the chancellor, and to Shimshai the scribe, and to the rest of their ⁶companions that dwell in Samaria, and unto the rest beyond the river, ^vPeace, and at such a time.

18 The letter which ye sent unto us hath been plainly read before me.

19 And ^wI commanded, and ^xsearch hath been made, and it is found, that this city of old time hath ^ymade insurrection against kings, and ^zthat rebellion and sedition have been made therein.

20 There have been ^zmighty kings also the comparatively insignificant structure about to be built, and the foundation of which was that day to be laid; yet a greater glory was to distinguish the second than the first temple. There, God, in human nature, would personally appear to fulfil all that was written concerning him in the law and in the prophets, making an end of sin, and bringing in an everlasting righteousness.

Chap. IV. 1-24. Wherever the people of God go, they soon find adversaries. Hostility, to be rational, ought to have a foundation, but the wicked can hate without a cause. These opponents were persons whom the kings of Assyria had brought from Babylon and other places, and settled in portions of the country formerly inhabited by the ten tribes: they were called Samaritans, from having occupied Samaria. The enemies of the faithful always succeed best in the work of mischief when they mix themselves up with the children of God. In the present case, they actually solicited permission to unite in the building, on the ground that they sought the same God—an allegation entirely unfounded, since they were idolaters. But the leaders of the Jews were firm, standing aloof from them, and declining their co-operation. Notwithstanding this, they continued to hang about, and to do evil, weakening the hands of the people of Judah, and troubling them in the building. Whatever the wisdom or watchfulness of God's people, they have always something to apprehend from the wicked; and were it not that the Lord is on their side, the hindrances would frequently prove serious, and not seldom fatal. The activity of the adversaries in the present case was very great, and for a time was successful; but at length the Lord appeared to the comfort of his people, and the confusion of their enemies. Their opponents were distinguished not merely by hatred, but over Jerusalem, which have ruled over all countries^a beyond the river; ^band toll, tribute, and custom, was paid unto them.

21 ^cGive ye now commandment to cause these men to cease, and that this city be not builded, until another commandment shall be given from me.

22 Take heed now that ye fail not to do this: why should damage grow to the hurt of the kings?

23 ¶ Now, when the copy of king Artaxerxes' letter was read before Rehum, and Shimshai the scribe, and their companions, ^dthey went up in haste to Jerusalem unto the Jews, and made them to cease by ^eforce and power.

24 Then ceased the work of the house of God which is at Jerusalem. ^fSo it ceased unto the second year of the reign of Darius king of Persia.

CHAPTER V.

Zerubbabel and Jeshua set forward the building of the temple in the reign of Darius.

THEN the prophets, ^aHaggai the prophet, and ^bZechariah the son of Iddo, prophesied unto the Jews that were in Judah and Jerusalem ^cin the name of the God of Israel, even unto them.

2 Then ^drose up Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and ^eJeshua the son of Jozadak, and began to build the house of God which is at Jerusalem: and with them were ^fthe prophets of God helping them.

3 ¶ At the same time came to them ^gTatnai, governor on this side the river, and Shethar-boznai, and their companions, and said thus unto them, ^hWho hath commanded you to build this house, and to make up this wall?

4 Then said we unto them after this manner, ⁱWhat are the names of the men that ^jmake this building?

5 But ^kthe eye of their God was upon the elders of the Jews, that they could not cause them to cease, till the matter came to Darius: and then they returned answer by letter concerning this matter.

6 ¶ The copy of the letter that Tatnai, governor on this side the river, and Shethar-boznai, and his companions the ^lApharsachites, which were on this side the river, sent unto Darius the king:

7 They sent a letter unto him, ¹wherein was written thus; Unto Darius the king, ²all peace.

8 Be it known unto the king, that we went into ³the province of Judea, to the house of ⁴the great God, which is builded with ⁵great stones, and timber is laid in the walls, and this work goeth fast on, and prospereth in their hands.

9 Then asked we those elders, and said unto them thus, Who commanded you to build this house, and to make up these walls?

10 We asked their names also, to certify thee, that we might write the names of the men that were the chief of them.

11 And thus they returned us answer, saying, ¹We are the servants of the God of heaven and earth, and build the house that was builded these many years ago, ²which a great king of Israel builded and set up.

12 But ³after that our fathers had provoked the God of heaven unto wrath, ⁴he gave them ⁵into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, the Chaldean, who destroyed this house, and carried the people away into Babylon.

13 But ⁶in the first year of Cyrus the king of Babylon, the same king Cyrus made a decree to build this house of God.

14 And ⁷the vessels also of gold and silver of the house of God, which Nebuchadnezzar took out of the temple that was in Jerusalem, and brought them into the temple of Babylon, those did Cyrus ⁸the king take out of the temple of Babylon, and they were delivered unto one, whose name was Sheshbazzar, ⁹whom he had made ¹⁰governor;

15 And said unto him, Take these vessels, go, carry them into the temple that is in Jerusalem, and let the house of God be builded in his place.

16 Then came the same Sheshbazzar, and ¹laid the foundation of the house of God which is in Jerusalem; and since that time even until now hath it been in building, and yet it is not finished.

17 Now therefore, if it seem good to the king, ²let there be search made in the king's treasure-house, which is there at

by cunning. They devised the best possible method of awakening the suspicions of the Government, and bringing down the power of the State to obstruct the progress of the building—the appeals to the documents which, as read by the eyes of a Babylonian monarch, clearly confirmed the malicious representation. The result was a triumph to the wicked, and the temporary discomfiture of the people of God, whose work ceased till the second year of the reign of Darius. It is no uncommon thing for the most excellent of works to be delayed through the influence of the wicked; but such delays in the end only serve to expedite that which it was sought altogether to prevent. The people might find somewhat to stumble them, when they compared the proclamation of Cyrus with the decree which stopped the building. The one, however, was perfectly consistent with the other. The disappointment served to try the faith and patience of the people, and to render them the more deeply sensible of their dependence upon God. When their burden was removed, they were once more set at liberty, under circumstances of a still more extended privilege, which they received as a second boon, and were filled with a joy, a gratitude, and a hope which they would not otherwise have experienced.

Chap. V. 1-17. Among the mercies which blended with the enterprise, was the raising up of prophets to direct and cheer the people. The service of these holy men are specially commemorated as helping on the work. In such cases, it is of the first moment that the minds of the people should be kept alive to the presence and the promises of the Lord. His joy was their strength, and nothing could bear them up under their multiplied labours, difficulties, and dangers, but the remembrance of the promise that he would be with them to preserve them from their foes. Thus at the appointed time the people were aroused from their depression, filled with confidence, and fired with hope of a happy issue to their toils. Their activity brought forth their enemies once more, with a view to arrest their progress. But it was in vain. The eye of their God was upon the elders of the Jews, so that they could not cause them to cease till Babylon, whether it be so, that a decree was made of Cyrus the king to build this house of God at Jerusalem, and let the king send his pleasure to us concerning this matter.

CHAPTER VI.

1 Darius' decree for advancing the building. 13 The temple is finished. 16 The feasts of the dedication, 19 and of the passover.

THEN Darius the king made a decree, and search was made in the house of the rolls, where the treasures were laid up in Babylon.

2 And there was found at Achmetha, in the palace that is in the province of the Medes, a roll, and therein was a record thus written:

3 In the first year of Cyrus the king, the same Cyrus the king made a decree concerning the house of God at Jerusalem, Let the house be builded, the place where they offered sacrifices, and let the foundations thereof be strongly laid; the height thereof threescore cubits, and the breadth thereof threescore cubits;

4 With three rows of great stones, and a row of new timber: and let the expences be given out of the king's house.

5 And also let the golden and silver vessels of the house of God, which Nebuchadnezzar took forth out of the temple which is at Jerusalem, and brought unto Babylon, be restored, and brought again unto the temple which is at Jerusalem, every one to his place, and place them in the house of God.

6 Now therefore, Tatnai, governor beyond the river, Shethar-boznai, and your companions the Apharsachites, which are beyond the river, be ye far from thence:

7 Let the work of this house of God alone; let the governor of the Jews, and the elders of the Jews, build this house of God in his place.

8 Moreover I make a decree what ye shall do to the elders of these Jews, for the building of this house of God; that of the king's goods, even of the tribute beyond the river, forthwith expences be given unto these men, that they be not hindered.

9 And that which they have need of, both young bullocks, and rams, and lambs, for the burnt-offerings of the God of heaven, wheat, salt, wine, and oil, according to the appointment of the priests which are at Jerusalem, let it be given them day by day without fail:

10 That they may offer sacrifices of sweet savours unto the God of heaven, and pray for the life of the king, and of his sons.

11 Also I have made a decree, that whosoever shall alter this word, let timber be pulled down from his house, and, being set up, let him be hanged thereon; and let his house be made a dunghill for this.

12 And the God that hath caused his name to dwell there, destroy all kings and people that shall put to their hand to alter and to destroy this house of God which is at Jerusalem. I Darius have made a decree; let it be done with speed.

13 ¶ Then Tatnai, governor on this side the river, Shethar-boznai, and their companions, according to that which Darius the king had sent, so they did speedily.

14 And the elders of the Jews builded, and they prospered through the prophesying of Haggai the prophet, and Zechariah the son of Iddo: and they builded, and finished it, according to the commandment of the God of Israel, and according to the commandment of Cyrus, and Darius, and Artaxerxes king of Persia.

15 And this house was finished on the third day of the month Adar, which was in the sixth year of the reign of Darius the king.

16 ¶ And the children of Israel, the priests, and the Levites, and the rest of the children of the captivity, kept the dedication of this house of God with joy, 17 And offered at the dedication of this house of God an hundred bullocks, two hundred rams, four hundred lambs; and for a sin-offering for all Israel, twelve he-goats, according to the number of the tribes of Israel.

18 And they set the priests in their divisions, and the Levites in their courses, for the service of God, which is at Jerusalem; as it is written in the book of Moses.

19 And the children of the captivity kept the passover upon the fourteenth day of the first month.

20 For the priests and the Levites were the matter came before Darius. In the former case, the enemies appealed to state-documents; and in the present instance, the friends of truth resorted to the same expedient, and with the utmost success. It is always proper for the people of God to have recourse to such means as the constitution of the country places at their disposal for purposes of protection and of justice. It is surprising to see the effect of courage, in the case of innocence, in abashing unprincipled oppression. It so happens, however, that the wicked are often more courageous than the righteous, and thus trembling modesty is overborne by reckless rage.

Chap. VI. 1-12. The roll which recorded the proclamation of Cyrus immediately settled the question, and Darius dealt with it in his integrity. Although he had two precedents—one friendly and the other hostile to the Jews—and was at perfect liberty to follow either, yet, guided by Divine influence, he confirmed the first, and, without hesitation, carried out the designs of Cyrus. Nothing can exceed the gracious spirit and the bountiful provisions of the edict which he sent forth on the present occasion. Had Cyrus himself still been alive, he could not have acted with more generosity. Ver. 13-15. After such a commandment, it was not for the governor or others any further to tamper with the Jews, nor attempt to impede the progress of the building. Speed was enjoined, and they were obedient. No time was lost in carrying into accomplishment the orders of the king. Here, again, we have a testimony borne to the happy effects attendant on the labours of the prophets. To them is ascribed the prosperity of the enterprise. These prophets were the mouth of the people to God, and of God to the people; and in both relations they contributed the life and strength of the undertaking. Ver. 16-22. The Dedication of the house was a 21 And the children of Israel, which were come again out of captivity, and ¹all such as had separated themselves unto them from the filthiness of the heathen of the land, to seek the LORD God of Israel, ²did eat,

CHAPTER VII.

¹ Ezra goeth up to Jerusalem. ¹¹ The gracious commission of Artaxerxes. ²⁷ Ezra blesseth God for this favour.

NOW after these things, in the reign of Artaxerxes king of Persia, Ezra the son of ¹Seraiah, the son of Azariah, the son of Hilkiah,

2 The son of Shallum, the son of ²Zadok, the son of Ahitub,

3 The son of Amariah, the son of Azariah, the son of Meraioth,

4 The son of Zerariah, the son of Uzzi, the son of Bukki,

5 The son of Abishua, the son of ³Phinehas, the son of ⁴Eleazar, the son of Aaron the chief priest:

6 This Ezra went up from Babylon; and he was ⁴a ready scribe in ⁵the law of Moses, which the LORD God of Israel had given: and the king granted him all his request, ⁶according to the hand of the LORD his God upon him.

7 And there went up some of the children of Israel, and of the priests, and the Levites, and the singers, and the porters, and the ¹Nethinims, unto Jerusalem, in the seventh year of Artaxerxes the king.

8 And he came to Jerusalem in the fifth month, which was in the seventh year of the king.

9 For upon the first day of the first month ¹began he to go up from Babylon, and on the first day of the fifth month came he to Jerusalem, according to the good hand of his God upon him.

10 For Ezra had ²prepared his heart to seek ³the law of the LORD, and ⁴to do it, ⁵and to teach in Israel statutes and judgments.

11 ¶ Now this is the copy of the letter matter of great interest. The feast of unleavened bread extended to seven days, which were days of joy. The people were at special pains to recognise the Lord's own interposition, in turning the heart of the king of Assyria to strengthen their hands in the work. It is one of the highest exercises of piety correctly to interpret passing events, connecting everything with Him from whom all blessings flow, and turning bounty into thanksgiving.

Chap. VII. 1-10. An important event now occurred, in the accession of Ezra to the work. That eminent man was richly endowed with the gifts and the graces the work required. Enjoying in the highest degree the favour of the king, he obtained his request, which he ascribes to the direct interposition of the Most High.

that the king Artaxerxes gave unto Ezra the priest, the scribe, even ¹a scribe of the words of the commandments of the LORD, and of his statutes to Israel.

12 Artaxerxes, ²king of kings, unto Ezra the priest, ³a scribe of the law of the God of heaven, perfect peace, and at such a time.

13 I make a decree, that all they of the people of Israel, and of his priests and Levites, in my realm, which are ⁴mindful of their own free will to go up to Jerusalem, go with thee.

14 Forasmuch as thou art sent ⁵of the king, and of his seven counsellors, to enquire concerning Judah and Jerusalem, ⁶according to the law of thy God which is in thine hand;

15 And to carry ⁷the silver and gold, which the king and his counsellors have freely offered unto the God of Israel, ⁸whose habitation is in Jerusalem;

16 And all the silver and gold that thou canst find in all the province of Babylon, with the free-will-offering of the people, and of the priests, ⁹offering willingly for the house of their God which is in Jerusalem;

17 That thou mayest ¹⁰buy speedily with this money bullocks, rams, lambs, with ¹¹their meat-offerings, and their drink-offerings, and offer them upon the altar of the house of your God which is in Jerusalem.

18 And ¹²whatsoever shall seem good to thee, and to thy brethren, to do with the rest of the silver and the gold, that do after the will of your God.

19 The vessels also that are given thee for the service of the house of thy God, ¹³those deliver thou before ¹⁴the God of Jerusalem.

20 And whatsoever more shall be needful for the house of thy God, which thou shalt have occasion to bestow, bestow it out of the king's treasure-house.

21 And I, even I Artaxerxes the king, do make a decree to all the treasurers which are beyond the river, that whatsoever Ezra the priest, the scribe of the law of the God of heaven, shall require of you, it be done speedily, 22 Unto an hundred talents of silver, and to an hundred ¹⁵measures of wheat, and to an hundred ¹⁶baths of wine, and to an hundred baths of oil, and ¹⁷salt with out prescribing how much.

In everything he sees "the good hand of his God," and to that he ascribes all his mercies. Here again is a beautiful example for every Christian to imitate. Ezra had been at special pains to fit himself for the mighty enterprise; he "prepared his heart to seek the law of the Lord, and to do it, and to teach in Israel statutes and judgments." In these words we have three all-important things. The successful study of the Scriptures demands an adequate preparation. Preparation, however, is only a means to an end, and light must be sought in the law; while all such searching must be with a view to practical obedience. Ezra was first concerned to improve his own spiritual knowledge, and then he betook himself to diffuse it among the people. Ver. 11-26. The commission of Artaxerxes was one of an extraordinary 23 ⁶Whatsoever is commanded by the God of heaven, let it be diligently done for the house of the God of heaven: for why should there be wrath against the realm of the king and his sons?

24 Also we certify you, that, touching any of the priests and Levites, singers, porters, Nethinims, or ministers of this house of God, it shall not be lawful to impose toll, tribute, or custom, upon them.

25 And thou, Ezra, after ^dthe wisdom of thy God that is in thine hand, ^eset magistrates and judges, which may judge all the people that are beyond the river, all such as know the laws of thy God; and ^fteach ye them that know them not.

26 And ^gwhosoever will not do the law of thy God, and the law of the king, let judgment be executed speedily upon him, ^hwhether it be unto death, or to ⁱbanishment, or to confiscation of goods, or to imprisonment.

27 [†]Blessed be the LORD God of our fathers, which hath put such a thing as this ^kin the king's heart, ^lto beautify the house of the LORD which is in Jerusalem;

28 And hath ^mextended mercy unto me before the king and his counsellors, and before all the king's mighty princes: and I was strengthened ⁿas the hand of the LORD my God was upon me; and I gathered together out of Israel chief men to go up with me.

nary character, beautifully harmonising in its spirit and provisions with the proclamations of Cyrus and Darius. Nothing could have been more completely adapted to meet their case to the full. Ver. 25 is particularly noticeable, in which the king instructs Ezra to do the very thing which was needful to be done in furtherance of the great work. He here, doubtless, spoke under the influence of the Spirit of God. Instead of a heathen king, the ear almost believes it is listening to Moses. Ver. 27-28. The blessings here poured on the Most High directly acknowledge that it was he who put it into the heart of the king to do as he had done. Nothing can better exemplify the course of a man walking by faith, and setting the Lord always before him.

authority, and his investigation at the river side, extending through three long days, ended in the discovery that there were none of the sons of Levi. He shewed his sagacity by immediately communicating with a "few men of understanding," following the example of Paul, when he went to Jerusalem. The result was a demand that messengers should be sent for the House of the Lord, which was immediately answered by the appearance of "a man of understanding," a son of Levi, with eighteen others. This was a good beginning, and things progressed satisfactorily. Ver. 21-30. In the proclamation of the fast, we see the true man of God acknowledging his heavenly Father in all his ways, and looking to him for direction. The prayer was sincere, fervent, and proper, and accordingly it was heard; the Lord was entreated of them. Ver. 31-36. It is always met that and the princes had appointed for the service of the Levites, two hundred and twenty Nethinims: all of them were expressed by name.

21 ¶ Then ^kI proclaimed a fast there, at the river of Ahava, that we might ^lafflict ourselves before our God, ^mto seek of him a right way for us, and ⁿfor our little ones, and for all our substance.

22 For ^oI was ashamed to require of the king a band of soldiers and horsemen to help us against the enemy in the way: because we had spoken unto the king, saying, ^pThe hand of our God is upon all them for good that seek him; but ^qhis power and his wrath is against all them that forsake him.

23 So ^rwe fasted, and ^sbesought our God for this; and he was entreated of us.

24 ¶ Then I separated twelve of the chief of the priests, Sherebiah, Hashabiah, and ten of their brethren with them,

25 And ^tweighed unto them the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, even the offering of the house of our God, which the king, and his counsellors, and his lords, and all Israel there present, had offered:

26 I even weighed unto their hand six hundred and fifty talents of silver, and silver vessels an hundred talents, and of gold an hundred talents;

27 Also twenty basons of gold of a thousand drams, and two vessels of ^ufine copper, ^vprecious as gold.

28 And I said unto them, ^wYe are holy unto the LORD; ^xthe vessels are holy also; and the silver and the gold are a free-will-offering unto the LORD God of your fathers.

29 ^yWatch ye, and keep them, until ye weigh them before the chief of the priests and the Levites, and chief of the fathers of Israel, at Jerusalem, in the chambers of the house of the LORD.

30 So took the priests and the Levites the weight of the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, to bring them to Jerusalem, unto ^zthe house of our God.

31 ¶ Then we departed from the river of Ahava on the twelfth day of the first month, to go unto Jerusalem; and ^{aa}the hand of our God was upon us, and he delivered us from the hand of the enemy, and of such as lay in wait by the way.

32 And ^{ab}we came to Jerusalem, and abode there three days.

33 ¶ Now, on the fourth day was the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, ^dweighed in the house of our God by the hand of ^eMeremoth the son of ^fUriah the priest; and with him was Eleazar the son of Phinehas; and with them was ^gJozabab the son of Jeshua, and Noadiah the son of ^hBinnui, Levites;

34 By number and by weight of every one: and all the weight was written at that time.

35 Also the children of those that had been carried away, which were come out of the captivity, ⁱoffered burnt-offerings unto the God of Israel, ^ktwelve bullocks for all Israel, ninety and six rams, seventy and seven lambs, twelve he-goats for a sin-offering: all this was a burnt-offering unto the LORD.

36 ¶ And they delivered the king's commissions unto the king's lieutenants, and to the governors on this side the river; and ^lthey furthered the people, and the house of God.

CHAPTER IX.

1 Ezra mourneth for the affinity of the people with strangers, 5 and prayeth to God.

NOW, when these things were done, ^athe princes came to me, saying, The people of Israel, and the priests, and the Levites, ^bhave not separated themselves from the people of the lands, ^cdoing according to their abominations, even of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Jebusites, the Ammonites, the Moabites, the Egyptians, and the Amorites.

2 For they have ^dtaken of their daughters for themselves, and for their sons; so that ^ethe holy seed have mingled themselves with the people of those lands: yea, the hand of the princes and rulers hath been chief in this trespass.

3 And when I heard this thing, I ^frent my garment and my mantle, and ^gplucked off the hair of my head and of my beard, and ^hsat down astonished.

4 Then were assembled unto me every one that trembled at the words of the God of Israel, because of the transgression of those that had been carried away; and I sat astonished until the evening sacrifice.

5 ¶ And at the evening sacrifice I arose up from my ⁱheaviness; and having rent my garment and my mantle, I fell upon my knees, and spread out my hands unto the LORD my God,

6 And said, O my God, ^jI am ashamed saints should acknowledge benefits the moment they are received; Ezra lost no time on his arrival at Jerusalem in recognising the hand of God in their preservation by the way. The king's commission proved of special service, in all points promoting the advancement of the great object in which Ezra and the people were embarked. Ezra presented a beautiful example of the Christian man of business. While his eye was ever directed to the Lord, he yet employed means with a wisdom and a vigour which the most energetic heathen could not have exceeded.

Chap. IX. 1-4. Ezra, on his arrival, found idolatry rampant; the people, the priests, and the Levites, were all equally implicated. Mixed marriages proved a fearful source of disorder and wickedness. The discoveries he made filled him with distress; he anticipated nothing but difficulty and mischief from such corruption. Ver. 5-15. His burdened heart sought and found relief in prayer. His confession breathes a spirit of sorrow amounting to agony, and with his customary faith he casts himself on the mercy of the God of Abraham. His confession goes to the root of the evil, and the wrath which is incurred he acknowledges to be most just. In all that had befallen the nation, he confessed that the God of Israel was righteous. Under the burden of past and blush to lift up my face to thee, my God: for our iniquities are increased over our head, and our ²trespass is ¹grown up unto the heavens.

⁷ Since the days of our fathers have we been in a great trespass unto this day; and ^m for our iniquities have we, our kings, and our priests, been delivered into the hand of the kings of the lands, to the sword, to captivity, and to a spoil, and ⁿ to confusion of face, as it is this day.

⁸ And now for a ³little space ^o grace hath been showed from the LORD our God, to leave us ^pa remnant to escape, and to give us ^a a nail in his holy place, that our God may ^q lighten our eyes, and give us a little ^r reviving in our bondage.

⁹ For we were bond-men; ^y yet our God hath not forsaken us in our bondage, but hath extended mercy unto us in the sight of the kings of Persia, to give us a reviving, ^t to set up the house of our God, and to ^u repair the desolations thereof, and to give us a wall in Judah and in Jerusalem.

¹⁰ And now, O our God, what shall we say after this? for we have forsaken thy commandments,

¹³ And ^b after all that is come upon us for our evil deeds, and for our great trespass, seeing that thou our God ^c hast punished us less than our iniquities deserve, and ^d hast given us such deliverance as this;

¹⁴ Should we again break thy commandments, and ^e join in affinity with the people of these abominations? wouldst not thou be angry with us till thou hadst consumed us, so that there should be ^f no remnant nor escaping?

¹⁵ O LORD God of Israel, thou art righteous; for we remain yet escaped, as it is this day: behold, we are before thee ¹ in our trespasses; for ² we cannot stand before thee because of this.

CHAPTER X.

¹ Shechaniah encourageth Ezra to reform the strange marriages. ⁶ Ezra, mourning, assemblh the people. ⁹ The people repent, &c.

NOW, when Ezra had prayed, and ^a when he had confessed, ^b weeping and casting himself down before the house of God, there assembled unto him out of Israel a very great congregation of men, and women, and children: for the people wept ^c very sore.

² And ^d Shechaniah the son of Jehiel, one of the sons of ^e Elam, answered and said unto Ezra, ^f "We have trespassed against our God, and have taken strange wives of the people of the land; ^g yet now there is hope in Israel concerning this thing.

³ Now therefore ^h let us make a covenant with our God to ⁱ put away all the wives, and such as are born of them, according to the counsel of my lord, and of those that tremble ^j at the commandment of our God; and let it be done according to the law.

⁴ Arise; for this matter belongeth unto thee: we also will be with thee: be of good courage, and do it.

⁵ Then ^k arose Ezra, and made the chief priests, the Levites, and all Israel, to swear that they should do according to this word: and they swore.

⁶ ^l Then Ezra rose up from before the house of God, and went into the chamber of Johanan the son of Eliashib; and when he came thither, he did eat no bread, nor drink water: for ^m he mourned because of the transgression of them that had been carried away.

⁷ And they made proclamation throughout Judah and Jerusalem unto all the children of the captivity, that they should gather themselves together unto Jerusalem;

⁸ And that whosoever would not come within three days, according to the counsel of the princes and the elders, all his substance should be ⁿ forfeited, and ^o himself separated from the congregation of those that had been carried away.

⁹ ^p Then all the men of Judah and Benjamin gathered themselves together unto and present guilt, there they were, standing before the Lord in their trespasses, which were so great and so aggravated that the transgressors, although of the seed of the faithful, were abashed and confounded. The state of things which Ezra found but too closely corresponds with that of a corrupt Christianity, where people and ministers, small and great, have alike become carnal, walking in the course of this vain world, and governed by its divers lusts and passions. The thorough reformation of one implies the reformation of all classes, seeing that they rise or sink together.

Chap. X. 1-5. Happy was it for the people to have such an intercessor as Ezra. The sorrow of heart and the fervour of spirit he manifested, were probably never exceeded by either priest or prophet. The spectacle was altogether extraordinary—the priest confessing, weeping, and casting himself prostrate before the Lord, in the midst of the great assembly of men, women, and children, all weeping very sore. What a sight! What depth of penitence! With what power the truth had come home to the conscience! The first step in the reformation was one of a character to test the power of principle. It was in very deed the cutting off of the right hand, and the plucking out of the right eye. But such was the hold the truth had taken, that the Spirit of the Lord was equal to the emergency. As Ezra demanded of them "they swear." Ver. 6-8. The distress of Ezra, notwithstanding his success with the priests, the Levites, and the people, still continued; such was the depth of his sorrow and fear, that he could neither eat nor drink, but continued mourning over the people's iniquities. Very decisive steps were taken to work reformation. He brought to bear the heaviest pressure within his power

Jerusalem within three days: it was the ninth month, and the twentieth day of the month; and all the people sat in the street of the house of God, ^mtrembling because of this matter, and for the ⁴great rain.

10 And Ezra the priest stood up, and said unto them, Ye have transgressed, and have ⁶taken strange wives, to increase the trespass of Israel.

11 Now therefore ^amake confession unto the LORD God of your fathers, and ^odo his pleasure; and ^bseparate yourselves from the people of the land, ⁴and from the strange wives.

12 Then all the congregation answered and said with a loud voice, As thou hast said, so must we do.

13 But the people are many, and it is a time of much rain, and we are not able to stand without, neither is this a work of one day or two: for ⁶we are many that have transgressed in this thing.

14 Let now ^oour rulers of all the congregation stand, and let all them which have taken strange wives in our cities come at appointed times, and with them the elders of every city, and the judges thereof, until ⁴the fierce wrath of our God ¹for this matter be turned from us.

15 ¶ Only Jonathan the son of Asahel, and Jahaziah the son of Tikvah, ⁸were employed about this matter; and ⁴Meshullam and ²Shabbethai the Levite helped them.

16 And the children of the captivity did so. And Ezra the priest, with certain chief of the fathers, after the house of their fathers, and all of them by their names, were separated, and sat down in the first day of the tenth month ²to examine the matter.

17 And they made an end with all the men that had taken strange wives by the first day of the first month.

18 ¶ And among ⁷the sons of the priests there were found that had taken strange wives; namely, of the sons of Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and his brethren; ²Maaseiah, and Eliezer, and Jarib, and Gedaliah.

19 And they gave their hands that they would put away their wives; and, being guilty, they offered ^aa ram of the flock for their trespass.

in order to secure the general concurrence. The penalty of neglect was the forfeiture of substance, and exclusion from the body of the returned captives. No higher influence could be exerted short of the penalty of death. Ver. 9-19. Matters now assumed an aspect of extraordinary interest. Never before had Judea presented such a spectacle as that which appeared, when the whole multitude stood in the street, trembling because of their transgression, while the rain descended in torrents upon them from heaven. They displayed on that occasion an extraordinary melting of heart, unanimously and promptly complying with the command of Ezra, "As thou hast said, so must we do." To this extent the heart of the Scribe was relieved, and a feeling of hope and comfort once more sprung up in his troubled bosom. The facts of the history have a powerful bearing on evangelical religion. Where there has been sin, there must be repentance; the faith is always doubtful which, in such cases, has been preceded by no searchings of heart, no deep contrition. The principle of essential separation from the world, and the men of the world, is here strongly set forth. Though Christians are in it, they must not be of it, neither must they love it, for if they do, the love of the Father cannot be in them.

THE BOOK OF NEHEMIAH.

Nehemiah was born at Babylon. His narrative continues the history of Ezra during some twelve years. Notwithstanding his high position at the Court of Persia, he sacrificed everything for the sake of Jerusalem and his people. Ezra mainly devoted himself to the collecting of the Sacred Books and the advancement of reformation; while Nehemiah, proceeding a step further, betook himself to revive the Civil Polity of the people, as well as to strengthen the City of David. The labours of Ezra, who had been at work for about ten years, prepared the way for those of Nehemiah, who followed up, and completed the work of Ezra. These operations took place about 445 years before Christ. While these great Reformers were occupied in this spiritual enterprise, Greece was in its glory, being at that time adorned by most of its principal ornaments in Oratory, Poetry, and History. How different the characters, the aims, objects, and pursuits of these two classes of men, and how different their effects on mankind! The Greek Classics and the Jewish Scriptures stand in the same relation to each other as do the glow-worm and the sun. The Greeks, as a people, have perished; only a few debased fragments now remain to testify of a nation which had been. The Jews have proved themselves indestructible; they still constitute a great nation, and are found throughout the whole civilised world.

4 ^lAnd it came to pass, when I heard these words, that ^mI sat down and wept, and mourned certain days, and fasted, and prayed before ⁿthe God of heaven,

5 And said, I beseech thee, O LORD God of heaven, ^othe great and terrible God, that ^pkeepeth covenant and mercy for them that love him, and observe his commandments:

6 Let thine ear now be attentive, and thine eyes open, that thou mayest hear the prayer of thy servant, which I pray before thee now, ^qday and night, for the children of Israel thy servants, and ^rconfess the sins of the children of Israel, which we have sinned against thee: ^sboth I and my father's house have sinned.

7 We have dealt very ^tcorruptly against thee, and have not kept ^uthe commandments, nor the statutes, nor the judgments, which ^vthou commandedst thy servant Moses.

8 ^wRemember, I beseech thee, the word that thou commandedst thy servant Moses, saying, ^xIf ye transgress, I will scatter you abroad among the nations:

9 But ^yif ye turn unto me, and keep my commandments, and do them, though there were of you cast out unto the uttermost part of the heaven, ^zyet ^{aa}will I gather them from thence, and will bring them unto ^{ab}the place that I have chosen to set my name there.

10 Now ^{ac}these are thy servants, and thy people, ^{ad}whom thou hast redeemed by thy great power, and by thy ^{ae}strong hand.

11 O LORD, I beseech thee, let now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of thy servant, and to the prayer of thy servants, ^{af}who desire to fear thy name; and prosper, I pray thee, thy servant this day, and ^{ag}grant him mercy in the sight of this man. For I was the king's cup-bearer.

CHAPTER II.

1 Artaxerxes sendeth Nehemiah to Jerusalem. 12 He vieweth the ruins, 17 and inciteth the Jews to build.

AND it came to pass in the month ^aNisan, in ^bthe twentieth year of Artaxerxes the king, ^cthat wine was before him; and ^dI took up the wine, and gave ^eit unto the king. Now I had not been ^fbeforetime sad in his presence.

2 Wherefore the king said unto me,

Chap. I. 1-11. Although in those days there existed no postal communication such as that in which mankind now rejoice, Nehemiah had come to be acquainted with the condition of his people in Jerusalem, and learned they were in great affliction and reproach. The intelligence cut him to the heart—that heart having been prepared of the Lord to receive the impressions necessary to impel him to the work which he was destined to perform. He wept, mourned, fasted, and prayed. The prayer was alike pious and patriotic, and he had speedy proofs that the Lord heard him. The example of Nehemiah is full of encouragement to the people of God amidst all trial and perplexity. Sorrow is beneficial only when it leads to supplication. There is often sorrow which is not of a godly sort, and hence, although it afflicts the soul, yet it brings no relief, since it does not lead the soul to God. That affliction is always good, whatever be its source, which conducts to the footstool of mercy; in all such cases it will be found that the results prove salutary.

Chap. II. 1-8. A heart which is wrung with anguish will always make itself visible in the countenance. The distress of Nehemiah was no transient emotion. The iron had entered his soul and he could not conceal it. The king, perceiving it, inquired the cause, and Nehemiah, notwithstanding his terror, was enabled, in a few explicit words, honestly to state it. We have nowhere a finer example of true spirituality and of ejaculatory prayer than in ver. 4. The monarch asked him for what he made request, and instead of immediately answering, he paused a moment, and that moment he employed in lifting up his heart ^gto the God of heaven. How strikingly does this exemplify living by faith, and walking ^aWhy is thy countenance sad, seeing thou art not sick? this is nothing else but ^bsorrow of heart. Then I was very sore afraid,

3 And said unto the king, 'Let the king live for ever: why should not my countenance be sad, when ^cthe city, the place of my fathers' sepulchres, ^dlieth waste, and the gates thereof are consumed with fire?

4 Then the king said unto me, ^eFor what dost thou make request? ^fSo I prayed to the God of heaven.

5 And I said unto the king, ^gIf it please the king, and ^hif thy servant have found favour in thy sight, that thou wouldest send me unto Judah, unto the city of my fathers' sepulchres, that I may build it.

6 And the king said unto me, (the ⁱqueen also sitting by him,) For how long shall thy journey be? and when wilt thou return? ^jSo it pleased the king to send me; and ^kI set him a time.

7 Moreover, I said unto the king, If it please the king, ^llet letters be given me to the governors beyond the river, ^mthat they may convey me over, till I come into Judah;

8 And a letter unto Asaph the keeper of the king's forest, that he may give me timber to make beams for the gates of the palace which ⁿappertained to the house, and ^ofor the wall of the city, and ^pfor the house that I shall enter into. And ^qthe king granted me, according to the good hand of my God upon me.

9 ¶ Then I came to the governors beyond the river, and gave them the king's letters. (Now ^rthe king had sent captains of the army and horsemen with me.)

10 When Sanballat the ^sHoronite, and Tobiah ^tthe servant, the Ammonite, heard of it, ^uit grieved them exceedingly that ^vthere was come a man to seek the welfare of the children of Israel.

11 So ^wI came to Jerusalem, and was there three days.

12 ¶ And ^xI arose in the night, I and some few men with me; ^yneither told I any man what ^zmy God had put in my heart to do at Jerusalem: neither ^{aa}was there any beast with me, save the beast that I rode upon.

with God! The prayer was clearly heard by the compassion and the condescension the king displayed. Every request was granted. Never was prayer more speedily and fully answered. Ver. 9-20. In such an enterprise as that of Nehemiah, authority was everything; without this, any individual, whatever his wisdom or worth, would have had but little weight with the refractory and uncemented multitude. It was the king's commission that so strengthened the hands of Ezra; and Nehemiah came accompanied with corresponding credentials. When the old enemies of the Jews learned the fact, it grieved them exceedingly; but, on hearing that Nehemiah had come clothed with authority, they felt that it became them to take heed to their conduct. Nehemiah presented a rare combination of prudence with courage; he was in no haste to reveal himself by telling them what God had put into his heart to do at Jerusalem. Ver. 16 is remarkable, as exhibiting the character of the man in very few 13 And I went out by night, by ^cthe gate of the valley, even before the dragon-well, and to ^dthe dung-port, and viewed ^ethe walls of Jerusalem, which were broken down, and the gates thereof were consumed with fire.

14 Then I went on to ^fthe gate of the fountain, and to the king's pool: but ^gthere was no place for the beast ^hthat was under me to pass.

15 Then went I up in the night by ⁱthe brook, and viewed the wall, and turned back, and entered by the gate of the valley, and ^jso returned.

16 And the rulers knew not whether I went, or what I did; neither had I as yet told it to the Jews, nor to the priests, nor to the nobles, nor to the rulers, nor to the rest that did the work.

17 ¶ Then said I unto them, ^kYe see the distress that we ^lare in, how Jerusalem ^mlieth waste, and the gates thereof are burnt with fire: ⁿcome, and let us build up the wall of Jerusalem, that we be no more ^oa reproach.

18 Then I told them of the hand of my God which was good upon me; as also the king's words that he had spoken unto me. And they said, Let us rise up and build. ^pSo they strengthened their hands for ^qthis good work.

19 But when Sanballat the Horonite, and Tobiah the servant, the Ammonite, and ^rGeshem the Arabian, heard it, ^sthey laughed us to scorn, and despised us, and said, What is this thing that ye do? ^twill ye rebel against the king?

words. A judicious reserve is always beneficial to men in high places, and those who have great things to perform will frequently do well in not communicating their secrets beyond the extent absolutely necessary. In due time, Nehemiah opened both his heart and his commission, and took up the position which had been assigned him. He was gratefully and joyfully received by his countrymen, who at once put themselves under his wise guidance. His reply to the old enemies was emphatic:—^hThe God of heaven, he will prosper us; therefore we his servants will arise and build: but ye have no portion, nor right, nor memorial in Jerusalem.

Chap. III. 1-32. The promptitude with which Nehemiah and the people now betook themselves to the work was exemplary. All who have an important undertaking before them, should lose as little time as possible in making preparations. A good beginning is 11 Malchijah the son of Harim, and Hashub the son of ^qPahath-moab, repaired the ^rother piece, and the tower of the furnaces.

12 And next unto him repaired Shalum the son of Halo-hesh, the ruler of the half part of Jerusalem, ^she and his daughters.

14 But the dung-gate repaired Malchiah the son of Rechab, ^vthe ruler of part of ^wBeth-haccere-m; he built it, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof.

15 But ^xthe gate of the fountain repaired Shallum the son of Col-hozeh, the ruler of part of ^yMizpah; he built it, and covered it, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof, and the wall of the pool of ^zSiloah by the king's garden, and unto ^{aa}the stairs that go down from the city of David.

always a pledge for a satisfactory close. The priesthood, once in motion, appeared to have discharged their duties with praiseworthy devotedness. The language of ver. 5 is very remarkable:—"Their nobles put not their necks to the work of their Lord." They who ought, on every ground, to have been the first both to do and to suffer with cheerful hearts to the utmost of their power, that they might acquit themselves of the obligations to God and the nation imposed by their rank, stood altogether aloof. It is matter for regret, although an undoubted fact, that the natural tendency of prerogative and privilege is not to elevate the soul, and impel it to noble deeds for the public good, but rather to invest it with selfishness, generally attended by apathy and imbe-

CHAPTER IV.

1 While the enemies scoff, Nehemiah prayeth to God. 7 He setteth a watch.

BUT it came to pass, that when Sanballat heard that we builded the wall, he was wroth, and took great indignation, and mocked the Jews.

2 And he spake before his brethren and the army of Samaria, and said, What do these feeble Jews? will they fortify themselves? will they sacrifice? will they make an end in a day? will they revive the stones out of the heaps of the rubbish which are burnt?

3 Now Tobiah the Ammonite was by him; and he said, Even that which they build, if a fox go up, he shall even break down their stone wall.

4 Hear, O our God; for we are despised: and turn their reproach upon their own head, and give them for a prey in the land of captivity;

5 And cover not their iniquity, and let not their sin be blotted out from before thee: for they have provoked thee to anger before the builders.

6 So built we the wall; and all the wall was joined together unto the half thereof: for the people had a mind to work.

7 ¶ But it came to pass, that when Sanballat, and Tobiah, and the Arabians, and the Ammonites, and the Ashdodites, heard that the walls of Jerusalem were made up, and that the breaches began to be stopped, then they were very wroth,

8 And conspired all of them together to come and to fight against Jerusalem, and to hinder it.

9 Nevertheless we made our prayer unto our God, and set a watch against them day and night, because of them.

10 And Judah said, The strength of the bearers of burdens is decayed, and there is much rubbish; so that we are not able to build the wall.

11 And our adversaries said, They shall not know, neither see, till we come in the midst among them, and slay them, and cause the work to cease.

12 And it came to pass, that when the Jews which dwelt by them came, they said unto us ten times, From all places whence ye shall return unto us they will be upon you.

13 ¶ Therefore set I in the lower places behind the wall, and on the higher places, I even set the people after their families, with their swords, their spears, and their bows.

14 And I looked, and rose up, and said unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to the rest of the people, Be not ye afraid of them: remember the LORD, which is great and terrible, and fight for your brethren, your sons and your daughters, your wives and your houses.

15 And it came to pass, when our enemies heard that it was known unto us, and God had brought their counsel to nought, that we returned all of us to the wall, every one unto his work.

16 And it came to pass, from that time forth, that the half of my servants wrought in the work, and the other half of them held both the spears, the shields, and the bows, and the habergeons; and the rulers were behind all the house of Judah.

17 They which builded on the wall, and they that bare burdens, with those that laded, every one with one of his hands wrought in the work, and with the other hand held a weapon.

18 For the builders, every one had his sword girded by his side, and so builded: and he that sounded the trumpet was by me.

19 ¶ And I said unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to the rest of the people, The work is great and large, and we are separated upon the wall, one far from another.

20 In what place therefore ye hear the sound of the trumpet, resort ye thither unto us: our God shall fight for us.

21 So we laboured in the work: and half of them held the spears from the rising of the morning till the stars appeared.

22 Likewise at the same time said I unto the people, Let every one with his servant lodge within Jerusalem, that in the night they may be a guard to us, and labour on the day.

23 So neither I, nor my brethren, nor my servants, nor the men of the guard which followed me, none of us put off our cility. The rule, nevertheless, remains uncanceled, that they who have received much, ought to render much again; and all neglect on this score of equitable arrangement is certain, sooner or later, to be visited with appropriate penalties.

Chap. IV. 1-12. Matters now assumed a somewhat serious aspect. The building went on with great rapidity, to the alarm and vexation of the enemies, whose rage was such as led them to conspire together to oppose the work by force. Here again, Nehemiah, as usual, looked up. "We made our prayer unto our God, and set a watch against them day and night." Still attentive to combine means with ends, his confidence was exclusively in the Divine protection. The enemy ceased not to menace them with destruction. Oft-times were they apprised of the perils which awaited them; but nothing could intimidate the brave heart of Nehemiah. Ver. 13-18. Nehemiah proved himself equal to the emergency; as dangers multiplied, he increased the means of defence. Assuming proper authority, he addressed himself to the nobles, the rulers, and the people, appealing to what God had done in past times, and encouraging them still to rest on his promised favour. The portraiture here presented of vigilant labour has been admired in every age. While one half worked, the other half held the weapons of war; and even clothes, ⁸ saving that every one put them off for washing.

CHAPTER V.

1 The Jews complain of their debt, mortgage, and bondage.
 6 The usurers rebuked, &c.

AND there was ^a a great cry of the people, and of their wives, against ^b their brethren the Jews.

2 For there were that said, ^c "We, our sons, and our daughters, are many: therefore ^d we take up corn for them, that we may eat, and live.

3 Some also there were that said, ^e "We have mortgaged our lands, vineyards, and houses, that we might buy corn, ^f because of the dearth.

6 ¶ And ^k I was very angry when I heard their cry and these words.

7 Then ^l I consulted with myself, and ^m I rebuked the nobles, and the rulers, and said unto them, ⁿ "Ye exact usury, every one of his brother. And ^o I set a great assembly against them.

8 And I said unto them, ^p "We, ^q after our ability, have ^r redeemed our brethren the Jews, which were sold unto the heathen; and will ye even ^s sell your brethren? or ^t shall they be sold unto us? Then ^u held they their peace, and found nothing to answer.

10 ¶ I likewise, and my brethren, and my servants, might exact of them money and corn: ^y I pray you, let us ^z leave off this usury.

15 But the former governors, that had been before me, were chargeable unto the people, and had taken of them bread and wine, besides forty shekels of silver; yea, ⁱ even their servants bare rule over the people: but so did not I, ^j because of the fear of God.

they who builded, built with the one hand, and with the other grasped the sword! Never before was city so built—never before did events occur so beautifully to illustrate the condition of the spiritual soldier, whose business it is, throughout his pilgrimage, to work and fight—to fight and work! The hardship of the condition set forth in the narrative was very great; but zeal for the Lord of Hosts, and concern for the land which contained the sepulchres of their fathers, sustained them in a manner most striking. Much was required of the people, and they proved themselves ready for the service. Their example is richly fraught with precious instruction to the people of God; and the analogy between their labours and their duties, spiritually understood, is striking and complete.

Chap. V. 1-13. Extremes try men. Events which would soften generous hearts, only harden those of an opposite description. The unparalleled condition of the Jews ought, for the time being at least, to have drawn forth the spirit of a generous brotherhood, leading to the possession of all things in common, so far as necessary for purposes of life and comfort. But it was the very reverse. The richer took every advantage of the poorer classes, even to the extent of robbing them of their lands and vineyards. The occasion furnished another illustration of the true grandeur of Nehemiah's character. On learning the facts, he rebukes the nobles and the rulers—"Ye exact usury, every one of his brother." How discreditable the fact, and how merited the rebuke! He adds—"I set a great assembly against them." In so doing, he did well. The cause was just, the occasion most serious, and it was time to bring popular power to bear upon the repression of this discreditable spirit. Smitten by conscience within, and assailed by a multitude without, the oppressors "held their peace; they found nothing to answer." The truly noble patriot, in his exhortation, added—"It is not good that ye do: ought ye not to walk in the fear of our God, because of the reproach of the heathen our enemies?" The rebuke produced its proper effect, leading to the restoration of lands, vineyards, houses, and other property. They then agreed to do what they ought to have done spontaneously:—"We will restore them, and will require nothing of them; so will we do as thou sayest." So far the success was complete; but Nehemiah, knowing mankind, had his doubts, and therefore he called the priests, and "took an oath of them that they should do according to this promise."

19 ^aThink upon me, my God, for good, ^oaccording to all that I have done for this people.

NOW it came to pass, ^awhen Sanballat, and Tobiah, and ^bGeshem the Arabian, and the rest of our enemies, heard that I had builded the wall, and that there was ^cno breach left therein, (though ^dat that time I had not set up the doors upon the gates.)

work, that it be not done. ^aNow therefore, O God, strengthen my hands.

10 ¶ Afterward I came unto the house of ^bShemaiah the son of Delaiah, the son of Mehetabeel, who ^cwas ^dshut up; and he said, ^eLet us meet together in ^fthe house of God, within the temple, and ^glet us shut the doors of the temple: for they will come to slay thee; yea, ^hin the night will they come to slay thee.

12 And, lo, ^mI perceived that ⁿGod had not sent him; but that he pronounced this prophecy against me: for Tobiah and Sanballat had ^ohired him.

13 Therefore ^pwas he hired, ^qthat I should be afraid, and do so, and sin, and ^rthat they might have matter for an evil report, ^sthat they might reproach me.

16 And it came to pass, that when all our enemies heard ^xthereof, and all the heathen that ^ywere about us saw ^zthese things, they were much cast down in their own eyes: ^afor they perceived that this work was wrought of our God.

17 ¶ Moreover, in those days the nobles of Judah ^bsent many letters unto Tobiah, and the letters of Tobiah came unto them.

18 For ^cthere were many in Judah sworn unto him, because ^dhe was the son-in-law of Shechaniah the son of Arah; and his son Johanan had taken the daughter of Meshullam the son of Berechiah.

19 Also ^ethey reported his good deeds before me, and uttered my ^fwords to him. And Tobiah sent letters ^gto put me in fear.

Ver. 14-19. The generosity and nobility of Nehemiah appear on every occasion. Throughout the time that he was appointed governor, extending through a period of twelve years, he declined all salary on behalf of himself and his household. It was not so with the former governors, who were chargeable to the people, and whose very servants ruled over them. But says he—"Not so did I, because of the fear of God." Possessing property, he appears to have expended most of it in support of himself, and in furthering the great work; not that he was not entitled to it, for he assigns as a reason—"For all this, required not I the bread of the governor, because the bondage was heavy upon this people." What considerate generosity! What an example to opulent men under circumstances in any measure analogous!

Chap. VI. 1-16. The pertinacity of the opponents was extraordinary. They resorted to all possible expedients to interrupt the work; and finding falsehood necessary, they exerted it in the most reckless manner. Nehemiah met the charges with a flat contradiction, telling his traducer, "Thou feignest them out of thine own heart." Amidst all his troubles, how instinctively his spirit, as usual, turns heavenward! "Now therefore, O God, strengthen my hands." Such was the efficiency with which Nehemiah discharged his duties, that the only hope of his adversaries was in cutting him off. While he lived, they felt it was impossible to arrest the progress of the enterprise. Fears naturally filled the mind of his friends, who duly estimated the importance of his life. These fears they sought to communicate to himself; but it was in vain—or, rather, it only brought forth the very memorable and noble answer—"Should such a man as I flee? and who is there, that being as I am, would go into the temple to save his life? I will not go in." Where shall we find moral magnanimity, true heroism, if not here? Nehemiah fully exemplified the power of labour, combined with prayer and perseverance. One part of the work was completed in an incredibly short time. The result of this Herculean labour proved deeply depressing to the enemies, "who were much cast down in their own eyes, for they perceived that this work was wrought of our God." Ver. 17-19. The facts set forth in these verses reflect anything but credit upon human nature, or upon the class of society referred to. The nobles, to their former misconduct, added a course in its own nature highly treasonable, and which, with a man of less humanity than Nehemiah, might have cost them very dear. They maintained a correspondence with the enemy informing him of everything that Nehemiah said or did,—

CHAPTER VII.

1 Nehemiah committed the charge of Jerusalem to Hanani and Hananiah. 5 A register of the genealogy of them which came at the first out of Babylon; 8 of the people; 9 of the priests, &c.

NOW it came to pass, when ^athe wall was built, and I had set up the doors, and ^bthe porters, and the singers, and the Levites, were appointed,

2 That I gave my brother Hanani, and Hananiah the ruler of the palace, charge over Jerusalem; for he was ^ca faithful man, and ^dfeared God above many.

3 And I said unto them, Let not the gates of Jerusalem be opened until the sun be hot; and while they stand by, let them shut the doors, and bar them: and appoint watches of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, every one in his watch, and every one to be over against his house.

4 Now the city was ^elarge and great; but the people were few therein, and ^fthe houses were not builded.

5 ¶ And my God ^gput into mine heart to gather together the nobles, and the rulers, and the people, ^hthat they might be reckoned by genealogy: and I found a register of the genealogy of them which came up at the first, and found written therein,

6 These are the children of the province, that went up out of the captivity, of those that had been carried away, ⁱwhom Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away, and came again to Jerusalem and to Judah, every one unto his city;

7 Who came with ^jZerubbabel, ^kJeshua, Nehemiah, ^lAzariah, Raamiah, Nahamani, Mordecai, Bilshan, ^mMispereth, Bigvai, ⁿNehum, Baanah: the number, ^oI say, of the men of the people of Israel was this;

9 The children of ^qShephatiah, three hundred seventy and two.

10 The children of ^rArah, six hundred fifty and two.

giving him the full benefit of their knowledge of all that was doing, and to be done by the governor. Such facts shew how little men are to be accounted of, and that we shall frequently obtain least where we have a right to look for most. If patriotism exist in any class, it ought to have been amongst those who had most to gain or to lose by success or miscarriage. Such conduct tended to depress even the stout heart of Nehemiah; but his confidence in God was such as to reduce the greatest of foes to very small dimensions. Well might he things, ^jtill there stood up a priest with Urim and Thummim.

66 ¶ The whole congregation together was forty and two thousand three hundred and threescore:

67 Besides ^ktheir man-servants and their maid-servants, of whom there were seven thousand three hundred thirty and seven; and they had ^ltwo hundred forty and five singing-men and singing-women.

68 Their horses, seven hundred thirty and six; their mules, two hundred forty and five;

69 Their camels, four hundred thirty and five; six thousand seven hundred and twenty asses.

70 ¶ And ^msome of ⁿthe chief of the fathers gave unto the work: the Tirshatha gave to the treasure a thousand drams of gold, fifty ^obasons, five hundred and thirty priests' garments.

71 And ^psome of the chief of the fathers gave to the treasure of the work twenty thousand drams of gold, and two thousand and two hundred pound of silver.

72 And ^qthat which ^rthe rest of the people gave was twenty thousand drams of gold, and two thousand pound of silver, and threescore and seven priests' garments.

73 So the priests, and the Levites, and the porters, and the singers, and ^ssome of the people, and the Nethinims, and all Israel, dwelt in their cities: and when the seventh month came, the children of Israel were in their cities.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 The religious manner of reading and hearing the law.
9 The people comforted.

AND ^aall the people gathered themselves together ^bas one man into the street that was ^cbefore the water-gate; and they spake unto ^dEzra the scribe to ^ebring the book of the law of Moses, which the LORD had commanded to Israel.

2 And Ezra ^fthe priest brought the law before ^gthe congregation, both of men and women, and all that ^hcould hear with understanding, upon ⁱthe first day of the seventh month.

3 And ^jhe read therein before the street that was before the water-gate, from the ^kmorning until mid-day, before the men and the women, and those that could understand: and ^lthe ears of all the people were ^mattentive unto the book of the law.

4 And Ezra the scribe stood upon a ⁿpulpit of wood, which they had made than this. It has been preached in ten thousand pulpits, and will continue to be set forth as descriptive of departed worth till the heavens shall be no more. Nehemiah displayed great vigilance in watching against the enemy, and his example deserves the special imitation of every soldier of Christ Jesus. It is impossible for men in these days to conceive of the difficulties which had to be contended with in raising the wall of the city. "The people were few therein, and the houses were not builded." The merit was in proportion to the difficulty; and, thus estimated, it was exceedingly great. Walking in the fear of God, Nehemiah looked on every act as a service to the Most High, acknowledging that the Lord had put it into his heart to gather the nobles, the rulers, and the people for the purpose of reckoning the genealogy.

Nehemiah was remarkable not only for doing everything prescribed, but doing it in the best manner.

Chap. VIII. 1-8. Public meetings in the open air, both in Greece and Rome, were common things, but such meetings were held only for political objects. Never before did the multitude assemble for the express purpose of religious instruction, even such instruction as the heathen priesthood could supply. In the present case, however, we have the remnant of the chosen people assembled together under the canopy of heaven to hear the words of the living and true God communicated by his holy Prophets. In this matter Ezra, as became him, took the principal part, and in so doing, he was urged by the people themselves, who were eager to hear for the purpose: and beside him stood Mattithiah, and Shema, and Anaiiah, and Urijah, and Hilkiah, and Maaseiah, on his right hand; and on his left hand, Pedaiiah, and Mishael, and Malchiah, and Hashum, and Hashbadana, Zechariah, and Meshullam.

5 And Ezra opened the book in the sight of all the people; (for he was above all the people;) and when he opened it, all the people stood up:

6 And Ezra blessed the LORD, the great God: and all the people answered, Amen, Amen, with lifting up their hands; and they bowed their heads, and worshipped the LORD with their faces to the ground.

7 Also Jeshua, and Bani, and Sherebiah, Jamin, Akkub, Shabbethai, Hodijah, Maaseiah, Kelita, Azariah, Jozabad, Hanan, Pelaiah, and the Levites, caused the people to understand the law: and the people stood in their place.

8 So they read in the book, in the law of God, distinctly, and gave the sense, and caused them to understand the reading.

9 ¶ And Nehemiah, which is the Tirshatha, and Ezra the priest the scribe, and the Levites that taught the people, said unto all the people, This day is holy unto the LORD your God; mourn not, nor weep. For all the people wept, when they heard the words of the law.

10 Then he said unto them, Go your way, eat the fat, and drink the sweet, and send portions unto them for whom nothing is prepared: for this day is holy unto our LORD; neither be ye sorry: for the joy of the LORD is your strength.

11 So the Levites stilled all the people, saying, Hold your peace, for the day is holy; neither be ye grieved.

12 And all the people went their way to eat, and to drink, and to send portions, and to make great mirth, because they had understood the words that were declared unto them.

13 ¶ And on the second day were gathered together the chief of the fathers of all the people, the priests, and the Levites, unto Ezra the scribe, even to understand the words of the law.

14 And they found written in the law which the LORD had commanded by Moses, that the children of Israel should dwell in booths in the feast of the seventh month:

15 And that they should publish and proclaim in all their cities, and in Jerusalem, saying, Go forth unto the mount, and fetch olive-branches, and pine-branches, and myrtle-branches, and palm-branches, and branches of thick trees, to make booths, as it is written.

16 ¶ So the people went forth, and brought them, and made themselves booths, every one upon the roof of his house, and in their courts, and in the courts of the house of God, and in the street of the water-gate, and in the street of the gate of Ephraim.

17 And all the congregation of them that were come again out of the captivity made booths, and sat under the booths; for since the days of Jeshua the son of Nun unto that day had not the children of Israel done so: and there was very great gladness.

18 Also day by day, from the first day unto the last day, he read in the book of the law of God: and they kept the feast seven days; and on the eighth day was a solemn assembly, according unto the manner.

CHAPTER IX.

1 A solemn fast, and repentance of the people. 4 The Levites confess God's manifold goodness, and their own wickedness.

NOW in the twenty and fourth day of this month, the children of Israel were assembled with fasting, and with sackclothes, and earth upon them.

2 And the seed of Israel separated themselves from all strangers, and stood and confessed their sins, and the iniquities of their fathers.

3 And they stood up in their place, and read in the book of the law of the LORD their God one fourth part of the day; and another fourth part they confessed, and worshipped the LORD their God.

4 ¶ Then stood up upon the stairs, of the Levites, Jeshua, and Bani, Kadmiel, Shebaniah, Bunni, Sherebiah, Bani, and Chenani, and cried with a loud voice unto the LORD their God.

5 Then the Levites, Jeshua, and Kadmiel, Bani, Hashabniah, Sherebiah, Hodi-

the Divine testimony. All were assembled that could "hear with understanding;" and Ezra, on a pulpit prepared for the purpose, having opened the book, "blessed the Lord, the great God," when all the people answered, "Amen, Amen!" The foregoing verses have been admired as a definition of the best kind of public instruction. "They read in the book of the law of God distinctly, and gave the sense, and caused them to understand the reading." Ver. 9-18. This was clearly a mixture of reading with exposition, and the text supplies abundant proof that it was not what thoughtless persons have too often deemed it, a heavy exercise—a dull entertainment. "All the people wept when they heard the words of the law." There is a power in the Sacred Scriptures, when applied by the Spirit of God, infinitely superior to that of the highest human oratory. During seven long days the people continued with undiminished interest to listen to the Divine testimony. From this we are taught the great importance attaching to the public reading and exposition of the Holy Book. It is alike the most instructive and the most edifying of all exercises. No higher proof can be had of spiritual attainments than a preference for this kind of exercise. It is the food of the regenerated mind, as well as the medicine of man's moral nature.

Chap. IX. 1-38. In the previous chapter, the principal feature was instruction,—in the present, it is worship. The Jews having separated themselves from strangers, "confessed their own sins, and the iniquities of their fathers." One-fourth part of the day was devoted to reading and expounding, and another fourth part to confession and worship. In this division the proportion of worship was much greater than that which obtains amongst us, which proved the thoroughly awakened and deeply excited state of the people. The jah, Shebaniah, and Pethahiah, said, Stand up and 'bless the LORD your God for ever and ever; and blessed be thy glorious name, which is exalted above all blessing and praise.

6 Thou, ^beven thou, art LORD alone: 'thou hast made heaven, ^kthe heaven of heavens, with all their host, the earth, and all ^{things} that are therein, the seas, and all that is therein, and thou 'pre-servest them all; and the ^mhost of heaven worshippeth thee.

7 Thou art the LORD the God, who didst 'choose Abram, and broughtest him forth out of Ur of the Chaldees, and 'gavest him the name of Abraham:

8 And 'founded his heart faithful before thee, and 'madest a covenant with him, to give the land of 'the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Jebusites, and the Girgashites, to give ^{it}, I say, to his seed, and hast performed thy words; for thou art 'righteous:

9 And 'didst see the affliction of our fathers in Egypt, and heardest their cry by the Red sea:

10 And 'shewedst signs and wonders upon Pharaoh, and on all his servants, and on all the people of his land; for thou knewest that 'they dealt proudly against them: so 'didst thou get thee a name, as ^{it} is this day.

11 And thou didst 'divide the sea before them, so that they went through the midst of the sea on the dry land: and 'their persecutors thou threwest into the deeps, as a stone into the mighty waters.

12 Moreover, ^bthou leddest them in the day by a cloudy pillar, and in the night by a pillar of fire, to give them light in the way wherein they should go.

13 Thou 'camest down also upon mount Sinai, and 'spakest with them from heaven, and 'gavest them right judgments, and 'true laws, good statutes and commandments:

14 And madest known unto them thy holy sabbath, and 'commandedst them precepts, statutes, and laws, by the hand of Moses thy servant:

15 And 'gavest them bread from heaven for their hunger, and 'broughtest forth water for them out of the rock for their thirst, and promisedst them that they should go in to possess the land which thou hadst 'sworn to give them.

16 But they and our fathers dealt proudly, and 'hardened their necks, and hearkened not to thy commandments,

17 And 'refused to obey, neither were mindful of thy wonders that thou didst among them; but hardened their necks, and in their rebellion 'appointed a captain to return to their bondage: but thou art ^aa God ^bready to pardon, ^cgracious and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, and forsookest them not.

18 Yea, ^owhen they had made them a molten calf, and said, This is thy god that brought thee up out of Egypt, and had wrought great provocations;

19 Yet thou, in thy manifold mercies, forsookest them not in the wilderness: the pillar of the cloud departed not from them by day, to lead them in the way; neither the pillar of fire by night, to shew them light, and the way wherein they should go.

20 Thou gavest also thy ^pgood Spirit to instruct them, and ^qwithheldest not thy manna from their mouth, and ^rgavest them water for their thirst.

21 Yea, forty years didst thou sustain them in the wilderness, so that they lacked nothing: ^stheir clothes waxed not old, and their feet swelled not.

22 Moreover, ^tthou gavest them kingdoms and nations, and didst ^udivide them into corners: so they possessed the land of Sihon, and the land of the king of Heshbon, and the land of Og king of Bashan.

23 Their children also ^vmultipliedst thou as the stars of heaven, and broughtest them into the land concerning which ^wthou hadst promised to their fathers, that they should go in to possess ^{it}.

24 So the children went in and possessed the land, and ^xthou subduedst before them the inhabitants of the land, the Canaanites, and gavest them into their hands, with their kings, and the people of the land, that they might do with them ^{as} they would.

25 And they took strong cities, and ^aa fat land, and possessed houses full of all goods, ^bwells digged, vineyards, and oliveyards, and ^cfruit-trees in abundance: so they ^ddid eat, and were filled, and became fat, and delighted themselves in thy great goodness.

26 Nevertheless they were disobedient, and rebelled against thee, and cast thy law behind their backs, and ^eslew thy prophets, which testified against them to turn them to thee; and they wrought great provocations.

27 Therefore ^fthou deliveredst them into the hand of their enemies, who vexed them: and ^gin the time of their trouble, when they cried unto thee, thou heardest ^hthem from heaven; and, according to thy manifold mercies, thou gavest them ⁱsa-viours, who saved them out of the hand of their enemies.

28 But after they had rest, they ^jdid evil again before thee: therefore ledest thou them in the hand of their enemies, so that they had the dominion over them:

souls of an assembly in a state of spiritual slumber are impatient of extended devotion, but they will bear a large amount of able and animated preaching. All exercises are, to minds in such a state, oppressive in proportion to their spirituality. We have here no fewer than eight individuals successively offering prayer. What a spectacle! How emphatically it bespeaks sincerity and fervour! The following prayer is a grand and comprehensive recital of the great facts of the people's history, and of the Lord's gracious dealings with them.

yet when they returned, and cried unto thee, thou heardest them from heaven; and ¹many times didst thou deliver them, according to thy mercies;

29 And ²testifiedst against them, that thou mightest bring them again unto thy law; ³yet they dealt proudly, and hearkened not unto thy commandments, but sinned against thy judgments, (⁴which if a man do, he shall live in them,) and ⁵withdrew the shoulder, and hardened their neck, and would not hear:

30 Yet ¹many years didst thou ²forbear them, and testifiedst against them ³by thy Spirit in ⁴thy prophets: yet would they not give ear: ⁵therefore gavest thou them into the hand of the people of the lands.

31 Nevertheless, for thy great mercies' sake, thou didst not utterly consume them, nor forsake them: for thou art a gracious and merciful God.

32 Now therefore, ¹our God, the great, the mighty, and the terrible God, who ²keepeth covenant and mercy, let not all the ³trouble seem ⁴little before thee that hath ⁵come upon us, ⁶on our kings, on our princes, and on our priests, and on our prophets, and on our fathers, and on all thy people, since the time of the kings of Assyria unto this day.

33 Howbeit ¹thou art just in all that is brought upon us; for thou hast done right, but ²we have done wickedly:

34 Neither have our kings, our princes, our priests, nor our fathers, kept thy law, nor hearkened unto thy commandments, and thy testimonies, wherewith thou didst testify against them.

35 For ¹they have not served thee in their kingdom, and in thy great goodness that thou gavest them, and in the large and ²fat land which thou gavest before them, neither turned they from their wicked works.

36 Behold, we are servants this day; and for the land that thou gavest unto our fathers, to eat the fruit thereof, and the good thereof, behold, we are servants in it:

37 And ¹it yieldeth much increase unto the kings whom thou hast set over us because of our sins: also they have dominion over our bodies, and over our cattle, at their pleasure; and we are in great distress.

38 And because of all this ¹we make a sure covenant, and write it; and our princes, Levites, and priests, ²seal unto it.

The prayer is one of the most comprehensive, weighty, and instructive in the Holy Scriptures, and the study of it will be found a peculiarly edifying exercise.

Chap. X. 28-39. The covenant having been signed by the princes, Levites, and priests, steps were taken deeply to impress it on the general mind, that it might be carefully and conscientiously obeyed. The primary error of intermarrying with the heathen here occupies the principal place, shewing the great importance which attached to it. By bitter experience they had learned the unhappy consequences of these forbidden unions, singers, the Nethinims, and ²all they that had separated themselves from the people of the lands unto the law of God, their wives, their sons, and their daughters, every one having knowledge, and having understanding;

29 They ¹clave to their brethren, their nobles, and ²entered into a curse, and into an oath, ³to walk in God's law, which was ⁴given ⁵by Moses the servant of God, and ⁶to observe and do all the commandments of ⁷the LORD our Lord, and his judgments and his statutes;

take their daughters for our sons:

31 And ¹if ²the people of the land bring ware, or any victuals, on the sabbath-day to sell, ³that we would not buy it of them and they determined for the future to abstain from them. Next to this they carefully secured the holy observance of the Sabbath, as the source alike of spiritual and of temporal prosperity. They were, moreover, careful to provide for the support of the worship of God.

An example is here set to Christian Churches how to proceed in obtaining the means necessary for the support of worship. "They made ordinances for themselves, and charged themselves yearly with the third part of a shekel for the service of the house of God." They determined also, in all matters touching tithe and offering, to act up to the law and the testimony, concluding on the sabbath, or 'on the holy-day; "and that we would leave the seventh year, and "the exaction of every "debt.

32 Also we made ordinances for us, "to charge ourselves yearly with "the third part of a shekel for the service of the house of our God;

33 For "the shew-bread, and for the continual meat-offering, and for "the continual burnt-offering, of the sabbaths, of the new-moons, for the set feasts, and for the holy things, and for the sin-offerings, to make an atonement for Israel, and for "all the work of the house of our God.

34 And we "cast the lots among the priests, the Levites, and the people, for "the wood-offering, to bring it into the house of our God, after the houses of our fathers, at times appointed, year by year, to burn upon the altar of the LORD our God, "as it is written in the law:

35 And to bring "the first-fruits of our ground, and the first-fruits of all fruit of all trees, year by year, unto the house of the LORD:

36 Also "the first-born of our sons, and of our cattle, (as it is written in the law,) and the firstlings of our herds, and of our flocks, to bring to the house of our God, "unto the priests that minister in the house of our God:

37 And that we should bring "the first-fruits of our dough, and our offerings, and the fruit of all manner of trees, of wine, and of oil, unto the priests, "to the chambers of the house of our God; and "the tithes of our ground unto the Levites, that the same Levites might have the tithes in all the cities of our tillage.

38 And the priest the son of Aaron shall be with the Levites, "when the Levites take tithes: and the Levites shall bring up the tithe of the tithes unto the house of our God, to the chambers, into "the treasure-house.

39 For "the children of Israel and "the children of Levi shall bring the offering of the corn, of the new wine, and the oil, unto the chambers, where are the vessels of the sanctuary, and the priests that minister, and the porters, and the singers: and "we will not forsake the house of our God.

Chap. XI. 1-20. The distribution of the population was an important question. It was meet, however, that the rulers should occupy the metropolis, that they might be at the centre of the national affairs. It was further important, that in point of numerical strength, Jerusalem should bear some proportion to the country, and accordingly it was arranged that there should be one in ten. The dwelling at Jerusalem was considered somewhat of a sacrifice, and hence they who willingly offered themselves to reside there, were blessed by the people. Ver. 21-36. While it was desirable that the rulers should occupy a central position, it was necessary that the priests and the Levites should be scattered throughout the country. We therefore find that they were distributed over all the cities of Judah, every one in his inheritance. Both town and country have their peculiar drawbacks, and their peculiar privileges. The town, however, has a decided advantage over the country with respect to Arts, Trade, Education, and Religion. In the cities there is more excitement, and more temptation; but there are also great facilities for promoting the Chap. XII. 27-47. The Dedication of the Wall was a great event, which required to be celebrated in an appropriate manner. For this purpose there was a great gathering of the Levites, who were necessary to the work of thanksgiving and praise. They were prompt to obey,

CHAPTER XII.

1 The priests which came up with Zerubbabel. 10 The succession of high priests.

NOW these are ^athe priests and the Levites that went up with ^bZerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, ^cand Jeshua: ^dSeraiah, Jeremiah, Ezra,

2 Amariah, Malluch, Hattush,

3 Shechaniah, Rehum, Meremoth,

4 Iddo, Ginnetho, Abijah,

5 Miamin, Maadiah, Bilgah,

6 Shemaiah, and Joiarib, Jedaiah,

7 Sallu, Amok, Hilkiah, Jedaiah. These were the chief of the priests, and of their brethren, in the days ^eof Jeshua.

8 Moreover, the Levites: Jeshua, Binui, Kadmiel, Sherebiah, Judah, and Mattaniah, which was over ^fthe thanksgiving, he and his brethren.

9 Also Bakbukiah and Unni, their brethren, were ^gover against them in the watches.

10 ¶ And ^hJeshua begat Joiakim, Joiakim also begat Eliashib, and Eliashib begat Joiada, 11 And Joiada begat Jonathan, and Jonathan begat Jaddua.

12 And in the days of Joiakim were priests, ⁱthe chief of the fathers: of Seraiah, Meraiah; of Jeremiah, Hananiah;

13 Of Ezra, Meshullam; of Amariah, Jehohanan;

14 Of Melicu, Jonathan; of Shebaniah, Joseph;

15 Of Harim, Adnah; of Mersaioth, Helkai;

16 Of Iddo, Zechariah; of Ginnethon, Meshullam;

17 Of Abijah, Zichri; of Mihiamin; of Moadiah, Piltai;

18 Of Bilgah, Shammua; of Shemaiah, Jehonathan;

19 And of Joiarib, Mattenai; of Jedaiah, Uzzi;

20 Of Sallai, Kallai; of Amok, Eber;

21 Of Hilkiah, Hashabiah; of Jedaiah, Nethaneel.

22 ¶ The Levites, in the days of Eliashib, Joiada, and Johanan, and Jaddua, were recorded chief of the fathers; also the priests, to the reign of Darius the Persian.

23 The sons of Levi, the chief of the

as the servants of the Lord should be in all cases where work is to be done. From the nature of the case, thanksgiving was the principal business of the day. The subject, viewed in all its aspects, presented abundant materials for gratitude. The difficulties which had to be overcome were numerous, various, and all but insuperable, and nothing but the hand of the Lord stirring up successively the hearts of the kings, could have realised success. But the occasion was one which called for sacrifices—the special mode of recognising the fathers, were written in 'the book of the Chronicles, even until the days of Johanan the son of Eliashib.

24 And the chief of the Levites: Hashabiah, Sherebiah, and Jeshua the son of Kadmiel, with their brethren over against them, to praise and to give thanks, according to the commandment of David 'the man of God, ward over against ward.

25 Mattaniah, and Bakbukiah, Obadiah, Meshullam, Talmon, Akkub, were porters, keeping the ward at the thresholds of the gates.

26 These were in the days of Joiakim the son of Jeshua, the son of Jozadak, and in the days of Nehemiah the governor, and of Ezra the priest, the scribe.

27 ¶ And at the dedication of the wall of Jerusalem they sought the Levites out of all their places, to bring them to Jerusalem, to keep the dedication with gladness, both with thanksgivings, and with singing, with cymbals, psalteries, and with harps.

28 And the sons of the singers gathered themselves together, both out of the plain country round about Jerusalem, and from the villages of Netophathi;

29 Also from the house of Gilgal, and out of the fields of Geba and Azmaveth; for the singers had builded them villages round about Jerusalem.

30 And the priests and the Levites purified themselves, and purified the people, and the gates, and the wall.

31 Then I brought up the princes of Judah upon the wall, and appointed two great companies of them that gave thanks, whereof one went on the right hand upon the wall toward the dung-gate;

32 And after them went Hoshaiiah, and half of the princes of Judah,

33 And Azariah, Ezra, and Meshullam,

34 Judah, and Benjamin, and Shemaiah, and Jeremiah;

35 And certain of the priests' sons with trumpets; namely, Zechariah the son of Jonathan, the son of Shemaiah, the son of Mattaniah, the son of Michaiah, the son of Zaccur, the son of Assaph;

36 And his brethren, Shemaiah, and Azarael, Milalai, Gilalai, Maai, Nethaneel, and Judah, Hanani, with the musical instruments of David the man of God, and Ezra the scribe before them.

37 And at the fountain-gate, which was over against them, they went up by the stairs of the city of David, at the going up of the wall, above the house of David, even unto the water-gate eastward.

39 And from above the gate of Ephraim, and above the old gate, and above the fish-gate, and the tower of Haneel, and the tower of Meah, even unto the sheep-gate: and they stood still in the prison-gate.

40 So stood the two companies of them that gave thanks in the house of God, and I, and the half of the rulers with me:

41 And the priests; Eliakim, Maaseiah, Miniamin, Michaiah, Elioenai, Zechariah, and Hananiah, with trumpets;

42 And Maaseiah, and Shemaiah, and Eleazar, and Uzzi, and Jehohanan, and Malchijah, and Elam, and Ezer: and the singers sang loud, with Jezrahiah their overseer.

43 Also that day they offered great sacrifices, and rejoiced: for God had made them rejoice with great joy: the wives also and the children rejoiced; so that the joy of Jerusalem was heard even afar off.

44 ¶ And at that time were some appointed over the chambers for the treasures, for the offerings, for the first-fruits, and for the tithes, to gather into them, out of the fields of the cities, the portions of the law for the priests and Levites: for Judah rejoiced for the priests and for the Levites that waited.

45 And both the singers and the porters kept the ward of their God, and the ward of the purification, according to the commandment of David, and of Solomon his son.

46 For in the days of David and Asaph of old there were chief of the singers, and songs of praise and thanksgiving unto God.

47 And all Israel, in the days of Zerubbabel, and in the days of Nehemiah, gave the portions of the singers and the porters, every day his portion; and they sanctified holy things unto the Levites, and the Levites sanctified them unto the children of Aaron.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Upon the reading of the law separation is made from the mixed multitude. 10 Nehemiah reformeth the offices in the house of God.

ON that day they read in the book of Moses in the audience of the people; and therein was found written, that the Ammonite and the Moabite should national transgression and the Divine mercy. The season was one for extreme gladness, and hence God made them to "rejoice with great joy; the wives also and the children rejoiced." The community at large, from the least to the greatest, from the eldest to the youngest, having a common interest in the object accomplished, all exulted together. It is well when the power of religion is felt throughout an entire community. Illustrations of this have hitherto been few; the time, nevertheless, is coming, when "all shall know the Lord from the least to the greatest," and when that knowledge will produce its appropriate effects in the heart and the life of the individual, in the family, and in society. The Lord hasten the glorious day!

Chap. XIII. 1-9. Nehemiah having governed Jerusalem during these twelve eventful years, had returned to Babylon to visit the king, from whom he received commission once more to repair to Jerusalem. His advent was a signal for public rejoicing, although he found that things had been going seriously wrong in his absence. Like all virtuous rulers, in present as in former ages, he not come into the congregation of God for ever;

2 Because they met not the children of Israel with bread and with water, but hired Balaam against them, that he should curse them: howbeit our God turned the curse into a blessing.

3 Now it came to pass, when they had heard the law, that they separated from Israel all the mixed multitude.

4 ¶ And before this, Eliashib the priest, having the oversight of the chamber of the house of our God, was allied unto Tobiah:

5 And he had prepared for him a great chamber, where aforetime they laid the meat-offerings, the frankincense, and the vessels, and the tithes of the corn, the new wine, and the oil, (which was commanded to be given to the Levites, and the singers, and the porters,) and the offerings of the priests.

6 But in all this time was not I at Jerusalem: for in the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes king of Babylon came I unto the king, and after certain days obtained I leave of the king:

7 And I came to Jerusalem, and understood of the evil that Eliashib did for Tobiah, in preparing him a chamber in the courts of the house of God.

8 And it grieved me sore; therefore I cast forth all the household-stuff of Tobiah out of the chamber.

9 Then I commanded, and they cleansed the chambers; and thither brought I again the vessels of the house of God, with the meat-offering and the frankincense.

10 ¶ And I perceived that the portions of the Levites had not been given them: for the Levites and the singers, that did the work, were fled every one to his field.

11 Then contended I with the rulers, and said, Why is the house of God forsaken? And I gathered them together, and set them in their place.

12 Then brought all Judah the tithe of the corn, and the new wine, and the oil, unto the treasuries.

13 And I made treasurers over the treasuries, Shelemiah the priest, and Zadok the scribe; and of the Levites, Pedaiah; and next to them was Hanan the son of Zaccur, the son of Mattaniah: for they were counted faithful; and their office was to distribute unto their brethren.

14 Remember me, O my God, concerning this, and wipe not out my good deeds that I have done for the house of my God, and for the offices thereof.

15 ¶ In those days saw I in Judah some treading wine-presses on the sabbath, and bringing in sheaves, and lading asses; as also wine, grapes, and figs, and all manner of burdens, which they brought into Jerusalem on the sabbath-day: and I testified against them in the day wherein they sold victuals.

16 There dwelt men of Tyre also therein, which brought fish, and all manner of ware, and sold on the sabbath unto the children of Judah, and in Jerusalem.

17 Then I contended with the nobles of Judah, and said unto them, What evil thing is this that ye do, and profane the sabbath-day?

18 Did not your fathers thus, and did not our God bring all this evil upon us, and upon this city? yet ye bring more wrath upon Israel, by profaning the sabbath.

19 And it came to pass, that when the gates of Jerusalem began to be dark before the sabbath, I commanded that the gates should be shut, and charged that they should not be opened till after the sabbath: and some of my servants set I at the gates, that there should no burden be brought in on the sabbath-day.

20 So the merchants, and sellers of all kind of ware, lodged without Jerusalem once or twice.

21 Then I testified against them, and said unto them, Why lodge ye about the wall? if ye do so again, I will lay hands on you. From that time forth came they no more on the sabbath.

22 And I commanded the Levites, that they should cleanse themselves, and that they should come and keep the gates, to sanctify the sabbath-day. Remember me, O my God, concerning this also, and spare me according to the greatness of thy mercy.

23 ¶ In those days also saw I Jews that had married wives of Ashdod, of Ammon, and of Moab:

24 And their children spake half in the speech of Ashdod, and could not speak in the Jews' language, but according to the language of each people.

25 And I contended with them, and cursed them, and smote certain of them, and plucked off their hair, and made them swear by God, saying, Ye shall not give your daughters unto their sons, nor take their daughters unto your sons, or for yourselves.

26 Did not Solomon king of Israel sin by these things? yet among many nawas troubled on every hand by selfishness, inconsistency, and treachery. Eliashib the priest, who had the oversight of the chamber of the Lord, was allied to Tobiah, the enemy of the Jews, which was a snare to him. In the absence of Nehemiah, the priest actually so far neglected his duty as to prepare for Tobiah a chamber in the courts of the House of God. The discovery exceedingly surprised and grieved the governor, who adopted a summary process of clearing the chamber, and removing the intruder. Ver. 10-14. Nehemiah, moreover, found, that while Eliashib was careful about the accommodation of his friend Tobiah, he had utterly neglected the Levites, who, for want of subsistence had been compelled to flee every one to the country, and every one to his own field. Here was a most serious grievance, and one which could not fail materially to affect the interests of religion. Nehemiah, with characteristic energy, rectified this disorder, employing men that "were counted faithful," to see to the observance of the commandment. Nehemiah was deeply conscious that he had, with a single eye, discharged the difficult and multifarious duties of his high office, and hence his humble and child-like appeal to the God of his tions was there no king like him, who was beloved of his God, and God made him king over all Israel: nevertheless even him did outlandish women cause to sin.

27 Shall we then hearken unto you to do all this great evil, to transgress against our God in marrying strange wives?

28 And one of the sons of Joiada, the son of Eliashib the high priest, was son-in-law to Sanballat the Horonite: therefore I chased him from me.

THE BOOK OF ESTHER.

This Book records the interesting history of a plot intended for the destruction of those Jews who remained in Babylon after the return from the Captivity.

⁸ And the drinking was according to the law; ⁹ none did compel: for so the king had appointed to all ¹⁰ the officers of his house, that they should do according to every man's pleasure.

¹⁰ ¶ On the seventh day, when ¹ the heart of the king was merry with wine, he commanded Mehuman, Biztha, ² Harbona, Bigtha, and Abagtha, Zethar, and Carcas, the seven ³ chamberlains that served in the presence of Ahasuerus the king, fathers, not to "wipe out his good deeds." Ver. 15-22. We have here one of the most interesting occurrences that took place during the whole period of Nehemiah's government. The passage throws great light on the state of society at that day, and contributes not a little to illustrate the proper mode of observing the Jewish sabbath. The case supplies a striking instance of the power of decision. Nehemiah saw no lion in the way; having determined what was duty, he advanced, and difficulties, whether arising from high or low, fled before him. His sole concern was to maintain the honour of his God, and the supremacy of his law. Ver. 23-31. The mixed marriages once more troubled Nehemiah. Here again we behold the bad effect of matrimonial unions with the enemies of God and his Church. His remarks on this subject are particularly valuable, as an excellent exposition of some of the chief facts of the history of his people. One of the sons of Joiada, the son of Eliashib the high priest, was son-in-law to Sanballat, — a fact which further explains the regard of the young man's grandfather for Tobiah. By these intermarriages they had defiled the priesthood, and materially obstructed the progress of the true religion. Nehemiah having made it his business to put an end to this, appointed the wards of the priests and the Levites, and assigned to every man his proper business.

Chap. I. 1-9. Comparing the statement here contained in Daniel vi. 1, it will be seen that there were seven provinces added in the days of Ahasuerus. There is something remarkable in ver. 8, in which Heathenism presents a reproof to multitudes bearing the Christian name. "The drinking was according to the law; none did compel;" the king appointed that they should do according to every man's pleasure. It is common in Persia, and throughout the East, for the women to have their feasts at the same time with the men, in separate apartments. The reason of this is the degraded condi-

15 ⁹What shall we do unto the queen Vashti according to law, because she hath not performed the commandment of the king Ahasuerus by the chamberlains?

16 And Memucan answered before the king and the princes, Vashti the queen hath not ⁹done wrong to the king only, but also to all the princes, and to all the people that are in all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus.

18 Likewise shall the ladies of Persia and Media say this day unto all the king's princes, which have heard of the deed of the queen. Thus shall there arise too much contempt and wrath.

19 If ¹it please the king, let there go a royal commandment ²from him, and let it be written among the laws of the Persians and the Medes, that ³it be not altered, That Vashti come no more before king Ahasuerus; and let the king give her royal estate unto ⁴another ⁵that is better than she.

20 And when the king's decree, which he shall make, shall be published throughout all his empire, (for it is great,) ⁶all the wives shall give to their husbands honour, both to great and small.

21 And the saying ⁵pleased the king and the princes; and the king did according to the word of Memucan:

22 For he sent letters into all the king's provinces, into every province according to the writing thereof, and to every people after their language, ¹that every man should bear rule in his own house; and that ²it should be published according to the language of every people.

all the provinces of his kingdom, that they may gather together all the fair young virgins unto Shushan the palace, to the house of the women, unto ¹the custody of ²Hege the king's chamberlain, keeper of the women; and let ³their things for purification be given them:

4 And let the maiden which pleaseth the king be queen instead of Vashti. And ⁴the thing pleased the king; and he did so.

5 ¶ Now, in ¹Shushan the palace there was a ²certain Jew, whose name was Mordecai, ³the son of Jair, the son of Shimei, the son of Kish, a Benjamite;

6 Who had been carried away from Jerusalem with the captivity which had been carried away with ⁴Jecooniah king of Judah, whom Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away.

7 And he ²brought up ³Hadassah, (that is, Esther,) ⁴his uncle's daughter: for she had neither father nor mother, and the maid was ⁵fair and beautiful; whom Mordecai (when her father and mother were dead) ⁶took for his own daughter.

8 ¶ So it came to pass, when the king's commandment and his decree was heard, and when many maidens were gathered together unto Shushan the palace, to the custody of ¹Hegai, that Esther was brought also unto the king's house, to the custody of Hegai, keeper of the women.

9 And the maiden pleased him, and ⁷she obtained kindness of him: and he speedily gave her ⁸her things for purification, with such ⁴things as belonged to her, and seven maidens, which were meet to be given her, out of the king's house: and he ⁵preferred her and her maids unto the best place of the house of the women.

10 Esther ⁶had not shewed her people, nor her kindred: ⁷for Mordecai had charged her that she should not shew it.

11 And Mordecai ⁸walked every day before the court of the women's house, to know ⁹how Esther did, and what should become of her.

12 ¶ Now, when every maid's turn was come ⁹to go in to king Ahasuerus, after that she had been twelve months, according to the manner of the women, (for so were the days of their purifications accomplished, to wit, ¹⁰six months with oil tion of females in those countries. Ver. 10-22. This order to bring the queen and the crown-royal, to shew the princes and the people her beauty, was in harmony with a usage which obtained among the Persians, who were accustomed thus to exhibit their women on public occasions. The refusal of the queen was, doubtless, the result of modesty. She shrank from exposure before a multitude of men; who, as the king himself was "merry with wine," were probably in a state of inebriety. The fury of the king was causeless; but in the breast of a despot there was no place for reason. The tongue of flattery is never far away when royal ears require it. Memucan strongly sympathized with the wrath of his master, and laboured, not to tranquillise, but to exasperate him. The unfeeling courtier proposed the dethronement of the queen, which greatly pleased her sovereign lord; and she was dethroned accordingly.

Thus, in a very remarkable manner, the whim and passion of the monarch led to events essentially connected with the preservation of the people of God from a cruel attempt at their extermination. Where nothing appeared but a mixture of folly and fury on the part of a despot, the hand of God was really present, preparing even the wrath of man to praise him.

Chap. II. 1-14. The proposal, which was in harmony with the licentiousness of those times, led the way to the elevation of Esther in a manner the most wonderful. Esther prudently withheld all information respecting her people and her kindred, according to the judicious counsel of Mordecai. In this, however, there was no breach of integrity; where no inquiry was made, it was unnecessary to obtrude information. Besides, it would have in no respect altered the selection, for if Esther of myrrh, and six months with sweet odours, and with other things for the purifying of the women;)

13 Then thus came every maiden unto the king; whatsoever she desired was given her to go with her out of the house of the women unto the king's house.

14 In the evening she went, and on the morrow she returned into the second house of the women, to the custody of Shaashgaz the king's chamberlain, which kept the concubines: she came in unto the king no more, except the king ^adelighted in her, and that ^bshe were called by name.

15 ¶ Now, when the turn of Esther, the daughter of Abihail, the uncle of Mordecai, (^cwho had taken her for his daughter,) was come to go in unto the king, she required nothing but what Hegai the king's chamberlain, the keeper of the women, appointed: and ^dEsther obtained favour in the sight of all them that looked upon her.

16 So Esther was taken unto king Ahasuerus, into his house-royal, in ^ethe tenth month, (which ^fis the month Tebeth,) in ^gthe seventh year of his reign.

17 And the king loved Esther above all the women, and she obtained grace and ^hfavour ⁱin his sight more than all the virgins; ^jso that he set the royal crown upon her head, and made her queen instead of Vashti.

18 Then the king ^kmade a great feast unto all his princes and his servants, even Esther's feast: and he made a ^lrelease to the provinces, and ^mgave gifts, according to the state of the king.

19 And when ⁿthe virgins were gathered together the second time, then Mordecai ^osat in the king's gate.

20 Esther ^phad not yet shewed her kindred nor her people, as Mordecai had charged her: for Esther did the commandment of Mordecai, like as when she was brought up with him.

21 ¶ In those days, (while Mordecai sat in the king's gate,) two of the king's chamberlains, ^aBighthan and Teresh, of those which kept the ^bdoor, were wroth, ^cand sought to lay hand on the king Ahasuerus.

22 And ^dthe thing was known to Mordecai, who told ^eit unto Esther the queen; and ^fEsther certified the king ^gthereof in ^hMordecai's name.

23 And when inquisition was made of the matter, it was found out; therefore they were both ⁱhanged on a tree: and it was written in ^jthe book of the Chronicles before the king.

CHAPTER III.

Haman, advanced by the king, and despised by Mordecai, seeks revenge on all the Jews.

AFTER these things did king Ahasuerus ^apromote Haman the son of Hammedatha the ^bAgagite, and advanced him, and set his seat ^cabove all the princes that ^dwere with him.

2 And all ^ethe king's servants, that ^fwere in the king's gate, ^gbowed, and revered Haman; for the king had so commanded concerning him: but Mordecai ^hbowed not, nor did ⁱhim reverence.

3 Then the king's servants, which ^jwere in the king's gate, said unto Mordecai, ^kWhy transgressest thou the king's commandment?

4 Now it came to pass, ^lwhen they spake daily unto him, and he hearkened not unto them, ^mthat they told Haman, to see whether ⁿMordecai's matters would stand: for ^ohe had told them that he ^pwas a Jew.

5 And when Haman saw that Mordecai bowed not, nor did him reverence, then ^qwas Haman ^rfull of wrath.

6 And he thought scorn to lay hands on Mordecai alone; for they had shewed him the people of Mordecai: wherefore Haman ^ssought to destroy all the Jews that ^twere throughout the whole kingdom of Ahasuerus, even the people of Mordecai.

7 ¶ In ^uthe first month, (that ^vis, the month Nisan,) ^win the twelfth year of king Ahasuerus, ^xthey cast Pur, that ^yis, the lot, before Haman, from day to day, was a slave, so was every female in the empire. Ver. 15-23. Esther is now enthroned, and fully possessed the affections of the king, and therefore ready for the mission she is exalted to perform, touching the preservation of her people. With respect to Mordecai, it is to be remembered, that all the Jews who pleased had long since returned to their own land, while he remained in the palace of the king. That he was a good man, and faithful to his people, there can be no doubt, although, for some reason, he lingered behind in the land of bondage. Before he be censured, however, let it be remembered that Daniel also was in Babylon, as well as Nehemiah: who, notwithstanding he subsequently went to Judea, remained long after the captives had departed to the land of their "fathers' sepulchres." The truth is, that the Lord had a great work to accomplish in Babylon, both by Mordecai and Daniel, in connexion with their people. This Book clearly shews that the operations of Providence were being carried forward upon an extended scale, long after the return from the Captivity. Esther shewed her sense by retaining the same affection for Mordecai's person, and the same reverence for his judgment, as when she was living under his roof. This was link the first in the wonderful chain of Providences which was now being framed. Mordecai sat in the gate of the king, as an officer connected with the palace, and there he heard words of treason, which he carefully noted, and immediately communicated to Esther, which she promptly transmitted to the sovereign. The report was true, and the traitors were punished with death; while Mordecai went unrewarded. Here again the Divine hand is apparent. We shall subsequently see the importance attaching to this oversight. It is impossible to reflect on this and the foregoing chapter, and not to be filled with grateful admiration at the extraordinary change which has been effected by Christianity in the condition of Woman. No two things can be more unlike than the portraiture of female life in Babylon then, and in England now. There she was treated as a beast of burden—here she is exalted to her proper place of companionship to man; and the result of justice has unspeakably contributed to the welfare of the other sex, who are thereby softened and humanised, purified and ennobled.

Chap. III. 1-7. The next step in the mighty scheme of things was the favour of Haman with the king, and his consequent ambition. Mordecai, for some reason, and from month to month, to the twelfth month, that is, the month ¹Adar.

8 ¶ And Haman said unto king Ahasuerus, There is a certain people ²scattered abroad, and dispersed among the people in all the provinces of thy kingdom; and ³their laws are diverse from all people, neither keep they the king's laws: therefore it is not ¹for the king's profit to suffer them.

9 If it please the king, let it be written ²that they may be destroyed; and I will ³pay ⁴ten thousand talents of silver to the hands of those that have the charge of the business, to bring it into the king's treasuries.

10 And the king ¹took his ring from his hand, and gave it unto Haman the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, the Jews' ²enemy.

11 And the king said unto Haman, The silver is given to thee, the people also, ²to do with them as it seemeth good to thee.

12 Then were the king's ³scribes called on the thirteenth day of the first month, and there was written (according to all that Haman had commanded) unto the king's lieutenants, and to the governors that were over every province, and to the rulers of every people of every province ⁴according to the writing thereof, and to every people after their language; ⁵in the name of king Ahasuerus was it written, and ⁶sealed with the king's ring.

13 And the letters were sent ⁷by posts into all the king's provinces, to destroy, to kill, and to cause to perish, all Jews, ⁸both young and old, little children and women, ⁹in one day, even upon the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, (which is the month Adar,) and to take ¹⁰the spoil of them for a prey.

14 The ¹copy of the writing, for a commandment to be given in every province, was published unto all people, that they should be ready against that day.

15 The posts went out, being ²hastened by the king's commandment; and the decree was given in Shushan the palace. And the king and Haman ³sat down to drink; but ⁴the city Shushan was perplexed.

CHAPTER IV.

1 Mordecai and the Jews mourn. 16 Esther appointed a fast: her resolution, &c.

WHEN Mordecai perceived ¹all that was done, Mordecai ²rent his clothes, and put on sackcloth ³with ashes, and went out into the midst of the city, and ⁴cried with a loud and a bitter cry;

2 And came even before the king's gate: for none might enter into the king's gate clothed with sackcloth.

3 And ⁵in every province, whithersoever the king's commandment and his decree came, there was ⁶great mourning among the Jews, and fasting, and ⁷weeping, and wailing; and ⁸many lay in sackcloth and ashes.

4 ¶ So Esther's maids and her ⁹chamberlains came and told ¹⁰her. Then was the queen exceedingly grieved; and she sent raiment to clothe Mordecai, and to take away his sackcloth from him: ¹¹but he received it not.

5 Then called Esther for Hatach, one of the king's chamberlains, whom he had ¹²appointed to attend upon her, and gave him a commandment to Mordecai, ¹³to know what it was, and why it was.

6 So Hatach went forth to Mordecai unto the street of the city, which was before the king's gate:

7 And Mordecai told him of ¹⁴all that had happened unto him, and of the sum of the money that Haman had promised to pay to the king's treasuries for the Jews, to destroy them:

8 Also he gave him ¹⁵the copy of the writing of the decree that was given at Shushan to destroy them, to shew ¹⁶it unto Esther, and to declare ¹⁷it unto her, and ¹⁸to charge her that she should go in unto the king, ¹⁹to make supplication unto him, and ²⁰to make request before him for her people.

9 And Hatach came and told Esther the words of Mordecai.

10 ¶ Again Esther spake unto Hatach, and gave him commandment unto Mordecai:

11 All the king's servants, and the people of the king's provinces, do know, that whosoever, whether man or woman, shall come unto the king into ²¹the inner refused to yield him the reverence which was given by the rest of the servants, which was an essential condition of all that followed. The haughty spirit of the infatuated Haman came before his fall, and his pride burned previous to his destruction. Ver. 8-15. The supreme wickedness of Haman appeared from the fact, that, in his deep-seated malignity, he scorned to limit his vengeance to the man who had offended him, and must needs extend it to the whole of his race, although they had done him no wrong. With respect to them, it was therefore deliberate, malignant murder! Haman went about the matter with the cunning which characterises wicked men. As a sop to the king, he made the deliberate proposal, on the condition of the extirpation of the Jews, to pay into the Royal Treasury a sum equal to between three and four millions sterling. According to one calculation it is £3,750,000; according to another, £3,415,000. By another calculation it is considerably reduced. Never before did malice offer such a price for its gratification! The figures shew the high position and the boundless wealth of this cruel man. In those days, however, the rich were richer than the bulk of opulent men now, while there could scarcely be said to be a middle class such as now exists. In fact, there were but two—the lords and the slaves of the world; and of the former, some amassed enormous wealth at the expense of the latter, occasionally oppressing and plundering whole provinces and nations.

Chap. IV. 1-17. According to appearances, the doom of the Jews was sealed. Their destruction hastened on apace. The decree, while one of inexpressible iniquity, was irreversible. They had, however, a Friend in heaven, who had prepared for them a friend on earth, even Esther the queen. The manner in which she conducted herself was such as became a daughter of Abraham, and an angel of mercy to an unoffending people, cruelly appointed to die. At first, indeed, she stumbled at the court, who is not called, there is ⁹one law of his to put him to death, except such to whom ¹the king shall hold out the golden sceptre, that he may live: ²but I have not been called to come in unto the king these thirty days.

12 And they told to Mordecai Esther's words.

13 Then Mordecai commanded to answer Esther, 'Think not with thyself that thou shalt escape in the king's house more than all the Jews.

14 For if thou altogether holdest thy peace at this time, ¹then shall there ²enlargement and deliverance arise to the Jews from another place; but ³thou and thy father's house shall be destroyed: and who knoweth ⁴whether thou art come to the kingdom ⁵for such a time as this?

15 ¶ Then Esther bade them return Mordecai this answer;

16 Go, gather together all the Jews that are ¹present in Shushan, and ²fast ye for me, and neither ³eat nor drink three days, night or day: ⁴I also and my maidens will fast likewise; and so will I go in unto the king, which is not according to the law; and ⁵if I perish, I perish.

17 So Mordecai ¹went his way, and did according to all that Esther had commanded him.

CHAPTER V.

Esther, obtaining the king's favour, inviteth the king and Haman to a banquet, &c.

NOW it came to pass ¹on the third day, that Esther put on her ²royal apparel, and stood ³in the inner court of the king's house, over against the king's house: and the king ⁴sat upon his royal throne in the royal house, over against the gate of the house.

2 And it was so, when the king saw Esther the queen standing in the court, that ¹she obtained favour in his sight: and the king held out to Esther ²the golden sceptre that was in his hand. So Esther drew near, and touched the top of the sceptre.

3 Then said the king unto her, ¹'What wilt thou, queen Esther? and what is thy request? it shall be even given thee ²to the half of the kingdom.

4 And Esther answered, ¹'If it seem good unto the king, let the king and Haman come this day unto ²the banquet that I have prepared for him.

5 Then the king said, ¹'Cause Haman to make haste, that he may do as Esther hath said. So the king and Haman came to the banquet that Esther had prepared.

6 ¶ And ¹the king said unto Esther at the banquet of wine, What ²is thy petition? and it shall be granted thee: and what is thy request? even to the half of the kingdom it shall be performed.

8 If I have found favour in the sight of the king, and if it please the king to grant my petition, and to ¹perform my request, let the king and Haman come to the banquet that I shall prepare for them, and I will do ²to-morrow as the king hath said.

9 ¶ Then went Haman forth that day ¹joyful and with a glad heart: but when Haman saw Mordecai in the king's gate, that ²he stood not up, nor moved for him, ³he was full of indignation against Mordecai.

10 Nevertheless Haman ¹refrained himself, and when he came home, he sent and ²called for his friends, and ³Zeresh his wife.

11 And Haman told them of ¹the glory of his riches, and ²the multitude of his children, and all the things wherein the king had promoted him, and ³how he had advanced him above the princes and servants of the king.

12 Haman said moreover, Yea, Esther the queen did let no man come in with the king unto the banquet that she had prepared but myself; and ¹to-morrow am I invited unto her also with the king.

13 Yet ¹all this availeth me nothing, so long as I see Mordecai the Jew sitting at the king's gate.

14 ¶ Then ¹said Zeresh his wife and all his friends unto him, ²Let a ³gallows be made of fifty cubits high, and to-morrow ⁴speak thou unto the king that Mordecai may be hanged thereon; then ⁵go thou in merrily with the king unto the banquet. And ⁶the thing pleased Haman; and ⁷he caused the gallows to be made.

difficulties in her way, but the decisive and awakening words of Mordecai roused her to a pitch of energy which sufficed for the performance of her awful and perilous experiment. Her piety strikingly displayed itself in the message she returned to Mordecai. Her confidence was in God, and she went about the affair in the true martyr spirit. With these provisions and preparations, she was ready for all consequences. How noble her language, "So will I go in unto the king, which is not according to the law; and if I perish, I perish!" Never before did daughter of Abraham assume an attitude more sublime.

Chap. V. 1-8. The same Almighty Hand which had braced the mind of the queen, prepared the king to receive her. The golden sceptre invited her near; her heart leaped as she gazed upon the extended sign, and listened to the hopeful communication of her lord. Notwithstanding the extraordinary graciousness of the king, it became necessary to prepare him for the momentous communication she had to make. With a view to this, she displayed consummate wisdom, acting under an influence more than human. Haman, while to the unreflecting an object of envy, was of all men the most miserable. But amidst all his rage, he ruled his own spirit, and waited his time. Notwithstanding his cup was full of royal favour to overflowing, and his earthly mercies oppressed him, the scorn of a single Jew, in a humble position, outweighed the whole. His wife, like another Jezebel, came to his assistance, counselling an atrocity which met his case. The gallows is ordered, in confidence of the king's compliance with the anticipated murder; and so Haman obtained a momentary rest to his troubled bosom. We have something here which may be likened to a naked exhibition of a human heart, and nothing within the range of human thought is so hideous and horrible!

CHAPTER VI.

1 Ahasuerus rewardeth Mordecai. 10 Haman commanded to do him honour.

ON ^athat night ¹could not the king sleep; and he commanded to bring ^bthe book of records of the Chronicles; and they were read before the king.

2 And it was found written, that Mordecai had told of ^cBigthana and Teresh, two of the king's chamberlains, the keepers of the ²door, who sought to lay hand on the king Ahasuerus.

3 And the king said, ^dWhat honour and dignity hath been done to Mordecai for this? Then said the king's servants that ministered unto him, ^eThere is nothing done for him.

4 ¶ And the king said, ^fWho is in the court? (Now Haman was come into ^gthe outward court of the king's house, ^hto speak unto the king to hang Mordecai on the gallows that he had prepared for him.)

5 And the king's servants said unto him, Behold, Haman standeth in the court. And the king said, Let him come in.

6 So Haman came in. And the king said unto him, What shall be done unto the man ⁱwhom the king delighteth to honour? (Now Haman thought in his heart, ^jTo whom would the king delight to do honour more than to myself?)

7 And Haman answered the king, For the man ^kwhom the king delighteth to honour,

8 ^lLet the royal apparel be brought which the king ^museth to wear, and ⁿthe horse that the king rideth upon, and the crown-royal which is set upon his head:

9 And let this apparel and horse be delivered to the hand of one of the king's most noble princes, that they may array the man ^owithal whom the king delighteth to honour, and ^pbring him on horseback through the street of the city, and ^qproclaim before him, Thus shall it be done to the man whom the king delighteth to honour.

10 Then the king said to Haman, ^rMake haste, and take the apparel and the horse, as thou hast said, and do even so to Mordecai the Jew, that sitteth at the king's gate: ^slet nothing fail of all that thou hast spoken.

Chap. VI. 1-11. Things were now reaching a crisis; and an invisible Hand was at work on the king, with a view to the accomplishment of what remained. The Chronicles supplied the necessary facts touching the treason already mentioned, and the conduct of Mordecai in the matter. The Spirit of God employed these facts to produce their proper influence on the mind of the king. Accordingly, while Haman came to solicit the destruction of Mordecai, he received an order to perform towards him an act of homage and of honour which was worse than death. Ver. 12-14. Amid the countless millions of the human family, it may safely be affirmed that no man was ever the subject of the same emotions as those which rent the bosom of Haman. His air bespoke his anguish, when his wife, instead of consoling him, sounded the knell of his ambition by her observation respecting the hopelessness of all contest with the seed of the Jews. Still, the summons to the banquet was calculated once more to inspire him with the hope of recovering his position.

Chap. VII. 1-10. The king's repetition of his question to Esther brought things to an issue; and now that she considered the way fully prepared, she announced the terrible fact of the coming destruction of her people. She shewed her wisdom, like Nathan in dealing with David, in confining her language to the simple fact, without reference to persons. That fact having told on the monarch, she instantly replied to his question, "The adversary and enemy is this wicked Haman." Doubtless an unutterable look accompanied the utterance of these killing words which pierced the cruel man to the heart. When the Persian king orders a person for execution, Tavernier tells us, he rises, and goes into a woman's apartment, the palace-garden: and ¹Haman stood up to make request for his life to Esther the queen; ^mfor he saw that there was evil determined against him by the king.

8 Then the king returned out of the palace-garden into the place of the banquet of wine; and Haman was fallen upon ⁿthe bed whereon Esther was. Then said the king, Will he force the queen also ^obefore me in the house? As the word went out of the king's mouth, they ^ocovered Haman's face.

9 And ^pHarbonah, ^oone of the chamberlains, said before the king, ^rBehold also, the ^rgallows, fifty cubits high, which Haman had made for Mordecai, ^rwho had spoken good for the king, standeth in the house of Haman. Then the king said, ^rHang him thereon.

10 So they hanged Haman on the gallows that he had prepared for Mordecai. ^rThen was the king's wrath pacified.

how can I endure to see the destruction of my kindred?

7 ¶ Then the king Ahasuerus said unto Esther the queen, and to Mordecai the Jew, ^mBehold, I have given Esther the house of Haman, and ⁿhim they have hanged upon the gallows, because he laid his hand upon the Jews.

8 Write ye also for the Jews, as it liketh you, ^oin the king's name, and seal ^oit with the king's ring: for the writing which is written in the king's name, and sealed with the king's ring, ^omay no man reverse.

9 Then were ^othe king's scribes called at that time in the third month, (that is, the month Sivan,) on the three and twentieth day thereof; and it was written (according to all that Mordecai commanded) unto the Jews, ^rand to the lieutenants, and the deputies and rulers of the provinces which ^hare from India unto Ethiopia, an hundred twenty and seven provinces, unto every province according to the writing thereof, and unto every people after their language, and to the Jews according to their writing, ^rand according to their language.

10 And he wrote ^oin the king Ahasuerus' name, and sealed ^oit with the king's ring; and sent letters ^oby posts on horseback, ^oand riders on mules, camels, and ^oyoung dromedaries:

11 Wherein the king granted the Jews which ^hwere in every city ^oto gather themselves together, and to stand for their life, to destroy, to slay, and to cause to perish, all the power of the people and province that would assault them, ^oboth little ones and women, ^oand to take the spoil of them for a prey.

12 Upon ^oone day, in all the provinces of king Ahasuerus, ^onamely, ^oupon the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is the month Adar.

13 The copy of the writing, for a commandment to be given in every province, ^hwas ^hpublished unto all people, and that the Jews should be ready against that day to ^havenge themselves on their enemies.

which is always a sign of destruction without mercy. When a prisoner is condemned in Abyssinia, he is not sent to prison, but immediately led to execution. So it was with this wicked Haman. Never was confusion and discomfort so terrible as in the present instance. No sooner was the order given than it was carried into effect. Before the family of Haman had the slightest idea of what had occurred, they beheld him suspended on the gibbet at his own door! The close of this awful scene, so far as Haman is concerned, will remain a lasting beacon to unprincipled ambition to the end of the world.

Chap. VIII. 1-6. The property of this opulent criminal was confiscated by the king, who made a present of it to Esther. The affection produced in the king's breast to Mordecai, immediately manifested itself in a most impressive manner. As Haman had taken Mordecai's place on the gallows, so Mordecai took Haman's place at the palace, while Esther made him a present of Haman's house. Haman's portion was the rope destined for Mordecai; Mordecai's, the ring of office worn by Haman. Esther, having vanquished the great adversary, was now intent upon undoing the decree for the destruction of her people. On this point she displayed the same wisdom and earnestness as in her previous proceedings, while she seems to have brought to it more tenderness. In speaking of Haman, she was fired with indignation; but in pleading for the lives of her people, she was melted into tears. Ver. 7-14. Her success was complete; she obtained all she asked, with the fullest powers for carrying it into accomplishment. Ver. 15-17. The exaltation of Mordecai to power all but supreme, since he stood next to his royal master, was marvellously great, clearly shewing the hand of God acting on behalf of the seed of Abraham. The influence of these things on the Babylonians was deep and general. The Spirit of God employed the destruction of Haman as 10 The 'ten sons of Haman the son of Hammedatha, the 'enemy of the Jews, slew them; but 'on the spoil laid they not their hand.

11 On that day the number of those that were slain in Shushan the palace 'was brought before the king.

12 ¶ And the king said unto Esther the queen, The Jews have slain and destroyed five hundred men in Shushan the palace, and the ten sons of Haman; what have they done in the rest of the king's provinces? Now, 'what is thy petition? and it shall be granted thee; or what is thy request further? and it shall be done.

13 Then said Esther, If it please the king, let it be granted to the Jews which are in Shushan to do to-morrow also 'according unto this day's decree, and 'let Haman's ten sons be hanged upon the gallows.

14 And the king commanded it so to be done; and the decree was given at Shushan; and they hanged Haman's ten sons.

15 For the Jews that were in Shushan 'gathered themselves together on the fourteenth day also of the month Adar, and slew three hundred men at Shushan: 'but on the prey they laid not their hand.

16 But the other Jews that were in the king's provinces gathered themselves together, and 'stood for their lives, and had rest from their enemies, and slew of their foes seventy and five thousand (but they laid not their hands on the prey), 17 On the thirteenth day of the month Adar; and on the fourteenth day 'of the same rested they, and made it a day of feasting and gladness.

18 But the Jews that were at Shushan assembled together 'on the thirteenth day thereof, and on the fourteenth thereof; and on the fifteenth day of the same they rested, and made it a day of feasting and gladness.

19 Therefore the Jews of the villages, that dwelt in the unwall'd towns, made the fourteenth day of the month Adar a day of 'gladness and feasting, and a good day, and of sending portions one to another.

20 ¶ And Mordecai 'wrote these things, the instrument of exciting a salutary fear of the Jews throughout the empire. What force is there in the language, "The Jews had light, and gladness, and joy, and honour!" These feelings present a wonderful contrast to the sorrow and fear which had overwhelmed them. As objects are best understood by contrast, so are feelings; but for the people's distress, they had known nothing of the consolation. The weeping of the night enhances the joy of the morning.

Chap. IX. 1-11. We have in this chapter a fearful record of social destruction. The preposterous laws of the Medes and the Persians admitted of no repeal; whether right or wrong, they must stand. In consequence of this, the decree which had gone forth for the destruction of the Jews was unalterable. All that remained, therefore, was to make the provisions recorded in the text, permitting them everywhere to defend themselves. By the king's favour, under the patronage of Mordecai, and the blessing of God, who filled the nation with fear, they stood up clothed with invincible strength. No man could stand before them. The rulers of the provinces, the lieutenants, the deputies, and officers of the king, everywhere helped them. By this time it was universally known that Mordecai had been exalted to the first place in the empire: his fame went out through all the provinces, so that he waxed greater and greater. The moral effect of this circumstance was unbounded; the Jews put themselves in an attitude of defence, slaying, and destroying, and doing what they would with their enemies. It is not a little remarkable, that in Shushan, the palace, the opposition to the Jews should have been such, that 500 men fell in the struggle. It might have been supposed, that there, above all places, the enemies of the seed of Israel would have been quiet, and concealed their hatred. There was apparently and sent letters unto all the Jews that were ^ain all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus, both nigh and far,

21 To establish ^bthis among them, that they should keep the fourteenth day of the month Adar, and the fifteenth day of the same, yearly,

22 As ^athe days wherein the Jews rested from their enemies, and the month which was turned unto them ^bfrom sorrow to joy, and from mourning into a good day; that they should make them days of feasting and joy, and of ^csending portions one to another, and gifts to the poor.

23 And the Jews undertook to do as they had begun, and as Mordecai had written unto them;

24 Because Haman the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, ^athe enemy of all the Jews, had devised against the Jews to destroy them, and had cast ^bPur (that is, the lot) to ^cconsume them, and to destroy them;

25 But ^awhen Esther came before the king, he commanded by letters, that his wicked device, which he devised against the Jews, should ^breturn upon his own head, and that he and his sons should be hanged on the gallows.

26 Wherefore ^athey called these days Purim, after the name of ^bPur: therefore, for all the words of this ^bletter, and of ^cthat which they had seen concerning this matter, and which had come unto them,

27 The Jews ordained, and took upon them, ^aand upon their seed, and upon ^ball such as joined themselves unto them, so as it should not ^cfail, that they would keep these two days according to their writing, and according to their ^dappointed time, every year;

CHAPTER X.

The greatness of Ahasuerus, &c.

AND the king Ahasuerus ^alaid a tribute upon the land, and upon ^bthe isles of the sea.

2 And ^aall the acts of his power, and of his might, and the declaration of the greatness of Mordecai, whereunto the king ^badvanced him, are they not written ^cin the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Media and Persia?

something supernatural about it, in order to accomplish the ulterior objects in the scheme of Providence. Haman's family would seem to have participated in the cruel attempt to massacre Israel; and the penalty was the death of his ten sons. Ver. 12-19. The result of the dreadful conflict in the provinces was the slaughter of 75,000 men. While the king's decree permitted them to spoil those whom they slew in self-defence, they conducted themselves with laudable dignity, declining to lay hands on the prey, shewing that their object was not plunder, but self-preservation. The joyful deliverance was followed with festivity and gladness: the event was altogether one of the most wonderful that had ever occurred in the history of the chosen seed. Ver. 20-32. Mordecai took special pains to perpetuate the remembrance of this great deliverance. It is a circumstance which deserves particular notice, that amid the many things the Jews have neglected or forgotten, they continue to remember the "Feast of Purim;" and during the festivity the Book of Esther is twice read in the synagogue—once in the evening, when the feast begins, and again on the next morning; and when the name of Haman is mentioned, the people stamp on the floor, and the boys have mallets, and knock, and make a noise. Among the remarkable things which invite notice in the narrative, is the intense unity which characterised the Jews. From this largely, as a means, arose their victory: and in this they present an impressive example to the people of God, in all their conflicts with the world. We are further taught by the arrangements of Mordecai, that it behoves us frequently to review the way by which the Lord has led us, and with adoring gratitude to celebrate his goodness in special deliverances.

Chap. X. 1-3. From the whole, then, it is clear that those of the Jews who declined to avail themselves of the permission to return to Palestine, were destined to accomplish great things throughout the empire of Ahasuerus. At this distance, and with the very limited information transmitted to us, it is impossible to form any idea of the results; but that they were exceeding great, may be easily inferred from this and the foregoing chapters. No nation has produced so much moral greatness as that of the Jews; and amongst their most distinguished worthies, a chief place is due to Mordecai. His example is a legacy to the Church of God, which will be prized in proportion as the righteous are multiplied. He certainly illustrates the power of conscience in upholding principle in its full integrity. He crushed treason at the outset, and thus saved the life of the king; and seeing through the true character of Haman, he despised him. His sole concern was to be right, and the result showed, that "he who walketh uprightly, walketh surely."

THE BOOK OF JOB.

This Book is one of the most precious portions of inspiration. It is probable that Job lived in the period between Abraham and Moses. The great principles of the Book of Genesis, touching laws and rights, are found here, everything bearing the strong stamp of the antiquity which the period suggested implies. The learned have largely indulged in conjecture concerning both him and the Book; but, in the absence of Scriptural support, they are of no value. It is enough for us to know, that Job ranks with the most distinguished examples of holy men, and his writings with the true sayings of God.

THERE was a man in the land of ^aUz, whose name was ^bJob; and that man was perfect and upright, and ^cone that feared God, and eschewed evil.

² And there were born unto him seven sons and three daughters.

³ His ¹substance also was seven thousand sheep, and three thousand camels, and five hundred yoke of oxen, and five hundred she-asses, and a very great ²household; so that this man was the greatest of all the ³men ⁴of the east.

⁴ And his sons went and feasted in their houses, every one his day; and sent and called for their three sisters, to eat and to drink with them.

⁵ And it was so, when the days of their feasting were gone about, that Job sent and ^asanctified them, and rose up early in the morning, and ^boffered burnt-offerings according to the number of them all: for Job said, ^cIt may be that my sons have sinned, and cursed God ^din their hearts. Thus did Job ^econtinually.

⁶ ¶ Now there was a day when the sons of God ¹came to present themselves before the LORD, and ²Satan ³came also ⁴among them.

⁷ And the LORD said unto Satan, Whence comest thou? Then Satan answered the LORD, and said, ¹From going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it.

⁸ And the LORD said unto Satan, Hast thou ¹considered ²my servant Job, that ³there is none like him in the earth, a perfect and an upright man, ⁴one that feareth God, and ⁵escheweth evil?

Chap. I. 1-5. The land of Uz, according to the Scriptures, is in Arabia, Idumea, or the land of Edom; and the persons subsequently mentioned are Idumeans, or Arabs, from Edom. The true character of Job, which is here set forth, is one of special excellence, which manifested itself in a manner the most beautiful, in regard to his family. We have here a portraiture of parental piety, affection, and watchfulness, nowhere excelled. Its language bespeaks not only the tenderness of his conscience, but a deep knowledge of the workings of human nature. Ver. 6-22. The phraseology, in accordance with the taste of the times, and of Oriental fancy, is clearly figurative, but it is easy to discover the facts which are thus shrouded in metaphor. The Scriptures speak of God after the manner of men, in condescension to our human capacity. We are clearly taught that good and evil angels are subject to the Divine control, and that both have their missions in furtherance of the Divine plans. The passage strikingly indicates the malice of the Wicked One against the righteous, and the checks which are put upon it. When piety and prosperity go together, profession generally costs little. It may even be insinuated that they find their account in their religion; but when misfortunes, involving poverty and manifold affliction, ensue, accompanied with descent in the scale of society, and loss of friends, it is much otherwise: nothing then but principle can maintain the soul in a state of peace, confidence, and comfort. Thus tested, Job was not found wanting. While he surveyed the wreck, he acknowledged the rectitude of the proceeding, and blessed the name of the Lord. The enumeration of the rapid calamities which overtook the patriarch, are in perfect harmony with the state of things in the East. Bruce, the traveller, mentions a whirlwind of such fierceness, that it lifted a camel off its legs, carrying it to a considerable distance, where it fell, and thy daughters were eating and drinking wine in their eldest brother's house:

19 And, behold, there came ^a a great wind ^b from the wilderness, and smote the four corners of the house, and ^c it fell upon the young men, and ^d they are dead; and I only am escaped alone to tell thee.

20 Then Job arose, and rent his ^e mantle, and shaved his head, and ^f fell down upon the ground, and worshipped, 21 And said, Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked shall I return thither: ^g the LORD gave, and ^h the LORD hath taken away; ⁱ blessed be the name of the LORD.

22 ^j In all this Job sinned not, nor ^k charged God foolishly.

^b Answered.

touch his bone and his flesh, and ^a he will curse thee to thy face.

6 And the LORD said unto Satan, Behold, he ^b is in thine hand; ^c but ^d save his life.

7 ¶ So went Satan forth from the presence of the LORD, and smote Job with sore boils, from the sole of his foot unto his crown.

8 And he took him a potsherd to scrape himself withal; and he sat down among the ashes.

9 ¶ Then said his wife unto him, Dost thou still ^e retain thine integrity? curse God, and die.

10 But he said unto her, Thou speakest as one of the foolish women speaketh. What! ^f shall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil? ^g In all this did not Job sin with his lips.

11 ¶ Now, when Job's three friends heard of all this evil that was come upon him, they came every one from his own place; Eliphaz the Temanite, and Bildad the Shuhite, and Zophar the Naamathite: for they had made an appointment together to come ^h to mourn with him, and to comfort him.

12 And when they lifted up their eyes afar off, and knew him not, they lifted up their voice, and wept; and they rent every one his mantle, and ⁱ sprinkled dust upon their heads toward heaven.

13 So they sat down with him upon the ground seven days and seven nights; and none spake a word unto him: for they saw that ^j his grief was very great.

CHAPTER III.

1 Job curseth the day of his birth, 13 and wisheth for the ease of death. 20 He complaineth of life because of his anguish.

AFTER this ^a opened Job his mouth, and cursed his day.

2 And Job ^b spake, and said, breaking several of its bones. He himself was raised off his feet, and thrown upon his face with such violence, that his nose gushed with blood, and two of his servants shared a similar fate. A portion of a hut was demolished with such force, that it seemed to have been cut with a knife, while the materials were dispersed over the plain. Such facts strikingly illustrate ver. 19, when the wind smote the four corners of the house, and it fell, killing the inmates. The predatory habits of the East also correspond with what is said about the Sabaeans seizing on the property of Job, and killing his servants.

Chap. II. 1-10. These verses carry the matter of trial a step higher. It is here intimated, that in proportion as affliction comes near to the person, it will prove his integrity. External losses, however great their force, are not to be compared with the loss of health, or of those organs and faculties which constitute the chief felicity of man. It became, therefore, necessary that Job should be tested in his person, and that the test should be the severest possible; and, accordingly, that test was applied. There again the holy man still maintained his integrity, defending the very calamities which had overtaken him. "Shall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil?" This is not the language of a hypocrite, but of a spirit which cleaves to its God, from whom nothing can separate it. It is prepared to suffer the loss of all things, satisfied with the portion which remains, even that favour which is life, and that loving-kindness which is better than life. Ver. 11-13. The lesson here presented is of the utmost value to Christians; and amid our manifold afflictions, whatever they may be, we shall here find that which will materially contribute to support, comfort, and encouragement. The sufferings of the present moment are not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed. Job's three friends, hearing of his afflictions, in a praiseworthy spirit made an arrangement to visit him, that they might mourn with him and comfort him. The meeting was deeply affecting, and gone about in harmony with the usages of their country, which had their foundation in human nature, to which, in its deepest sorrow, nothing is so afflicting as a flood of talk. It is a fact deserving attention, that even now mourners among the Hindus are silent for hours together, unless when compelled to speak. But it does not follow that during those seven days and seven nights the visitors had no rest nor refreshment; it only signifies that they maintained sorrowful and sympathetic silence.

Chap. III. 1-26. The bitterness with which Job here bemoans the day of his birth, is expressed in the phraseology of the East. It was customary among the ancients, both Jews and Heathens, to mark certain days as prosperous or calamitous; and on these days dirges of sorrow were written and recited by persons particularly employed for the purpose. This sublime and pathetic passage is intensely descriptive of affliction. So great was the anguish of the sufferer, that as a means of preventing it, he wished he had never been born, or had perished at his

CHAPTER IV.

1 Eliphaz reproves Job for want of religion. 7 He teacheth God's judgments to be not for the righteous, but for the wicked. 12 His fearful vision, to humble the excellencies of creatures before God.

THEN Eliphaz the Temanite answered and said,

2 If we assay ^ato commune with thee, ^bwilt thou be grieved? but who can ^cwithhold himself from speaking?

3 Behold, thou hast instructed many, and thou hast strengthened the weak hands.

4 Thy words have upholden him that was falling, and thou hast strengthened the ^dfeeble knees.

5 But now ^eit is come upon thee, and ^fthou faintest; it toucheth thee, and thou art troubled.

6 Is not ^gthis thy fear, thy confidence, thy hope, and the uprightness of thy ways?

7 Remember, I pray thee, who ^hever perished, being innocent? or where were the righteous cut off?

8 Even as I have seen, they that plow iniquity, and sow wickedness, reap the same.

9 By the blast of God they perish, and ⁱby the breath of his nostrils are they consumed.

10 The roaring of the lion, and the voice of the fierce lion, and ^jthe teeth of the young lions, are broken.

11 The old lion ^kperisheth for lack of prey, and the stout lion's whelps are scattered abroad.

12 Now ^la thing was ^msecretly brought to me, and mine ear received ⁿa little thereof.

birth. But though he cursed his day, in opposition to his wife's impious counsel he continued to bless his God. He was tired of life, but not of religion. He determined to hold fast his integrity, and to die reposing in the fullest confidence in the mercy of God. There is a trait of character brought forth in ver. 25 particularly noticeable. Holy men, in their happiest seasons, are in constant communion with the eternal world. They never forget that this is not their rest, and that the day draws on when they will be summoned away from all earthly enjoyment. As observers of the ways of Providence, and of every shifting aspect of human society, they also frequently anticipate changes even before they die. This arises from a trembling fear lest their very mercies should prove a snare, and their heavenly Father, in his love, withdraw them, or subject them to afflictions for their good. Job had clearly a strong presentiment of this sort: "The thing which I greatly feared is come upon me, and that which I was afraid of is come unto me." The feeling here indicated was doubtless profitable in the days of his prosperity, as tending to preserve his soul in a happy frame; and now that the worst had come, it somewhat contributed to prepare him for it.

Chap. IV. 1-21. The season of silence had now passed away, Job himself having broken it, by disburdening his sorrowful heart of the foregoing lamentations; the way was therefore clear for his friends to speak. Eliphaz accordingly addressed him with great respect, but with unbecoming severity. At the outset, he pays the patriarch a high tribute, as having instructed many, and strengthened the weak hands; but now that trouble came upon himself, he faints. Eliphaz had clearly but an imperfect conception of Job's afflictions, otherwise he would have spoken with more tenderness. He therefore reasons in a very unfeeling manner, plainly insinuating

CHAPTER VI.

1 Job sheweth that his complaints are not causeless. 8 He wisheth for death, wherein he is assured of comfort.

14 He reproveth his friends of unkindness.

BUT Job answered and said,

2 Oh that my grief were thoroughly that Job's past profession was deficient in a proper foundation. He takes the sufferings of his friend as a manifestation, not of sovereign wisdom, but of sovereign justice; asserting that as Job had sown he was now reaping. Appearances were certainly against the patriarch. It was not unnatural to infer that events so apparently bearing the aspect of Divine judgments, could only have been called forth by hidden enormities, such as were not common amongst men. In the absence of proof, however, it was not for Eliphaz thus to reason. If we always judge according to appearances, we shall very frequently not judge righteous judgment.

Chap. V. 1-27. Eliphaz continues his lofty, though reproachful discourse on the ways of the Lord, uttering things full of excellence, as well as making hard insinuations. When he says that man in trouble should seek unto God, and commit his cause to him, he gives excellent advice; but when he insinuates that Job, though reputed a wise man, has been taken in his own craftiness, and that by his counsel he has been carried headlong, his words were fitted only to inflict wounds in a heart already transfixed by the arrows of the Almighty. The sentiment that the man is happy whom God correcteth, was very reasonable, as well as true; but Job did not "despise the chastening of the Almighty." If he spoke in the bitterness of his heart, that heart was not a subject of hardness. His soul melted within him. He was, as a child, recognising parental chastisement, while but imperfectly acquainted with the causes whence it proceeded, and, because of this, manifesting somewhat of a murmuring spirit. This is a condition in which the people of God have often found themselves; but light never fails to come in the end, shewing that what they deemed wrathful severity, was, after all, but disguised love.

Chap. VI. 1-30. The language of Eliphaz roused the 10 Then should I yet have comfort; yea, I would harden myself in sorrow: ⁷let him not spare; for I have not concealed the words of ⁸the Holy One.

25 How forcible are right words! but what doth your arguing-reprove?

29 ²⁵Return, I pray you, let it not be iniquity; yea, return again, my righteousness is ²⁶in it.

30 Is there iniquity in my tongue? cannot my ²⁷taste discern perverse things?

CHAPTER VII.

1 Job excuseth his desire of death, by representing the vanity of his life. 13 He complaineth of his own weakness, and God's watchfulness.

I ¹there not ²an appointed time to man upon earth? are not his days also ³like the days of an hireling?

2 As a servant ⁴earnestly desireth the shadow, and as ⁵an hireling looketh for the reward of his work;

3 So am I made to possess months of vanity, and wearisome nights are appointed to me.

4 When I lie down, I say, ⁶When shall I arise, and ⁷the night be gone? and I am full of tossings to and fro unto the dawning of the day.

5 My ⁸flesh is clothed with worms and clods of dust; my skin is broken, and become loathsome.

6 My days are swifter than a weaver's shuttle, and are spent without hope.

7 O remember that ⁹my life is wind; mine eye ¹⁰shall no more see good.

8 The ¹¹eye of him that hath seen me shall see me no more: thine eyes are upon me, and ¹²I am not.

9 As the cloud is consumed and vanisheth away; so ¹³he that goeth down to the grave shall come up no more.

10 He shall return no more to his house, neither shall his place know him any more.

11 Therefore ¹⁴I will not refrain my mouth; I will speak in ¹⁵the anguish of my spirit; I will complain in the bitterness of my soul.

sufferer to self-defence. The arrows of the Almighty, dipped in poison, and working death wherever they pierce, is an expression full of deep significance. The remonstrance contained in ver. 26 ought to have been felt by Eliphaz. It was, indeed, "folly to reprove words, and the speeches of one that is desperate." By so doing, in effect, he "overwhelmed the fatherless;" for at that moment Job was as if his Father in heaven had abandoned him: and Eliphaz "dug a pit for his friend," for, instead of supporting, he was tearing from under him the prop of his conscious integrity, his own sincere, heartfelt, and long-tried piety. Fidelity in dealing with each other is a duty; but we must take care that fidelity do not degenerate into cruelty. Nothing like uncharitableness should ever be allowed to mingle with our counsels; and when we find godly men inditing bitter things against themselves, we should rather apply milk and honey than gall and wormwood.

Chap. VII. 1-21. Pathos, in perfection, is here presented. Human woe, in its most intense forms, is illustrated. While the day of the sufferer was terrible, the night only embittered his sorrows, and to such an extent that his soul chose "strangling and death" rather than life. He loathed it: he would not live always. In this touching language, so expressive of agony, there is no sin. Human nature is true to itself; and when oppressed with an overwhelming load of misery, it is not culpable to sigh and to cry. The moanings of misery are not to be identified with transgression.

12 Am ¹I a sea, or a whale, that thou settest a watch over me?

13 When I say, ^mMy bed shall comfort me, my couch shall ease my complaint;

14 Then ⁿthou scarest me with dreams, and terrifiest me through visions;

15 So that my soul ^ochooseth strangling, and death rather than my ^olife.

16 ^pI loathe it; I would not live alway: ^qlet me alone; for ^rmy days are vanity.

17 ^sWhat is man, that thou shouldest magnify him? and that thou shouldest ^tset thine heart upon him?

18 And ^uthat thou shouldest ^vvisit him every morning, and ^wtry him every moment?

19 ^xHow long wilt thou not depart from me, nor let me alone, till I swallow down my spittle?

20 I have sinned; what shall I do unto thee, ^yO thou Preserver of men? ^zwhy hast thou set me as a mark against thee, so that I am a burden to myself?

21 And ^{aa}why dost thou not pardon my transgression, and ^{ab}take away mine iniquity? for now shall I ^{ac}sleep in the dust; and thou shalt seek me in the morning, but I shall not be.

CHAPTER VIII.

1 Bilad sheweth God's justice in dealing with men according to their works; 8 allegeth antiquity to prove the certain destruction of the hypocrite; 20 and applieth God's just dealing to Job.

THEN answered Bilad the Shuhite, and said,

2 ^aHow long wilt thou speak these things? and how long shall the words of thy mouth be like a strong wind?

3 ^bDoth God pervert judgment? or doth ^cthe Almighty pervert justice?

4 If thy children have sinned against him, and ^dhe have cast them away ^efor their transgression;

5 If thou wouldest seek unto God betimes, and make thy supplication to the Almighty;

6 If ^fthou wert pure and upright; surely now ^ghe would awake for thee, and make the habitation of thy righteousness prosperous.

7 Though thy beginning was small, yet ^hthy latter end should greatly increase.

CHAPTER IX.

1 Job celebrates God's justice, wisdom, and power. 14 He disclaims all attempts to justify himself; 22 but insists that a man's innocence should not be judged of by what befalls him in this world.

THEN Job answered and said,

2 I know it is so of a truth: but ^ahow should man be just ^bwith God?

3 If ^che will contend with him, ^dhe cannot answer him one of a thousand.

4 ^eHe is ^fwise in heart, and mighty in strength: ^gwho hath hardened himself against him, and hath prospered?

5 Which removeth the mountains, and they know not; ^hwhich overturneth them in his anger;

6 Which shaketh the earth out of her place, and ⁱthe pillars thereof tremble;

7 Which commandeth the sun, and it riseth not, and sealeth up the stars;

Job here somewhat improves as he advances. "I have sinned," is language which indicates contrition; and when in agony he cries out, "Why dost thou not pardon my transgression, and take away mine iniquity?" he fully recognises the Divine purity, and his own shortcoming. This language ought to have been duly estimated by his officious friends. They should not have perverted it into an acknowledgment, at length wrung from him by suffering, that he was a hypocrite. No such conclusion necessarily followed from the confession. There is not a just man on earth in whose lips the prayer of Job would not be seemly and proper.

Chap. VIII. 1-22. Bildad at length broke silence, adding to the good counsel of Eliphaz, and also to his harsh insinuations. According to him, purity and uprightness are not compatible with the continuance of these calamities. He discourses feelingly on the paths of men that forget God, and shews that the hypocrite's hope shall perish; whereas God would not cast away the perfect man, neither would he help the evildoers. Bildad, however, reasoned very superficially: he assumed that the ends of affliction were answered the moment that they arrive; but it is otherwise. Afflictions have frequently a mission of mercy to execute, not simply in the sufferer, but in others related to him, or connected with him. Discipline does not consist in a single act, but in a series of acts, or in one oft repeated. It is enough that when the end comes, the whole will be found to be sanctified, and made to work together for good.

Chap. IX. 1-35. Job, notwithstanding his sufferings, and their aggravation by these his ill-judging though well-meaning friends, shews that he is competent to self-defence. Before them, he boldly stands up for his 12 Behold, he taketh away, who can ^hhinder him? who will say unto him, ^WWhat doest thou?

13 If God will not withdraw his anger, the ^pproud helpers do stoop under him.

14 How much less shall I answer him, and choose out my words to reason with him?

15 Whom, though I were righteous, yet would I not answer, but I would make supplication to my judge.

16 If I had called, and he had answered me; yet would I not believe that he had hearkened unto my voice.

CHAPTER X.

¹ Job, taking liberty of complaint, expostulates with God about his afflictions. 18 He complaineth of life, and craveth a little ease before death.

MY ^ssoul is ^wweary of my life: I will leave my complaint upon myself; ^II will speak in the bitterness of my soul.

2 I will say unto God, Do not condemn me: ^hshew me wherefore thou contendest with me.

3 Is it good unto thee that thou shouldest oppress? that thou shouldest despise the ^wwork of thine hands? and shine upon the counsel of the wicked?

4 Hast thou eyes of flesh? or ^aseest thou as man seeth?

5 Are thy days as the days of man? are thy years as man's days,

6 That ^tthou enquirest after mine iniquity, and searchest after my sin?

7 ^TThou knowest that I am not wicked; ^aand there is none that can deliver out of thine hand.

8 Thine ^hhands ^ahave made me, and fashioned me together round about; ^hyet thou dost destroy me.

9 Remember, I beseech thee, that thou hast made me as the clay; and wilt thou bring me into dust again?

10 Hast thou not ^ppoured me out as milk, and curdled me like cheese?

11 Thou hast ^mclothed me with skin and flesh, and hast ^ffenced me with bones and sinews.

12 Thou hast granted me ^llife and favour, and thy visitation hath preserved my spirit.

13 And these things hast thou ^hhid in integrity; but before his God, he falls into the attitude of the lowliest prostration. Notwithstanding his own sincerity, on reflection he felt that, in all things, to some extent he came short. It was not enough that to himself he was, upon the whole, as a man washed with snow water, and whose hands were made clean. In the light of Omniscience, he was as one plunged in the ditch, and even his own garments would abhor him. This indicates an increase of spiritual illumination. The glory of the Divine purity was such as to oppress and awe him. Under the circumstances, he felt the need of a daysman, or a mediator, between him and God. In the absence of that, the fear of the Lord overwhelmed him: with such mediation, he would speak, and not fear; without it, however, nothing remained but meek and silent submission. In the Lord's presence, no flesh may glory, but all who repent and believe may hope and trust.

Chap. X. 1-22. The great thing the suffering patriarch desired was, the discovery of the causes of his peculiar and unparalleled afflictions. He was not, himself, aware of anything that could have called down such judgments; but he felt entire confidence that there was a reason for the dispensation consistent with the Divine wisdom and goodness, and what he desired was to know thine heart: I know that this is with thee.

14 If I sin, then thou markest me; and thou wilt not acquit me from mine iniquity.

15 If I be wicked, woe unto me; and if I be righteous, yet will I not lift up my head. I am full of confusion; therefore see thou mine affliction;

16 For it increaseth. Thou huntest me as a fierce lion; and again thou shewest thyself marvellous upon me.

17 Thou renewest thy witnesses against me, and increasest thine indignation upon me; changes and war are against me.

18 Wherefore then hast thou brought me forth out of the womb? Oh that I had given up the ghost, and no eye had seen me!

19 I should have been as though I had not been; I should have been carried from the womb to the grave.

20 Are not my days few? cease then, and let me alone, that I may take comfort a little.

21 Before I go whence I shall not return, even to the land of darkness, and the shadow of death;

22 A land of darkness, as darkness itself; and of the shadow of death, without any order, and where the light is as darkness.

CHAPTER XI.

1 Zophar reproves Job for justifying himself. 5 God's wisdom is unsearchable. 13 The assured blessing of repentance.

THEN answered Zophar the Naamathite, and said,

2 Should not the multitude of words be answered? and should a man full of talk be justified?

3 Should thy lies make men hold their peace? and when thou mockest, shall no man make thee ashamed?

4 For thou hast said, "My doctrine is pure, and I am clean in thine eyes.

5 But Oh that God would speak, and open his lips against thee;

6 And that he would shew thee the secrets of wisdom, that they are double to that which is! Know therefore that God exacteth of thee less than thine iniquity deserveth.

I am heart.
I fall not lower than you.

With whom are not such as these?

7 Canst thou by searching find out God? canst thou find out the Almighty unto perfection?

8 It is as high as heaven; what canst thou do? deeper than hell; what canst thou know?

9 The measure thereof is longer than the earth, and broader than the sea.

10 If he cut off, and shut up, or gather together, then who can hinder him?

11 For he knoweth vain men: he seeth wickedness also; will he not then consider it?

12 For vain man would be wise, though man be born like a wild ass's colt.

13 If thou prepare thine heart, and stretch out thine hands toward him;

14 If iniquity be in thine hand, put it far away, and let not wickedness dwell in thy tabernacles.

15 For then shalt thou lift up thy face without spot; yea, thou shalt be stedfast, and shalt not fear:

16 Because thou shalt forget thy misery, and remember it as waters that pass away:

17 And thine age shall be clearer than the noon-day; thou shalt shine forth, thou shalt be as the morning.

18 And thou shalt be secure, because there is hope; yea, thou shalt dig about thee, and thou shalt take thy rest in safety.

19 Also thou shalt lie down, and none shall make thee afraid; yea, many shall make suit unto thee.

20 But the eyes of the wicked shall fail, and they shall not escape, and their hope shall be as the giving up of the ghost.

CHAPTER XII.

1 Job retorts on his friends, censures their pretensions to superior knowledge, and complains of their unkindness.

6 He shews that God often permits the wicked to prosper.

12 He discourses on the works of God.

AND Job answered and said,

2 No doubt but ye are the people, and wisdom shall die with you.

3 But I have understanding as well as you; I am not inferior to you: yea, who knoweth not such things as these?

4 I am as one mocked of his neighbour, who calleth upon God, and he answereth

it. "Shew me wherefore thou contendest with me," is an expression which affliction has wrung from the lips of countless multitudes of God's people. "Thou knowest that I am not wicked," is the noblest appeal that an upright saint can make to God. When the state of the heart is such as to enable the afflicted thus to speak, that very state has in itself the elements of consolation. It was Paul's rejoicing that he had the "testimony of a good conscience;" and another Apostle tells us, "If our heart condemn us not, then have we confidence toward God," that he will not condemn us. Such was the comfort of Job during this his unexampled tribulation. Ver. 15 reveals a deeply interesting state of mind. While conscious that he was not wicked, in the proper sense of the term, yet he was so deeply sensible of manifold shortcomings, that, although conscious of sincerity, he would not lift up his head,—he was full of confusion before the Lord, and all he desired was, that his Father in heaven would look upon his affliction.

Chap. XI. 1-20. Zophar at length took up the argument in the same uncharitable and cruel strain of his associates. When he asked whether "a multitude of words" should not be answered, and whether "a man full of talk should be justified," he shewed that he had not gained by silent attention and reflection on what had been occurring between Job and his two friends. In truth, he appears to have been rather meditating the means of inflicting still deeper wounds than of medicating those already made. He assumes that Job had been uttering "lies," and that his "mocking" was such that it was proper to resort to means of making him "ashamed." The whole of his address was marked by the same bitterness and uncharitableness as the addresses of the previous speakers. Nothing can be worse and less adapted to the chamber of sorrow than the spirit and language of this man.

Chap. XII. 1-25. The tendency of one spirit, whether good or evil, is to reproduce itself in others. The bitterness and scorn of Zophar roused Job from the beautiful spirit of humility he had just displayed. The man, for him: ^bthe just upright man is laughed to scorn.

5 He that is ^cready to slip with his feet is as a lamp despised in the thought of him that is at ease.

6 The tabernacles of robbers prosper, and they that provoke God are secure; into whose hand God bringeth abundantly.

7 But ask now the beasts, and they shall teach thee; and the fowls of the air, and they shall tell thee:

8 Or speak to the earth, and it shall teach thee; and the fishes of the sea shall declare unto thee.

9 Who knoweth not in all these that the hand of the LORD hath wrought this?

10 In ^dwhose hand is the ^esoul of every living thing, and the breath of all ^fman-kind.

11 Doth not the ear try words? and the ^gmouth taste his meat?

12 With the ancient is wisdom; and in length of days understanding.

13 With ^hhim is wisdom and strength, he hath ⁱcounsel and understanding.

14 Behold, he breaketh down, and it cannot be built again; he shutteth ^jup a man, and there can be no opening.

15 Behold, he withholdeth the waters, and they dry up; also ^khe sendeth them out, and they overturn the earth.

16 With him is strength and wisdom; ^lthe deceived and the deceiver are his.

17 He ^mleadeth counsellors away spoiled, and maketh the judges fools.

18 He looseth the bond of kings, and girdeth their loins with a girdle.

19 He leadeth princes away spoiled, and overthroweth the mighty.

20 He removeth away ⁿthe speech of the trusty, and taketh away the understanding of the aged.

21 He ^opoureth contempt upon princes, and ^pweakeneth the strength of the mighty.

22 He ^qdiscovereth deep things out of darkness, and bringeth out to light the shadow of death.

23 He increaseth the nations, and destroyeth them: he enlargeth the nations, and ^rstraiteneth them again.

CHAPTER XIII.

1 Job reproveth his friends for their partiality. 14 He professeth his confidence in God; 20 and entreateh to know his own sins, and God's purpose in afflicting him.

LO, mine eye hath seen all this, ^vmine ear hath heard and understood it.

2 What ^wye know, the same do I know also: ^xI am not inferior unto you.

3 Surely I would speak to the Almighty, and ^yI desire to reason with God.

4 But ^zye are forgers of lies, ye are all physicians of no value.

5 Oh that ye would altogether hold your peace; ^{aa}and it should be your wisdom.

6 Hear ^{ab}now my reasoning, and hearken to the pleadings of my lips.

7 Will ye ^{ac}speak wickedly for God? and talk deceitfully for him?

8 Will ye ^{ad}accept his person? will ye contend for God?

9 Is it good that he should search you out? or ^{ae}as one man mocketh another, do ye so mock him?

10 He will surely reprove you, if ye do secretly accept persons.

11 Shall ^{af}not his excellency make you afraid? and his dread fall upon you?

12 Your ^{ag}remembrances are like unto ^{ah}ashes, your bodies to bodies of clay.

13 ^{ai}Hold your peace, let me alone, that I may speak, and let come on me what will.

14 Wherefore do ^{aj}I take my flesh in my teeth, and put my life in mine hand?

15 Though ^{ak}he slay me, yet will I trust in him: ^{al}but I will ^{am}maintain mine own ways before him.

16 He also shall be ^{an}my salvation: for an hypocrite shall not come before him.

17 Hear diligently my speech, and my declaration with your ears.

18 Behold now, I have ordered ^{ao}my cause; ^{ap}I know that I shall be justified.

19 Who is ^{aq}he that will plead with me? for now, if I hold my tongue, I shall give up the ghost.

20 Only do not two things unto me; then will I not ^{ar}hide myself from thee.

the moment, rises above the saint, and with dignified scorn exclaims, "No doubt but ye are the people, and wisdom shall die with you. But I have understanding as well as you; I am not inferior to you: yea, who knoweth not such things as these?" This lofty rebuke was well deserved. Zophar's boldness greatly outran his wisdom, and Job sharply reminds him that condition must not be taken as the test of character, inasmuch as "the tabernacles of robbers prosper, and they that provoke God are secure." The noble thoughts with which he proceeds indicate comprehensive views of the majesty of God, and the insignificance of man. Such views were eminently calculated to reconcile him to his afflictive lot, from the conviction that it was his own littleness which prevented him from properly estimating the discipline through which he was being conducted. The closing verses of the chapter are peculiarly grand,—tests which are abundantly illustrated in the pages of universal history. Where the mere philosopher and politician see nothing but the operation of natural causes, the Heaven-taught mind of Job sees the Divine Hand touching the hearts of the rulers of the earth, filling them with perplexity, and causing them to "wander in a wilderness where there is no way. They grope in the dark without light, and he maketh them to stagger like a drunken man." Of these profound positions we have abundant illustration in the records of the prophetic empires, shewing that the affairs by which kingdoms rise and fall are governed by a Hand other than that of sovereigns and of statesmen.

Chap. XIII. 1-28. Job here repels the charge of Zophar, accusing him and his friend as "forgers of lies," and "physicians of no value." He even accuses them of speaking wickedly for God, and talking deceitfully of him. It has often occurred that men have done so; and 21 Withdraw thine hand far from me; and let not thy dread make me afraid:

22 Then call thou, and I will answer; or let me speak, and answer thou me.

23 How many are mine iniquities and sins? make me to know my transgression and my sin.

24 Wherefore hidest thou thy face, and holdest me for thine enemy?

25 Wilt thou break a leaf driven to and fro? and wilt thou pursue the dry stubble?

26 For thou writest bitter things against me, and makest me to possess the iniquities of my youth.

27 Thou puttest my feet also in the stocks, and lookest narrowly unto all my paths; thou settest a print upon the heels of my feet.

28 And he, as a rotten thing, consumeth, as a garment that is moth-eaten.

CHAPTER XIV.

1 Job entreatheth God for favour, by the shortness of life, and certainty of death. 7 Though life once lost be irrecoverable, yet he waiteth for his change. 16 By sin the creature is subject to corruption.

MAN that is born of a woman is of few days, and full of trouble.

2 He cometh forth like a flower, and is cut down: he fleeth also as a shadow, and continueth not.

3 And dost thou open thine eyes upon such an one, and bringest me into judgment with thee?

4 Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? not one.

5 Seeing his days are determined, the number of his months are with thee; thou hast appointed his bounds that he cannot pass.

6 Turn from him, that he may rest, till he shall accomplish, as an hireling, his day.

7 For there is hope of a tree, if it be cut down, that it will sprout again, and that the tender branch thereof will not cease.

8 Though the root thereof wax old in the earth, and the stock thereof die in the ground;

9 Yet through the scent of water it will bud, and bring forth boughs like a plant.

10 But man dieth, and wasteth away; yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he?

11 As the waters fail from the sea, and the flood decayeth and drieth up;

21 His sons come to honour, and he knoweth it not; and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them.

22 But his flesh upon him shall have pain, and his soul within him shall mourn.

CHAPTER XV.

1 Eliphaz reproveh Job for impiety in justifying himself. 17 He proveth by tradition the unquietness of wicked men.

THEN answered Eliphaz the Temanite, and said,

2 Should a wise man utter vain knowledge, and fill his belly with the east wind?

3 Should he reason with unprofitable talk? or with speeches wherewith he can do no good?

4 Yea, thou castest off fear, and restrainest prayer before God.

5 For thy mouth uttereth thine iniquity, and thou choosest the tongue of the crafty.

6 Thine own mouth condemneth thee, and not I; yea, thine own lips testify against thee.

7 Art thou the first man that was born? or wast thou made before the hills?

never are calumny and cruelty so offensive and wounding, as when they assume an air of conscientious concern for the glory of God. These men, pretending to aid the better feelings which had begun to rise in the heaving bosom of the patriarch, adopted the very surest means to disturb his equanimity, and withdraw him from the proper source of consolation. Their medicine, therefore, was not the balm of Gilead, but the poison of perversity and uncharitableness.

Chap. XIV. 1-22. Job here, turning away from his persecutors, breaks forth in a strain of the deepest pathos. The view he presents of the condition of man is very depressing; and all the more, since it is not relieved by those sweet and assuring truths presented by the gospel of Christ. There is nothing in the Book so touching as many of the sentiments here set forth. The sending him away to the land of forgetfulness, so that when his sons come to honour he knoweth it not, and when they are brought low he perceiveth it not, is affecting in the extreme. Such meditations are exceedingly calculated to quench the fire of unholy passion, and to check the risings of a spirit of ambition. The days of man are, at most, very few, and those days are full of trouble; the afflictions of life, therefore, blended with its brevity, should teach men to set their affections on things above, and to seek the true riches, which can neither be corrupted nor destroyed.

Chap. XV. 1-35. Eliphaz, wholly unmoved by the well-grounded pleas and protest of his friend, returns to the subject in terms very uncourteous. He even flatly 8 Hast thou heard ^athe secret of God? and dost thou restrain wisdom to thyself?

9 What knowest thou, that we know not? ^{what} understandest thou, which is not in us?

10 With us ^{are} both ^bthe gray-headed and very aged men, much elder than thy father.

11 ^{Are} ^cthe consolations of God small with thee? is there any secret thing with thee?

12 Why doth ^kthine heart carry thee away? and what do ^lthy eyes wink at, 13 That thou ^mturnest thy spirit against God, and lettest ⁿsuch words go out of thy mouth?

14 What ^{is} man, that he should be clean? and ^{he} ^{which} is born of a woman, that he should be righteous?

15 Behold, he putteth no trust in his saints; yea, the heavens are not clean in his sight;

16 How much more ^oabominable and filthy is man, which ^pdrinketh iniquity like water?

17 I will shew thee, hear me; and that ^{which} I have seen I will declare;

18 Which wise men have told from their fathers, and have not hid it;

19 Unto ^qwhom alone the earth was given, and no stranger passed among them.

20 The wicked man ^rtravaileth with pain all ^{his} days, and ^sthe number of years is hidden to the oppressor.

21 A ^tdreadful sound is in his ears: in prosperity ^uthe destroyer shall come upon him.

22 He ^vbelieveth not that he shall return out of darkness, and he is waited for of the sword.

23 He wandereth abroad for bread, ^{saying}, Where is it? he knoweth that ^wthe day of darkness is ready at his hand.

24 Trouble and ^xanguish shall make him afraid; they shall prevail against him, ^{as} a king ready to the battle.

25 For he stretcheth out his hand against God, and strengtheneth himself against the Almighty.

26 He runneth upon him, ^{even} on ^{his} neck, upon the thick bosses of his bucklers;

27 Because ^yhe covereth his face with his fatness, and maketh collops of fat on ^{his} flanks.

28 And he dwelleth in desolate cities, and in houses which no man inhabiteth, which are ready to become heaps.

CHAPTER XVI.

⁷ He sheweth the pitifulness of his case. ¹⁷ He maintaineth his innocence.

THEN Job answered and said,
2 I have heard many such things: ^{miserable} comforters ^{are} ye all.

4 I also could speak as ye do: ^bif your soul were in my soul's stead, I could heap up words against you, and ^cshake mine head at you.

5 But ^dI would strengthen you with my mouth, and the moving of my lips should assuage ^{your} grief.

6 Though I speak, my grief is not asswaged; and ^{though} I forbear, ^{what} am I eased?

7 But now ^ehe hath made me weary: thou hast made desolate all my company.

8 And thou hast filled me with wrinkles, ^{which} is a witness ^{against} me: and ^{my} leanness rising up in me beareth witness to my face.

9 He ^fteareth me in his wrath, who hateth me: ^ghe gnasheth upon me with his teeth; ^{mine} enemy sharpeneth his eyes upon me.

charges Job with casting off fear, and restraining prayer before God. In this uncharitable, unfeeling strain, he proceeds to the close. Such conduct admits of no apology; it was an outrage upon truth, and calculated only to aggravate the sorrows of the sufferer. He knew nothing of Job's private spiritual habits, and he had neither seen nor heard anything to authorise the reproach heaped upon him. This man's conduct should teach Christians especially to discharge the duty of comforting the mourners; to study candour, and to exercise charity to the utmost limit consistent with integrity. Men may plume themselves on what they call faithfulness; but it behoves them to see to it, that fidelity do not amount to injustice. When things took the turn they did at the close, doubtless Eliphaz looked back on the conversation with regret, self-reproach, and shame. It is better, in all these matters, rather to err on the side of charity, than to indulge in harsh and unfeeling suspicion.

Chap. XVI. 1-22. Job rejoins, by imitating the pointed address of his correctors, "I have heard many such things: miserable comforters are ye all." He shews them that their display redounded as little to their sense as to their humanity. If he were in their condition, he too could have heaped up words in abun-ungodly, and turned me over into the hands of the wicked.

12 I was at ease, but he hath broken me asunder: he hath also taken me ^aby my neck, and ^ashaken me to pieces, and set me up for his mark.

13 His ^aarchers compass me round about; he cleaveth my reins asunder, and ^adoth not spare; he poureth out my gall upon the ground.

14 He breaketh me with breach upon breach; ^ahe runneth upon me like a giant.

15 I have sewed sackcloth upon my skin, and defiled my horn in the dust.

16 My face is foul with weeping, and ^aon my eyelids is the shadow of death;

17 Not for ^aany injustice in mine hands: also ^amy prayer is pure.

18 O earth, cover not thou my blood, and let my cry have no place.

19 Also now, behold, my witness is in heaven, and my record is ^aon high.

20 My friends ^ascorn me: but mine eye ^apoureth out tears unto God.

21 Oh that one might plead for a man with God, as a man ^apleadeth for his ^aneighbour!

22 When ^aa few years are come, then I shall go the way ^awhence I shall not return.

CHAPTER XVII.

1 Job appealeth from men to God. 6 The unmerciful dealing of men with the afflicted, may astonish, but not discourage the righteous. 11 Job's hope is not in life, but in death.

M^y ^abreath is corrupt, my days are extinct, ^athe graves are ready for me.

2 Are there not mockers with me? and doth not mine eye ^acontinue in their ^aprovocation?

3 Lay down now, ^aput me in a surety with thee; who is he that will strike hands with me?

4 For ^athou hast hid their heart from understanding: therefore shalt thou not exalt them.

5 He that speaketh flattery to his friends, even ^athe eyes of his children shall fail.

6 He hath made me also a by-word of the people; and ^aafortime I was as a tabret.

7 Mine ^aeye also is dim by reason of dance against them. But he would not have done so; on the contrary, he would have strengthened them with his mouth. These touching remarks ought to have silenced them; but it was not so. Filled with prejudice, they kept to their purpose, and persevered in their cruel work of exasperation.

Chap. XVII. 1-16. Job again turns away from his erring friends, that he may moralise on his deplorable condition; and in so doing he utters some noble sentiments, among which are the precious words, "The righteous also shall hold on his way; and he that hath clean hands shall be stronger and stronger." With respect to these friends of his, however, he says, "I cannot find one wise man among you." Certainly they gave little proof of wisdom in this particular case. That they were wise and also good men, there can be no doubt; but such men sometimes become the subjects of a temper which but ill comports with their true character. The condition of Job, as here depicted by himself,

CHAPTER XVIII.

1 Bildad reproveth Job of presumption and impatience. 5 The calamities of the wicked.

THEN answered Bildad the Shuhite, and said,

2 How long will it be ere ye make an end of words? ^amark, and afterwards we will speak.

3 Wherefore are we counted as beasts, and reputed vile in your sight?

4 He ^abeareth ^ahimself in his anger: shall the earth be forsaken for thee? and shall the rock be removed out of his place?

5 Yea, ^athe light of the wicked shall be put out, and the ^aspark of his fire shall not shine.

6 The light shall be dark in his tabernacle, and his ^acandle shall be put out with him.

7 The steps of his strength shall be straitened, and ^ahis own counsel shall cast him down.

8 For he is cast into a net by his own feet, and he walketh upon a snare.

was most doleful. He felt as a man who had nothing to do but to die. His days were extinct, and the grave was ready for him. But with all his wisdom he erred in these conclusions; he had yet long to live, and much both to do and to enjoy. This was the darkest hour of the night; but the day-star would soon rise upon him, to be followed by the cheering beams of the sun of a gracious Providence. Let the people of God, in seasons of gloom and sorrow, think of these things, and be comforted.

Chap. XVIII. 1-21. Nothing could move these "miserable comforters." Bildad insinuates, in a manner the most heartless, that Job must be a hypocrite and a deceiver, and clearly indicates that nothing but evil could betide him. It was poor consolation to one who, by an afflictive stroke of Providence, had been bereaved of his whole family, to be told by Bildad that the person whom he took Job to be should be driven from light into darkness, and chased out of the world; that he should 16 His roots shall be dried up beneath, and above shall his branch be cut off.

17 His ^remembrance shall perish from the earth, and he shall have no name in the street.

18 ^He shall be ^driven from light into darkness, and chased out of the world.

19 He shall neither have son nor nephew among his people, nor any remaining in his dwellings.

20 They that come after him shall be ^astonied at his day, as they that ^went before ^were affrighted.

21 Surely such are the dwellings of the wicked, and this is the place of him that knoweth not God.

CHAPTER XIX.

1 Job, complaining of his friends' cruelty, sheweth there is misery enough in him to gratify it. 21 He craveth pity, and professeth his belief in the resurrection.

THEN Job answered and said,
2 How long will ye vex my soul, and ^break me in pieces with words?

3 These ten times have ye reproached me: ye are not ashamed that ye ^make yourselves strange to me.

4 And be it indeed that I have erred, ^mine error remaineth with myself.

5 If indeed ye will magnify yourselves against me, and ^plead against me my reproach;

6 Know now that God hath overthrown me, and hath compassed me with his net.

neither have son nor nephew among his people, nor any remaining in his dwellings. Nothing can exceed the injustice and the harshness of this man, who was subverting the purposes of "the accuser of the brethren," the destroyer of mankind, rather than the God of mercy, whose providences it became him to expound with truth and fairness, and in the spirit of love. His language is strong, and his doctrines are important as applied to the genuine hypocrite, but they had no application whatever to Job; and his bitter urgency was to be viewed in no other light than that of calumny and insult.

Chap. XIX. 1-29. Job here changes his tone in remonstrating with his oppressors, appealing to their humanity, and inquiring how long they would continue to vex his soul, and not desist from their unjust re-proaches of him. He thought his afflictions were such that they ought to be satisfied with them, and not endeavour by their persevering cruelty further to exasperate his sufferings with the scourge of the tongue. At this moment a wonderful change came over the spirit of the good man. His lamentations gave place to a glorious confession touching the Redeemer of the world, his own future history, and his prospects beyond the present life. The Spirit of the Lord, through him, here communicates one of the most precious portions of ancient Scripture, which has cheered the faithful in every age, and will continue to the end of the world as one of the roses of Sharon, displaying its beauty and shedding its fragrance on the souls of the sanctified. This is a resource which will ever await the faithful, whom nothing can separate from the love of God. They may, there-

CHAPTER XXI.

1 Job sheweth that even in the judgment of man he hath reason to be grieved. 7 Sometimes the wicked do so prosper as they despise God. 16 Sometimes their destruction is manifest.

BUT Job answered and said,

2 ^aHear diligently my speech; and let this be your consolations.

3 Suffer me that I may speak; and after that I have spoken, mock on.

4 As for me, ^bis my complaint to man? and if it were so, why should not my spirit be ¹troubled?

fore, under all circumstances, look up to Him who is their representative in heaven, as he was their sacrifice on earth; and even before the cross and the furnace they may make light of peril, and cry out, "O death, where is thy sting! O grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin, and the strength of sin is the law; but thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

Chap. XX. 1-29. Zophar comes to the aid of Bildad, reminding Job that the triumph of the wicked is short, and the joy of the hypocrite but for a moment. Such is the language of the man who came from a distance to comfort his friend, plunged in the depths of an unexampled sorrow! The whole of his discourse is of the same character, full of uncharitable assumptions and harsh insinuations. That Job should have exercised such patience, under such provocation, is extraordinary.

His sufferings from his friends were of a character far more afflictive and aggravated than those which came from the hand of Divine Providence. The conduct of such persons, however, most strikingly illustrates the preciousness of the doctrine which prompted Peter to say, "Thou knowest all things: thou knowest that I love thee." Our consolation is, that in the end we shall have to do, not with man, but with God. Well said David, "Let them curse, but bless thou." Man's curse is like man's self—the thing of a moment, worthless and powerless; but God's blessing is like himself—it is lasting as the life of the human soul, which it enriches without the addition of sorrow.

Chap. XXI. 1-34. Job continues to make head against his false accusers. "Suffer me that I may speak; and after that I have spoken, mock on," is language which throws additional light on the levity of his friends' con-

13 They spend their days in wealth, and in a moment go down to the grave.

14 Therefore they say unto God, Depart from us; for we desire not the knowledge of thy ways.

15 What is the Almighty, that we should serve him? and what profit should we have, if we pray unto him?

16 Lo, their good is not in their hand: the counsel of the wicked is far from me.

17 How oft is the candle of the wicked put out? and how oft cometh their destruction upon them? God distributeth sorrows in his anger.

18 They are as stubble before the wind, and as chaff that the storm carrieth away.

CHAPTER XXII.

1 Eliphaz sheweth that man's goodness profiteth not God.

5 He accuseth Job of divers sins; 21 and exhorteth him to repentance, with promises of mercy.

THEN Eliphaz the Temanite answered and said,

2 Can a man be profitable unto God, as he that is wise may be profitable unto himself?

3 Is it any pleasure to the Almighty, that thou art righteous? or is it gain to him, that thou makest thy ways perfect?

4 Will he reprove thee for fear of thee? will he enter with thee into judgment?

5 Is not thy wickedness great? and thine iniquities infinite?

6 For thou hast taken a pledge from thy brother for nought, and stripped the naked of their clothing.

7 Thou hast not given water to the weary to drink, and thou hast withholden bread from the hungry.

8 But as for the mighty man, he had the earth; and the honourable man dwelt in it.

9 Thou hast sent widows away empty, and the arms of the fatherless have been broken:

10 Therefore snares are round about thee, and sudden fear troubleth thee;

11 Or darkness, that thou canst not see; and abundance of waters cover thee.

12 Is not God in the height of heaven? and behold the height of the stars, how high they are!

13 And thou sayest, How doth God know? can he judge through the dark cloud?

14 Thick clouds are a covering to him, that he seeth not; and he walketh in the circuit of heaven.

15 Hast thou marked the old way which wicked men have trodden?

16 Which were cut down out of time, duct. Job again returns to his position, that there is no connexion between hypocrisy and affliction, inasmuch as the wicked live, become old, and are mighty in power. On the other hand, they are sometimes extinguished as a candle, and their destruction comes upon them in a moment. From mere providential events, therefore, nothing is to be inferred. Like things happen to all; to him that sweareth, and to him that feareth an oath. This seeming disorder will be cleared up in eternity.

Chap. XXII. 1-30. Eliphaz again stands forth in the same spirit as formerly, with even an increase of vir-lence. He interrogates Job directly, "Is not thy wickedness great? and thine iniquities infinite?" Having thus outraged all propriety, he proceeds to charge him with having taken a pledge from his brother for nought, and stripped the naked of their clothing; with having sent widows away empty, and broken the arms of the fatherless. Now, it had been impossible to frame anything more inconsistent with truth, as we shall subsequently see. If ever the poor, the widow, or the fatherless, had a friend, that friend was Job. Having thus insulted him, Eliphaz proceeds to preach to him in a manner but little calculated to bind up the broken heart. If 18 Yet he filled their houses with good things: but the counsel of the wicked is far from me.

21 Acquaint now thyself with ²him, and be at peace; thereby good shall come unto thee.

22 Receive, I pray thee, the law from his mouth, and lay up his words in thine heart.

23 If thou ⁰return to the Almighty, thou shalt be built up, thou shalt put away iniquity far from thy tabernacles.

24 Then shalt thou lay up gold ³as dust, and the gold of Ophir as the stones of the brooks.

25 Yea, ²the Almighty shall be thy ⁴defence, and thou shalt have ⁵plenty of silver.

26 For then shalt thou have thy delight in the Almighty, and shalt ⁴lift up thy face unto God.

27 Thou shalt ¹make thy prayer unto him, and he shall hear thee, and thou shalt pay thy vows.

28 Thou shalt also decree a thing, and it shall be established unto thee; and the light shall shine upon thy ways.

29 When men are cast down, then thou shalt say, There is lifting up; and he shall save ⁶the humble person.

30 ¹He shall deliver the island of the innocent: and it is delivered by the pureness of thine hands.

CHAPTER XXIII.

¹ Job longeth to appear before God, & in confidence of his mercy. ⁸ God, who is invisible, observeth our ways. ¹¹ Job's innocency. ¹³ God's decree is immutable.

THEN Job answered and said,

1 ²Even to-day is my complaint bitter: my ¹stroke is heavier than my groaning.

3 Oh that I knew where I might find him! that ⁴I might come even to his seat!

4 I would ⁵order my cause before him, and ⁶fill my mouth with arguments.

5 I would know the words which he would answer me, and understand what he would say unto me.

Job's friends, in the absence of all evidence, thus dealt with him to his face, surely we must not be surprised if our friends should sometimes act similarly behind our backs. God himself testifies at the outset, that "there was none like him on the earth, a perfect and an upright man, one that feared God, and eschewed evil;" and yet that man is traduced, impeached, and afflicted, by the ungovernable tongues of respectable men, professing to be his friends! When such wrongs overtake the Christian, he should not suppose that any strange thing has befallen him.

Chap. XXIII. 1-17. Job, as if weary of this war of words, proceeds to moralise on his condition, and consoles himself with filial thoughts of the mercies of his

CHAPTER XXIV.

¹ Wickedness often goeth unpunished. ¹⁹ There is a secret judgment for the wicked.

WHY, seeing times are not hidden from the Almighty, do they that know him not see his days?

2 Some remove the ²land-marks: they violently take away flocks, and ¹feed thereof;

3 They ²drive away the ass of the fatherless; they take the widow's ox for a pledge;

4 They turn the needy out of the way: the poor of the earth hide themselves together.

5 Behold, as wild asses in the desert, go they forth to their work, rising betimes for a prey: the wilderness yieldeth food for them and for their children.

6 They ²reap every one his ³corn in the field; and ³they gather the vintage of the wicked;

Father in heaven. He longs to see his face, tenderly remarking, "He will put strength in me." We cannot think too highly of the benevolence of God. Job goes to the true source of comfort: "He knoweth the way that I take: when he hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold." In ver. 11 he exemplifies the value of conscious integrity: "My foot hath held his steps; his way have I kept, and not declined." Blessed is the man who can thus speak, his conscience bearing him witness in the Holy Ghost that he speaks the truth.

Chap. XXIV. 1-25. Job returns to his former topic, arguing, that the wicked often go unpunished in the present world: they drive away the ass of the fatherless, take the widow's ox for a pledge, and add drunkenness

7 They cause ^dthe naked to lodge without clothing, that they have no covering in the cold;

8 They are wet with the showers of the mountains, and embrace the rock for want of a shelter;

9 They pluck the fatherless from the breast, and take a pledge of the poor;

10 They cause him to go naked without clothing, and they take away the sheaf from the hungry;

11 Which ^emake oil within their walls, and tread their wine-presses, and suffer thirst.

12 Men groan from out of the city, and the soul of the wounded crieth out; ^fyet God layeth not folly to them.

13 They are of those that ^grebel against the light; they know not the ways thereof, nor abide in the paths thereof.

14 The ^hmurderer, rising with the light, killeth the poor and needy, and in the night is as a thief.

15 The ⁱeye also of the adulterer waiteth for the twilight, saying, ^jNo eye shall see me; and ^kdisguiseth his face.

16 In the dark they dig through houses, which they had marked for themselves in the day-time: ^lthey know not the light.

17 For the morning is to them even as the shadow of death: if one know them, they are in the terrors of the shadow of death.

18 He ^mis swift as the waters; ⁿtheir portion is cursed in the earth: he be- holdeth not the way of the vineyards.

19 Drought and heat ^oconsume the snow waters; ^pso doth the grave those which have sinned.

20 The womb shall forget him; the worm shall feed sweetly on him: ^qhe shall be no more remembered; and ^rwickedness shall be broken as a tree.

21 He evil-entreateth the barren that beareth not, and doeth not good to the widow.

22 He draweth also the mighty with his power; he riseth up, and ^sno man is sure of life.

23 Though it be given him to be in safety whereon he resteth, ^tyet his eyes are upon their ways.

24 They are exalted for a little while, but are ^ugone and brought low; they are ^vtaken out of the way as all other, and cut off as the tops of the ears of corn.

25 And if ^wit be not so now, who will make me a liar, and make my speech nothing worth?

CHAPTER XXV.

Bildad sheweth that man cannot be justified before God.

THEN answered Bildad the Shuhite, and said,

2 ^a Dominion and fear are with him; he maketh peace in his high places.

3 Is there any number of his armies? and ^bupon whom doth not his light arise?

4 ^c How then can man be justified with God? or how can he be clean that is born of a woman?

5 Behold ^deven to the moon, and it shineth not; yea, the stars are not pure in his sight:

6 How much less man, that is a worm; and the son of man, which is a worm?

CHAPTER XXVI.

1 Job, reproving the uncharitable spirit of Bildad, 5 acknowledged the power of God to be infinite and unsearchable.

BUT Job answered and said, 2 ^a How hast thou ^bhelped him that is without power? how savest thou the arm that hath no strength?

3 How hast thou counselled him that hath no wisdom? and how hast thou plentifully declared the thing as it is?

4 To whom hast thou uttered words? and ^cwhose spirit came from thee?

5 Dead things are formed from under the waters, ^dand the inhabitants thereof.

6 ^e Hell is naked before him, and destruction hath no covering.

7 He stretcheth out the north over the empty place, and hangeth the earth upon nothing.

8 He bindeth up the waters in his thick clouds; ^fand the cloud is not rent under them.

9 He holdeth back the face of his throne, and spreadeth his cloud upon it.

10 He hath compassed the waters with bounds, ^guntil the ^hday and night come to an end.

11 The pillars of heaven tremble, and are astonished at his reproof.

12 He ⁱdivideth the sea with his power, and by his understanding he smiteth through ^jthe proud.

13 By ^khis Spirit he hath garnished the heavens; his hand hath formed ^lthe crooked serpent.

14 Lo, these are parts of his ways; but how little a portion is heard of him? but the thunder of his power who can understand?

to thirst; still the mercy of God spares them, so that nothing can be inferred from what takes place here. The judgment is to come, when it will be seen that the Judge of all the earth will do right, and every man will be dealt with according to his works.

Chap. XXV. 1-6. Bildad correctly enough argues, that man cannot be justified with God; and that a clean thing cannot be born of an unclean. His thoughts of God are noble and just, but inapplicable to the case in hand, since Job laid no claim to such justification; all he insisted on was, his integrity. The question of Bildad is best answered by the New Testament. We can now turn our eyes to the Lamb of God who hath taken away the sins of the world, and claim him as the Lord, in whom the seed of Israel shall be justified and shall glory.

Chap. XXVI. 1-14. Job again points to the futility of such discourse as that of Bildad, shewing how little it was calculated to "help him that was without power," or nerve the arm "that had no strength." Job's description of the operations and proceedings of the Great Eternal are just and lofty, beautifully harmonizing with

CHAPTER XXVII.

1 Job protesteth his sincerity. 8 The hypocrite is without hope. 11 The blessings which the wicked have are turned into curses.

MOREOVER, Job¹ continued his parable, and said,

2 As ^aGod liveth, who hath taken away my judgment; and the Almighty, who hath vexed my soul;

3 All the while my breath is in me, and the spirit of God is in my nostrils,

4 My lips shall not speak wickedness, nor my tongue utter deceit.

5 God forbid that I should justify you: till I die^b I will not remove mine integrity from me.

6 My righteousness^c I hold fast, and will not let it go; my heart shall not reproach me^d so long as I live.

7 Let mine enemy be as the wicked, and he that riseth up against me as the unrighteous.

8 For what is the hope of the hypocrite, though he hath gained, when God taketh away his soul?

9 Will ^eGod hear his cry when trouble cometh upon him?

10 Will he delight himself in the Almighty? will he always call upon God?

11 I will teach you^f by the hand of God; that which is with the Almighty will I not conceal.

12 Behold, all ye yourselves have seen it; why then are ye thus altogether vain?

13 This is^g the portion of a wicked man with God, and the heritage of oppressors, which they shall receive of the Almighty.

14 If his^h children be multiplied, it is for the sword; and his offspring shall not be satisfied with bread.

15 Those that remain of him shall be buried in death; and his widows shall not weep.

16 Though he heap up silver as the dust, and prepare raiment as the clay;

17 He may prepare it, but the just shall put it on, and the innocent shall divide the silver.

18 He buildeth his house as a moth, and as a booth that the keeper maketh.

19 The rich man shall lie down, but he shall not be gathered: he openeth his eyes, and he is not.

20 Terrors take hold on him as waters, a tempest stealeth him away in the night.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

1 There is a knowledge of natural things, 12 but wisdom is an excellent gift of God.

SURELY there is a¹ vein for^a the silver, and a place for gold^b where they fine it.

2 Iron is taken out of the² earth, and brass is molten out of the stone.

3 He setteth an end to darkness, and searcheth out all perfection; the stones of darkness, and the shadow of death.

4 The flood breaketh out from the inhabitant; even the waters forgotten of the foot: they are dried up, they are gone away from men.

5 As for the earth, out of it cometh bread; and under it is turned up as it were fire.

6 The stones of it are the place of sapphires; and it hath dust of gold.

7 There is^a a path which no fowl knoweth, and which the vulture's eye hath not seen:

8 The lion's whelps have not trodden it; nor the fierce lion passed by it.

9 He putteth forth his hand upon the rock; he overturneth the mountains by the roots.

10 He cutteth out rivers among the rocks; and his eye seeth every precious thing.

11 He bindeth the floods from overflowing; and the thing that is hid bringeth he forth to light.

12 But where shall wisdom be found? and where is the place of understanding?

13 Man knoweth not the price thereof; neither is it found in the land of the living.

14 The depth saith, It is not in me; and the sea saith, It is not with me.

15 It cannot be gotten for gold, neither shall silver be weighed for the price thereof.

16 It cannot be valued with the gold of Ophir, with the precious onyx, or the sapphire.

17 The gold and the crystal cannot his previous observations on the same subject. He felt himself and his race to be lost in the thought of the majesty of the Most High.

Chap. XXVII. 1-23. Job here displays a noble vehemence: "My lips shall not speak wickedness, nor my tongue utter deceit." It would seem as if the friends of Job thought of driving him into a course opposite to his convictions, when he magnanimously exclaimed, "God forbid that I should justify you: till I die I will not remove mine integrity from me." This is not vain boasting; it is the voice of truth. He could not suffer men to fasten on him the charge of hypocrisy, of which he had all the evidence of his own consciousness that he was not guilty: "My righteousness will I hold fast and will not let it go: my heart shall not reproach me so long as I live." Here is real moral grandeur. Truly the righteous are bold as a lion, and nothing can confound them. Job's portraiture of the hypocrite is awful, and deeply entitled to the consideration of every professor of the truth as it is in Jesus.

Chap. XXVIII. 1-28. Job here manifests his knowledge of natural objects, with which he blends some excellent thoughts and great truths, such as, "The fear of the Lord, that is wisdom; and to depart from evil is understanding." In our times, amidst multitudes, the study of nature is far more eagerly gone about than the study of nature's God. Among the world's wise men, and in the high places of the earth, we often meet with an ignorance which is astounding. It is, nevertheless, at once accounted for by the Apostle. The natural man equal it; and the exchange of it shall not be for ⁷jewels of fine gold.

18 No mention shall be made of ⁸coral, or of ¹pearls: for the price of wisdom is above ¹⁰rubies.

19 The topaz of Ethiopia shall not equal it, neither shall it be valued with pure gold.

20 Whence then cometh wisdom? and where is the place of understanding?

21 Seeing it is hid from the eyes of all living, and kept close from the fowls of the ⁹air.

22 ²Destruction and death say, We have heard the fame thereof with our ears.

23 God understandeth the way thereof, and he knoweth the place thereof.

24 For he looketh to the ends of the earth, and seeth under the whole heaven;

25 To make the weight for the winds; and he weigheth the waters by measure.

26 When ⁶he made a decree for the rain, and a way for the lightning of the thunder;

27 Then did he see it, and ¹declare it; he prepared it, yea, and searched it out.

28 And unto man he said, Behold, ²the fear of the LORD, that is wisdom; and to depart from evil is understanding.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Job bemoaneth himself of his former prosperity and honour.

MOREOVER, Job ¹continued his parable, and said,

2 Oh that I were as in months past, as in the days when ⁴God preserved me;

3 When ³his ²candle shined upon my head, and when by his light I walked through darkness;

4 As I was in the days of my youth, when ⁶the secret of God was upon my tabernacle;

5 When the Almighty was yet with me, when ⁴my children were about me;

6 When I washed my steps with butter, and the rock poured ³me out rivers of oil;

receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; they are foolishness to him. Neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned. If we know Christ we are safe, since that knowledge will bring with it life eternal.

Chap. XXIX. 1-25. Job, from the fulness of his heart, continues to pour out the tide of wisdom. He dwells pathetically on his former prosperity, when he "washed his steps with butter," and the "rock poured out oil." It deeply affected him to contrast his present with his former condition. Here he meets the cruel charges which had been brought against him concerning his conduct. The widow and the fatherless he delivered; the poor that cried, also, and him that had none to help him: the blessing of those that were ready to perish was upon him; and he caused the heart of the widow to sing for joy. He was eyes to the blind, feet to the lame, a father to the poor; and the cause he knoweth not, he searcheth out. Job's character throughout had sustained his profession. He abounded in works of faith and labours of love. He was a pattern and a light to heads of families and magistrates, and his example deserves the imitation of all Christians.

Chap. XXX. 1-31. If Job's language here be deemed somewhat elevated, we must remember his provocation. We have a description of the wicked Arabs, who, emboldened by his adversities, gathered together to insult and to vilify him. The time of affliction is often seized by the enemies of good men to heap insults on them. The wicked triumph in their affliction, generally manifesting a disposition, much resembling that of Job's friends, to consider it as the fruit of hypocrisy. Men, themselves conscious of no generous aspirations, have difficulty in believing that their neighbours are better than they.

3 For want and famine they were ²solitary; fleeing into the wilderness ³in former time desolate and waste:

4 Who cut up mallows by the bushes, and juniper-roots for their meat.

5 They were driven forth from among men, (they cried after them as after a thief.)

6 To dwell in the cliffs of the valleys, in ⁴caves of the earth, and in the rocks.

7 Among the bushes they brayed; under the nettles they were gathered together.

8 They were ⁵children of ⁶fools, yea, children of ⁷base men; they were viler than the earth.

9 And now ⁸am I their song; yea, I am their by-word.

10 They abhor me, they flee far from me, and ⁹spare not to spit in my face.

11 Because he hath loosed my cord, and afflicted me, they have also let loose the bridle before me.

12 Upon my right hand rise the youth; they push away my feet, and they raise up against me the ways of their destruction.

13 They mar my path; ¹⁰they set forward my calamity; they have no helper.

14 They came upon me ¹¹as a wide breaking-in of waters: in the desolation they rolled themselves upon me.

15 ¹²Terrors are turned upon me: they pursue my ¹³soul as the wind; and my welfare passeth away ¹⁴as a cloud.

16 And now ¹⁵my soul is poured out upon me; the days of affliction have taken hold upon me.

17 My bones are pierced in me in the night-season; and my sinews take no rest.

18 ¹⁶By the great force of my disease is my garment changed: it bindeth me about as the collar of my coat.

19 He hath cast me into the mire, and I am become like ¹⁷dust and ashes.

20 I cry unto thee, and thou dost not hear me; I stand up, and thou regardest me not.

21 Thou art ¹⁸become cruel to me; with ¹⁹thy ²⁰strong hand thou opposest thyself against me.

22 Thou liftest me up to the wind; thou causest me to ride upon it, and dissolvest my ²¹substance.

CHAPTER XXXI.

Job maketh a protestation of his integrity in several duties.

I MADE ¹a covenant with mine eyes; why then should I think upon a maid?

2 For ²what portion of God is there from above? and ³what inheritance of the Almighty from on high?

3 ⁴Is not destruction to the wicked? and ⁵a strange punishment to the workers of iniquity?

4 Doth not he see my ways, and count all my steps?

5 If I have walked with vanity, or if my foot hath hastened to deceit;

6 ⁶Let me be weighed in an even balance, that God may ⁷know mine integrity.

7 If my step hath turned out of the way, and ⁸mine heart walked after mine eyes, and if any blot hath cleaved to mine hands;

8 ⁹Then let me sow, and let another eat; yea, let my offspring be rooted out.

9 If mine heart have been deceived by a woman, or ¹⁰if I have laid wait at my neighbour's door;

10 ¹¹Then let my wife grind unto another, and let others bow down upon her.

11 For this is ¹²an heinous crime; yea, it is an iniquity to be punished by the judges.

12 For it is ¹³a fire that consumeth to destruction, and would root out all mine increase.

13 If I did despise the cause of my man-servant, or of my maid-servant, when they contended with me;

14 What then shall I do when God riseth up? and when he visiteth, what shall I answer him?

15 Did not he that made me in the Calamities are rendered all the more bitter, when they lead selfish friends of our prosperity to turn their backs upon us. In adversity, many such always disappear; while a true friend is occasionally found.

Chap. XXXI. 1-40. Job here, in a noble strain, delivers himself of a multitude of thoughts, suggested by present circumstances. The spirit of humility and equity is remarkably exemplified in ver. 13-15. How seldom have great men thus thought and thus spoken respecting such as ate their bread! The rest of the chapter is a continued recital of moral excellence and spiritual integrity, the whole presenting a picture admirably harmonising with the statement made at the outset of the Book, concerning his pre-eminent piety. Had Job lived now-a-days, and been thoroughly conversant with the Christian system in all its fulness, he could scarcely have exhibited more moral excellence than appears to have been produced by the elementary views of the Gospel which men possessed in his age and country.

CHAPTER XXXII.

¹ Elihu is angry with Job and his three friends. ¹¹ He reproves them for not confuting Job. ¹⁶ His seal to speak.

SO these three men ceased ¹to answer Job, because he was righteous in his own eyes.

2 Then was ²kindled the wrath of Elihu the son of Barachel the Buzite, of the kindred of Ram; against Job was his wrath kindled, ³because he justified ⁴himself rather than God.

3 Also against his three friends was his wrath kindled, because they had found no answer, and yet had condemned Job.

4 Now Elihu had ⁵waited till Job had spoken, because they were ⁶elder than he.

5 When Elihu saw that there was no answer in the mouth of these three men, then his wrath was kindled.

6 And Elihu the son of Barachel the Buzite answered and said, ⁷I am ⁸young, and ye are very old; wherefore I was afraid, and ⁹durst not shew you mine opinion.

7 I said, ¹⁰Days should speak, and multitude of years should teach wisdom.

8 But there is a spirit in man; and ¹¹the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding.

9 ¹²Great men are not always wise; ¹³neither do the aged understand judgment.

10 Therefore I said, Harken to me; I also will shew mine opinion.

11 Behold, I waited for your words; I gave ear to your ¹⁴reasons, whilst ye searched out ¹⁵what to say.

12 Yea, I attended unto you; and, behold, there was none of you that convinced Job, or that answered his words;

13 ¹⁶Lest ye should say, ¹⁷We have found out wisdom: God thrusteth him down, not man.

14 Now, he hath not ¹⁸directed his words

There seems reason to fear that, in the Day of Judgment, Job will rise to testify against multitudes, of whom better things might be expected, because of their vastly superior privileges.

Chap. XXXII. 1-22. We have now done with Job's three friends, who pertinaciously adhered to their preposterous assumption of hypocrisy to the last. They gave him up as a man that was hopeless, since he was "righteous in his own eyes." A new speaker here turns up, who adds very materially to the interest of the dialogue. Elihu, who displayed much modesty, set himself courageously to correct Job's three friends. He had been slow to speak, yet he could no longer be silent, clearly seeing that "great men were not always wise," and that "the aged did not understand judgment." As he viewed the matter, none of them convinced Job, or answered his words. He therefore determined that he too would also shew his opinion. He was full of matter, and the spirit within him constrained him to utterance. Intending to speak very plainly, he assigns the reasons: he could accept no man's person, neither give man flattering against me; neither will I answer him with your speeches.

15 They were amazed; they answered no more; they ¹left off speaking.

16 When I had waited, (for they spake not, but stood still, and answered no more.)

17 I said, I will answer also my part; I also will shew mine opinion.

18 For I am full of ²matter; ³the spirit ⁴within me constraineth me.

19 Behold, my belly is as wine which ⁴hath no vent; it is ready to burst like new bottles.

20 I will speak, that I may ⁶be refreshed: ¹I will open my lips, and answer.

21 Let me not, I pray you, ²accept any man's person; neither let me give flattering titles unto man.

22 For I know not to give flattering titles; in so doing my Maker would soon take me away.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

¹ Elihu offereth himself instead of God, with sincerity and meekness, to reason with Job. 8 He exhorteth God, by his greatness, from giving man an account of his ways. 31 He inviteth Job to attention.

WHEREFORE, Job, I pray thee, hear my speeches, and hearken to all my words.

2 Behold, now ²I have opened my mouth, my tongue hath spoken in my ¹mouth.

3 My words shall be of the uprightness of my heart; and my lips shall utter knowledge ²clearly.

4 The Spirit of God hath made me, and the breath of the Almighty hath given me life.

5 If thou canst answer me, set thy words in order before me, stand up.

6 Behold, I am according to thy ³wish ²in God's stead: I also am ⁴formed out of the clay.

7 Behold, my terror shall not make thee afraid, neither shall my hand be heavy upon thee.

8 Surely thou hast spoken in mine ⁶hearing, and I have heard the voice of thy words, saying,

9 I am clean without transgression, I am ⁵innocent; neither is there iniquity in me.

10 Behold, he findeth occasions against me, he counteth me for his enemy;

11 He putteth my feet in the stocks, he marketh all my paths.

12 Behold, in this thou art not just:

I will answer thee, that God is greater than man.

13 Why dost thou strive against him? for he ⁶giveth not account of any of his matters.

14 For God speaketh once, yea, twice, yet man perceiveth it not.

15 In ⁴a dream, in a vision of the night, when deep sleep falleth upon men, in slumberings upon the bed;

16 Then he ⁷openeth the ears of men, and sealeth their instruction, 17 That he may ⁸withdraw man from his ⁹purpose, and ¹hide pride from man.

18 He ⁶keepeth back his soul from the pit, and his life from ⁹perishing by the sword.

19 He is ²chastened also with ¹pain upon his bed, and the multitude of his bones with strong pain:

20 So that his life abhorreth bread, and his soul ¹dainty meat.

21 ²His flesh is consumed away, that it cannot be seen; and his bones that were not seen stick out.

22 Yea, his soul draweth near unto the grave, and ¹his life to the destroyers.

23 If there be a messenger with him, ²an interpreter, one among a thousand, ³to shew unto man his uprightness;

24 ⁰Then he is gracious unto him, and saith, Deliver him from going down to the pit; ¹I have found ²a ransom.

25 His flesh shall be fresher than ²a child's: he shall return to the days of his youth:

26 He shall ⁴pray unto God, and he will be favourable unto him; and he shall see his face with joy: for ⁷he will render unto man his righteousness.

27 He ⁴looketh upon men; and if any say, ²I have sinned, and perverted that which was right, and it profited me not;

28 He ⁶will ¹deliver his soul from going into the pit, and his life shall see the light.

29 Lo, all these things worketh God ⁶oftentimes with man, 30 ²To bring back his soul from the pit, to be enlightened with the light of the living.

31 Mark well, O Job, hearken unto me: hold thy peace, and I will speak.

32 If thou hast any thing to say, answer me: speak; for I desire to justify thee.

33 If not, hearken unto me: hold thy peace, and I shall teach thee wisdom.

titles. It becomes God's people to love as brethren, and to be courteous; but truth must never be sacrificed to mere politeness.

Chap. XXXIII. 1-33. Elihu now addresses himself to Job, with whom he reasoned very closely; at the same time, he somewhat misapprehended the spirit of his declarations. He nevertheless displays correct views of the justice of God in his dealings with men, well assured that the Judge of all the earth will do right. It clearly behoves the creature to take care how he sits in judgment upon the proceedings of the Creator. Man may occasionally, but God must be always right. Wherever, therefore, the Father and the children come into collision, the latter must give way. From his eyes nothing can be hid. The portraiture here drawn between ver. 15-30 inclusive, is very remarkable, shewing that then, as now, affliction was frequently employed as an instrument in leading men to the Lord, and thus effecting their salvation. The "one among a thousand," means persons well taught in the ways of the Lord. It thus appears, that the number of persons capable of dealing wisely with the afflicted, justifying his ways, and exhibiting his gospel, then, as now, was far from great. Ver. 27 points directly to a penitential spirit confessing sin, and acknowledging that it was unprofitable. Wherever this confession takes place, forgiveness follows, and restoration to the favour and friendship of God.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

1 Elihu accuseth Job for charging God with injustice.
 10 God Omnipotent cannot be unjust. 31 Man must humble himself unto God. 34 Elihu reproveth Job.

FURTHERMORE, Elihu answered and said,

2 Hear my words, ^aO ye wise men; and give ear unto me, ye that have knowledge:

3 For the ear trieth words, as the mouth tasteth meat.

4 Let us choose to us judgment; let us know among ourselves what is good.

5 For Job hath said, I am righteous; and God hath taken away my judgment.

6 Should I lie against my right? my wound is incurable without transgression.

7 What man is like Job, who drinketh up scorning like water?

8 Which goeth in company with the workers of iniquity, and walketh with wicked men.

9 For he hath said, It profiteth a man nothing that he should delight himself with God.

10 Therefore hearken unto me, ye men of understanding: Far be it from God, that he should do wickedness; and from the Almighty, that he should commit iniquity.

11 For the work of a man shall he render unto him, and cause every man to find according to his ways.

12 Yea, surely God will not do wickedly, neither will the Almighty pervert judgment.

13 Who hath given him a charge over the earth? or who hath disposed the whole world?

14 If he set his heart upon man, if he gather unto himself his spirit and his breath;

15 All flesh shall perish together, and man shall turn again unto dust.

16 If now thou hast understanding, hear this; hearken to the voice of my words:

17 Shall even he that hateth right govern? and wilt thou condemn him that is most just?

18 Is it fit to say to a king, Thou art wicked? and to princes, Ye are ungodly?

19 How much less to him that accepteth not the persons of princes, nor regardeth the rich more than the poor? for they all are the work of his hands.

20 In a moment shall they die, and the people shall be troubled at midnight, and pass away; and the mighty shall be taken away without hand.

21 For his eyes are upon the ways of man, and he seeth all his goings.

22 There is no darkness, nor shadow of death, where the workers of iniquity may hide themselves.

23 For he will not lay upon man more than right, that he should enter into judgment with God.

24 He shall break in pieces mighty men without number, and set others in their stead.

25 Therefore he knoweth their works, and he overturneth them in the night, so that they are destroyed.

26 He striketh them as wicked men in the open sight of others;

27 Because they turned back from him, and would not consider any of his ways:

28 So that they cause the cry of the poor to come unto him, and he heareth the cry of the afflicted.

29 When he giveth quietness, who then can make trouble? and when he hideth his face, who then can behold him? whether it be done against a nation, or against a man only:

30 That the hypocrite reign not, lest the people be ensnared.

31 Surely it is meet to be said unto God, I have borne chastisement, I will not offend any more:

32 That which I see not, teach thou me; if I have done iniquity, I will do no more.

33 Should it be according to thy mind? he will recompense it, whether thou refuse, or whether thou choose; and not I: therefore speak what thou knowest.

34 Let men of understanding tell me, and let a wise man hearken unto me.

35 Job hath spoken without knowledge, and his words were without wisdom.

36 My desire is, that Job may be tried unto the end, because of his answers for wicked men.

37 For he addeth rebellion unto his sin; he clappeth his hands against us, and multiplieth his words against God.

CHAPTER XXXV.

1 Comparison is not to be made with God, because our good or evil cannot extend to him. 9 Many cry in their afflictions, but are not heard for want of faith.

ELIHU spake moreover, and said,
 2 *Thinkest thou this to be right,

Chap. XXXIV. 1-37. Elihu displayed quite as much forwardness as judgment. Some of his observations relative to Job were far from well founded. Job had not said, "It profiteth a man nothing that he should delight himself with God;" on the contrary, he held that integrity was a pillar on which the soul might repose during storms and tempests, till the light of heaven should once more shine on the path of the just. Job never denied that the Lord would render to every man according to his ways. That which he affirmed it was meet that men should do, Job himself had done. He had in effect said, "I have borne chastisement; I will not offend any more. That which I see not, teach thou me. If I have done iniquity, I will do so no more." There is this, however, to be said for Elihu, that while Job's three friends accused him of hypocrisy, Elihu charged him only with an error of judgment. Elihu, however, in opening his mouth, forgot what was due to propriety as he proceeded; and hence we find him charging Job with having spoken without knowledge, and using words without wisdom; of adding rebellion to his sin, and multiplying his words against God. Such language was not warranted by the facts, and far from seemly in the mouth of one who was still young in years.

Chap. XXXV. 1-16. Elihu perseveres in the same that thou saidst, My righteousness is more than God's?

3 For thou saidst, ^bWhat advantage will it be unto thee? and, What profit shall I have ^cif I be cleansed from my sin?

4 I will ^aanswer thee, and thy companions with thee.

5 ^cLook unto the heavens, and see; and behold the clouds, which are higher than thou.

6 If thou sinnest, what doest thou against him? or if thy transgressions be multiplied, what doest thou unto him?

7 If thou be righteous, what givest thou him? or what receiveth he of thine hand?

8 Thy wickedness may hurt a man as thou art, and thy righteousness may profit the son of man.

9 By reason of the multitude of oppressions ^athey make the oppressed to cry; they cry out by reason of the arm of the mighty.

10 But none saith, ^aWhere is God my maker, who giveth songs in the night;

11 Who ^ateacheth us more than the beasts of the earth, and maketh us wiser than the fowls of heaven?

12 There they cry, but none giveth answer, ^abecause of the pride of evil men.

13 Surely God will not hear vanity, neither will the Almighty regard it.

14 Although thou sayest thou shalt not see him, yet judgment is before him; therefore ^atrust thou in him.

15 But now, because it is not so, ^ahe hath ^avisited in his anger; yet ^ahe knoweth it not ^ain great extremity:

16 Therefore doth Job open his mouth in vain; he multiplieth words without knowledge.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

1 Elihu sheweth how God is just in his ways, 16 and how Job's sins hinder God's blessings. 24 God's works are to be magnified.

ELIHU also proceeded, and said,

2 Suffer me a little, and I will shew thee that ^aI have yet to speak ^aon God's behalf.

3 I will fetch my knowledge from afar, and will ^aascribe righteousness to my Maker.

4 For truly my words shall not be false: he that is perfect in knowledge is with thee.

5 Behold, God is mighty, and despiseth not any: he is mighty in strength and wisdom.

6 He preserveth not the life of the wicked: but giveth right to the ^apoor.

strain of self-sufficiency, ascribing to Job views which he did not hold, and language which he had not uttered. Many of his observations, while true in themselves, are wholly inapplicable to Job. The closing verses of the chapter, however, comprise important statements as touching mankind at large. The wicked cry to the Lord in the hour of their calamity, but are not heard, because of their impenitence and unbelief. That cry has nothing gracious in it; it is the mere language of nature calling for succour. Such expressions are not, therefore, to be identified with prayer; true prayer never fails of an answer. The simple cry of distress, apart from a sense of sin and danger, must not be confounded with the prayer which has power with God, and obtains the needed blessing.

Chap. XXXVI. 1-33. Elihu reasons on the same principles, sincerely intent on justifying the ways of God; but not duly regardful of the claims of integrity on the part of Job. He discourses beautifully, however, on the goodness of the Lord in his regard for the poor and the needy, and his watchful protection over the 9 When I made the cloud the garment thereof, and thick darkness a swaddling-band for it,

10 And ⁷brake up for it my decreed place, and set bars and doors,

11 And said, ⁸Hitherto shalt thou come, ⁹but no further; and here shall ⁹thy proud waves be stayed?

righteous. He very happily also connects chastisement with transgression, shewing that it proceeds from fatherly affection, and that the seed of the righteous always find their account in walking in his ordinances and commandments. His views of the universe, as the dwelling-place of the Most High, are lofty and edifying. God's greatness exceeds all search, and his power nothing can withstand. While his favour is life, his wrath is destruction. Nothing can shelter from his rebuke. It, therefore, behoves all flesh to ponder well their goings, and to remember that in him they live, and move, and have their being, and that they must in due season render an account of the deeds done in the body, whether they be good, or whether they be evil.

Chap. XXXVII. 1-24. Elihu recognises the necessity for Divine teaching, because of our natural darkness. The bright light which is in the clouds fully indicates the fidelity of the Lord, and the peace which will not fail to follow the strifes and storms of this troubled world.

Chap. XXXVIII. The spirit of the whole chapter is this:—man is but a worm of the dust; his knowledge since thy days; and caused ¹the day-spring to know his place;

13 That it might ^mtake hold of the ^rends of the earth, that ⁿthe wicked might be shaken out of it?

14 It is turned as clay to the seal; and they stand as a garment.

15 And ^ofrom the wicked their light is withholden, and the high arm shall be broken.

16 Hast thou entered into ^pthe springs of the sea? or hast thou walked in the search of the depth?

17 Have the gates of death been opened unto thee? or hast thou seen the doors of ^qthe shadow of death?

18 Hast thou perceived ^rthe breadth of the earth? declare if thou knowest it all.

19 Where is ^sthe way where light dwelleth? and as for ^tdarkness, where is the place thereof, 20 That thou shouldest take it ^uto the bound thereof, and that thou shouldest know the paths to the house thereof?

21 Knowest thou it, because thou wast then born? or because the number of thy days is great?

22 Hast thou entered into ^vthe treasures of the snow; or hast thou seen the treasures of the hail, 23 ^wWhich I have reserved against the time of trouble, against the day of battle and war?

24 By what way is the light parted, which scattereth the east wind upon the earth?

25 Who hath divided a watercourse for the overflowing of waters; or a way for the lightning of thunder;

26 To cause it to rain on the earth, where no man is; on the wilderness, wherein there is no man;

27 To satisfy the desolate and waste ground; and to cause the bud of the tender herb to spring forth?

28 ^xHath the rain a father? or who hath begotten the drops of ^ydew?

29 Out of whose womb came the ice? and the hoary frost of heaven, who hath gendered it?

30 The waters are hid as with a stone, and the face of the deep is ^zfrozen.

31 Canst thou bind the sweet influences of ¹Pleiades, or loose the bands of ²Orion?

32 Canst thou bring forth ³Mazzaroth in his season? or canst thou ⁴guide Arc-turus with his sons?

33 Knowest thou ^athe ordinances of heaven? canst thou set the dominion thereof in the earth?

34 ^bCanst thou lift up thy voice to the clouds, that abundance of waters may cover thee?

35 Canst thou send lightnings, that

CHAPTER XXXIX.

1 Of the wild goats and hinds; 5 of the wild ass; 9 the unicorn; 18 the peacock, stork, and ostrich; 19 the horse; 26 the hawk; 27 the eagle.

KNOWEST thou the time when ^athe wild goats of the rock bring forth? or canst thou mark when the hinds do calve?

2 Canst thou number the months that they fulfil? or knowest thou the time when they bring forth?

3 They bow themselves, they bring forth their young ones, they cast out their sorrows.

4 Their young ones are in good liking, they grow up with corn; they go forth, and return not unto them.

5 Who hath sent out ^bthe wild ass free? or ^cwho hath loosed the bands of the wild ass?

6 Whose house I have made the wilderness, and the ¹barren land his dwellings.

7 He scorneth the multitude of the city, neither regardeth he the crying of the ²driver.

8 The range of the mountains is his pasture, and he searcheth after every green thing.

9 Will ^dthe unicorn be willing to serve thee, or abide by thy crib?

10 Canst thou ^ebind the unicorn with his band in the furrow? or will he harrow the valleys after thee?

11 Wilt thou trust him, because his strength is great? or wilt thou leave thy labour to him?

12 Wilt thou believe him, that he will bring home thy seed, and ^ggather it into thy barn?

13 Gavest thou the goodly wings unto the peacocks? or ^hwings and feathers unto the ostrich?

and his power are alike nothingness. His place is prostration before the Lord, in adoring gratitude for the mercies of the Covenant, and the hope of glory.

Chap. XXXIX. This chapter presents a grand descent on the works of God in the natural world, which are illustrative of his wisdom, power, and goodness. Men who are truly enlightened by the Spirit of God, will everywhere, on earth, in the sky, and on the ocean, find abundant materials for instruction, impression, and edifi-

16 She is hardened against her young ones, as though they were not her's: ^bher labour is in vain without fear;

17 Because God hath ¹deprived her of wisdom, neither hath he imparted to her understanding.

18 What time she lifteth up herself on high, she scorneth the horse and his rider.

19 Hast thou given the horse strength? hast thou ^kclothed his neck with thunder?

20 Canst thou make him afraid as a grasshopper? ¹the glory of his nostrils is ⁴terrible.

21 ⁵He paweth in the valley, and rejoiceth in his strength: ^mhe goeth on to meet the ⁶armed men.

22 He mocketh at fear, and is not affrighted; neither turneth he back from the sword.

23 The quiver rattleth against him, the glittering spear and the shield.

24 ^aHe swalloweth the ground with fierceness and rage; neither believeth he that it is the sound of the trumpet.

25 He saith among the trumpets, ^oHa, ha! and he smelleth the battle afar off, the thunder of the captains, and the shouting.

26 Doth ^pthe hawk fly by thy wisdom, and ^qstretch her wings toward the south?

27 Doth ^rthe eagle mount up ⁷at thy command, and make her nest on high?

28 She dwelleth and abideth on the rock, upon the crag of the rock, and the strong place.

29 From thence she seeketh the prey, and her eyes behold afar off.

30 Her young ones also suck up blood: and ⁸where the slain are, there is she.

1 Job humbleth himself to God. 6 God stirreth him up to shew his righteousness, power, and wisdom. 15 Of the behemoth.

MOREOVER, the LORD answered Job, and said,

2 ^aShall he that contendeth with the Almighty ^binstruct him? he that reproveth God, let him answer it.

3 ^cThen Job answered the LORD, and said,

4 Behold, I am vile; what shall I answer thee? I will lay mine hand upon my mouth.

5 Once have I spoken, ^ebut I will not answer; yea, twice, but I will proceed no further.

6 ^fThen answered the LORD unto Job ⁴out of the whirlwind, and said,

7 Gird up thy loins now like a man: I will demand of thee, and declare thou unto me.

CHAPTER XLI

Of God's great power in the Leviathan.

CANST thou draw out ¹Leviathan with an hook? or his tongue with a cord which thou ²lettest down?

2 Canst thou put an hook into his nose? or bore his jaw through with a thorn?

3 Will he make many supplications unto thee? will he speak soft words unto thee?

4 Will he make a covenant with thee? ^awilt thou take him for ^ba servant for ever?

5 Wilt thou ^cplay with him as with a bird? or wilt thou bind him for thy maidens?

6 Shall thy companions make a ban-cation. The eye is everywhere met with the varied works of the Father of mercies, whose love is as infinite as his power.

Chap. XL. The sum of the whole is, that Job had been contending with the Almighty, and he is now required to answer. Job, however, wisely cut short all controversy, by at once humbling himself under the Almighty hand. The Lord then gave him a lesson, teaching him his inability to think even a good thought, still more to save himself from the danger to which he was exposed.

Chap. XLI. The great ideas throughout impressed on Job are those of Divine power and majesty. The references are slight either to justice or mercy. The notions of justice, notwithstanding, were strongly inculcated on him, and hence we find him overwhelmed quiet of him? shall they part him among the merchants?

7 Canst thou fill his skin with barbed irons? or his head with fish spears?

8 Lay thine hand upon him, remember the battle, do no more.

9 Behold, the hope of him is in vain: shall not one be cast down even at the sight of him?

10 None is so fierce that dare stir him up: who then is able to stand before me?

11 Who hath prevented me, that I should repay him? whatsoever is under the whole heaven is mine.

12 I will not conceal his parts, nor his power, nor his comely proportion.

13 Who can discover the face of his garment? or who can come to him ²with his ⁴double bridle?

14 Who can open the doors of his face? ⁵his teeth are terrible round about.

15 His ⁴scales are his pride, shut up together as with a close seal.

16 One is so near to another, that no air can come between them.

17 They are joined one to another, they stick together, that they cannot be sundered.

18 By his neesings a light doth shine, and his eyes are like the eyelids of the morning.

19 ¹Out of his mouth go burning lamps, and sparks of fire leap out.

20 Out of his nostrils goeth smoke, as out of a seething-pot or caldron.

21 His breath ⁶kindleth coals, and a flame goeth out of his mouth.

22 In his neck remaineth strength, and sorrow ⁶is turned into joy before him.

23 The ⁶flakes of his flesh are joined together: they are firm in themselves; they cannot be moved.

24 His heart is as firm as a stone; yea, ⁸as hard as a piece of the nether millstone.

25 When he raiseth up himself, the mighty are afraid: ¹by reason of breakings they purify themselves.

26 The sword of him that layeth at him cannot hold; the spear, the dart, nor the ¹habergeon.

27 He esteemeth iron as straw, and brass as rotten wood.

28 The arrow cannot make him flee:

CHAPTER XLII.

¹ Job submitteth himself unto God. ⁷ God, preferring Job's cause, maketh his friends submit themselves, and accepteth him; ¹⁰ he magnifieth and blesseth Job. ¹⁶ Job's age and death.

THEN Job answered the LORD, and said, 2 I know that ²thou canst do every thing, and that ²no thought ¹can be withholden from thee.

3 Who is he that hideth counsel without knowledge? therefore have I uttered that I understood not; ²things too wonderful for me, which I knew not.

4 Hear, I beseech thee, and I will speak; I will demand of thee, and declare thou unto me.

5 I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear; but now ⁴mine eye seeth thee:

6 Wherefore ¹I abhor myself, and ¹repent in dust and ashes.

7 ¶ And it was so, that, after the LORD had spoken these words unto Job, the LORD said to Eliphaz the Temanite, My wrath is kindled against thee, and against thy two friends: for ye have not spoken of me the thing that is right, as my servant Job hath.

8 Therefore take unto you now ⁶seven bullocks and seven rams, and go to my servant Job, and ²offer up for yourselves a burnt-offering, and ¹my servant Job shall pray for you; for ²him will I accept; ¹lest I deal with you after your folly, in that ye have not spoken of me the thing which is right, like my servant Job.

9 ¶ So Eliphaz the Temanite, and Bildad the Shuhite, and Zophar the Na-by the thought of it. The ideas of the Divine power and glory cannot be separated. Rightly to comprehend the one, is to comprehend the other, and thoroughly to be influenced by both.

Chap. XLII. 1-6. With Job, power and justice would seem to be convertible terms. That which appears most to bulk in his mind, is Divine power, which led him to abhor himself in dust and ashes. His view of justice must, therefore, have been stamped by purity. Ver. 7-9. Eliphaz and his friends now find themselves in an awful and most unlooked for position. They are given to understand that they are all, and all alike, the objects of the Divine displeasure. This was a discovery for which they were not prepared; although so deep in error, they were obviously sincere, and seeing that they were so united, they were the more confirmed in the justice of their convictions concerning Job. They prove that men may be sincere in error as in truth, and that in attempting to judge the hearts of their neighbours, they may be very ignorant with regard to themselves. They had been professedly pleading for God; but now they are apprised that their conduct has been just so much transgression. Alarm was now added to humiliation; to avoid destruction, they were required to sue for the good offices of the very man on whom they had laboured to fix the charge of unparalleled hypocrisy! At their hands the Lord would neither accept prayer nor sacrifices: they must approach through Job, or perish! Never was erring zeal so reproved and confounded. With respect to Job, he had been gently re-proved, and he thoroughly humbled himself. His captivity was now turned; he was not only restored to his former prosperity, but received a vast addition to his mercies. Of Eliphaz, nothing is said by way either of praise or censure. His merits and his defects about mathite, went and did according as the LORD commanded them: the LORD also accepted ³Job.

10 And the LORD ¹turned the captivity of Job, ^mwhen he prayed for his friends: also ⁿthe LORD ⁴gave Job twice as much as he had before.

11 Then came there unto him all his brethren, and all his sisters, and all they that had been of his acquaintance before, and did eat bread with him in his house; and they bemoaned him, and comforted him over all the evil that the LORD had brought upon him: ^oevery man also gave him a piece of money, and every one an ear-ring of gold.

12 ^pSo the LORD blessed the latter end of Job more than his beginning; for, he

THE BOOK OF PSALMS.

The name of this wonderful Book, in the original, is "Praises,"—a term which clearly indicates what ought to be the character of metrical devotion. The Book is designated "Psalms of David," but a portion of it was, doubtless, contributed by others. While his name is prefixed to upwards of seventy, there seems reason to believe that many more proceeded from his inspired pen. The position assigned to David in this matter is so distinguished, that he is called "The Sweet Singer of Israel," and he himself expressly claims on his own behalf the honour of pre-eminence—"The Spirit of the Lord spake by me, and his word was on my tongue." In Old Testament times the Book of Psalms was incomparably precious. The New Testament writers have quoted nearly fifty of them, and the Lord Jesus himself specially appealed to the language of David as speaking under the influence of the Holy Spirit concerning himself. No other portion of Scripture contributes so largely predictions concerning the coming of Christ. Not a few of the Psalms are direct prophecies concerning his Person, Work, Sufferings, Resurrection, and Glory. This Book has been meetly considered an epitome of the Holy Scriptures, adapted to purposes of devotion. With that view, as was to be expected, special prominence is assigned to the Messiah. His advent, incarnation, birth, life, death, ascension, kingdom, and priesthood are all set forth with the utmost explicitness and with extraordinary beauty. The rejection of Israel, the calling of the Gentiles, the establishment, increase, and perpetuity of the Kingdom of Heaven, with much besides contained in Scripture, are all recorded in this precious Book. Piety is here exhibited in the most engaging forms, while we are presented with truths such as this world's wisdom could never communicate, in a style, for beauty and elevation, which no uninspired poetry can ever equal.

balanced each other, and so he was graciously passed by without rebuke. The results, then, if not the object of this wondrous and unparalleled affair, was to illustrate the sovereignty of God, and the character of man. That illustration was perfect and complete, and the narrative of it will remain to the end of all things a subject of the deepest interest, and a source of the most valuable instruction.

Psalms I. 1-6. Happiness and wickedness are wholly incompatible; sin and misery cannot be separated. If men are ever to know true bliss, they must be turned from iniquity. It is thus that the Gospel works salvation: the penitent sinner is justified by faith in the blood of Christ, and thus he obtains peace with God, and not only peace but joy. The regenerated soul is divested of its ruling carnality: it is no longer enmity against God, but subject to his law, in which it delights.

This is the test of the new birth; all who are born of God love both the law and the Lawgiver. Holy meditations are proofs of a holy mind. What was "law" with the Psalmist was the Gospel of the Old Testament dispensation, exhibiting mercy through sacrifice, forgiveness of sin, and the imputation of righteousness. The man who is led by the Spirit, and filled with love, will, according to his measure, bear fruit to the praise of grace. His soul will prosper, and he will hold on his way even to the end. Among mankind there are but two states—life and death; two characters—sin and holiness; and two portions—the blessing and the curse. These two characters are everywhere found throughout this Book; the bulk of the Psalms are taken up with delineating, comparing, and contrasting their moral likeness, and their ultimate destinies. The doom of the wicked is here set forth in terms of awful emphasis. The broad way inevitably conducts to perdition. To escape the the righteous: but the way of the ungodly shall perish.

PSALM II.

1 The kingdom of Christ. 10 Kings are exhorted to submit to it.

WHY ¹do the heathen ¹rage, and ²the people ²imagine a vain thing?

2 The kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together, ³against the LORD, and against his Anointed, saying,

7 I will declare ⁶the decree: the LORD hath said unto me, ⁷Thou art my Son; ⁸this day have I begotten thee.

8 Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession.

9 Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron; thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel.

10 Be wise now therefore, O ye kings; be instructed, ye judges of the earth.

11 Serve the LORD with fear, and rejoice with trembling.

12 Kiss the Son, lest he be angry, and ye perish from the way, when his wrath is kindled but a little. Blessed are all they that put their trust in him.

2 Many there be which say of my soul, There is ⁴no help for him in God. Selah.

3 But thou, O LORD, art ⁵a shield ¹for me; my glory, and ¹the lifter up of mine head.

4 ⁶I cried unto the LORD with my voice, and he heard me out of his holy hill. Selah.

5 ⁷I laid me down and slept; I awaked: for ⁸the LORD sustained me.

6 ⁹I will not be afraid of ten thousands of people that have set themselves against me round about.

7 Arise, O LORD; save me, O my God: for ¹⁰thou hast smitten all mine enemies upon the cheek-bone; thou hast broken the teeth of the ungodly.

To the ¹chief musician on ²Neginoth, A psalm of David.

2 O ye sons of men, ³how long will ye turn my glory into shame? how long will wrath to come, therefore, the sinner must not only stop, but return, and flee for refuge to the Cross of Christ.

Psalm II. 1-6. We have here a glorious prediction of the Lord Jesus Christ, with his conflicts and triumphs. The powers of the world from the beginning have been generally arrayed against the righteous. Attempts have been made, on a scale the most stupendous, to extirpate both the Jewish and the Gentile Church; but the result has uniformly been the overthrow of those who made them. David, as the type of Jesus, at the appointed time overcame every obstacle, and ascended the throne; and so it was with David's Son, and David's Lord. Ver. 7-12. The King of Zion, with his own lips, declares the Divine purpose concerning himself. By his resurrection, his Sonship was demonstrated; and, as the Father's Son, he was in the fullest sense a partaker of the Divine nature—"God over all, blessed for ever." Having finished transgression, and made an end of sin, as the reward of his work he is here instructed to ask the Heathen for his inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession. How clearly does this shadow forth the glory of the Lord in the universality of his kingdom! From the hour of his ascension the work has been either going directly on, or the field of the world has been preparing for the Gospel seed. The absoluteness of the language here used is fearfully impressive. The counsel and the caution tendered to the heads of the nations is well fitted to excite terror. But kings maintain their tranquillity, through ignorance or unbelief. The time will come, however, when all the sovereigns of the world will make these words the subject of their trembling meditation. This tremendous warning closes with the express announcement of the happy consequences which will result from the reception of the Gospel. This psalm is peculiarly fitted to strengthen the hands of all those, whether at home or abroad, who are concerned in advancing the Divine work of Christian Missions. These are the appointed means of accomplishing the predictions, and their ultimate success is certain.

Psalm III. 1-6. Here we have distress, prayer, and deliverance. David's troubles strongly shadowed forth the afflictions of the Church in times of persecution. Peace followed victory; the Divine hand was acknowledged, and experience of its power produced confidence and hope. Ver. 7, 8. The hearing and answering of prayer is the highest encouragement to the repetition of it. It is the never-failing resource of the people of God. Without it, there can be no spiritual success; with it, there are no limits to prosperity other than those set by faith in the suppliant. With more prayer we should have more victory. The Lord's blessing is ever on his people in proportion to their adoring gratitude for mercies past, and their prayerful confidence in respect of the future. Whatever is done for us, the Lord is the doer of it: his is always the battle, his the victory; his, therefore, must be the praise, while ours is the profit. The heart is slow to learn the best lesson that can be communicated to it, that salvation is from first to last, in all respects, of God; and that if his people are blessed, the blessing comes from him, and is the fruit of sovereign mercy, through his Son Christ Jesus.

Psalm IV. 1-5. The God of mercy is always the God of righteousness. Righteousness, whether imputed or impressed, is exclusively his work. The glory of man is to bear the image, to breathe the spirit of the Lord Jesus, and to love and serve him; but for this the wicked will hate and revile him, and use every means to make him ashamed of it. As this class of people talk more than ye love vanity, and seek after leasing? Selah.

3 But know that the LORD hath set apart him that is godly for himself: the LORD will hear when I call unto him.

4 Stand in awe, and sin not: commune with your own heart upon your bed, and be still. Selah.

5 Offer the sacrifices of righteousness, and put your trust in the LORD.

6 There be many that say, Who will shew us any good? LORD, lift thou up the light of thy countenance upon us.

7 Thou hast put gladness in my heart, more than in the time that their corn and their wine increased.

8 I will both lay me down in peace, and sleep: for thou, LORD, only makest me dwell in safety.

PSALM V.

1 David prayeth, and professeth constancy in prayer. 4 God favoureth not the wicked. 7 David, professing his faith, prayeth unto God to guide him, 10 to destroy his enemies, 11 and to preserve the godly.

To the chief musician upon Nehiloth, A psalm of David.

GIVE ear to my words, O LORD; consider my meditation.

2 Harken unto the voice of my cry, my King, and my God: for unto thee will I pray.

3 My voice shalt thou hear in the morning, O LORD; in the morning will I direct my prayer unto thee, and will look up.

4 For thou art not a God that hath pleasure in wickedness; neither shall evil dwell with thee.

5 The foolish shall not stand in thy sight: thou hatest all workers of iniquity.

6 Thou shalt destroy them that speak leasing: the LORD will abhor the bloody and deceitful man.

PSALM VI.

1 David's complaint in his sickness. 8 By faith he triumpheth over his enemies.

To the chief musician on Neginoth upon Sheminit, A psalm of David.

LORD, rebuke me not in thine anger, neither chasten me in thy hot displeasure.

2 Have mercy upon me, O LORD; for I am weak: O LORD, heal me; for my bones are vexed.

3 My soul is also sore vexed: but thou, O LORD, how long?

4 Return, O LORD, deliver my soul: Oh save me for thy mercies' sake.

5 For in death there is no remembrance of thee: in the grave who shall give thee thanks?

6 I am weary with my groaning; all the night make I my bed to swim: I water my couch with my tears.

7 Mine eye is consumed because of grief; it waxeth old because of all mine enemies.

8 Depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity; for the LORD hath heard the voice of my weeping.

9 The LORD hath heard my supplication; the LORD will receive my prayer.

they reflect, and hence persevere in their fatal course, the Psalmist recommends to them communion with their own hearts in secret, as a means of correcting their folly. Sinners shrink from heart converse; they shut out the thought of God. The sacrifices of the Old Testament were accepted only when accompanied by penitence, faith, and love; and the principle remains in full operation under the present dispensation. Ver. 6-8. All seek good; the Church of God alone finds it. When the light of his countenance shines on his people, the result is such discoveries of his mind in his Word, and his work in their hearts, as unutterably to refresh, confirm, cheer, and comfort.

Psalm V. 1-6. The matter of David's meditation was the matter of his prayer. The term here, however, signifies sighing, mourning, deep distress, which receives vent in prayer. The words betoken the utmost fervour. What is most in the heart at night, will be first in the thoughts in the morning, and will take a chief place in its supplications. As our prayer, like a dart, ascends to heaven, the eye of faith should follow it. Ver. 7-10. Happy the houses whose heads, when out, come home to worship in the fear of the Lord. As husbands, fathers, and masters, they will exemplify the power of grace and the beauty of holiness, diffusing good on every side. Our enemies prove useful to us when they excite us to watchfulness and prayer. A consistent walk will form our strong for-ness. He that walketh uprightly walketh surely. To be corrupt is to be weak—to be pure is to be powerful. Ver. 11-12. Christian men have great and immutable grounds for rejoicing. If their joy is small, and only transient, it is because they have but an imperfect comprehension of the blessings of adoption, or but feeble faith in the Divine testimony. Right views, firmly believed, fill the heart not only with peace, but with joy unspeakable, and full of glory.

Psalm VI. 1-7. This is the first of the Penitential Psalms. The language is expressive of the most intense anguish. The term "grave" often means the place of departed spirits, where they wait the resurrection of their bodies; but where the Lord is remembered, and worshipped by the spirits of just men made perfect: here, therefore, it signifies literally the resting-place of the body. Ver. 8-10. The voice of weeping seldom goes long unheard. Tears imply the faith and the fervour to which the promise is specially made. The Lord himself, our model in everything, in the days of his flesh, amidst his chief tribulations, offered up prayers, "with strong crying and tears." Few things act so powerfully on the soul as a clear answer to prayer, under circumstances of extraordinary affliction. It is the voice of the Lord himself speaking through a visible providence. But while the sight of it relieves and comforts the pious mourner, it confounds and exasperates his enemies. They are PSALM IX.

1 David praiseth God for executing of judgment; 11 he inciteth others to praise him; 13 and prayeth that he may have cause to praise him.

To the chief musician upon Muth-labben, A psalm of David.

I WILL praise thee, O LORD, with my whole heart; I will shew forth all thy marvellous works.

"ashamed, and sore vexed;" their predictions are falsified, and their malignity remains ungratified. The wicked are never more pitiable and contemptible than under such circumstances. No proof of inherent baseness can be stronger than their grief and rage at that which gives joy to angels, and which angels are often employed to effect.

Psalms VII. 1-9. Consciousness of danger and wickedness in the children of God prompts a hasty flight to the footstool of mercy. The best men must lay their account sometimes with being charged with the worst deeds; but innocence will ever find comfort in an appeal to the Searcher of hearts. It is a sign of grace to sigh for the extinction of wickedness in the earth, and the establishment of the truth as it is in Jesus. Ver. 10-17. The reality of piety is always most impressively displayed, and its consolations most abundantly enjoyed, amid afflictions. If the fire reveal the existence of the dross, it also proves the excellence of the metal. The praises of God, and the persecutions of men, are things which will always harmonise.

Psalms VIII. 1-9. The saints are despised by the world as babes and sucklings; but the praises of the Lord proceeding from their lips are terrible to the wicked. Their prayers have a power infinitely greater than the weapons of this world's warfare. Man, compared with the greater bodies of the universe, is an insignificant creature; but he bears the image of his Creator, which gives him a value that can be fully estimated only by redemption. From the Epistle to the Hebrews, it is clear that the Psalmist is here looking forward to the exaltation of human nature by the incarnation of the Son of God. This settles at once the question of the dignity of our race. For aught that appears to the contrary, it is the only species of being with which the Divine nature has ever been associated. The very thought should fire us with wonder, love, and praise.

Psalms IX. 1-13. Whether David worshipped, or fought, or ruled, he was never half-hearted; he threw his whole soul into everything. He was not less fervent in acknowledging deliverances than in praying for them. This is one of the most impressive proofs of the reality

2 I will be glad and rejoice in thee : I will sing praise to thy name, O thou most High.

3 When mine enemies are turned back, they shall fall and perish at thy presence.

4 For thou hast maintained my right and my cause ; thou satest in the throne judging right.

5 Thou hast rebuked the heathen, thou hast destroyed the wicked, thou hast put out their name for ever and ever.

6 O thou enemy, destructions are come to a perpetual end ; and thou hast destroyed cities ; their memorial is perished with them.

7 But the LORD shall endure for ever ; he hath prepared his throne for judgment ;

8 And he shall judge the world in righteousness, he shall minister judgment to the people in uprightness.

9 The LORD also will be a refuge for the oppressed, a refuge in times of trouble.

10 And they that know thy name will put their trust in thee : for thou, LORD, hast not forsaken them that seek thee.

11 Sing praises to the LORD, which dwelleth in Zion : declare among the people his doings.

12 When he maketh inquisition for blood, he remembereth them : he forgetteth not the cry of the humble.

13 Have mercy upon me, O LORD ; consider my trouble which I suffer of them that hate me, thou that liftest me up from the gates of death ;

14 That I may shew forth all thy praise in the gates of the daughter of Zion : I will rejoice in thy salvation.

15 The heathen are sunk down in the pit that they made : in the net which they hid is their own foot taken.

16 The LORD is known by the judgment which he executeth : the wicked is snared in the work of his own hands. Higgaion. Selah.

17 The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God.

18 For the needy shall not always be forgotten : the expectation of the poor shall not perish for ever.

PSALM X.

1 David complaineth to God of the outrages of the wicked. 12 He prayeth for remedy. 16 He professeth his confidence.

WHY standest thou afar off, O LORD ? why hidest thou thyself in times of trouble ?

2 The wicked in his pride doth persecute the poor : let them be taken in the devices that they have imagined.

3 For the wicked boasteth of his heart's desire, and blesseth the covetous, whom the LORD abhorreth.

4 The wicked, through the pride of his countenance, will not seek after God : God is not in all his thoughts.

5 His ways are always grievous ; thy judgments are far above out of his sight : as for all his enemies, he puffeth at them.

6 He hath said in his heart, I shall not be moved : for I shall never be in adversity.

7 His mouth is full of cursing, and deceit, and fraud ; under his tongue is mischief and vanity.

8 He sitteth in the lurking-places of the villages : in the secret places doth he murder the innocent : his eyes are privily set against the poor.

9 He lieth in wait secretly as a lion in his den : he lieth in wait to catch the poor : he doth catch the poor, when he draweth him into his net.

10 He croucheth, and humbleth himself, that the poor may fall by his strong ones.

11 He hath said in his heart, God hath forgotten : he hideth his face ; he will never see it.

12 Arise, O LORD ; O God, lift up thine hand : forget not the humble.

13 Wherefore doth the wicked contemn God ? he hath said in his heart, Thou wilt not require it.

14 Thou hast seen it : for thou beholdest mischief and spite, to requite it with thy hand : the poor committeth himself unto thee ; thou art the helper of the fatherless.

15 Break thou the arm of the wicked and the evil man : seek out his wickedness till thou find none.

16 The LORD is King for ever and ever : the heathen are perished out of his land.

17 LORD, thou hast heard the desire of the humble : thou wilt prepare thine ear to hear ;

and depth of his piety. Less grace is required for supplication than for thanksgiving, since the presence of evil is often more strongly realized than the sense of good. It becomes us, with David, to exult in the diminution of iniquity, whenever we behold it ; and to ascribe it to the power and grace of God. Ver. 13-20. Christians, like David, are seldom long delivered from one trouble till they find themselves overtaken by another. With fresh prayer will come fresh joy. There is difficulty in determining precisely the event to which the Psalmist refers ; but as used by Christians, it is applicable to any of those great movements by which error is overthrown, and truth established in the earth.

Psalm X. 1-11. Much is said of pride as an attribute of human nature. Nothing can be more unlike the meek and lowly Saviour. It can only be cured by regeneration, and the indwelling of the Spirit of God. Humility, in various measures, is always found in the breast of the "new creature." Pride is essentially atheistical ; it shuts out the great and mighty God, in order to the quiet indulgence of its own self-idolatry. Ver. 12-18. Heart work enters deeply into true piety. The Psalmist here presents the character of the Father in the most endearing light ; the orphan and the oppressed have a never-failing friend in God. But he fulfils his promise through the instrumentality of his children ; and, therefore, it 18 °To judge the fatherless and the oppressed, that the man of the earth may no more ⁶oppress.

PSALM XI.

1 David encourageth himself in God against his enemies.
4 God's providence and justice.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David.
IN the LORD put I my trust: how say ye to my soul, Flee as a bird to your mountain?

2 For, lo, ^bthe wicked bend their bow, they ^cmake ready their arrow upon the string, that they may ¹privily shoot at ^dthe upright in heart.

3 If the foundations be destroyed, ^ewhat can the righteous do?

4 The LORD is in his holy temple, ^fthe LORD's throne is in heaven: his eyes behold, his eyelids try, the children of men.

5 The LORD ^gtrieth the righteous; but ^hthe wicked, and him that loveth violence, his soul hateth.

6 Upon the wicked he shall rain ⁱsnakes, fire and brimstone, and ^jan horrible tempest: this shall be the portion of their cup.

7 For ^kthe righteous LORD loveth righteousness; his countenance doth behold the upright.

PSALM XIV.

1 David describeth the corruption of a natural man. 4 He convinceth the wicked by the light of their conscience; 7 and glorieth in the salvation of God.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

THE ^afool hath said in his heart, There is ^bno God. They are corrupt; they behave them studiously to endeavour, to the utmost of their power, to do to each other what he hath promised.

Psalms XI. 1-3. Putting our trust in God, we can well afford to set light either by the timid counsels of friends, or the insults of those who exhort us to flee as a bird to our mountain. Although conscious of the highest integrity, we must not be surprised if the wicked bend their bow at us. It is at grace, not sin, their aim is taken. Their very hatred proceeds from the difference they perceive between themselves and us. It is a tribute to our consistency. If we were of the world, it would love its own. Ver. 4-7. When traduced, it is our consolation that the eyes of the Lord are upon us, beholding our innocence. With approving consciences, we have nothing to fear; and however for a season the wicked may seem to prosper, sooner or later things will take a turn. We shall be vindicated, and they confounded.

Psalms XII. 1-8. When godly men, pillars of the Church, and patterns of excellence, are removed, it behoves survivors to cry to the Lord to raise up others to occupy their places. The loss of even one such man to a church has frequently been found a great calamity; and had they gratefully acknowledged the services of the departed saint, and besought the Lord in true faith to fill his place, they might soon have had cause to rejoice in acknowledging the fresh gift in a faithful and able office-bearer. While flattery is the opposite of slander, it is more dangerous, and may prove far more mischievous; in the sight of the Lord, therefore, both are sins, and it behoves us to view them as he does. Flattery is utterly incompatible with friendship. A faithful friend will often wound our pride by telling us the truth. The flatterer will not only conceal our defects, but extol us for excellences we do not possess. When bad men occupy high places, they generally surround themselves with persons bearing their own likeness. It is one of the greatest mercies, therefore, a country can enjoy to have God-fearing men to fill posts of honour and of power.

Psalms XIII. 1-6. It is probable that this mournful psalm was written during David's flight from Absalom, or at least had reference to that distressing period. For a season, his undutiful son was exalted over him. David, nevertheless, even then trusted, and he was not disappointed; although he was filled with the deepest grief at the death of his rebellious son, he had occasion to rejoice in his own restoration. Never man had greater reason to confess that the Lord had dealt bountifully with him. It so happened to David, that whatever adversaries he had to contend with for a season, he always ended well, whereas it was just the reverse with his enemies. If conscious of possessing a fair portion of David's humility, love, and confidence in God, we may encourage ourselves, that whatever disasters may befall us through the malice of the wicked, all will be right at last.

Psalms XIV. 1-7. The frequency with which David have done abominable works; there is none that doeth good.

2 The ^cLORD looked down from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there were ^dany that did understand, and ^eseek God.

3 They are ^fall gone aside, they are all together become ^gfilthy; ^hthere is none that doeth good, no, not one.

4 ⁱHave all the workers of iniquity no knowledge? who ^jeat up my people as they eat bread, ^kand call not upon the LORD.

5 There ^lwere they in great fear: for ^mGod is in ⁿthe generation of the righteous.

6 ^oYe have shamed the counsel of the poor, because ^pthe LORD is his refuge.

refers to what is going on in the heart of the fool and the wicked, is very remarkable. There is much more within them than comes forth from their lips; they are ashamed to utter all they think. They who are puffed up with notions of the dignity of human nature, may profitably ponder these verses. Paul has appropriated them in describing the state of mankind; and they remain as true, and as extensively verified, at the present moment, as when he wrote his Epistle. The poor never had, and they have not now, much good to look for from wicked men. Salvation for our lost world is deposited in Zion. It is for her to shine forth on every land, dissipating the darkness, and calling on the nations to behold their God. But that the Church may be a deliverer, she must be herself delivered. Her captivity to the world must be ended, and she must once more shake herself from the dust, and go forth "fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners."

Psalm XV. 1-5. This psalm presents a vivid portraiture of Old Testament sanctity. The people were not permitted to lose themselves amidst the forms of godliness while destitute of its power. They were given to understand that the Divine control extended to the whole man. The change of state comprised in justification was invariably connected with a corresponding change of character, known as sanctification. A title to heaven never existed apart from meekness for it. As then, so now, the faith that justifies is the faith which sanctifies. Wherever there is faith, it works by love; and wherever there is love, it labours to promote the Divine glory. This psalm, closely examined, will be found to present a beautiful embodiment of true Gospel piety. We do well to compare ourselves with it. If our thoughts, words, and deeds will bear the test, we may then have confidence towards God.

Psalm XVI. 1-4. Self-converse, when the heart is right, is always pleasant; and when it is otherwise, it is still profitable. How natural and child-like is the conference of the regenerated soul with God its Father in heaven! How sweet and tender the expression of feeling made in those verses! A man is known by his company. He that loves excellence, must be himself excellent. Although David's goodness extended not to the Lord, it did to his saints, in whom was all his delight. This finely illustrates the language of John: "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." No higher proof than this can be given of a new heart and a right spirit. The Heathens were accustomed to blend the blood of men with their sacrifices, and even to drink it. Ver. 5-11. He who has the Lord for his portion fares well, although he may own but little of this world's good. Well may all such acknowledge that the lines have fallen to them in pleasant places. It is a profitable exercise to dwell upon our mercies, remembering all the way by which the Lord hath led us, and all the good things he has conferred upon us. The closing part of the psalm clearly points to the resurrection of the Lord Jesus, which it depicts in a manner inimitably beautiful. What the Father shewed him he will shew us; and, after resting for a sea-

PSALM XVIII.

David praiseth God for his manifold and marvellous blessings.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David, ^athe servant of the LORD, who spake unto the LORD the words of this song ^bin the day that the LORD delivered him from the hand of all his enemies, and from the hand of Saul: And he said, ¹I WILL love thee, O LORD, ^dmy strength.

²The LORD is my rock, and ^fmy fortress, and my deliverer; my God, my ¹strength, in whom I will trust; ^gmy buckler, and ^hthe horn of my salvation, and ⁱmy high tower.

³I will call upon the LORD, ¹who is worthy to be praised: ^mso shall I be saved from mine enemies.

⁴The sorrows of death compassed me, and ^othe floods of ²ungodly men made me afraid.

⁵The ³sorrows of hell compassed me about; ⁴the snares of death prevented me.

⁶In my distress I called upon the LORD, and cried unto my God: ⁵he heard my voice out of his temple, and ⁶my cry came before him, even into his ears.

⁷Then ⁷the earth shook and trembled; the foundations also of the hills moved and were shaken, because he was wroth.

⁸There went up a smoke ⁸out of his nostrils, and ⁹fire out of his mouth devoured: coals were kindled by it.

⁹He bowed the heavens also, and came down: and ¹⁰darkness was under his feet.

¹⁰And ¹¹he rode upon a cherub, and did fly; yea, he did fly upon the wings of the wind.

¹¹He made darkness his secret place; his pavilion round about him were dark waters and thick clouds of the skies.

¹²At the brightness that was before him his thick clouds passed; hail-stones and coals of fire.

¹³The LORD also thundered in the heavens, and the Highest gave his voice; hail-stones and coals of fire.

¹⁴Yea, ¹²he sent out his arrows, and scattered them; and ¹³he shot out lightnings, and discomfited them.

son in the tomb, we shall emerge into the realms of light, life, and glory.

Psalm XVII. 1-8. The prayer which issues from feigned lips is lost labour. In proportion to our integrity, is the probability of our success. The prayer, indeed, may be sincere, and yet not wise. The Lord, in love, will not answer such prayer; but he will not count it as sin. Withholding what we seek, he will give us what we need. What we pray God to make us, we should labour to be; that in which we implore assistance, we should endeavour to do; for it is in thus acting that the power is imparted. Ver. 9-15. The portrait here drawn is very awful, and deeply admonitory to worldly men; whatever their wealth, they are poor beneath all poverty, since their portion is wholly confined to this life. In the life to come, nothing awaits them but simple existence, destitute of everything that could impart felicity. Viewed in the light of eternity, there is nothing to excite envy among the multitudes of the glittering great as they walk in their vain show. But a brief space, and they are gone whither they have been at no pains to lay up a good foundation against time to come.

Psalm XVIII. 1-50. This is one of David's noblest psalms, in which he gloriously rehearses the mercies of his God, and the achievements which, under the Divine Hand, he himself had been enabled to perform. But, under secular emblems, we have here the kingdom of the Lord Jesus shadowed forth in its power, glory, triumph, and universality. Spiritually viewed, it is the song of the great Redeemer himself, recounting the mercies of the Covenant, and all that had been done by the Father to establish him on the throne of his glory. The psalm is full of materials for the most delightful contemplation to the people of God, who have the deepest interest in all that appertains to the mighty enterprise 15 Then the channels of waters were seen, and the foundations of the world were discovered at thy rebuke, O LORD, at the blast of the breath of thy nostrils.

16 He sent from above, he took me, ^dhe drew me out of ^emany waters.

17 He delivered me from my strong enemy, and from ^ethem which hated me: for they were too strong for me.

18 They prevented me in the day of my calamity: ^fbut the LORD was my stay.

19 He brought me forth also into a large place; he delivered me, because he delighted in me.

20 The LORD ^grewarded me according to my righteousness; ^haccording to the cleanness of my hands hath he recompensed me.

21 For I ⁱhave kept the ways of the LORD, ^jand have not wickedly departed from my God.

PSALM XIX.

1 The creatures shew God's glory: 7 the word, his grace.

12 David prayeth for grace.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

of the world's salvation, in which it will be felicity to share; and that felicity will be increased by countless millions of their fellow-participants.

Psalm XIX. 1-6. This noble psalm rebukes the idolatry of the Gentile world. The universe is so impressively stamped with the indications of design, power, and goodness, that nothing is so inexcusable as forgetting that it must have had a Creator, and must have an Upholder, who himself is to be worshipped, and not the work of his hands. Ver. 7-14. The claim here put forth on behalf of the law of the Lord is very original; while in itself perfect, it has power to convert the soul of man, and to render wise even the simple. It rejoices the heart, and it enlightens the eyes. No such language was ever used by the ancients concerning either their poetry or their morality. Classic literature had no power over the spirit of man; never was a profligate turned into a sage by any effusions of theirs, whether spoken or written. The Gospel is alone the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. David here displays great knowledge of his own heart, and that knowledge frames his prayer. He is afraid of "presumptuous sin," and therefore desires to be guarded against it. The meditations of his heart were upon his conditions and relations, dangers and difficulties, and 5 Which is as a bridegroom coming out of his chamber, and rejoiceth as a strong man to run a race.

6 His going forth is from the end of the heaven, and his circuit unto the ends of it: and there is nothing hid from the heat thereof.

7 The ³law of the LORD is ^operfect, ⁴converting the soul: ¹the testimony of the LORD is sure, making wise the simple:

8 The ⁵statutes of the LORD are right, rejoicing the heart: the commandment of the LORD is pure, enlightening the eyes:

9 ¹The fear of the LORD is clean, enduring for ever: ¹the judgments of the LORD are ⁵true and righteous altogether.

PSALM XX.

1 The church blesseth the king in his exploits. 7 Her confidence in God's succour.

these supplied the words of his mouth, which formed its supplication. This is an example which the people of God do well at all times earnestly to imitate.

Psalm XX. 1-9. In this sweet song, the Church extols her King, praying in his behalf for such mercies as may tend to the completion of his glory. What heart is presented in these successive supplications! They bespeak the utmost love and the most intense desire. His salvation was the source of her joy—she desired to have none other. Such truth, power, and goodness, are proper objects for human trust. Her confidence, therefore, was implicit, and her hope ascended to heaven.

shadowing forth with feeble ray the glory of his kingdom. Some of the language employed in these verses applies to them, but in him alone it finds completeness. Ver. 8-13. Their enemies were an emblem of his enemies, and their vigilance of his. Although the Lamb of God, he is yet the Lion of the tribe of Judah; and the wicked who reject his mercy, will one day have to do with his justice. From ver. 11, we see that the authors of evil devices, although they have failed to accomplish their object, will be held responsible for their intentions. The Church in the closing verses desires the exaltation of the Mediator, avowing her determination to sing and praise his power. The very essence of song is love, and in proportion as we love the Lord Jesus, we shall delight to sing his praises, and nothing will more gratify us than the union with us of our friends for that purpose. Psalm XXII. 1-8. Here, at this early period, we find the Spirit of Inspiration preparing for the Lord Jesus the memorable words he uttered upon the cross. They may have been used by David in some of his deepest afflictions; but that their primary bearing is on the crucifixion, is beyond all dispute. Indeed, the whole of this psalm has reference to the Saviour, which has suggested a doubt whether even the words we have referred to were ever used by David. Ver. 9-22. Nothing can exceed the anguish depicted in these touching verses. They are in the highest conceivable degree expressive of human sorrow. Ver. 23-31. Here we have a wonderful turn. David's confidence in God's grace.

A psalm of David.

THE LORD is ^amy shepherd, I shall not want.

away, and the sorrowing suppliant once more becomes calm, and not only so, but joyful, praising the Lord himself, and calling upon others so to do. Ver. 27, 28 present one of the finest missionary views to be found in Scripture. The language is comprehensive of the whole human family, and, by consequence, the complete establishment of the kingdom of Christ.

Psalm XXIII. 1-6. The imagery of this sweet psalm is derived from pastoral life, and finely harmonises with the Saviour's view of himself as the Good Shepherd. He feeds the hungry, gives drink to the thirsty, and conducts them to rich pastures. Nothing is wanted to complete their happiness, and secure their safety. Constantly under his eye, his rod is stretched over them, and woe to those that seek to do them an injury! The idea of the earth as constituting one boundless pasture-land, where the Shepherd of Israel watches over his blood-bought flock, conducting them from this world of sin and sorrow to that of holiness and joy, is very grand. Let the saints, amid all their troubles and perils, think of these things, and receive from them the consolation they are so eminently calculated to impart.

Psalm XXIV. 1-10. It is believed that the transfer of the Ark to Mount Zion led to the penning of this noble psalm, which may be viewed as a prophecy of Christ and of his Church. The Ark is supposed to be moving, with the solemn marching of the whole of Israel, toward Mount Zion, and on ascending the mountain this psalm was sung. All this may be spiritually applied to the Church, and the ascension of the Lord to heaven. There is, we have reason to believe, no spot in the universe, save this globe, that has been degraded, on the one hand, by sin, and, on the other, dignified by the presence of the Saviour—"God manifest in the flesh." There is no hazard in affirming that there is no orb throughout the boundless expanse of creation, on which his own eye rests with so much complacency. Here alone he became incarnate, dying the just for the unjust.

Here he slept among the dead, and, raised again by the power of the Eternal Spirit, thence he ascended to the heavenly world, to take his place at the Father's right hand, making continual intercession for the object of his love.

Psalm XXV. 1-6. These verses illustrate David's habitual walk with God, with whom he converses as a child with a parent, unbosoming all his cares, and making known his many wants. Here he displays his deep sense of the need of the Divine teaching and guidance, without which he could not proceed. All true Christians, taught by the same spirit, have reached the same conclusions as to their helplessness and dependence. Ver. 7-22. It is impossible to walk with God, without being frequently reminded of our unlikeness to him. In his light we discover our own darkness, which prompts humiliation, confession, and recourse to the blood of sprinkling. Notwithstanding David's filial spirit, he was much troubled by the remembrance of his bygone transgressions. Thus he was reminded of his innate depravity, and the necessity of watchfulness and prayer. This is the best use that can be made of these painful recollections; and happy will every child of God be, in

PSALM XXVI.

David, in confidence of his integrity, resorteth unto God.

A psalm of David.

^aJUDGE me, O LORD; ^bfor I have walked in mine integrity: ^cI have trusted also in the LORD; therefore I shall not slide.

2 Examine me, O LORD, and prove me; try my reins and my heart.

3 For thy loving-kindness is before mine eyes; and I have walked in thy truth.

4 I have not sat with vain persons, neither will I go in with dissemblers.

5 I have ^dhated the congregation of evildoers; and will not sit with the wicked.

6 ^eI will wash mine hands in innocency: so will I compass thine altar, O LORD; proportion as he succeeds in rendering these recollections of the past subservient to future holiness.

Psalm XXVI. 1-12. There is a great distinction between felt corruption and positive transgression. Shortcoming is compatible with perfect sincerity. None have so developed the internal workings of depravity as the Psalmist, and yet none have more emphatically asserted the consciousness of truth in the inward parts. In this psalm we have a striking illustration. David had not sat with vain persons, nor gone with the dissemblers; he held in abhorrence the assembly of the wicked, and stood aloof from it to the utmost. Of all this David was conscious; and as he had done, so he continued doing: he would walk in his integrity, and look to the Lord for daily mercies. Here he is an example to all the faithful in Christ Jesus. There is no difficulty, in a general way, in ascertaining our own thoughts, aims, and objects; still less as it respects the character of those for whose company we have a preference. That company, therefore, is a glass in which we may severally see our own faces.

Psalm XXVII. 1-7. David here exhibits grace reigning in a remarkable manner. Filled with the fulness of God, he is fearless of his enemies, whatever be their number or malignity. It was enough that he felt himself guarded by the power of Omnipotence. His God was with him; and that sufficed to inspire the utmost confidence. In the pavilion of the Most High, he was far removed beyond the possibility of danger. Among the Orientals, the royal tent was the most secure place in the camp, being the best guarded. The Arabians pitched their tents in a circular form, the prince being placed in the middle. The rocks of Judea were impregnable; and within their cliffs, or caverns the remnants of armies frequently endured long sieges, and often from the impossibility of their being seized, made favourable capitulations. These facts supply beautifully expressive figures to illustrate spiritual objects. Ver. 8-14. David, forgetting outward things, and persecuting foes, here returns to spiritual intercourse with God. The ease and grace with which he constantly turns from the secular to the sacred, from earth to heaven, is astonishing. Although, while convinced that all the promises were yea and amen, yet he continually prays that they may be fulfilled; and this is a matter in which he deserves to be imitated by all the people of God. Ver. 10 is an orphan's text. Let every pious orphan receive it as specially his own; and let him add to it the 5 Because they regard not the works of the LORD, nor the operation of his hands, he shall destroy them, and not build them up.

PSALM XXX.

1 David praiseth God for his deliverance. 4 He exhorteth others to praise him by example of God's dealing with him.

A psalm and song at ^athe dedication of the house of David.

I WILL extol thee, O LORD; ^bfor thou hast lifted me up, and hast not made my foes to rejoice over me.

8 I cried to thee, O LORD; and unto the LORD I made supplication.

9 What profit is ^{there}in my blood, when I go down to the pit? Shall the dust praise thee? shall it declare thy truth?

10 ^aHear, O LORD, and have mercy upon me: LORD, ^abe thou my helper.

11 Thou hast turned for me my mourning into dancing: thou hast put off my sackcloth, and girded me with gladness;

12 To the end that ^cmy glory may sing praise to thee, and not be silent. O LORD prayer in the verse succeeding. This done with an honest heart, all will go well. Let all such be of good courage, for God will strengthen them.

Psalm XXVIII. 1-9. While David everywhere abounds in prayer, he is careful frequently to note the success of his supplications. How beautifully he connects the ideas of trust in the Lord, with the help and joy that proceed from conscious deliverance by a Divine Hand. It is the highest felicity to feel that we are objects of the Divine approval, and not only so, but of the Divine love. The Lord's favour is life, and his loving-kindness better than life; and therefore it is that his people praise him.

Psalm XXIX. 1-11. David was a diligent student of the works of God, as well as of the Word of God and the workings of his providence. To his poetic mind, in his inspired moments, all nature was robed in beauty. He beheld proofs of power, wisdom, and goodness, everywhere, and in everything,—on the earth, in the sea, and in the heavens. It is of the greatest moment that Christians should familiarise their minds with such contemplations, giving them always a strong evangelical aspect. Although we find grace only in the Bible, yet abroad we perceive a large amount of important truth. Nature and inspired knowledge mutually uphold and illustrate each other; and the highest form of religion is that in which both are combined.

Psalm XXX. 1-12. David at the outset celebrates the Lord's goodness in delivering him from one of his overwhelming calamities. There is difficulty in determining the precise event to which it refers; suffice it to say it was a great emergency; but it is full of instruction and consolation to the people of God under analogous circumstances. Let it be particularly noted that the deliverance was in answer to the prayer; he was brought to his wits' end, on the very verge of destruction, but he cried, and the Lord heard him, delivering him from all his distresses. While David knew what it was to be strong in the Lord, he also knew what it was to be my God, I will give thanks unto thee for ever.

PSALM XXXI.

1 David, shewing his confidence in God, craveth his help.
7 He rejoiceth in his mercy, 9 prayeth in his calamity,
19 and praiseth God for his goodness.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

In thee, O LORD, do I put my trust; let me never be ashamed: deliver me in thy righteousness.

2 Bow down thine ear to me; deliver me speedily: be thou my strong rock, for an house of defence to save me.

3 For thou art my rock and my fortress: therefore, for thy name's sake, lead me, and guide me.

4 Pull me out of the net that they have laid privily for me; for thou art my strength.

5 Into thine hand I commit my spirit: thou hast redeemed me, O LORD God of truth.

6 I have hated them that regard lying vanities: but I trust in the LORD.

7 I will be glad and rejoice in thy mercy: for thou hast considered my trouble; thou hast known my soul in adversities;

8 And hast not shut me up into the hand of the enemy: thou hast set my feet in a large room.

9 Have mercy upon me, O LORD, for I am in trouble: mine eye is consumed with grief, yea, my soul and my belly.

10 For my life is spent with grief, and my years with sighing: my strength faileth because of mine iniquity, and my bones are consumed.

11 I was a reproach among all mine enemies, but especially among my neighbours, and a fear to mine acquaintance: they that did see me without fled from me.

12 I am forgotten as a dead man out of mind: I am like a broken vessel.

13 For I have heard the slander of many; fear was on every side: while they took counsel together against me, they devised to take away my life.

strong in himself; in his prosperity he said he should "never be moved;" but when the Lord hid his face, trouble soon came, when he realised his danger and his helplessness. Then casting himself on sovereign grace, his mourning was turned into dancing, and he put off sackcloth to gird himself with gladness. Now that the storm was passed, the happy Psalmist recounted the steps of his affliction, pondering the way by which the Lord had led him, and blessing his holy name for the goodness and the mercy which had been made to pass before him. Let Christians behold the example, and profit from it.

Psalm XXXI. 1-24. In ver. 5 we have the words used by the Saviour, which clearly shew that the psalm pointed to him. Ver. 11-13 distinctly indicate an important period in his history, in a most affecting manner setting before us the mournful workings of his mind, and the malignant conduct of his enemies. Ver. 17, 18 beautifully recognise his own devotional spirit, and his anxiety for the removal of wickedness from before him. The exclamation of ver. 19 is particularly grand, and full of encouragement to trembling saints, surrounded by wicked men, who have the meekness and the fear, the prudence and the courage, to confess the Lord. No kind

PSALM XXXII.

1 Blessedness consisteth in remission of sins. 3 Confession of sins giveth ease to the conscience. 8 God's promises bring joy.

A psalm of David, Maschil.

BLESSED is he whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered.

2 Blessed is the man unto whom the LORD imputeth not iniquity, and in whose spirit there is no guile.

3 When I kept silence, my bones waxed old, through my roaring all the day long:

of service is so difficult as this, and there is nothing so richly rewarded. That reward is both present and future. They are safe, and beyond the reach of danger; and they will infallibly, in the end, find themselves in that glorious world, where there is nothing to hurt or destroy. The closing exhortation, to be of "good courage," is in keeping with the whole; and the assurance that the Lord will strengthen their hearts, is itself eminently calculated to invigorate them.

Psalm XXXII. 1-11. The doctrine of justification is here fairly propounded. That doctrine also, in its connexion with spiritual renovation, is set forth. The man to whom iniquity is not imputed is also a man in whose spirit there is no guile. The expression strikingly harmonises with the language of Paul, when he tells us "there is, therefore, now no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the spirit." We have here, then, a check on self-deception. That man may safely hold himself to be justified, he must also be conscious that he is being sanctified. Seeing that faith is the means of both, it is impossible that faith can operate with full power in justifying without sanctifying, or in sanctifying without justifying. Wherever sin is forgiven, it is hated; and a holy life is a sure demonstration of a holy heart.

Psalm XXXIII. 1-22. As an inspired poet, and the "Sweet Singer of Israel," David's passions and affections run constantly in the current of song. If sorrowful, he sings; if joyful, he sings. His song might be likened to a well-tuned harp, always ready to hymn the praises of its maker. Great principles blend with the simplest of his compositions. Here we have the important truth, that no king is saved by the multitude of a host, and that a mighty man is not delivered by much strength. David's doctrine had been abundantly exemplified by his experience. In the mighty conflicts he had sustained, and the victories he had won, he never made anything ¹⁷ An horse is a vain thing for safety: neither shall he deliver any by his great strength.

PSALM XXXIV.

¹ David praiseth God, and exhorteth others thereto by his experience. ⁸ They are blessed that trust in God. ¹¹ He exhorteth to the fear of God.

A psalm of David, when he changed his behaviour before Abimelech; who drove him away, and he departed.

I WILL bless the LORD at all times: his praise shall continually be in my mouth.

² My soul shall make her boast in the LORD: the humble shall hear thereof, and be glad.

³ O magnify the LORD with me, and let us exalt his name together.

⁴ I sought the LORD, and he heard me, and delivered me from all my fears.

⁵ They looked unto him, and were lightened; and their faces were not ashamed.

⁶ This poor man cried, and the LORD heard him, and saved him out of all his troubles, of numbers; with him it was the Lord who gave the victory, and accordingly to the Lord he ascribed the praise. The spiritual bearing of this is complete. For conflicts with the enemies of our soul we are strong or weak, not according to our talent, wealth, learning, or any other accidental circumstances, but according to our faith in the promise of the Most High.

Psalm XXXIV. 1-10. Among the manifold workings of grace in the heart of David, we frequently find holy resolutions such as that with which this psalm opens. Nothing can be more beautiful than the rapidity with which he blends joy with exhortation. Intent on serving the Lord himself, he would bring all the world to join him. Ver. 11-22. How paternally the great king exhorts the children to come for lessons! His tender and loving heart eminently fitted him for being a teacher of babes, and an instructor of the foolish. Ver. 19, 20 are full of gracious assurance and spiritual encouragement to godly people; however numerous and various may be their afflictions, they are certain to triumph over them all. No weapon that is formed against them can possibly prosper beyond the limit appointed of the Lord himself; and that reached, it will become an instrument of the destruction of the wicked who wield it.

Psalm XXXV. 1-10. It is believed that this psalm was written when David was persecuted by Saul. Nothing could be more groundless than the monarch's hatred; nothing more remarkable than David's patience. He was conscious, however, of his own safety, and also apprised of the coming destruction of his persecutor. He well knew that Saul's death, and his own elevation to the crown, were only questions of time, and therefore he determined to do nothing which should seem unduly to hasten the purposes of Providence, which were sure to ripen in due course. Ver. 11-28. The love and reverence with which David treated Saul on all occasions was wonderful. He never seems to have been aroused judgment, even unto my cause, ^cmy God and my Lord.

24 ^dJudge me, O LORD my God, according to thy righteousness; ^eand let them not rejoice over me.

25 Let them not ^fsay in their hearts, ^g'Ah, so would we have it: let them not say, We have swallowed him up.

26 ^hLet them be ashamed, and brought to confusion together, that rejoice at mine hurt: ⁱlet them be clothed with shame and dishonour ^jthat magnify themselves against me.

27 ^kLet them shout for joy, and be glad, that favour my ^lrighteous cause; yea, ^mlet them say continually, Let the LORD be magnified, ⁿwhich hath pleasure in the prosperity of his servant.

28 And ^omy tongue shall speak of thy righteousness, and of thy praise, all the day long.

PSALM XXXVI.

1 The grievous state of the wicked. 5 the excellency of God's mercy. dec. 10 David prayeth for favour to God's children.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David, ^pthe servant of the LORD.

THE transgression of the wicked saith within my heart, ^qthat there is ^rno fear of God before his eyes.

2 For he flattereth himself in his own eyes, ^suntil his iniquity be found to be hateful.

3 The words of his mouth are iniquity and deceit: he hath left off to be wise, and to do good.

4 He deviseth ^tmischiefs upon his bed; he setteth himself in a way ^uthat is not good; he abhorreth not evil.

5 ^vThy mercy, O LORD, is in the heavens; and ^wthy faithfulness reacheth unto the clouds.

6 ^xThy righteousness is like the ^ygreat mountains; ^zthy judgments are a great deep: O LORD, ^{aa}thou preservest man and beast.

7 ^{ab}How ^{ac}excellent is thy loving-kindness, O God! therefore the children of men ^{ad}put their trust under the shadow of thy wings.

8 They shall be ^{ae}abundantly ^{af}satisfied with the fatness of thy house; and thou shalt make them drink of the river of thy pleasures.

to anything like hatred, enmity, or revenge. The feelings with which he viewed the infatuated king were those of affectionate compassion; and, as we have seen, when his death was announced, it was no matter of rejoicing, notwithstanding the extraordinary change it was to work in his position.

Psalm XXXVI. 1-12. Notwithstanding David's hatred of the wicked, no one had ever more to do with them; and the wickedness which came before him was of a peculiarly intense and malignant character. The portraiture drawn in the opening verses of this psalm is very striking, and will be found true to the letter amongst wicked men up to the present hour. David's heart expands within him whenever he comes to speak of the Lord's mercies and faithfulness. The most stupendous objects in nature are necessary to supply similes. The Divine righteousness is like the great

PSALM XXXVII.

David persuadeth to patience and confidence in God, by the different states of the godly and the wicked.

A psalm of David.

FRET not thyself because of evil-doers, ^{ce}neither be thou envious against the workers of iniquity:

2 For ^{cf}they shall soon be cut down like the grass, and wither as the green herb.

3 ^{cg}Trust in the LORD, and do good; ^{ch}so shalt thou dwell in the land, and ^{ci}verily thou shalt be fed.

4 ^{cj}Delight thyself also in the LORD; and he shall give thee the desires of thine heart.

5 ^{ck}Commit thy way unto the LORD; trust also in him, and he shall bring ^{cl}it to pass:

6 And he shall bring forth thy righteousness ^{cm}as the light, and thy judgment as the noon-day.

7 ^{cn}Rest in the LORD, and wait patiently for him: fret not thyself because of him who prospereth in his way, because of the man who bringeth wicked devices to pass.

8 ^{co}Cease from anger, and forsake wrath: fret not thyself in any wise to do evil.

9 For evil-doers shall be cut off: but those that wait upon the LORD, they shall ^{cp}inherit the earth.

10 For yet a little while, and the wicked ^{cq}shall not be: yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place, and it ^{cr}shall not be.

11 But ^{cs}the meek shall inherit the earth; and shall ^{ct}delight themselves in the abundance of peace.

12 ^{cu}The wicked ^{cv}plotteth against the just, and ^{cw}gnasheth upon him with his teeth.

13 The LORD ^{cx}shall laugh at him; for he seeth that his day is coming.

14 The wicked ^{cy}have drawn out the sword, and have bent their bow, to cast mountains, and his mercy reaches unto the clouds. Ver. 8, 9 rank with the choicest gems of this wonderful book, and set forth with the greatest beauty the enjoyments and privileges of the saints,—a river of pleasures, and the children of God sitting on the brink, drinking the stream as it passes along. How beautiful the conception—how rich the privileges it indicates! The character here drawn of the God of Abraham is attractive in the highest degree. Amidst suffering and sacrifice, let Christians turn to these words, and apply them for their own consolation.

Psalm XXXVII. 1-40. This psalm is supposed to have been written to console the captives in Babylon. It presents a sweet and instructive blending of fact and doctrine, precept and promise. It may be designated a manual of devotion. Ver. 3-8, inclusive, supply the most precious directions for spiritual progress; and down the poor and needy, and ^ato lay ^bsuch as be of upright conversation.

15 ^aTheir sword shall enter into their own heart, and ^atheir bows shall be broken.

16 ^aA little that a righteous man hath is better than the riches of many wicked.

17 For the arms of the wicked shall be broken: but the LORD upholdeth the righteous.

18 The LORD knoweth the days of the upright; and ^atheir inheritance shall be for ever.

19 They shall not be ashamed in the evil time; and in the days of famine they shall be satisfied.

20 But ^athe wicked shall perish, and the enemies of the LORD shall be as the ^afat of lambs: they shall consume; into smoke shall they consume away.

21 The wicked borroweth, and payeth not again: ^abut the righteous sheweth mercy, and giveth.

22 For ^asuch as be blessed of him shall inherit the earth; and ^athey that be cursed of him shall be cut off.

23 ^aThe steps of a good man are ^aordered by the LORD; and he delighteth in his way.

24 Though he fall, he shall not be utterly cast down: ^afor the LORD upholdeth him with his hand.

25 I have been young, and now am old; ^ayet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread.

26 ^aHe is ^aever merciful, and lendeth; and his seed is blessed.

27 ^aDepart from evil, and do good; and dwell for evermore.

28 For the LORD loveth judgment, and ^afor-saketh not his saints; they are preserved for ever: ^abut the seed of the wicked shall be cut off.

29 The righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein for ever.

30 The mouth of the righteous speaketh wisdom, and his tongue talketh of judgment.

31 The law of his God is in his heart; ^anone of his ^asteps shall slide.

32 The wicked ^awatcheth the righteous, and seeketh to slay him.

33 The LORD ^awill not leave him in his hand, nor condemn him when he is judged.

34 Wait on the LORD, and keep his way, and he shall exalt thee to inherit the land: ^awhen the wicked are cut off, thou shalt see it.

35 ^aI have seen the wicked in great power, and spreading himself like ^aa green bay-tree:

PSALM XXXVIII.

David moveth God to take compassion of his pitiful case.

A psalm of David, ^ato bring to remembrance.

O LORD, ^arebuke me not in thy wrath: neither chasten me in thy ^ahot displeasure.

2 For ^athine arrows stick fast in me, and thy hand presseth me sore.

3 ^aThere is no soundness in my flesh because of thine anger; neither is ^athere any ^arest in my bones ^abecause of my sin.

4 For ^amine iniquities are gone over mine head; ^aas an heavy burden they are too heavy for me.

5 ^aMy wounds stink, and are corrupt, because of my foolishness.

6 I am ^atroubled; ^aI am bowed down greatly; ^aI go mourning all the day long.

7 For ^amy loins are filled with a loathsome disease; and ^athere is no soundness in my flesh.

8 I am feeble and sore broken: ^aI have roared by reason of the disquietness of my heart.

9 LORD, all my desire is before thee; and ^amy groaning is not hid from thee.

10 ^aMy heart panteth, my strength faileth me: as for ^athe light of mine eyes, it also is ^agone from me.

11 ^aMy lovers and my friends ^astand aloof from my ^asore, and my ^akinmen stand ^aafar off.

12 They also that seek after my life ^alay snares for me; and they that seek my hurt ^aspeak mischievous things, and imagine deceits all the day long.

13 But I, as a deaf man, heard not; and I was as a dumb man ^athat openeth not his mouth.

14 Thus I was as a man that heareth not, and in whose mouth are no reproofs.

15 For ^ain thee, O LORD, ^ado I hope: thou wilt ^ahear, O LORD my God.

throughout the subsequent part of the psalm we have others of a corresponding character. The wicked and the righteous are presented in striking contrast—the one as prospering only preparatory to destruction, and the other walking through trouble to thrones and glory. There are few cases of affliction in which the people of God can be placed, wherein they will not derive strong consolation and encouragement from this delightful ode.

Psalm XXXVIII. 1-22. The tone which pervades this psalm is one of the deepest sorrow, combined with contrition. The mind of the writer was clearly the subject of the most intense conviction of sin, and the greatest anxiety for the restoration of the peace he had lost, and the favour which he had forfeited. His enemies, as usual, were near at hand, and fiercely intent on his overthrow. These, however, he considers as instruments in the hand of the Lord, sent to chastise him for his transgressions. As the only method, therefore, of deliverance, he implores forgiveness, which he knows will bring along with it their destruction. David beheld something more than the mere enmity of man in his persecutions; he uniformly connected them with thoughts, words, and deeds which had displeased the 6 Sacrifice and offering thou didst not desire; mine ears hast thou ⁴opened: burnt-offering and sin-offering hast thou not required.

7 Then said I, ¹Lo, I come: ²in the volume of the book it is written of me,

8 ¹I delight to do thy will, O my God: yea, thy law is ⁶within my heart.

9 I have preached righteousness in the great congregation: lo, I have not refrained my lips, O LORD, thou knowest.

10 I have not hid ²thy righteousness within my heart; I have declared thy Lord. In this he is our example, and we will never err in imitating him. The way to cut short all controversies between God and the soul is to declare our iniquity, and to be sorry for our sin; for sin, confessed and forsaken, is sure to be forgiven. The Advocate with the Father, who shed his blood for us, will present our prayer, and secure our pardon.

Psalm XXXIX. 1-13. David, beyond all other inspired writers, reveals to mankind the secret history of his own heart. He is ever ready, as occasion may require, to record its workings, both towards himself and the Lord. The example is very important, for self-communion is one of the most successful methods of keeping things right in the soul, which cannot prosper long in the neglect of it. David felt what all good men feel, that the tongue is a member difficult to govern, while, nevertheless, its control is indispensable to peace and safety. David, amidst his victories and glory, never forgot that life is short, as well as uncertain, and that every man walks in a vain shew. The remembrance of this produced in him, as it will in us, the most salutary effects. It is needless to be greatly disquieted about the condition of a sphere from which we are so soon to pass away. If we are comfortable, still these comforts are mixed, while happiness in perfection awaits us; and if in trouble, these troubles will be sanctified while they last, and when they have accomplished their object, we shall be freed from them. The notion of a stranger and sojourner with God is as touching as it is beautiful. This is not our rest; our home is in the skies. There may, nevertheless, be reasons which induce the people of God—arising from the various relations they sustain, and their concern for his kingdom and glory—to pray that the Lord would spare them to recover strength, before they go hence and be no more.

Psalm XL. 1-5. The child of God, even when in a horrible pit, and sinking in miry clay, may yet have to wait patiently for the Lord. There are reasons for the delay, although he may not discover them. By this means confidence is tested, a sense of helplessness in-faithfulness and ^{thy} salvation: I have not concealed thy loving-kindness and thy truth from the great congregation.

11 ^{Withhold not thou thy tender mercies from me, O LORD: ^{let thy loving-kindness and thy truth continually preserve me.}}

12 For ^{innumerable evils have compassed me about; mine iniquities have taken hold upon me, so that I am not able to look up: they are more than the hairs of mine head; therefore my heart faileth me.}

13 ^{Be pleased, O LORD, to deliver me: O LORD, make haste to help me.}

15 Let them be ^{desolate} for a reward of their shame that ^{say unto me, Aha, aha!}

16 ^{Let all those that seek thee rejoice and be glad in thee; let such as love thy salvation say continually, The LORD be magnified.}

creased and the true spirit of the wicked not seldom illustrated. Infinite wisdom always selects the best time as well as the proper means of accomplishing its objects. The sufferings as well as the deliverance of God's people are often intended to promote the welfare of others. Many saw those of David, and, as a consequence, they trusted in the Lord. Ver. 6-10. The application of this language to the Saviour is rendered certain by its use in the New Testament. It is one of the finest passages in the Psalms, as shewing the utter worthlessness of sacrifice and burnt offering apart from the work which was to be done by the Saviour, and also illustrates the principles by which he was sustained in his mighty enterprise. Ver. 11-17. These verses record the experience of the Saviour when looking forward to the Cross, more especially to the awful scene of the Garden. Then, as now, the ruling desire of the faithful was, that in everything the Lord should be magnified. The course of Paul presents an affecting example: he was intent on this, whether by his life or by his death; he troubled himself but little as to the means, provided the end were accomplished. The trembling Christian has a cordial presented in the last verse; whatever his poverty, his need, or his sense of unworthiness, he may yet say, "The Lord thinketh upon me; thou art my help and my deliverer."

Psalm XLI. 1-3. The Book of Psalms throughout breathes a spirit of the most intense benevolence towards the poor. This is not to be wondered at, when it is remembered that the spirit of the Psalms is just the spirit of the Gospel—their very essence and compression. These three verses form the most remarkable portion of Scripture to be found in the Sacred Volume on this subject. An appeal is here made to the self-interests of man, which, it is shewn, will be best promoted by attending to the poor. Were all the opulent men of our land brought to the knowledge of the truth, and to the belief of these testimonies, the result would be the extinction of all genuine poverty, through a ceaseless stream of Christian bounty. Ver. 4-13. While David, beyond all other writers, abounds in the revelation of his own heart, he performs a similar part touching the hearts of men. The portrait of the selfish hypocrite here presented is perfect. Such a character excites loathing and abhorrence. An open enemy is a noble object compared with a false friend. But if such was the experience of David, and if the Son of God himself was betrayed by one who ate his bread, is it for ordinary Christians to complain of deception and treachery, and the return of evil for good? Not so; it is enough that the servant be as his Master.

Psalm XLII. 1-11. We have here the discovery of a heart under the most powerful spiritual influences. Such thirst for the living God is the highest conceivable proof, not only of true grace, but of that grace reigning. We cannot with certainty fix the period to which the Psalmist 4 When I remember these things, 'I pour out my soul in me: 'for I had gone with the multitude; I went with them to the house of God, with the voice of joy and praise, with a multitude that kept holy-day.

5 Why art thou 'cast down, O my soul? and why art thou disquieted in me? 'hope thou in God; for I shall yet 'praise him 'for 'the help of his countenance.

9 I will say unto 'God my rock, 'Why hast thou forgotten me? 'why go I mourning 'because of the oppression of the enemy?

11 'Why art thou cast down, O my soul? and why art thou disquieted within me? hope thou in God; for I shall yet praise him, who is 'the health of my countenance, and my God.

PSALM XLIV.

1 The church, in memory of former favours, 9 complaineth of her present evils. 17 Professing her integrity, 23 she fervently prayeth for succour.

To the chief musician 'for the sons of Korah, Maschil.

WE have heard with our ears, O God, our fathers have told us, what work thou didst in their days, in the times of old.

2 How 'thou didst drive out the heathen with thy hand, and plantedst them; how thou didst afflict the people, and cast them out.

refers, but it must have been one of extraordinary affliction. Some have thought that it was written during David's flight from Jerusalem on the rebellion of Absalom, which was doubtless the most sorrowful season of his chequered career. Nothing could be so unlike his former journeys to the house of God, with the voice of joy and praise, together with the multitude that kept holy-day, as his present condition, with its attendant flight, fear, and confusion. Yet even then hope was not extinct; he remembered his God, and endeavoured to comfort himself in the expectation of better times. It comes out here that his enemies looked upon his situation as a proof that God had cast him off. The leader of the rebellion was his own favourite son; and in this consisted, in no small degree, the bitterness and the gall of the insurrection. Add to this the fearful extent to which the nation itself, and even the inhabitants of Jerusalem, had discovered their hollowness. After a life of such service, success, patriotism, and glory, it might have been supposed that the venerable king would have occupied a large place in the affectionate and reverential confidence of the people; but when the occasion arose to test it, a very different state of things was revealed. The truth is, that David was now entering upon a second generation of subjects, who had not, like their fathers, been witnesses of his labours and his claims. The principle is one which applies to aged Ministers of the Gospel, and to all individuals who have successively occupied high public stations. The memory of pre-eminent services is soon effaced from the public mind; but it should suffice to comfort the deserving to be assured that their record is on high. Let them follow the example of Nehemiah, who, overlooking the nation, said, "Remember me, O my God, for good."

Psalm XLIII. 1-5. According to upwards of thirty ancient MSS., this and the preceding psalm were one. It would doubtless form an appropriate close to the previous lamentations. Besides, the last verse is but a repetition of two verses of the previous psalm, which constitutes a strong argument that they formed originally but one composition. When the Psalmist prays that light and truth may be sent forth to lead him, and guide him to God's Holy Hill and to his Tabernacle, he prays for the quelling of his enemies, and his own restoration to his rightful possession. In ver. 4 David shews the use that Christians should make of restored mercies in relation to worship. When the path is open to the altar of God, no time should be lost in going thither to praise his holy name.

Psalm XLIV. 1-8. The second generation of the Jews must have been greatly interested by the recital of the display of the Divine power witnessed by their fathers. Each was, in a measure, a historian of the mighty events attendant on the crossing of the Jordan the enemy; and they which hate us spoil for themselves.

11 Thou hast ^bgiven us ¹like sheep appointed for meat; and hast ^ascattered us among the heathen.

12 Thou ^csellest thy people ²for nought, and dost not ^aincrease thy wealth by their price.

13 Thou ^cmakest us a reproach to our neighbours, a scorn and a derision to them that are round about us.

14 Thou makest us ^aa by-word among the heathen, a shaking of the head among the people.

15 ^aMy confusion is continually before me, and the shame of my face hath ^bcovered me, 16 For ^athe voice of him that reproacheth and blasphemeth; by reason of ^athe enemy and avenger.

17 ^bAll this is come upon us; ^cyet have we not forgotten thee, neither have we dealt falsely in thy covenant.

18 Our heart is not turned back, neither ^ahave our ³steps declined from thy way;

19 Though thou hast sore broken us in the place of dragons, and covered us ^cwith the shadow of death.

20 If we have forgotten the name of our God, or stretched out our hands to a strange god;

21 Shall not God search this out? for ^che knoweth the secrets of the heart.

22 Yea, ^cfor thy sake are we killed all the day long; we are counted as sheep for the slaughter.

23 ^bAwake, why sleepest thou, O LORD? arise, cast us not off for ever.

24 ^cWherefore hidest thou thy face, and forgettest our affliction and our oppression?

25 For ^aour soul is bowed down to the dust; our belly cleaveth unto the earth.

26 Arise ^afor our help, and ^credeem us, for thy mercies' sake.

and entering the promised land. The evangelical spirit of the time is here fully set forth. It was neither the bow nor the sword of Joshua, nor his hosts, that vanquished the heathen, but the power of the Lord. In him, therefore, they boasted all the day, praising his name for his wonders and interposition. Ver. 9-26. These verses point to the persecution of the people of God, and we find ver. 22 actually applied by the Apostle Paul to the sufferings of his times. The sovereignty of grace is clearly indicated by the condition of the Church in ver. 17. A season of spiritual deadness appears to be depicted; for, notwithstanding these evils, they had neither forgotten the Lord, nor dealt falsely in his covenant: their heart had not turned back, neither had their steps declined from his way. This describes the condition of a community where the form of sound words is still held, and where the ordinances and commandments are observed with laudable regularity. Notwithstanding this, death prevails; the consolations of religion are abating, and the work of conversion is at a stand still, so that the kingdom of Christ makes no advancement. In a word, as we have it in ver. 24, "The Lord hides his face," and under these circumstances the soul of the Church may well be bowed to the dust, while her only help for deliverance is fervent supplication for a fresh supply of the spirit of grace.

Psalm XLV. 1-9. We have here David, amid a blaze of sunshine, happy, hopeful, and zealous. His mind is going forth to the kingdom of his Son and Lord, whom he implores to gird on his sword, and to go forth in his glory and his majesty, riding prosperously, because of truth, and meekness, and righteousness. Ver. 6 points directly to the Lord Jesus as the King of Zion, proclaiming his sceptre a sceptre of rectitude. The pure and perfect character of the Lamb of God, the Priest upon his throne, surrounded by an admiring and adoring world, is here delineated with high poetic beauty. Ver. 10-17,

PSALM XLVI.

1 The confidence which the church hath in God. 8 An exhortation to behold his works.

To the chief musician ¹for the sons of Korah, A song upon ²Alamoth.

GOD is ³our refuge and strength, ⁴a very present help in trouble:

² Therefore ⁴will not we fear, though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the ²midst of the sea;

³ Though ⁶the waters thereof roar and be troubled, though ⁷the mountains shake with the swelling thereof. Selah.

⁴ There is ⁵a river, the streams whereof shall make glad ⁶the city of God, the holy place of the tabernacles of the most High.

⁵ God is in the midst of her; she shall not be moved: God shall help her, ⁸and that right early.

⁶ The heathen raged, ⁷the kingdoms were moved: he uttered his voice, ⁸the earth melted.

⁷ The LORD of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is ⁸our refuge. Selah.

⁸ Come, behold the works of the LORD, what desolations he hath made in the earth.

⁹ He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth; he breaketh the bow, and cutteth the spear in sunder; he burneth the chariot in the fire.

¹⁰ Be still, and ¹¹know that I am God: I will be exalted among the heathen, I will be exalted in the earth.

¹¹ The LORD of hosts is with us; ¹²the God of Jacob is our refuge. Selah.

PSALM XLVIII.

The ornaments and privileges of the Church.

A ¹song and psalm ²for the sons of Korah.

GREAT is the LORD, and ³greatly to be praised ⁴in the city of our God, ⁵in the mountain of his holiness.

² Beautiful for situation, ³the joy of the whole earth, is mount Zion, ⁴on the sides of the north, ⁵the city of the great King.

⁴ For, lo, the kings were assembled, they passed by together.

⁶ Fear took hold upon them there, and pain, as of a woman in travail.

These figurative verses exhibit the Church in relation to her Head and Lord, and the provision which is made for the perpetuity of her children, and the maintenance of her glory. The spirit which pervades the psalm is one of holy felicity, and it is the privilege of every child of God to share it.

Psalm XLVI. 1-11. This psalm has, in the Protestant world, acquired a species of celebrity, from the fact that it was a favourite with Martin Luther. When enemies menaced, and friends forsook him, and those who remained were getting dispirited, the Reformer would say, "Let us sing the 46th Psalm." This may be viewed as Luther's War-Song, which never failed to reassure himself, and to revive the drooping spirit of his devoted associates. This fact is not without its value to God's children in every age. They will frequently have occasion to turn from earth to heaven, and they cannot adopt a better course than to imitate the example of Luther. Let all who are in trouble remember that God is their refuge, and a very present help; let them trust, and they will never be confounded. Amidst roaring waters, and shaking mountains, the Lord is present, and they are safe. The river whose streams make glad the Church of God is never dried up; and it is only for Zion's Pilgrims to drink, rejoice, and go forward. Ver. 9, on general grounds, is entitled to particular notice. It is a pledge for the establishment, over all the earth, of peace, and the utter destruction of warlike establishments. When the whole earth shall have been filled with the Gospel of love and mercy, it will extinguish the war-spirit, and people the earth with the brothers and the sisters of Christ, and the children of the living God.

Psalm XLVII. 1-9. This psalm is a burst of holy emotion, setting forth the wondrous things that Emmanuel will perform, in destroying the powers of darkness, and in setting up his own kingdom. When he shall have taken to himself his great power, and established his will over the heathen, then will his praise be sung with understanding, and all flesh shall bless his holy name. Amid the discouragements and the distractions of the present period, with its universal prevalence of Idolatry, Infidelity, and Falsehood, it is consolatory to look forward to the effects here predicted, which, in due season, will be realised. Wickedness will assuredly have an end, and the reign of Equity be established.

Psalm XLVIII. 1-14. The Psalmist here, with great power, celebrates the beauty of Zion, and her relation to her Almighty King. What Jerusalem was to surrounding nations, in the days of David and Solomon, that will the true Church ultimately be to the heathen world—an object of fear, confidence, and admiration, until nation after nation shall be quickened, enlightened, converted, kindness, O God, ¹in the midst of thy temple.

10 ¹According to thy name, O God, so is thy praise unto the ends of the earth: ²thy right hand is full of righteousness.

11 Let mount Zion rejoice, let ²the daughters of Judah be glad, because of thy judgments.

12 ¹Walk about Zion, and go round about her: ²tell the towers thereof.

13 ²Mark ye well her bulwarks, ³consider her palaces; that ye may tell it to the generation following.

14 For this God is our God for ever and ever: he will be our guide even unto death.

¹ An earnest persuasion to build the faith of resurrection, not on worldly power, but on God. 16 Worldly prosperity is not to be admired.

To the chief musician, A psalm ¹for the sons of Korah.

2 Both low and high, rich and poor, together.

3 My mouth shall speak of wisdom; and ²the meditation of my heart shall be of understanding.

4 ¹I will incline mine ear to ²a parable; I will open my ³dark saying upon the harp.

¹ The majesty of God in the church. ⁵ His order to gather saints. ⁷ The pleasure of God is not in ceremonies, ¹⁴ but in sincerity of obedience.

A psalm of ¹Asaph.

THE mighty God, even the Lord, ²hath spoken, and called the earth, from the rising of the sun unto the going down thereof.

2 ¹Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined.

3 ¹Our God shall come, and shall not keep silence: ²a fire shall devour before him, and it shall be very tempestuous round about him.

4 He shall call to the heavens from above, and to the earth, that he may judge his people.

5 Gather ¹my saints together unto me; those that have ²made a covenant with me by sacrifice.

6 And ¹the heavens shall declare his righteousness: for ²God is judge himself. Selah.

7 Hear, O my people, and I will speak; O Israel, and I will testify against thee: ¹I am God, even thy God.

8 I will not reprove thee for thy sacri-and brought into the bosom of the true Church. A lamp shining and a fire burning are meet emblems of the Church of Christ, with the Lord in the midst of her, and the Eternal Spirit poured down with Pentecostal abundance. Almighty power is pledged for her protection, and Almighty wisdom for her guidance. Whatever changes may take place regarding the Christian Church, they will all be found in harmony with the plans of Infinite Love; and each event will but prove the precursor and the instrument of something future, all helping on the great consummation.

Psalm XLIX. 1-20. David here casts his eye abroad upon the earth, marking the ways of man. He was deeply impressed with the vanity of riches, and of their impotency to preserve from death, or to benefit the soul. The wise and the fool, the rich and the poor, were alike doomed to death, and, by consequence, alike dependent on the grace that saves, and the Power that raises from the dead. The picture here drawn is deeply humbling; but to the people of God it is eminently fitted to edify. We need to have our hearts called away from the world, with its snares and temptations. The fears are great and constant that the claims of eternity will be overlooked, and hence the necessity of ceaseless admonition. The practical lesson of such meditations as these is, that men should use the world as not abusing it, inasmuch as the fashion of it passeth away.

Psalm L. 1-15. This psalm, which opens with great sublimity, recognises, in ver. 5, the Gospel and the Church with much explicitness. Sacrifice had always reference to the covenant which was established with Abraham, and which had for its principal object the atonement of the Lord Jesus Christ, the means of God's righteousness in forgiving the iniquity of men. The fices, or thy burnt-offerings, to have been continually before me.

9 I will ¹take no bullock out of thy house, nor he-goats out of thy folds:

10 For ¹every beast of the forest is mine, and ²the cattle upon a thousand hills.

11 I ¹know all the fowls of the mountains; and ²the wild beasts of the field are ³mine.

12 If I were hungry, I would not tell thee: for the world is mine, and the fulness thereof.

13 Will I eat the flesh of bulls, or drink the blood of goats?

14 Offer unto God thanksgiving; and ¹pay thy vows unto the most High:

15 And call upon me in the day of trouble; ¹I will deliver thee, and thou shalt ²glorify me.

16 But unto ¹the wicked God saith, What hast thou to do to declare my statutes, or ²that thou shouldest take my covenant in thy mouth?

17 Seeing thou ¹hatest instruction, and castest my words behind thee.

18 When thou sawest a thief, then ¹thou consentedst with him, and ²hast been ³partaker with adulterers.

19 Thou ¹givest thy mouth to evil, and ²thy tongue frameth deceit.

20 Thou sittest and speakest against thy brother; thou slanderest thine own mother's son.

21 These ¹things hast thou done, and I kept silence; thou thoughtest that I was altogether ²such an one as thyself: but ¹I will reprove thee, and ²set them in order before thine eyes.

22 Now consider this, ye that ¹forget God, lest I tear you in pieces, and there be none to deliver.

23 Whoso offereth praise glorifieth me: and to him that ¹ordereth his conversation ²aright will I shew ³the salvation of God.

2 ¹Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity, and ²cleanse me from my sin.

3 For ¹I acknowledge my transgressions: and ²my sin is ever before me.

4 Against thee, thee only, have I sinned, and done ¹this evil in thy sight; that thou mightest be justified when thou speakest, and be clear when thou judgest.

5 Behold, ¹I was shapen in iniquity; and in sin did my mother ²conceive me.

6 Behold, thou desirest truth in the inward parts; and ¹in the hidden part thou shalt make me to know wisdom.

19 Then shalt thou be pleased with the sacrifices of righteousness, with burnt-offering, and whole burnt-offering: then shall they offer bullocks upon thine altar.

Psalmist here exposes the dangers of formality. Sacrifice had no value apart from Christ, and it had, wherever it became available through faith, a marvellous effect on the temper and deportment of the believer. Thanksgiving, therefore, must not be forgotten, and the vows made to the Most High must be paid. Privilege and character were inseparable. They who sustained the character here drawn, might with certainty, in the day of trouble, call upon the Lord, who would give them abundant cause to glorify him. Ver. 16-23. There is here a severe censure passed on ungodly teachers. It is assumed that such men not only might, but did exist, and their doom is awfully delineated. To offer praise, was to glorify God; and to order the conversation aright, was to obtain the blessings of the Gospel salvation.

Psalm LI. 1-19. This occupies a chief place among the Penitential Psalms, and, as such, it has been of unspeakable service to the Church of God in every age. It presents a perfect example of repentance. Nothing can exceed the depth and contrition it displays. There is no attempt at either concealment of sin or palliation of guilt. The royal penitent abhors himself in dust and ashes. Even existence seems intolerable to him; he feels unworthy to live. But while he traces his transgression to its principal source, he looks upwards to the Father of spirits for help under the emergency. He approaches the mercy-seat as a man who has not only forfeited the privileges of adoption, but subjected himself to the severest chastisement, throwing himself on sovereign mercy. It is interesting to observe how concern for the glory of God mingles with solicitude for his own deliverance. "The joys of salvation" once restored, he will be in a condition to "teach transgressors," with a view to their conversion, and he avows his determination so to do. With this he combines heartfelt prayer to PSALM LII.

1 David, condemning the spitefulness of Doeg, prophesieth his destruction; 6 the righteous shall rejoice at it.

To the chief musician, Maschil, A psalm of David, when ^aDoeg the Edomite came and ^btold Saul, and said unto him, David is come to the house of Ahimelech.

WHY ^aboatest thou thyself in mischief, O mighty man? the goodness of God endureth continually.

2 Thy tongue deviseth mischiefs; ^alike a sharp razor, working deceitfully.

3 Thou ^alovest evil more than good, and ^alying rather than to speak righteousness. Selah.

4 Thou lovest all-devouring words, ^aO thou deceitful tongue.

5 God shall likewise destroy thee for ever: he shall take thee away, and pluck thee out of thy dwelling-place, and root thee out of the land of the living. Selah.

6 The righteous also shall see, and fear, and shall laugh at him:

7 Lo, this is the man that ^amade not God his strength; but ^btrusted in the abundance of his riches, and ^astrengthened himself in his wickedness.

8 But I am like a green olive-tree in the house of God: ^aI trust in the mercy of God for ever and ever.

9 ^aI will praise thee for ever, because thou hast done it: and I will ^await on thy name; ^afor it is good before thy saints.

PSALM LIII.

1 David describeth the corruption of a natural man; 4 he convinceth the wicked by the light of their own consciences; 6 he glorieth in the salvation of God.

the God of Zion, for the building up of the walls of Jerusalem. David points out the duty of all penitents, on their restoration to the Divine favour, to double their diligence, that they may repair the wrongs they have done to the cause of God.

Psalm LII. 1-9. Among David's manifold afflictions, few things distressed him more than the deceitful tongue; and amongst his greatest mercies he considered being hid from the scourge of it. He here draws the portrait of a man, rich in wealth, and reckless in language, who trusted not in God, but in the abundance of his riches; thus strengthening himself in wickedness, and turning that into a curse which might have been a blessing. David walked not in this man's ways, he trusted in the mercy of his God, spending his days in praise and thanksgivings. David was a student of society, laying all classes under tribute for purposes of spiritual improvement; and we do well to follow his godly example.

Psalm LIII. 1-6. It everywhere comes out in this blessed Book, that the heart governs the head, rather than the head the heart. It is corruption which leads to Atheism. Thus, these only desire there should be PSALM LV.

1 David complaineth of his fearful case. 9 He prayeth against his enemies. 16 He comforteth himself in God's preservation of him, and confusion of his enemies.

To the chief musician on ^aNeginoth, Maschil, A psalm of David.

GIVE ear to my prayer, O God; and ^ahide not thyself from my supplication.

"no God," who have every reason to fear a God of truth and justice. It deserves to be noted how entirely inspired poets, prophets, and apostles agree in their views of human nature. In both Testaments, and among all the writers, the harmony is complete. David knew that Zion, as the dwelling-place of God, was the source of salvation to mankind. Whatever good shall be done, for either Jew or Gentile, the power must proceed thence. The Church is the body of Christ, and through that body his Spirit works out his predestined purposes of mercy.

Psalm LIV. 1-7. All David's difficulties arose from the wicked—from men who have not set God before them. So it is still with Christians generally. In every natural man, the saint has a natural enemy. That enemy may not always break out, it is even compatible with good-will and good offices; but the principle is there—nothing is wanted but circumstances to fan it into a flame. Two cannot walk together except they be agreed, and between light and darkness, truth and error, heaven and hell, there can be no concord.

Psalm LV. 1-23. David is here in the lowest depth of affliction. His enemies are numerous, powerful, and 9 Destroy, O LORD, and divide their tongues: for I have seen violence and strife in the city.

10 Day and night they go about it upon the walls thereof: mischief also and sorrow are in the midst of it.

11 ⁱWickedness is in the midst thereof; ^jdeceit and guile depart not from her streets.

12 For ^k*it was* not an enemy that reproached me; then I could have borne it: neither was it he that hated me that did ^lmagnify himself against me; then I would have hid myself from him:

15 ^oLet death seize upon them, and ^plet them go down quick into ^qhell; for wickedness is in their dwellings, and among them.

1 David, praying to God in confidence of his word, complaineth of his enemies. 9 He professeth his confidence in God's word, and promiseth to praise him.

PSALM LVII.

1 David in prayer, fleeing unto God, complaineth of his dangerous case. 7 He encourageth himself to praise God.

To the chief musician, ^aAl-taschith, Michferce. Amongst these enemies, he is principally distressed by the treachery of one who passed for a friend, and made a profession of religion. There are no wounds for depth and virulence equal to those inflicted by a hand which has broken bread with us in our own house, or in the house of the Lord. David had but one cure for all his maladies—prayer; this never-failing resource always sufficed to extricate him from his troubles. He here specifies periods for supplication; thrice a-day he would pray and cry aloud to his Father in the skies, in confidence of being heard. Ver. 22 supplies one of those countless gems which are precious in the eyes of the faithful. All pilgrims to Zion bear with them burdens of various magnitudes; but the lightest is too heavy to be borne by themselves, and their comfort is the privilege of casting it upon the Lord, who never fails to sustain them.

Psalm LVI. 1-18. If David's trials are to be estimated by his poetry, he was of all mankind the most afflicted. Notwithstanding his constant deliverances, fresh grievances and persecutions incessantly returned upon him. Not more uniformly does the night pursue the day, than do the men of Belial pursue the "Sweet Singer of Israel." The same spirit is still in the world, and, according to circumstances, it operates with the tam of David, ^awhen he fled from Saul in the cave.

BE merciful unto me, O God, ^bbe merciful unto me; for ^cmy soul trusteth in thee: yea, ^din the shadow of thy wings will I make my refuge, until these calamities be overpast.

8 Awake up, my glory; awake, psaltory and harp: I myself will awake early.

PSALM LIX.

1 David prayeth to be delivered from his enemies; 6 he complaineth of their cruelty; 8 he trusteth in God; 11 he prayeth against them, and praiseth God.

To the chief musician, ¹Al-taschith, Michtam of David, ²when Saul sent, and they watched the house to kill him.

DELIVER me from mine enemies, O my God; ³defend me from them that rise up against me.

2 Deliver me from the workers of iniquity, and save me from bloody men.

same fidelity to its natural law; "they that are after the flesh do persecute them that are after the Spirit," and they will do so till death shall end the strife.

Psalm LVIII. 1-11. While the storm of persecution was passing along, David's habit was to take refuge under the Rock which was higher than he, and there send forth his cry to his God. Christians in affliction do well to imitate him. When, like him, they have to keep their place among lions, surrounded by those whose teeth are spears and arrows, and their tongues sharp swords, they have only to adopt the same method of self-preservation which he at all times employed with so much success. Under such circumstances, the less we say about our enemies to our friends and fellow-creatures, and the more we say to God, the better. Were a tithe of the unavailing complaints which the afflicted make to their friends to be employed in supplication, the results would be very different.

Psalm LVIII. 1-11. Those who delight in lofty descants on the original purity and dignity of human nature, may, with benefit, read these remarkable verses. God, indeed, has made man upright, but by the Fall he has sustained grievous injury, for which regeneration by the power of the Spirit is the only remedy. Those heavy judgments which have occasionally overtaken the wicked, have constrained even ungodly men to confess that there is a reward for the righteous, and a God that judgeth in the earth. If the picture here drawn be true, as applied to the whole human family, there need be no hesitation in assuming, that except through regeneration no child of man can enter into the kingdom of heaven. Even to the meekest, the gentlest, and, in point of morals, the most exemplary, the Spirit saith, "Ye must be born again."

Psalm LIX. 1-17. The zeal of the wicked, as here set forth, ought to shame the apathy of the people of God. Were Christians but one-fourth part as diligent to do good as the sons of Belial are to do evil, how different an aspect would the world present! The bad passions are naturally stronger than the good, forasmuch as they are wholly without restraint, which renders it all the 10 The God of my mercy shall prevent me: God shall let me see my desire upon mine 'enemies.

11 'Slay them not, lest my people forget: 'scatter them by thy power; and bring them down, O LORD our shield.

12 'For the sin of their mouth, and the words of their lips, let them even be taken in their pride; and for cursing and lying which they speak.

13 'Consume them in wrath, consume them, that they may not be; and let them know that God ruleth in Jacob unto the ends of the earth. Selah.

14 And 'at evening let them return; and let them make a noise like a dog, and go round about the city.

15 Let them 'wander up and down 'for meat, and 'grudge 'if they be not satisfied.

16 But 'I will sing of thy power; yea, I will sing aloud of thy mercy in the morning: 'for thou hast been my defence and refuge in the day of my trouble.

17 Unto thee, O my strength, will I sing: for God is my defence, and the God of my mercy.

PSALM LX.

1 David complaining to God of former judgments, 4 now, upon better hope, prayeth for deliverance. 6 Comforting himself in God's promises, he craveth that help whereon he trusteth.

To the chief musician upon *Shushaneduth, 'Michtam of David, to teach; 'when he strove with Aram-naharaim, and with Aram-zobah, when Joab returned, and smote of Edom in 'the valley of Salt twelve thousand.

O GOD, 'thou hast cast us off, 'thou hast 'scattered us, thou hast been displeased; 'O turn thyself to us again.

2 Thou hast 'made the earth to tremble; thou hast broken it: heal the breaches thereof; for it shaketh.

3 Thou hast shewed thy people hard things: thou hast made us 'to drink the wine of astonishment.

PSALM LXI.

PSALM LXII.

1 David, professing his confidence in God, discourageth his enemies. 5 In the same confidence he encourageth the godly. 9 No trust to be put in worldly things. 11 Power and mercy belong to God.

To the chief musician, to *Jeduthun, A psalm of David.

more necessary that the people of God should stir themselves up to works of faith and labours of love, and collecting all the grace that God has given them, be valiant for the truth upon the earth.

Psalm LX. 1-12. The Church of Christ, and every individual comprising it, does well in times of tribulation promptly to acknowledge the hand of the Lord, and the justice of his dealings. Bad times, thus employed, may be made materially to contribute to the advancement of piety. It is the hot season that breeds vermin, and engenders maladies; the rigours of winter, if less comfortable, are more safe, and for sanatory purposes they are most salutary. So our enemies are our helpers; they keep us alive, and drive us to a throne of grace. But for persecution, the Church had never revealed a hundredth part of the excellence by which individuals have adorned the doctrine of God their Saviour. We ought, therefore, to be less concerned to escape trouble than to obtain from it spiritual benefit.

Psalm LXI. 1-8. David's devotion had acquired by this time all the power of an instinct. In every place, and in all situations, his heart turned to the Lord. They who supplicate much will not want for occasions of thanksgiving; the devotion of David was a delightful mixture of both. While rejoicing in past blessings, his soul delighted in the contemplation of future favours. His chief happiness was in God. The example in these points is perfect, and we shall do well to imitate it.

Psalm LXII. 1-12. In proportion as faith is strong,

TRULY ¹my soul ²waiteth upon God:
from him cometh my salvation.

² He only is my ³rock, and my salvation; he is my defence; I shall not be greatly moved.

³ How long will ye imagine mischief against a man? ⁴ye shall be slain all of you: as a bowing wall shall ye be, and as a tottering fence.

⁴ They only consult to cast him down from his excellency; they delight in lies: they bless with their mouth, but they curse ⁵inwardly. Selah.

⁵ My soul, wait thou only upon God; for ⁶my expectation is from him.

⁶ He only is my rock and my salvation: he is my defence; I shall not be moved.

⁷ In God is my salvation and my glory: the rock of my strength, and my refuge, is in God.

⁸ Trust in him at all times; ye people, ⁹pour out your heart before him: God is a refuge for us. Selah.

⁹ Surely men of low degree are vanity, and men of high degree are a lie: to be ¹⁰laid in the balance, they are ¹¹altogether lighter than vanity.

¹⁰ Trust not in oppression, and become not vain in robbery: ¹¹if riches increase, set not your heart upon them.

¹¹ God hath spoken once; twice have I heard this, ¹²that ¹³power belongeth unto God.

¹² Also unto thee, O LORD, belongeth mercy: for thou renderest to every man according to his work.

PSALM LXIII.

¹ David's thirst for God. ⁴ His manner of blessing God. ⁹ His confidence of his enemies' destruction, and his own safety.

A psalm of David, ¹when he was in the wilderness of Judah.

O GOD, ²thou art my God; ³early will I seek thee: ⁴my soul thirsteth for thee, ⁵my flesh longeth for thee ⁶in a ⁷dry and thirsty land, where no water is; obstacles will dwindle before us; there will be no lions in the way. Our adversaries, however numerous or powerful, will sink into nothingness viewed in the light of Omnipotence. They who have, through a long life, tried and proved the Lord to be a very present help in time of trouble, can afford to address words of courage and comfort to drooping pilgrims. The more we experience of the power of the Gospel, the more successful will be our recommendation of it. They who see how great things it has done for us, will be disposed to listen to our counsels as those of experience which cannot misguide.

³ Because thy loving-kindness is better than life, my lips shall praise thee.

Psalm LXIII. 1-11. Notwithstanding the necessarily shaded views of the Psalmist touching gospel doctrine, his experience of the power of religion attained to a vigour never exceeded. Everything presents the aspect of maturity. His religious experiences had acquired all the force of passions. His earnestness often assumed the aspect of anguish; when he praised, it was with intensity—when he prayed, with agony. There is a freshness and a power in his utterances transcending the con-

PSALM LXIV.

¹ David prayeth for deliverance, complaining of his enemies. ⁷ He promiseth himself to see such an evident destruction of them, that the righteous shall rejoice at it.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David.

HEAR my voice, O God, in my prayer: ²preserve my life from fear of the enemy.

² Hide me from the ³secret counsel of the wicked; from the insurrection of the workers of iniquity:

³ Who whet their tongue like a sword, and bend their bows to shoot their arrows, even bitter words;

⁴ That they may shoot in secret at the perfect: suddenly do they shoot at him, and fear not.

⁵ They encourage themselves in an evil ⁶matter: they commune ⁷of laying snares privily; they say, Who shall see them?

⁶ They ⁷search out iniquities; ⁸they accomplish ⁹a diligent search: both ¹⁰the inward thought of every one of them, and the heart, is deep.

⁷ But ⁸God shall shoot at them with an arrow; suddenly ⁹shall they be wounded.

⁸ So they shall make their own tongue to fall upon themselves: all that see them shall flee away.

⁹ And all men ¹⁰shall fear, and shall ception of ordinary or even superior piety; of this the present psalm supplies a very striking illustration. The Spirit of God, we know, was the source of this surpassing richness, attainment, and enjoyment. It was as a saint, not as a prophet, that David expressed himself as he does in these verses. The subject, therefore, resolves itself into a question of spiritual baptism. It is easy to conceive of an experience equal to that of David, or exceeding it, and, doubtless, the time will come when men by millions will be endowed with the graces of the Spirit to the same extent.

LXIV. 1-10. Here David is in trouble again, surrounded by the workers of iniquity; swords and arrows are meet emblems of the envenomed tongues and bitter words of his enemies. He analyzes the workings of their corrupt hearts, exposing their iniquity, and predicting their doom. Divine judgments make short work with Atheism. Where an awful effect is beheld, although the cause is invisible, its existence is not questioned. The trembling heart even of the rebellious confesses that, in very deed, the finger of God is there. Such events declare the work of God; for they shall wisely consider of his doing.

10 ¹The righteous shall be glad in the LORD, and shall trust in him; and all the upright in heart shall glory.

PSALM LXV.

To the chief musician, A psalm and song of David.

2 O ⁴thou that hearest prayer, ⁵unto thee shall all flesh come.

3 ⁶Iniquities prevail against me: as for our transgressions, thou shalt purge them away.

4 Blessed is the man whom thou choosest, and causest to approach unto thee, that he may dwell in thy courts: we shall be satisfied with the goodness of thy house, even of thy holy temple.

5 By ⁷terrible things in righteousness wilt thou answer us, ⁸O God of our salvation; who art the confidence of all the ends of the earth, and of them that are afar off upon the sea:

6 Which ⁹by his strength setteth fast the mountains; being girded with power:

7 Which ¹⁰stilleth the noise of the seas, the noise of their waves, and the tumult of the people.

8 They also that dwell in the uttermost parts are afraid at thy tokens: thou makest the ¹¹outgoings of the morning and evening to ¹²rejoice.

9 Thou visitest the earth, and ¹³waterest it: thou greatly enrichest it with the river of God, which is full of water: ¹⁴thou preparest them corn, when thou hast so provided for it.

10 Thou waterest the ridges thereof abundantly; thou ¹⁵settlest the furrows thereof; thou ¹⁶makest it soft with showers; ¹⁷thou blessest the springing thereof:

11 Thou crownest the year ¹⁸with thy goodness; and ¹⁹thy paths drop fatness.

equally tend to confirm the faith of the Christian, and to establish confidence in the existence of an invisible world with the Lord who rules it.

Psalm LXV. 1-13. David, living in the midst of a wicked, though not of an idolatrous nation, beheld idolatry investing the globe. The sight was doubtless grievous to his devout spirit; but he was cheered by the Divine intimation, that to the Lord "should all flesh come." Although no instructions were given to the Jews to attempt the conversion of the world, yet both the Psalms and the Prophecies abound with the most glorious visions of the future. When the whole human family shall constitute one worshipping congregation, then will be realised the event anticipated here; praise, which has for numerous ages been waiting for God in Zion, will then break forth as the sound of many waters. With praise, prayer will be combined, and the firmament itself will constitute the great Temple in which both will be offered by all people. Ver. 4 sets before us a brief but impressive picture of true religion, in its doctrines and subjects, with their privileges. The uniform testimony of Scripture is, that the righteous are happy and the wicked miserable; and that there is no changing of conditions but through changing of characters. Were the godly to fall away, their peace and joy would perish; and were the ungodly to cease to do evil, and learn to do well, by embracing the Divine record concerning Christ, they would forthwith come into the experience of joy and peace.

Psalm LXVI. 1-11. David, by anticipation, here addresses a converted world, when all the earth shall worship Christ, and shall sing unto him. Such bursts of inspiration greatly dignified the poetry of the Hebrews. The partial gave place to the general—the local to the universal. The Divine family as one became united with the one living and true God, through his Son Christ Jesus. Ver. 12-20. In David, the sense of gratitude was quite as strong as the sense of danger; while his wants continually brought him to God, his bounties as frequently renewed the errand to the paternal footstool. He was not of those who vowed in their trouble, but when the danger had passed away forgot 17 I cried unto him with my mouth, and he was extolled with my tongue.

18 If I regard iniquity in my heart, the LORD will not hear me:

19 But verily God hath heard me; he hath attended to the voice of my prayer.

20 Blessed be God, which hath not turned away my prayer, nor his mercy from me.

PSALM LXVII.

2 That ^athy way may be known upon earth, thy saving health among all nations.

3 Let the people praise thee, O God; let all the people praise thee.

5 Let the people praise thee, O God; let all the people praise thee.

6 Then ^ashall the earth yield her increase; and God, even ^bour own God, shall bless us.

7 God shall bless us; and all the ends of the earth shall fear him.

PSALM LXVIII.

1 A prayer at the removing of the ark. 4 An exhortation to praise God for his mercies, 7 for his care of the church, 19 and for his great works.

To the chief musician, A psalm or song of David.

LET God arise, let his enemies be scattered: let them also ^bthat hate him flee ¹before him.

2 As smoke is driven away, so drive them away: as wax melteth before the fire, so let the wicked perish at the presence of God.

3 But let the righteous be glad: let them rejoice before God; yea, let them ²exceedingly rejoice.

4 Sing unto God, sing praises to his name: extol him that rideth upon the heavens by ⁴his name JAH, and rejoice before him.

5 ^aA father of the fatherless, and ^aa judge of the widows, is God in his holy habitation.

their obligation. He expresses his solemn determination to go into the Lord's house with burnt-offerings, that he might pay his vows. David was not afraid to confess his obligations to God. He even invited the faithful to come and hear him declare from the fulness of his heart what had been done on his behalf. Ver. 18 presents an important sentiment touching the necessity of clean hands and a pure heart, in order to acceptable prayer. The Lord will hear the righteous; the prayers of the wicked are an abomination.

Psalm LXVII. 1-7. This psalm is eminently Evangelical and Missionary. We have here the essence of the Gospel, and an epitome of the kingdom. When the Lord's way of saving sinners shall be known in all the earth, and the experience of his power felt among all nations, the people, all the people, will praise him, the ^{bg}Prov. 4. 23.

^{bh}Red.

6 God setteth the solitary in ³families: ^ahe bringeth out those which are bound with chains; but ^bthe rebellious dwell in a dry land.

7 O God, when thou wentest forth before thy people, when thou didst march through the wilderness; Selah:

8 The ¹earth shook, ²the heavens also dropped at the presence of God: even ³Sinai itself was moved at the presence of God, ⁴the God of Israel.

9 Thou, O God, didst ⁴send a plentiful rain, whereby thou didst ⁵confirm thine inheritance, when it was weary.

10 Thy congregation hath dwelt therein: thou, O God, hast prepared of thy goodness for the poor.

11 The LORD gave the word; great was the ⁶company of those that published it.

12 Kings of armies ⁷did flee apace; and she that tarried at home divided the spoil.

13 Though ye have lien among the pots, yet shall ye be as ⁸the wings of a dove covered with silver, and her feathers with yellow gold.

14 ⁹When the Almighty scattered kings ⁹in it, it was white as snow in Salmon.

15 ¹⁰The hill of God is as the hill of Bashan; an high hill, as ¹⁰the hill of Bashan.

16 Why leap ye, ye high hills? this is the hill which God desireth to dwell in; yea, the LORD will dwell in it for ever.

17 ¹¹The chariots of God are twenty thousand, even ¹¹thousands of angels: the LORD is among them, as in Sinai, in the holy place.

18 ¹²Thou hast ascended on high, ¹²thou hast led captivity captive: ¹²thou hast received gifts ¹²for men; yea, for the rebellious also, ¹²that the LORD God might dwell among them.

19 Blessed be the Lord, who daily loadeth us with benefits, even the God of our salvation. Selah.

20 He that is our God is the God of salvation; and unto God the Lord belong ¹³the issues from death.

21 But God shall wound the head of his enemies, and the hairy scalp of such an one as goeth on still in his trespasses.

22 The LORD said, I will bring again from Bashan; I will bring my people again from the depths of the sea:

23 That thy foot may be ¹⁴dipped in the nations will be glad, and sing for joy that God hath sent salvation in the person of his Son, and provided for the application of his blood, through the effusion of the Eternal Spirit. The rule of the Lord will be righteous, and the nations will be governed by New Testament principles. God will then, in very deed, bless, not merely the seed of Abraham, but of Adam, and all the ends of the earth shall fear him. The Lord shall hasten it in his time.

Psalm LXVIII. 1-35. There seems reason to believe, from 2 Sam. vi. 14, 15, that this noble psalm was sung when the ark was brought to the city of David. It begins with the same words which Moses used when the ark set forward in his time, Num. x. 35. Nothing could be better calculated to enlighten the minds, exalt the thoughts, and animate the spirit of the people. It is a blood of thine enemies, and the tongue of thy dogs in the same.

24 They have seen thy goings, O God; ¹even the goings of my God, my King, in the sanctuary.

25 The singers went before, the players on instruments followed after; among them were the damsels playing with timbrels.

26 ^aBless ye God in the congregations, even the LORD, ^bfrom ^cthe fountain of Israel.

27 There is little Benjamin with their ruler, the princes of Judah ^dand their council, the princes of Zebulun, and the princes of Naphtali.

28 Thy God hath commanded thy strength: strengthen, O God, that which thou hast wrought for us.

29 Because of thy temple at Jerusalem shall kings bring presents unto thee.

30 Rebuke the ^ecompany of spearmen, the multitude of the bulls, with the calves of the people, ^ftill every one submit himself with pieces of silver: ^gscatter thou the people that ^hdelight in war.

31 ⁱPrinces shall come out of Egypt; ^jEthiopia shall soon ^kstretch out her hands unto God.

32 Sing unto God, ^lye kingdoms of the earth; O sing praises unto the LORD; Selah:

33 To him that rideth upon the heavens of heavens, ^mwhich were of old; lo, he doth send out his voice, ⁿand that a mighty voice.

34 ^oAscribe ye strength unto God: ^phis excellency is over Israel, and his strength is in the ^qclouds.

35 O God, ^rthou art terrible out of thy holy places: the God of Israel is he that giveth strength and power unto ^shis people. Blessed be God.

PSALM LXIX.

1 David complaineth of his affliction. 13 He prayeth for deliverance. 22 He devoteth his enemies to destruction: 30 and praiseth God with thanksgiving.

To the chief musician upon ^tShoshannim, A psalm of David.

SAVE me, O God; for ^uthe waters are come in unto my soul.

2 ^vI sink in ^wdeep mire, where there is no standing; I am come into ^xdeep waters, where the floods overflow me.

3 I am weary of my crying; my throat is dried: mine eyes fail while ^yI wait for my God.

4 They that ^zhate me without a cause are ^{aa}more than the hairs of mine head: they that would destroy me, ^{ab}being mine enemies wrongfully, are mighty; then I restored ^{ac}that which I took not away.

beautiful record of the Divine conduct toward the children of Israel; more especially is he set forth in all the attractions of parental love, as the father of the fatherless, and the judge of the widows in his holy habitation, while he daily loads his children at large with benefits and blessings, both for this life and that which is to come. Ver. 18 clearly points to the ascension of the Lord Jesus, and the gifts of the Holy Spirit he subsequently received for the subjugation of the rebellious, and their conversion into the family of God.

7 Because ^{bf}for thy sake I have borne reproach; ^{bg}shame hath covered my face.

8 I am become a stranger unto my brethren, ^{bh}and an alien unto my mother's children.

9 For ^{bi}the zeal of thine house hath eaten me up; ^{bj}and the reproaches of them that reproached thee are fallen upon me.

10 When ^{bka}I wept, ^{bkb}and chastened my soul with fasting, that was to my reproach.

11 ^{bkc}I made sackcloth also my garment; and ^{bkd}I became a proverb to them.

12 They that sit in the gate speak against me; and I ^{bke}was the song of the ^{bkf}drunkards.

13 But as for me, ^{bkg}my prayer is unto thee, O LORD, ^{bkh}in an acceptable time: O God, ^{bki}in the multitude of thy mercy hear me, in the truth of thy salvation.

14 Deliver me out of the mire, and let me not sink: let me be delivered from them that hate me, and ^{bkl}out of the deep waters.

15 Let not the water-flood overflow me, neither let the deep swallow me up, and let not the pit shut her mouth upon me.

16 Hear me, O LORD; ^{bkm}for thy loving-kindness is good: turn unto me ^{bkn}according to the multitude of thy tender mercies.

17 And ^{bko}hide not thy face from thy servant; for I am in trouble: ^{bkp}hear me speedily.

18 Draw nigh unto my soul, ^{bks}and redeem it: deliver me, because of mine enemies.

19 Thou hast known ^{bkt}my reproach, and my shame, and my dishonour: ^{bku}mine adversaries are all before thee.

20 Reproach hath broken my heart, and I am full of heaviness: and I looked for ^{bkv}some ^{bkw}to take pity, but there was none; and for comforters, but I found none.

21 They gave me also ^{bka}gall for my meat; and in my thirst they gave me ^{bkb}vinegar to drink.

22 Let ^{bkc}their table become a snare before them: and ^{bkd}that which should have been for their welfare, let it become a trap.

23 Let their eyes be darkened, that they see not; and make their loins continually to shake.

24 ^{bke}Pour out thine indignation upon them, and let thy wrathful anger take hold of them.

Psalms LXIX. 1-29. David's lamentations are not less emphatic than his rejoicings. He is not ashamed to confess his weakness and his necessities. We never find him boasting in his own strength against his adversaries; it is in God he defies them, and to the power of the Most High he looks for their ultimate destruction. In this psalm, David's eye is over the human race, carefully marking the appearances which present themselves amongst individuals, families, and nations. There are several portions of it which point to the Lord Jesus;

25 Let their ⁸habitation be desolate, and ⁹let none dwell in their tents.

26 For they persecute him whom thou hast smitten; and they talk to the grief of those whom thou hast wounded.

27 Add ²iniquity unto their iniquity; and let them not come into thy righteousness.

28 Let them be ¹blotted out of the book of the living, and not be written with the righteous.

29 But I am poor and sorrowful: ²let thy salvation, O God, set me up on high.

30 ¹I will praise the name of God with a song, and will ²magnify him with thanksgiving.

31 This also shall please the LORD better than an ox or bullock that hath horns and hoofs.

32 The ⁸humble shall see this, and be glad: and your heart shall live that seek God.

33 For ²the LORD heareth the poor, and despiseth not his prisoners.

34 ²Let the heaven and earth praise him, the seas, and every thing that ⁴moveth therein:

35 For ²God will save Zion, and will ⁴build the cities of Judah; that they may dwell there, and have it in possession.

36 ²The seed also of his servants shall inherit it; and ⁴they that love his name shall dwell therein.

PSALM LXX.

David solliciteth God to the speedy destruction of the wicked, and preservation of the godly.

To the chief musician, A psalm of David, ²to bring to remembrance.

MAKE haste, ²O God, to deliver me; make haste ¹to help me, O LORD.

2 ²Let them be ashamed and confounded that seek after my soul: let them ⁴be turned backward, and put to confusion, that desire my hurt.

3 Let them be turned ²back for a reward of their shame that say, ⁴'Aha, aha!

4 ²Let all those that seek thee rejoice and be glad in thee: and let such as love thy salvation say continually, Let God be magnified.

5 But ²I am poor and needy; make haste unto me, O God: thou art my help and my deliverer; ¹O LORD, make no tarrying.

such are ver. 9, 20, 21, 22. The language there set forth is descriptive of suffering and sorrow; while the other verses of the psalm represent the enemies of the Lord as furious in spirit, and fixed in purpose, intent on his overthrow. Ver. 30-36. Here the Psalmist takes a new turn; the darkness, with its prince and his subjects, has passed away, and the true light shines, and praises are offered to the Lord for the great deliverance.

Psalm LXX. 1-5. David uniformly and strikingly exemplifies the effect of his constant intercourse with God. He resembles a child at home, who is never beyond the eye or the ear of the parent. There is no formal introduction, no explanation or apology for the appearance. The urgency of the entreaty is always determined by the emergency of the case. Here he opens with a cry—"Make haste, O God, to deliver me; make

PSALM LXXI.

1 David, in confidence of faith, prayeth both for himself and against the enemies of his soul. 14 He promisseth constancy. 17 He prayeth for support in old age; &c.

IN thee, O LORD, ²do I put my trust; ¹let me never be put to confusion.

2 Deliver me ²in thy righteousness, and ⁴cause me to escape: ²incline thine ear unto me, and save me.

3 Be thou ¹my strong habitation, whereunto I may continually resort: ²thou hast given commandment to save me; for thou art ²my rock and my fortress.

4 Deliver me, O my God, ²out of the hand of the wicked; out of the hand of the unrighteous and cruel man.

5 For ¹thou art my hope, O Lord God: thou art ²my trust from my youth.

6 ¹By thee have I been holden up from the womb: ²thou art he that took me out of my mother's bowels: ²my praise shall be continually of thee.

7 I am ²as a wonder unto many: but ²thou art my strong refuge.

8 ²Let my mouth be filled with thy praise and with thy honour all the day.

9 ²Cast me not off in the time of old age: forsake me not ²when my strength faileth.

10 For mine enemies speak against me; ²and they that ²lay wait for my soul ²take counsel together, 11 Saying, ²God hath forsaken him: persecute and take him; for there is none to deliver him.

12 O God, be not far from me: O my God, make haste for my help.

13 Let them be confounded and consumed that are adversaries to my soul; let them be covered with reproach and dishonour that seek my hurt.

14 But I will hope continually, and will yet praise thee more and more.

15 ²My mouth shall shew forth thy righteousness and thy salvation all the day; for I know not the numbers thereof.

16 I will go ²in the strength of the Lord God: I will make mention of thy righteousness, even of thine only.

17 O God, thou hast taught me from my youth: and hitherto have I declared thy wondrous works.

18 Now also, ²when I am old and gray-headed, O God, forsake me not, until I have shewed ⁴thy strength unto this gene-haste to help me, O Lord." What rapidity! what intensity! It is characteristic of all inspired prayers that they have no preamble; the suppliants come to the point at once, stating the case and presenting their plea. In proportion to the extent of our intimacy will be our instinctive imitation. Walking with God it will be our privilege at every turn to talk with God.

Psalm LXXI. 1-13. David's devotion owed very much to his enemies; had he been less persecuted, he had prayed less. It is well with individuals, and with churches, when their calamities bring them to a throne of grace; increasing trouble should always lead to increasing devotion. But the danger at such times is very great; the temptation will be to spend time in useless conversations, when prayer is neglected. People will never tire of talking with each other; but it is not an ration, and thy power to every one that is to come.

19 ^aThy righteousness also, O God, is very high, who hast done great things: O God, ^bwho is like unto thee?

20 Thou, which hast shewed me great and sore troubles, shalt quicken me again, and shalt bring me up again from the depths of the earth.

21 Thou shalt increase my greatness, and ^ccomfort me on every side.

22 I will also praise thee with the ^dpsaltery, ^eeven thy truth, O my God: unto thee will I sing with the harp, ^fO thou Holy One of Israel.

23 ^gMy lips shall greatly rejoice when I sing unto thee; and ^hmy soul, which thou hast redeemed.

24 ⁱMy tongue also shall talk of thy righteousness all the day long: ^jfor they are confounded, for they are brought unto shame, that seek my hurt.

2 ^cHe shall judge thy people with righteousness, and ^dthy poor with judgment.

PSALM LXXIII.

1 The prophet, prevailing in a temptation, 2 sheweth the occasion thereof, the prosperity of the wicked. 13 The wound given thereby, diffidence. 16 The victory over it, knowledge of God's purpose.

A psalm ¹of Asaph.

TRULY God is good to Israel, even to such as are ²of a clean heart.

2 But as for me, my feet were almost gone; my steps had well nigh slipped.

3 For I was envious at the foolish, when I saw the prosperity of the wicked.

4 For there are no bands in their death; but their strength is ³firm.

5 They are not in trouble ⁴as other men; neither are they plagued ⁵like other men.

6 Therefore pride compasseth them about as a chain; violence covereth them as a garment.

7 Their ⁶eyes stand out with fatness: they ⁷have more than heart could wish.

8 ⁸They are corrupt, and speak wickedly concerning oppression: they speak loftily.

easy matter to bring them individually, or collectively, to the footstool of mercy. Ver. 14-24. These verses constitute one of the finest passages in the Book of Psalms. The privileges of sonship are here beautifully unfolded. "I will go in the strength of the Lord God: I will make mention of thy righteousness, even of thine only." "My tongue also shall talk of thy righteousness all the day long." This is language peculiarly befitting the lips of pilgrims, and they whose hearts instinctively prompt them to its utterance will never fail for either strength or consolation.

Psalm LXXII. 1-20. This is one of David's royal supplications, touching his son Solomon as the type of the Lord Jesus Christ. It is supposed, and not without reason, that it was written at the close of David's life, when Solomon was about to ascend the throne. Under the figure of his reign, peaceful and glorious, it delineates, in colours the most lively and beautiful, the character of Messiah's Kingdom. The humanity which the psalm breathes towards the poor is particularly striking. They are represented as the principal objects of the monarch's care, and all the power of his kingdom is put forth to crush their adversaries. It bears with still greater force on peace. While the government is to be universal, the peace is to be ever-during, and attended with all conceivable felicity. All kings are to fall down before him, and all nations to serve him; all men are to be blessed in him, and all nations to call him blessed. The picture is perfect in all its parts, and matchless in its moral beauty.

Psalm LXXIII. 1-28. Were we to judge by appearances, it would often seem as if Heaven smiled on iniquity; and as if a penalty were imposed on righteousness. David felt, at times, a temptation to misgiving; 665

9 They set their mouth against the heavens; and ^ctheir tongue walketh through the earth.

10 Therefore his people return hither; and ^dwaters of a full cup are wrung out to them:

11 And they say, How doth God know? and is there knowledge in the most High?

12 Behold, ^ethese are the ungodly, who prosper in the world; ^fthey increase in riches.

13 Verily ^gI have cleansed my heart in vain, and ^hwashed my hands in innocency.

14 For all the day long have I been plagued, and ⁱchastened every morning.

15 If I say, I will speak thus; behold, I should offend against the generation of thy children.

16 When I thought to know this, it was ^jtoo painful for me, 17 ^kUntil I went into the sanctuary of God; then understood I their end.

18 Surely thou didst set them in slippery places: thou castedst them down into destruction.

19 How are they brought into desolation, as in a moment! they are utterly consumed with terrors.

20 As a dream when one awaketh; so, O Lord, when thou awakest, thou shalt despise their image.

21 Thus ^lmy heart was grieved, and I was pricked ^min my reins.

27 For, lo, they that are far from thee shall perish: thou hast destroyed all them ^uthat go a whoring from thee.

but he soon corrected himself, remembering the uniform testimony borne by the people of God. Although everything seemed to go well with them, they were marked for perdition. The prayerful study of Scripture, combined with close observations of the workings of Providence, shews that, notwithstanding the seeming success, "the way of transgressors is hard," while their end is desolation. David's conclusion was the right one; whatever troubles might beset his path in following the Lord fully, he was convinced it was good for him to draw near to God, and put his trust in the Lord, and to declare his works. Were true saints throughout the earth, at any period, to be collected, it would be found that, to a vast extent, trials preponderate over prosperity amongst them; but it would be seen that those trials were converted into mercies, and rendered eminently conducive to humility, heavenly-mindedness, zeal, and love.

Psalm LXXIV. 1-23. Temporal prosperity, sanctified, is a blessing to be desired, and calamity, in itself considered, to be deprecated; but desolation in Zion is manifestly more to be lamented than temporal disaster. The Psalmist teaches us by his example everywhere to give religion the first place. That is the highest prosperity; and wherever it obtains, it will, to some extent, bring along with it a desirable measure of temporal good. In seasons of distraction and persecution, it is the wisdom of the faithful to give themselves to prayer, even where there is no more any prophet, neither among us any that knoweth how long calamity may continue. It is our wisdom to commit our way to the Lord; and continue to cry aloud, patiently waiting for the necessary mercy, which, although it may seem to tarry, will assuredly come.

Psalm LXXV. 1-10. Men of the world see God's hand in nothing; but those who are enlightened by the Divine Spirit behold it in everything. They know that promotion cometh not from the east, nor the west, nor the south, but that God putteth down one, and setteth up another. It is a high spiritual attainment to be able in all things to recognise this principle; for, even among God's own people, there is the strongest tendency to make light of the Divine interposition in temporal matters. In things spiritual, they will profess to leave the Lord to act according to his sovereign goodness; but in temporal affairs, they incline to take the matter into their own hands.

Psalm LXXVI. 1-12. The ancient Church presented a striking spectacle to surrounding nations. They knew not what to make of the children of Israel, who in their more prosperous periods, when piety flourished, were a people utterly unlike all people. Their character appeared to be not only wholly unnatural, but against nature. They were, therefore, viewed as at once the enemies of the gods and of the nations, and considered a community of atheists, although the only people on earth who worshipped the living and the true God, to the exclusion of stocks and stones, and the works of men's own hands. David here, in ver. 11, recognises the lawfulness of religious vows, and urges their fulfilment. The duty also of bringing presents to the Lord for the support of his worship, as the voluntary act of a grateful affection, is also inculcated. This, therefore, instead of being the last, ought to be the first thing thought of by Christians.

Psalm LXXVII. 1-20. In seasons of sorrow and deep affliction, it is often expedient to consider the days of 5 For he established ^aa testimony in Jacob, and appointed a law in Israel, which he commanded our fathers, that they should make them known to their children;

6 That the generation to come might know ^bthem, ^ceven the children ^dwhich should be born, ^ewho should arise and declare ^fthem to their children;

7 That they might set their hope in God, and ^gnot forget the works of God, but ^hkeep his commandments:

8 And might not be as their fathers, a stubborn and rebellious generation; a generation ⁱthat ^jset not their heart aright, and whose spirit was not steadfast with God.

9 ^kThe children of Ephraim, ^lbeing armed, and ^mcarrying bows, turned back in the day of battle.

10 ⁿThey kept not the covenant of God, and refused to walk in his law;

11 And forgot his works, and his wonders that he had shewed them.

12 Marvellous things did he in the sight of their fathers, in the land of Egypt, in the field of ^oZaan.

13 ^pHe divided the sea, and caused them to pass through; and ^qhe made the waters to stand as an heap.

14 In the day-time also he led them with a cloud, and all the night with a light of fire.

15 He ^rclave the rocks in the wilderness, and gave ^sthem drink as out of the great depths.

16 He brought streams also out of the rock, and caused waters to run down like rivers.

17 And they sinned yet more against him, by provoking the most High in the wilderness.

18 And they tempted God in their heart, by asking meat for their lust.

19 Yea, ^tthey spake against God: they said, ^uCan God ^vfurnish a table in the wilderness?

20 Behold, ^whe smote the rock, that the waters gushed out, and the streams overflowed; ^xcan he give bread also? can he provide flesh for his people?

21 Therefore ^ythe LORD heard ^zthis, and was wroth: so ^aa fire was kindled against Jacob, and anger also came up against Israel;

22 ^bBecause they believed not in God, and trusted not in his salvation,

23 Though he had commanded the clouds from above, and opened the doors of heaven, old, the years of ancient times, as also to remembrance periods of peculiar felicity in our history, when the Lord lifted us above the stormy waves which threatened to engulf us. By communing with our own hearts, we are led to those views which are pertinent to our condition, shewing the sources whence our affliction sprung, and also the ends it must be destined to accomplish. We shall never ransack the past without discovering something to say on behalf of the Lord, and against ourselves. We cannot devise a more healthful process than to meditate on his works, and to talk of his doings. A redeemed people will never fail to find their Father in heaven faithful to his promise, and abundant in his mercy.

Psalm LXXVIII. 1-72. This is another of those grand historic odes which flowed from the lips of the Psalmist on special occasions. He exhibits the great facts of the history of Israel, from the period of their departure out of Egypt to the reign of David. We have scarcely anywhere so close and compact a summary of great facts. It is Jewish history in epitome. There are 24 And ^ahad rained down manna upon them to eat, and had given them of the corn of heaven.

25 ^aMan did eat angels' food: he sent them meat to the full.

26 He caused an east wind to ^ablow in the heaven; and by his power he brought in the south wind.

27 ^aHe rained flesh also upon them as dust, and ^afeathered fowls like as the sand of the sea;

28 And he let ^ait fall in the midst of their camp, round about their habitations.

29 So they did eat, and were well filled: for he gave them their own desire;

30 They were not estranged from their lust: but while their meat ^awas yet in their mouths, 31 The wrath of God came upon them, and slew the fattest of them, and ^asmote down the ^achosen men of Israel.

32 For all this ^athey sinned still, and ^abelieved not for his wondrous works.

33 Therefore ^atheir days did he consume in vanity, and ^atheir years in trouble.

34 When he slew them, then they sought him; and they returned and enquired early after God:

35 And they remembered that ^aGod ^awas their Rock, and the high God ^atheir Redeemer.

36 Nevertheless they did flatter him with their mouth, and ^athey lied unto him with their tongues.

37 For ^atheir heart was not right with him, neither were they ^astedfast in his covenant.

38 But he, ^abeing full of compassion, forgave their iniquity, and destroyed them not; yea, many a time turned he his anger away, and did not stir up all his wrath.

39 For ^ahe remembered that they ^awere but flesh; ^aa wind that passeth away, and cometh not again.

40 ^aHow oft did they ^aprovoke him in the wilderness, and ^agrieve him in the desert!

41 Yea, they turned back, and tempted God, and limited the Holy One of Israel.

42 They remembered not his hand, ^anor the day when he delivered them ^afrom the enemy:

43 How he had ^awrought his signs in Egypt, and his ^awonders in the field of Zoan:

44 And had ^aturned their rivers into blood; and their floods, that they could not drink.

45 He ^asent divers sorts of flies among them, which devoured them; and ^afrogs, which destroyed them.

46 He ^agave also their increase unto the caterpillar, and their labour unto the locust.

47 He ^adestroyed their vines ^awith hail, and their sycamore-trees with ^afrost.

48 He ^agave up their cattle also to the hail, and their flocks to ^ahot thunderbolts.

49 He cast upon them the fierceness of his anger, wrath, and indignation, and trouble, by sending evil angels ^aamong them.

50 He ^amade a way to his anger; he spared not their soul from death, but gave their ^alife over to the pestilence;

51 And ^asmote all the first-born in Egypt; ^athe chief of ^atheir strength in the tabernacles of Ham:

52 But made his own people to go forth like sheep, and guided them in the wilderness like a flock.

53 And he led them on safely, so that they feared not; ^abut the sea ^aoverwhelmed their enemies.

54 And he brought them to the border of his sanctuary, ^aeven to this mountain, ^awhich ^ahis right hand had purchased.

55 He ^acast out the heathen also before them, and ^adivided them an inheritance by line, ^aand made the tribes of Israel to dwell in their tents.

56 Yet they tempted and provoked the most high God, and kept not his testimonies;

57 But turned back, and dealt unfaithfully like their fathers: they were turned aside like a deceitful bow.

58 For they provoked him to anger with ^atheir high places, and moved him to jealousy ^awith their graven images.

59 When ^aGod heard ^athis, he was wroth, ^aand greatly abhorred Israel:

60 So that he forsook the tabernacle of Shiloh, the tent ^awhich he placed among men;

61 And delivered his strength into captivity, and his glory into the enemy's hand.

62 He gave his people over also unto the sword; and was wroth with his inheritance.

63 The fire consumed their young men; and ^atheir maidens were not ^agiven to marriage.

64 Their priests fell by the sword; and their widows made no lamentation.

65 Then the LORD awaked as one out of sleep, and like a mighty man that shouteth by reason of wine.

66 And he smote his enemies in the hinder parts; he put them to a perpetual reproach.

67 Moreover, he refused the tabernacle here and there expressions of difficult import, which we have now no means of satisfactorily explaining. Natural history, however, suffices to illustrate some of the points specified, as, for example, what is said of the "flies" in ver. 45. That so insignificant an agency should have devoured a whole people, is at first sight startling. There are, nevertheless, facts in history which abundantly support the representation. In vol. ii. of the "Philosophical Transactions," we have an account of an insect in New England which, for the space of 200 miles, poisoned and destroyed all the trees in the country. An awful mystery hangs over the words of the Psalmist in ver. 49, concerning the evil angels which were sent among the people for their chastisement. The precise import of the term is "messengers of evil," which, by slight licence, may be used as "instruments of evil," so that term does not necessarily imply evil angels, in the proper sense of the word. It, nevertheless, is in perfect of Joseph, and chose not the tribe of Ephraim;

68 But ^cchose the tribe of Judah, the mount Zion which he loved.

69 And he built his sanctuary like high palaces, like the earth which he hath ^eestablished for ever.

70 He ^cchose David also his servant, and took him from the sheep-folds:

71 ^cFrom following ^ethe ewes great with young he brought him to ^bfeed Jacob his people, and Israel his inheritance.

72 So he fed them according to the integrity of his heart; and guided them by the skilfulness of his hands.

harmony with the Divine arrangement to suppose that such might be literally the fact. It is clear from Scripture, that permission has occasionally been given to the powers of darkness to correct the erring children of men.

Psalm LXXIX. 1-13. We have here a terrible picture of national distress, inflicted by Heaven in punishment of the transgression of Israel. These surrounding nations became occasionally a rod in the hand of the Lord with which to correct his children, and that done, the rod was always broken in pieces; for in fulfilling the purposes of God they were intent, not on promoting his glory, but their own ends. We can never err in connecting troubles with transgression. Wherever we reap evil, we may rest assured we have sown disobedience. The saint is never more in character than when making intercession on behalf of the afflicted. It well becomes his lips to say, "Let the sighing of the prisoner come before thee; according to the greatness of thy power preserve thou those that are appointed to die."

Psalm LXXX. 1-19. We have here a noble strain of inspired devotion, terminating in the employment of a figure of matchless beauty. The idea of the vine is strikingly illustrative of the transplantation of the Jewish people from Egypt to the Promised Land. The expression, "Let thy hand be upon the man of thy right hand, upon the son of man whom thou madest strong for thyself" is one of somewhat difficult import. Mere critics have seen in it no more than "the people of Israel;" but by men of a more evangelical spirit it has been viewed as representing the Messiah. This view by no means seems to strain the text; indeed, it fully harmonises with such language as the following, which incontrovertibly points to the Lord Jesus—"See, O God, our shield, and look on the face of thine anointed."

Psalm LXXXI. 1-16. This psalm would appear to have been prepared for the feast of trumpets in the first new moon in the civil year. Its object is to bring home to the mind of the people the memory of their bitter bondage, their supplications under their afflictions, and the Lord's answer to their cry. It sets before them their forgetfulness and ingratitude, and the iniquities which followed. Ver. 13, and those which ensue, exhibit a sentiment of great moment to the people of the Lord in this and in every age. The true secret of all prosperity is there pointed out. What so simple, so reasonable, and so successful? How great the perversity of men who, notwithstanding, reject it; forsaking the fountain of living waters, and hewing out to themselves broken cisterns, that can hold no water!

Psalm LXXXII. 1-8. Here the Psalmist exults in justice, reminding its dispensers of their duty. The Word of God not only provides for universal justice between man and man, but for mercy to the poor and the needy, the afflicted and the fatherless. All the genuine humanity of the world is traceable to the cross of Christ, and to the Word of God, which rehearses the wonders of his incarnation, death, resurrection, ascension, and glory. The sum of God's requirements of his creatures is, that they should do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with their heavenly Father. This done, the ends of redemption will be accomplished.

Psalm LXXXIII. 1-18. The Holy Spirit has here recorded not only the actions but the principles which govern wicked people. Their constant object was to cut Israel off from being a nation; but all their endeavours

2 For, lo, thine enemies make a tumult; and they ^cthat hate thee have lifted up the head.

3 They have taken crafty counsel against thy people, and consulted against thy hidden ones.

only tended to establish the covenant, and to accomplish the purposes of sovereign mercy. They might, indeed, take to themselves the houses of God in possession; they might slay those that worship in such houses, but a re-generated spirit they could not destroy; nor could they divest it of the faith by which it became united to Christ, and of the love which prepared it to suffer and to die in honour of his glorious name.

Psalm LXXXIV. 1-12. It is difficult to determine the period or the circumstances to which this psalm refers. Some have supposed it to have been penned during the siege of Jerusalem by Sennacherib; others, with more probability, that it was during the rebellion of Absalom,—a period when David was banished from the courts of the Lord. But be this as it may, it beautifully exemplifies the longings of a loving heart after the ordinances of God's house. The privileges therewith connected are strikingly recognised, together with the blessedness of those whose strength is in the Most High. The perseverance of God's people is also pointedly indicated—"They go from strength to strength, every one of them in Zion appeareth before God." He that began a good work, carries it on till the happy day which brings them into the temple of his love, from which they shall go no more out for ever.

Psalm LXXXV. 1-13. The mercy of the Lord is here acknowledged, while prayer is presented for an increase and a continuance of blessing. Seasons of dead- ness creep alike over individuals, fellowships, and whole communities; and such as sink into that unhappy con- dition, can be revived only by a fresh outpouring of the Spirit from on high. They who desire to recover lost ground, therefore, have but one course to pursue—that is, to cry to the Lord without ceasing, that he

6 Wilt thou not revive us again, that thy people may rejoice in thee?

7 ¹Shew us thy mercy, O LORD, and grant us thy salvation.

8 ¹I will hear what God the LORD will speak: for he will speak peace unto his people, and to his saints; but let them not turn again to folly.

9 Surely ¹his salvation is nigh them that fear him; that glory may dwell in our land.

10 ¹Mercy and truth are met together; righteousness and peace have kissed each other.

11 ¹Truth shall spring out of the earth; and righteousness shall look down from heaven.

12 Yea, the LORD shall give that which is good; and ¹our land shall yield her increase.

A prayer of David.¹

BOW down thine ear, O LORD, hear me; for I am poor and needy.

2 ¹Preserve my soul, for I am ²holy: O thou my God, save thy servant that trusteth in thee.

3 ¹Be merciful unto me, O Lord: for I cry unto thee ³daily.

4 Rejoice the soul of thy servant: for unto thee, O Lord, do I lift up my soul.

5 For thou, Lord, art good, and ¹ready to forgive; and ¹plenteous in mercy unto all them that call upon thee.

6 Give ear, O LORD, unto my prayer; and attend to the voice of my supplications.

7 ¹In the day of my trouble I will call upon thee: for thou wilt answer me.

8 Among the gods there is none like unto thee, O LORD; neither are there any works like unto thy works.

9 All nations whom thou hast made shall come and worship before thee, O LORD; and shall glorify thy name.

10 For thou art great, and doest wondrous things: thou art God alone.

11 ¹Teach me thy way, O LORD; I will walk in thy truth: unite my heart to fear thy name.

12 I will praise thee, O Lord my God, ¹with all my heart; and I ¹will glorify thy name for evermore.

13 For great is thy mercy toward me; and thou hast delivered my soul from the lowest ⁴hell.

14 O God, the proud are risen against me, and ²the assemblies of ¹violent men have sought after my soul, and have not set thee before them.

15 But thou, O Lord, art a God full of compassion, and gracious, long-suffering, and plenteous in ¹mercy and truth.

16 O turn unto me, and have mercy upon me: give thy strength unto thy servant, and save ¹the son of thine handmaid.

17 Shew me a token for good; that thy which hate me may see it, and be ashamed; because thou, LORD, hast holpen me, and comforted me.

would once more shew them his mercy, and grant them his salvation. To all such, there is every encouragement.

Psalm LXXXVI. 1-17. While David's heart rises into an exalted strain of supplication, he is not forgetful of a perishing world and a dishonoured God, and he consoles himself by the glorious truth, that all nations whom God hath made shall come and worship before him, and shall glorify his name. This consideration is eminently calculated to cheer the spirits of the faithful. There is at present much apparently to discourage them; but, looking into the future, the clouds disappear, the sky becomes clear and glowing, and everything unites to assure the zealous suppliant that all flesh shall yet one day see God's salvation. We may not overlook the important entreaty of ver. 11; we are there reminded of the necessity of Divine teaching, in order to Divine walking. The heart, moreover, is like a broken vessel, and it must be united again, cemented, and strengthened, in order that it may fear the Lord, be filled with his love, and promote his glory.

Psalm LXXXVII. 1-7. It has been supposed, and not without reason, that this psalm was prepared for use at the laying of the foundation of Solomon's temple; and, notwithstanding its brevity, it was worthy of that great occasion. It points to the Rock on which the spiritual temple of God is built, the love which the Lord bears to it, the marvellous things which are spoken of it, and the process of regeneration to be carried on within it, and by which it is specially to be distinguished. In no other Scripture is so much within the same compass said of the new birth, by which alone men are introduced to the kingdom of God.

Psalm LXXXVIII. 1-18. Here the Psalmist relieves his burthened soul with unusual copiousness of lamentation.

O LORD God of my salvation, ^cI have cried day and night before thee.

2 ^aLet my prayer come before thee: incline thine ear unto my cry;

3 For my soul is full of troubles, and ^amy life draweth nigh unto the grave.

4 I am counted with them that go down into the pit: I am as a man that hath no strength.

5 Free among the dead, like the slain that lie in the grave, whom thou rememberest no more: and they are cut off ^afrom thy hand.

6 Thou hast laid me ^fin the lowest pit, ^ain darkness, ^bin the deeps.

7 Thy wrath lieth hard upon me, and thou hast afflicted me with all thy waves. Selah.

8 Thou hast put away mine acquaintance far from me; ^athou hast made me an abomination unto them: ^aI am shut up, and I cannot come forth.

9 ^aMine eye mourneth by reason of affliction: LORD, ^mI have called daily upon thee; ^aI have stretched out my hands unto thee.

10 Wilt thou shew wonders to the dead? ^ashall the dead arise and praise thee? Selah.

11 Shall thy loving-kindness be declared in the grave? or thy faithfulness ^ain destruction?

12 Shall thy wonders be known in the dark: and thy righteousness in the land of forgetfulness?

13 But unto thee have I cried, O LORD; and in the morning shall my prayer prevent thee.

14 LORD, ^awhy castest thou off my soul? ^awhy hidest thou thy face from me?

15 I am afflicted and ready to die from my youth up: while I suffer thy terrors I am distracted.

16 Thy fierce wrath goeth over me; thy terrors have cut ^ame off.

17 They came round about me ^adaily like water; they compassed me about together.

18 ^aLover and friend hast thou put far from me, and mine acquaintance into darkness.

11 The heavens are thine; the earth also is thine: as for the world, and the fulness thereof, thou hast founded them.

12 ^aThe north and the south thou hast created them: ^mTabor and ^aHermon shall rejoice in thy name.

13 Thou hast ^aa mighty arm: strong is thy hand, and high is thy right hand.

14 ^aJustice and judgment are the ^ahabitation of thy throne: ^amercy and truth shall go before thy face.

15 Blessed is the people that know the joyful sound: they shall walk, O LORD, in the light of thy countenance.

16 In thy name shall they rejoice all the day; and in thy righteousness shall they be exalted.

17 For thou art the glory of their strength; and in thy favour ^aour horn shall be exalted.

18 For ^athe LORD is our defence; and the Holy One of Israel is our King.

19 Then thou spakest in vision to ^athy Holy One, and saidst, I have laid help upon one that is mighty; ^aI have exalted one chosen out of the people.

20 I have found David my servant: with my holy oil have I anointed him:

21 With whom my hand shall be esta-tation. Throughout, it presents an unbroken wall of distress. It is an uncommon thing to find in David so much darkness, without one ray of light, and to end as he begins. The bulk of his Psalms of this character are striking emblems of his own life; however beset with dangers, difficulties, and sorrows by the way, he always ends well. Weeping endures for a night, but joy comes in the morning. Here, however, it is all weeping—all night; no morning, and no joy. The case is one of peculiarity. It seldom occurred in the history of David, and it need never occur to those who hold fast the beginning of their confidence steadfastly to the end, forgetting what is behind, and pressing on to that which is before, to reach the prize of their high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

Psalm LXXXIX. 1-52. The covenant was made with David, and a promise given him of the perpetuity of his throne and kingdom in his family. The language employed on that subject was, on the one hand, contingent on their deportment, and on the other, typical. We must, therefore, look to David's Son and David's Lord, as presenting the perfect antitype in which the language is fulfilled to the uttermost. The covenant of royalty blished; mine arm also shall strengthen him.

22 The enemy shall not exact upon him; nor ¹the son of wickedness afflict him.

23 And I will beat down his foes before his face, and ²plague them that hate him.

24 But my faithfulness and my mercy shall be with him; and ³in my name shall his horn be exalted.

25 I will set his hand also in the sea, and his right hand in the rivers.

26 He shall cry unto me, ⁴Thou art my Father, ⁵my God, and ⁶the Rock of my salvation.

27 Also ⁷I will make him my first-born, ⁸higher than the kings of the earth.

28 My mercy will I keep for him for evermore, and my covenant shall stand fast with him.

29 His seed also will I make to endure for ever, and ⁹his throne as the days of heaven.

30 ¹⁰If his children forsake my law, and walk not in my judgments;

31 If they ¹¹break my statutes, and keep not my commandments;

32 Then will I visit their transgression with the rod, and their iniquity with stripes.

33 Nevertheless my loving-kindness will I ¹²not utterly take from him, nor suffer my faithfulness to ¹³fail.

34 My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips.

35 ¹⁴Once have I sworn by my holiness, ¹⁵that I will not lie unto David.

36 His seed shall endure for ever, and his throne as the sun before me.

37 It shall be established for ever as the moon, and as a faithful witness in heaven. Selah.

38 ¹⁶But thou hast cast off and abhorred, thou hast been wroth with thine anointed.

39 Thou hast made void the covenant of thy servant; thou hast profaned his crown, by casting it to the ground.

40 Thou hast broken down all his

4 For a thousand years in thy sight are was made with David as the father of his family, and with his offspring through him, and for his sake; and in that way the Covenant of Grace made with Christ as the Head of the Church, and through him with all believers, is beautifully exemplified. Ver. 15 is one of those most precious in this copious psalm, and bears with great force on the experience of the people of God, whom the glad tidings have made happy, and who, through the life imparted, and the strength of Divine grace, continue to walk in the light of his countenance, rejoicing in him all the day long, and exalting his imputed righteousness.

Psalm XC. 1-17. Scripture prayers are frequently dictated by circumstances. According as events were joyous or sorrowful, the strain was cheering or doleful. The great rebellion having been followed by a sentence which doomed the transgressors to die in the wilderness, nothing remained for them but to continue their wanderings till they were successively removed from the face of the earth. That wilderness which supplied no shelter other than that which the Lord provided, was to become to all of them a graveyard. Their eyes were not even to rest on "the pleasant land." This was the heaviest blow which had fallen upon Israel. The mind of Moses was deeply affected by the spectacle and the prospect; and his feelings were, doubtless, not a little deepened by the fact, that he himself, although on different grounds, was in the same condemnation. While graciously indulged with a sight of the promised land, he was not to be suffered to enter it. He was to witness the people by slow degrees consuming away in the anger of the Lord, until at last the camp, having been purged, they should be in a position to pass the Jordan, and enter upon their inheritance. Moses, however, made up his mind to this dispensation of justice, which was mingled with mercy, for, if the fathers were to be cut off, the children were to be preserved. It only remained, therefore, under the circumstances, for Moses earnestly to desire that the calamity might be sanctified, and that they might so number their days as to apply their hearts to wisdom. Seeing that the full-grown portion of the people who had come out of Egypt were all to perish on the way, Moses became deeply anxious that the place of the fathers should be worthily supplied by the children; and hence his prayer, "O satisfy us early with thy mercy; that we may rejoice and be glad all our days." Nothing could so reconcile those doomed to die, to their lot, as to see their sons and daughters rising up arrayed in the beauties but as yesterday when it ³ is past, and as a watch in the night.

5 Thou carriest them away as with a flood; they are as a sleep: in the morning they are like grass which ⁴ groweth up.

6 In the morning it flourisheth, and groweth up; in the evening it is cut down, and withereth.

7 For we are consumed by thine anger, and by thy wrath are we troubled.

8 Thou hast set our iniquities before thee, ⁶our secret sins in the light of thy countenance.

9 For all our days are ⁶passed away in thy wrath; we spend our years as ⁶a tale that is told.

10 ⁷The days of our years are threescore years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet ⁸is their strength labour and sorrow: for it is soon cut off, and we fly away.

11 Who knoweth the power of thine anger? even according to thy fear, ⁹so is thy wrath.

12 So teach us to number our days, that we may ⁸apply our hearts unto wisdom.

13 Return, O LORD, how long? and let it repent thee concerning thy servants.

14 O satisfy us early with thy mercy; that we may rejoice and be glad all our days.

15 ¹⁰Make us glad according to the days wherein thou hast afflicted us, and the years wherein we have seen evil.

16 ¹¹Let thy work appear unto thy servants, and thy glory unto their children.

17 And let the beauty of the LORD our God be upon us: and establish thou the work of our hands upon us; yea, the work of our hands establish thou it.

14 Because he hath set his love upon me, therefore will I deliver him: I will set him on high, because he hath known my name.

15 ¹¹He shall call upon me, and I will answer him: I will be with him in trouble; I will deliver him, and honour him.

16 With ¹²long life will I satisfy him, and ¹²shew him my salvation.

PSALM XCII.

1 The prophet exhorteth to praise God, 4 for his great works, 6 for his judgments on the wicked, 10 and for his goodness to the godly.

A psalm or song ¹for the sabbath-day.

IT is a good thing to give thanks unto the LORD, and to sing praises unto thy name, O most High:

2 To shew forth thy loving-kindness in the morning, and thy faithfulness ¹every night,

3 Upon an instrument of ten strings, of holiness. Hence again the prayer, "Let the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us, and establish thou the work of our hands upon us." The great pledge of national prosperity, when they should have passed the Jordan, lay in their being a well-principled, God-fearing, and obedient people. Born, the bulk of them, in the wilderness, they knew nothing of the slavery of Egypt, and therefore could not carry with them those feelings of humility and gratitude which might otherwise have distinguished them. The facts of the case, however, had been told them, and if their hearts had been renewed by the Divine Spirit, they would have constituted a strong nation, a peculiar people, and the work of their hands would have been established amongst them. The grace of God would have been a substantial proof of his presence, power, and blessing. Few psalms have a more direct and powerful personal bearing. The span of human life still remains the same, and the importance of being in a state of constant preparation for an exchange of worlds becomes the duty of every soul of man. The fathers, moreover, who know that in the course of nature they must be first removed, ought to be deeply solicitous about the state in which they leave their children; and to this end nothing ought to be left undone which can be accomplished by labour and prayer.

Psalm XCI. 1-16. David here exults in the safeguards which surround the people of God. The portraiture is of a cheering character, beautifully illustrative of the Apostolic question, "If God be for us, who can be against us?" The heart, indeed, is dark and heavy which this burst of Divine light and love will not rouse and cheer. It is throughout one peal of gladness and hope, wonderfully exemplifying the provision which is made for the elect of God, whom none can injure, or pluck from the Father's hand.

Psalm XCII. 1-15. This is the product of one of David's brightest hours, when the candle of the Lord shone before him, and his heart bounded with gladness. At that moment he enjoyed clear conceptions of the guilt and misery of wicked men, as well as of the felicity and upon the psalter; upon ²the harp with ³a solemn sound.

4 For thou, LORD, hast made me glad through thy work; I will triumph in the works of thy hands.

5 O LORD, how great are thy works! and ^bthy thoughts are very deep.

6 A brutish man knoweth not; neither doth ^aa fool understand this.

7 When ^dthe wicked spring as the grass, and when ^eall the workers of iniquity do flourish; ^fit is that they shall be destroyed for ever.

8 But thou, LORD, art most high for evermore.

9 'For, lo, thine enemies, O LORD, for, lo, thine enemies shall perish; all the workers of iniquity shall be scattered.

10 But ^gmy horn shalt thou exalt like the horn of ^han unicorn: I shall be anointed with fresh oil.

11 ⁱMine eye also shall see my desire on mine enemies; and mine ears shall hear my desire of the wicked that rise up against me.

12 The righteous shall flourish like the palm-tree; he shall grow like ^ka cedar in Lebanon.

13 Those that be planted in the house of the LORD shall flourish in the courts of our God.

14 They shall still bring forth fruit ^min old age; they shall be fat and ⁿflourishing;

15 ^oTo shew that the LORD is upright: he is ^pmy rock, and there is no unrighteousness in him.

PSALM XCIII.

The majesty, stability, power, and holiness of Christ's kingdom.

THE LORD reigneth; ^ahe is clothed with majesty; the LORD is clothed with strength, wherewith ^bhe hath girded himself: the world also is stablished, that it cannot be moved.

2 Thy throne is established ¹of old; thou art from everlasting.

PSALM XCIV.

¹ The prophet complaineth of the tyranny and impiety of the wicked; ² he sheweth God's providence; ³ he teacheth the blessedness of affliction. ⁴ God is the defender and avenger of the afflicted.

O LORD ¹God, to whom vengeance belongeth; O God, to whom vengeance belongeth, ²shew thyself.

2 Lift up thyself, ^athou Judge of the earth; render a reward to the proud.

3 LORD, how long shall the wicked, how long shall the wicked triumph?

4 How long shall they utter and speak hard things? and all the workers of iniquity boast themselves?

5 They ^bbreak in pieces thy people, O LORD, and ^cafflict thine heritage:

6 They ^dslay the widow and the stranger, and murder the fatherless.

7 Yet they say, The LORD shall not see, neither shall the God of Jacob regard it.

8 Understand, ye brutish among the people: and ye fools, when will ye be wise?

9 He that planted the ear, ^eshall he not hear? he that formed the eye, shall he not see?

10 He that ^fchastiseth the heathen, shall not he correct? ^ghe that teacheth man knowledge, shall not he know?

11 The LORD knoweth the thoughts of man, that they are vanity.

12 Blessed is the man whom thou chastenest, O LORD, and ^hteachest him out of thy law;

13 That thou mayest give him rest from the days of adversity, ⁱuntil the pit be digged for the wicked.

14 For the LORD will not cast off his people, neither will he forsake ^jhis inheritance:

15 But ^kjudgment shall return unto righteousness; and all the upright in heart ^lshall follow it.

16 ^mWho will rise up for me against the evil doers? or who will stand up for me against the workers of iniquity?

17 Unless the LORD had been my help, my soul had ⁿalmost ^odwelt in silence.

18 When I said, ^pMy foot slippeth; thy mercy, O LORD, held me up.

which belongs to the faithful. It is not easy to say at what period piety is most lovely, whether in the bloom of youth, or in the mellowness of age. Each has its peculiar graces and excellences. Happy they who, in their own person, combine both! It is an unspeakable mercy to be early called; and next to this is the mercy of being called at any period. The notion of progress, as well as perpetuity, is strikingly set forth by David. It is at once the privilege and the duty of the children of God to grow in every excellence, and to grow to the latest hour which witnesses their transplantation from the house of the Lord on earth, to flourish in the courts of heaven.

Psalm XCIII. 1-5. These lofty lines terminate in a tribute to the testimonies of the Lord, which are "very sure." The laws of nature are not more uniform than are the laws of grace. The same Lord presides over all.

David expressly states, that among his delights were the contemplation of the works of the Divine Hand. But while he was, in the proper sense, a natural, he was also a divine philosopher. The glories of creation only lighted his footsteps to the throne of the Creator. Amid his meditations on those displays of wisdom, power, and goodness, it was ever in his heart to say, "Holiness becometh thy house, O Lord, for ever." Natural science, conducted on right principles, becomes not only an interesting, and an elevating, but an edifying study. It may be viewed as an introductory lesson to the study of the inspired volume.

Psalm XCIV. 1-8. The introduction of moral evil has, from the first, been a source of perplexity to philosophical inquirers, and the duration of its reign is a subject of no less importance. Its existence is matter for profound submission; while its extinction, so far as conasistent with the Divine wisdom, is an object of rational desire. David was concerned to know how long the wicked were to triumph. Ver. 9-11. If it be remembered that these words were uttered when the whole earth was filled with idolatry, it will be seen how great were the light and the privileges of the chosen people. How correct are the Psalmist's conceptions of the Divine character, even as illuminated by the New Testament revelation! Ver. 12-23. A great service to humanity is performed by the light which these verses throw on affliction. To teach a man that his Creator is the God of mercy, and that all chastisement is with a view to his own welfare, is to strengthen him, and to reconcile him to the cup of affliction, how bitter soever it may be. The comforts of the Gospel are the only source of genuine delight to the soul; and He who knows the wants and woes of human kind has supplied them in such abundance, and in such variety, as should meet all possible emergencies.

Psalm XCV. 1-11. This noble ode presents an exalted view of the majesty, grace, and glory of the Father of spirits, and the God of all consolation. The feeling which pervades it is essentially that of the noblest worship; it is love, blending with gratitude, admiring, adoring, and praising. A ransomed world, kneeling before the Lord, its Maker and Redeemer, claiming to be the people of his pasture, the sheep of his hand, and the children of his household, is an idea of extraordinary grandeur. This psalm will ever constitute a suitable meditation to the Lord's people on the morning of his holy day, since it will materially conduce to prepare the soul for an appropriate approach to the footstool of love and mercy.

Psalm XCVI. 1-13. To declare the glory of the Lord, and his wonders among the people, is itself to announce the stupendous fact that God has, in Christ, reconciled the world unto himself, not imputing to men their trespasses. To say among the people that "the Lord reigneth," is to proclaim amongst them the great fact that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners; that for this purpose he made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant; and being found in fashion as a man, humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross: wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name, which is above every name, that at his name every knee shall bow, and every tongue confess that he is Lord, to the glory of God the Father. This same Lord will judge the world with righteousness, and his people with truth. All have, therefore, the absolute certainty of the most unspotted justice. But this idea, so far from encouraging negligence, ought to excite diligence, that each may be found of him in peace; for he will judge every man according as his work shall be. Although it is faith that justifies, yet the inquiry will be, not after faith in the abstract, but works, which uniformly flow from it.

PSALM XCVII.

1 The majesty of God's kingdom. 8 The Church rejoiceth at God's judgments upon idolators. 10 An exhortation to godliness and gladness.

THE LORD reigneth; ^alet the earth rejoice: ^blet the ^cmultitude of isles be glad thereof.

2 ^cClouds and darkness are round about him: righteousness and judgment are the ^dhabitation of his throne.

3 A fire goeth before him, and burneth up his enemies round about.

4 His lightnings enlightened the world: the earth saw, and trembled.

5 The hills melted like wax at the presence of the LORD, at the presence of ^ethe Lord of the whole earth.

6 The heavens declare his righteousness, and ^fall the people see his glory.

7 ^gConfounded be all they that serve graven images, that boast themselves of idols: worship him, ^hall ye gods.

PSALM XCIX.

1 The prophet, setting forth the kingdom of God in Zion, 5 exhorteth all, by the example of their forefathers, to worship God at his holy hill.

THE LORD reigneth; let the people tremble: ^ahe sitteth between the cherubims; ^blet the earth ^cbe moved.

8 Thou answeredst them, O LORD our God: ^pthou wast a God that forgavest them, ^qthough thou tookest vengeance of ^rtheir inventions.

A faith which has no works is dead, and altogether unavailing for purposes of justification. It is, therefore, the wisdom of all professing Christians to deal with themselves as the Lord would deal with them; let conscious faith be supported by labours of love.

Psalm XCVII. 1-12. The dazzling grandeur with which this psalm opens is sweetly softened by the introduction of Zion, with gladsome heart and rejoicing tongue. In this Divine power she sees protection; in these displays of wisdom she beholds security for safe conduct to heaven. This high control over the universe connects itself with the preservation of the souls of the saints, and their deliverance from the hand of the wicked. There is no other psalm in which such sublimity in relation to natural objects is blended with such delineation of the experimental power of piety in the hearts of men. The view with which the psalm closes is sufficient to captivate the soul of every reader, while it exhibits the happiness of the people who know the joyful sound.

Psalm XCVIII. 1-9. The New Song is ultimately to be sung by the whole human race. It will be the effect of universal evangelisation. When the salvation of the Lord and his righteousness shall be "openly shewed in the sight of the heathen," all nations, kindreds, peoples, and tongues will break forth into harmony, magnifying the grace which has rescued them from the wrath to come. Ver. 8 sets forward two great events—the remembrance of the Father's mercy and truth toward the house of Israel, and the conversion of the Gentiles, which is clearly displayed by the cheering words, "All the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of our God." This is one of the numerous testimonies which bear on the cause of Missions, and are eminently fitted to strengthen the hands and to encourage the hearts of the people of God, who are labouring to bring on the latter-day glory. This Song will continue to be the joy of the Universe, when all unsanctified song will be forgotten; its matter will secure its perpetuity, and invest it with a power to move the souls of the redeemed to the latest age:—"Thou art worthy, for thou hast redeemed us to God, by thy blood, out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation."

Psalm XCIX. 1-9. When Zion shall have filled the world, dissipating darkness and delusion, and extinguishing idolatry, war, slavery, all sin and all misery, then will the Lord be great. Equity will then be en-

7 He that worketh deceit shall not dwell within my house: he that telleth lies shall not ^atarry in my sight.

8 I will early destroy all the wicked of the land; that I may cut off all wicked doers from the city of the LORD.

PSALM CII.

1 The prophet in his prayer maketh a grievous complaint. 12 He taketh comfort in the eternity and mercy of God. 18 The mercies of God are to be recorded. 23 The prophet sustaineth his weakness by God's unchangeableness.

A prayer ¹of the afflicted, when he is ^aoverwhelmed, and poureth out his complaint before the LORD.

HEAR my prayer, O LORD, and let my cry come unto thee.

2 ^bHide not thy face from me in the day when I am in trouble; ^cincline thine ear unto me: in the day when I call answer me speedily.

3 For my days are consumed ^dlike smoke, and my bones are burned as an hearth.

4 My heart is smitten, and ^ewithered like grass; so that I forget to eat my bread.

5 By reason of ^fthe voice of my groaning my bones cleave to my ^gskin.

6 I am like ^ha pelican of the wilderness: I am like an owl of the desert.

7 I watch, and am as a sparrow ⁱalone upon the house-top.

8 Mine enemies reproach me all the day; and they that are ^jmad against me are ^ksworn against me.

9 For ^lI have eaten ashes like bread, and ^mmingled my drink with weeping.

10 Because of thine indignation and thy wrath: for ⁿthou hast lifted me up, and cast me down.

11 My days are like a shadow that declineth; and ^oI am withered like grass.

12 But thou, O LORD, shalt endure for ever, and thy remembrance unto all generations.

throned, and all injustice for ever disappear from the earth. One main element of worship is to exalt the Lord, praising and blessing his holy name. The courts of God's house are the tests of character. How does a man there feel, and think, and act? What is his object in repairing thither? On these points there is a substantial unity amongst all that are taught of God and led by his Spirit. God in Christ, the excellence of the Gospel, and the claims it imposes on all that are saved by it,—these are the themes on which the faithful delight to dwell. The opposite of this is a godless, prayerless spirit, which has recourse to the house of the Lord in obedience to custom, there abjuring all true worship, and only concerned for the entertainment supplied by music and eloquence. Sad is the condition of all such! They have the form of godliness, but deny the power; and their form will leave them unblessed, unsaved, and tend rather to their destruction than their salvation.

Psalm C. 1-5. These fervent exhortations assume the universal spread of the gospel, and the salvation of all the lands, who are, therefore, in a condition to "serve the Lord with gladness, and come before his presence with singing." The psalm exhibits the earth after it shall have been filled with the light of the truth of the Gospel, when the consciences of all its millions shall have been sprinkled by the blood of the Lamb, and every spirit become a temple of the Holy Ghost. Earth will then exhibit the perfection of beauty. All nations will be blessed in the Lord Jesus, and all nations will call him blessed.

Psalm CI. 1-8. While none had more reason than David to sing of the mercy of the Lord, he also had ample experience of chastisement. But even that, he deemed matter for grateful song. So far from murmuring, he cheerfully confessed that affliction had been good for him. Holy purposes are friendly to holy practices. They will live best who make their life a business. That the mariner may pursue his course with safety, his eye must never be long off the compass. A householder has great duties, on the performance of which much depends. The light in which a man views wicked works and wicked men, may be taken as a test of his own character. A godly master will always find ungodly servants a source of grief to him. His eyes will be on the faithful of the land, that they may dwell with him. These he will prefer, even when, in some respects, inferior to others. No cleverness, energy, or skill will reconcile a Christian employer to men that work deceit and tell lies.

Psalm CII. 1-23. This psalm is a strain of deep sorrow, and is adapted to the Church when surrounded with troubles. Such seasons are frequently times of bright discovery concerning the truth. Amid present darkness, the Psalmist seeks consolation from the coming light. His heart leaps within him while he thinks that God will arise and have mercy on Zion; that there is a set time to favour her, which will assuredly come, when 13 Thou shalt arise, and have mercy upon Zion: for the time to favour her, yea, ^othe set time, is come.

14 For thy servants take pleasure in her stones, and favour the dust thereof.

15 So the heathen shall fear the name of the LORD, and all the kings of the earth thy glory.

16 When the LORD shall build up Zion, he shall appear in his glory.

17 He will regard the prayer of the destitute, and not despise their prayer.

18 ^pThis shall be written for the generation to come: and the people which shall be created shall praise the LORD.

19 For he hath looked down from ^qthe height of his sanctuary; from heaven did the LORD behold the earth;

20 To hear the groaning of the prisoner; to loose ^qthose that are appointed to death;

21 To declare the name of the LORD in Zion, and his praise in Jerusalem;

22 When the people are gathered together, and the kingdoms, to serve the LORD.

23 He ^eweakened my strength in the way; ^rhe shortened my days.

24 ⁱI said, O my God, take me not away in the midst of my days: ^tthy years are throughout all generations.

25 ^oOf old hast thou laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the work of thy hands.

26 They shall perish, but thou shalt ^eendure; yea, all of them shall wax old like a garment: as a vesture shalt thou change them, and they shall be changed:

27 But thou art the same, and thy years shall have no end.

28 The children of thy servants shall continue, and their seed shall be established before thee.

PSALM CIII.

An exhortation to bless God for his mercy.

A psalm of David.

BLESS ^the LORD, O my soul; and all that is within me, bless his holy name.

2 Bless the LORD, O my soul, and ^bforget not all his benefits:

3 Who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases;

4 Who ^eredeemeth thy life from destruction; who crowneth thee with loving-kindness and tender mercies;
